

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

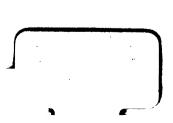

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. HANDBOOK FOR TRAVELLERS

BY

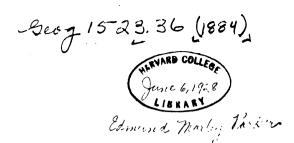

K. BAEDEKER.

With 32 Maps and 41 Plans.

EIGHTH EDITION, REVISED AND AUGMENTED.

LEIPSIC: KARL BAEDEKER.
LONDON: DULAU AND CO., 37 SOHO SQUARE, W.
1884.

All rights reserved.

"Go, little book, God send thee good passage, And specially let this be thy prayers Unto them all that thee will read or hear, Where thou art wrong, after their help to call, Thee to correct in any part or all."

CHAUCER.

PREFACE.

The chief object of the Handbook for Northern Germany, which is now issued for the eighth time and corresponds with the twentieth German edition, is to assist the traveller in planning his tour and disposing of his time to the best advantage, and thus to enable him the more thoroughly to enjoy and appreciate the objects of interest he meets with.

The Handbook is based almost entirely upon the personal observation of the Editor, and the country described has been repeatedly explored by him with a view to procure the latest possible information; but, as many of the data in the Handbook refer to matters which are constantly undergoing alteration, he will highly appreciate any corrections or suggestions with which travellers may favour him. Those already received, which in many instances have proved most useful, he gratefully acknowledges.

The Maps and Plans, on which special care has been bestowed, will often render material service to the traveller, and enable him at a glance to ascertain his bearings and select the best routes. The Plan of Berlin is divided into three sections with a view to obviate the necessity of unfolding a large sheet of paper at every consultation, and is placed, along with a small clue-plan, is a separate cover at the end of the volume.

TIME TABLES. Information regarding trains, steamboats, and diligences is most trustworthy when obtained from local sources. The best German publications of the kind are the 'Kursbuch' (2 marks), published at Berlin, and issued eight times a year, and 'Hendschel's Telegraph' (2 marks), published at Frankfort on the Main, and issued monthly during the summer season.

HEIGHTS are given in English feet (1 Engl. ft. = 0,3048 mètre = 0,938 Parisian ft. = 0,971 Prussian ft.), DISTANCES in English miles (except in the case of mountain excursions, where the time they occupy is given as more convenient), and the POPULATIONS in accordance with the latest census.

HOTELS. The Editor has endeavoured to enumerate not only the first-class hotels, but also others of more modest pretensions, which may be safely selected by the 'voyageur en garçon', with little sacrifice of comfort and considerable saving of expenditure. Although changes frequently take place, and prices generally have an upward tendency, the average charges stated in the Handbook will enable the traveller to form a fair estimate of his probable expenditure. The value of the asterisks, which are used as marks of commendation, is relative only; those prefixed to town hotels and village inns signifying respectively that the houses are good of their kind.

To hotel-proprietors, tradesmen, and others the Editor begs to intimate that a character for fair dealing and courtesy towards travellers forms the sole passport to his commendation, and that advertisements of every kind are strictly excluded from his Handbooks.

Abbreviations.

The letter d with a date, after the name of a person, indicates the year of his death. The number of feet given after the name of a place shows its height above the sea-level. The number of miles placed before the principal places on railway-routes and high-roads generally indicates their distance from the starting-point of the route.

Asterisks are used as marks of commendation.

INTRODUCTION.

I. Language.

A slight acquaintance with German is indispensable for those who desire to explore the more remote districts of Germany, but tourists who do not deviate from the beaten track will generally find English spoken at the principal hotels and the usual resorts of strangers. If, however, they are entirely ignorant of the German language, they must be prepared occasionally to submit to the extortions practised by porters, cab-drivers, and others of a like class, which even the data furnished by the Handbook will not always enable them to avoid.

II. Money. Travelling Expenses.

Money. The German mark (M, m.), which is nearly equivalent to the English shilling, is divided into 100 pfennigs. Banknotes of 5, 20, and 50 m. are issued by the German Imperial Bank ('Deutsche Reichsbank'), and others of 100, 500, and 1000 m. by the Imperial Bank and by twelve other banks which possess the privilege. The current gold coins are pieces of 10 ('Krone') and of 20 marks ('Doppelkrone'), the intrinsic value of which is somewhat lower than that of the English half-sovereign and sovereign (11. being worth about 20 m. 43 pf.). The paper currency is of the same value as the precious metals. The silver coins are pieces of 5, 3 (the old dollar), 2, 1, \(\frac{1}{2}\)(50 pf.), and \(\frac{1}{5}\)5 mark (20 pf.). In inckel there are coins of 10 and 5 pfennigs (formerly groschen and half-groschen), and in copper there are pieces of 2 and 1 pfennig.

English sovereigns and banknotes may be exchanged at all the principal towns in Germany, and Napoleons are also favourably received (20 fr. = 16 s. = 16 m. 20 pf., and often a few pfennigs more). Those who travel with large sums should carry them in the form of circular notes of 5t. or 10t., rather than in banknotes or gold, as the value of circular notes, if lost or stolen, is recoverable.

TRAVELLING EXPENSES. The expense of a tour in Northern Germany depends of course on a great variety of circumstances; but it may be stated generally that travelling in Germany is less expensive, and in some respects more comfortable, than in most other countries in Europe. The pedestrian of moderate requirements, who is tolerably proficient in the language and avoids the beaten track as much as possible, may limit his expenditure to 8-10 m. per diem, while those who prefer driving to walking, choose the most expensive hotels, and require the services of guides and commissionnaires, must be prepared to expend 25-30 m. daily.

III. Passports.

Passports are now unnecessary in Germany, as well as in Austria, France, Belgium, Holland, and Switzerland; but as they are occasionally required to prove the identity of the traveller, to procure admission to collections, and to obtain delivery of registered letters, persons who contemplate a prolonged tour had better provide themselves with these easily-obtained credentials. The principal passport-agents in London are Lee and Carter, 440 West Strand; Dorrel and Son, 15 Charing Cross; E. Stanford, 55 Charing Cross; W. J. Adams, 59 Fleet Street.

CUSTOM HOUSE formalities are now almost everywhere lenient. As a rule, however, articles purchased during the journey and not destined for personal use, should be declared at the frontier.

IV. Railways. Diligences.

RAILWAYS. Railway-travelling is cheaper in Germany than in other parts of Europe. Belgium excepted, and the carriages are generally clean and comfortable. Those of the second class, with springseats, are often better than the first in England. The first-class carriages, lined with velvet, and comparatively little used, are recommended to the lover of fresh air, as he will be more likely to secure a seat next the window. The third-class travelling community are generally quiet and respectable, and the carriages tolerably clean. On a few railways there is even a fourth class, without seats. Smoking is permitted in all the carriages, except those 'Für Nicht-Raucher' and the coupés for ladies. The average fares for the different classes are $14/_5d$., $11/_5d$., and $4/_5d$. per Engl. M. respectively. The speed seldom exceeds 25 M. per hour, and the enormous traffic carried on in some parts of England, where hundreds of trains traverse the same line daily, is entirely unknown. These circumstances, coupled with the fact that the German railways are generally well organised and under the immediate supervision of government, render accidents of very rare occurrence. On most lines 20-50 lbs. of luggage are free, in addition to smaller articles carried in the hand, overweight being charged for at moderate rates; but on many of the lines all luggage in the van must be paid for. In all cases the heavier luggage must be booked, and a ticket procured for it; this being done, the traveller need not enquire after his 'impedimenta' until he arrives and presents his ticket at his final destination (where they will be kept in safe custody, several days usually gratis). Where, however, a frontier has to be crossed, the traveller should see his luggage cleared at the custom-house in person.

Northern and Western Germany are now covered with an extensive network of railways, but an enumeration of their names would probably bewilder the traveller and be of little practical service to him. In planning a railway journey the maps in the Handbook and the railway time-tables should of course be consulted.

DILIGENCES. The diligence communication in most parts of Germany is well organised and under the immediate control of government. The average speed is 5 Engl. M. per hour, and the fare 1½d. per M. The vehicles, although cumbrous and uninviting, are tolerably comfortable. A single traveller may sometimes secure a seat by the driver. An 'extra-post' conveyance for one or more persons may generally be obtained on application at the post-offices. The average tariff is 6d. per M. for 1-2, and 1s. per M. for 3-4 pers. Private conveyances may be hired at the rate of 10-15 m. for a one-horse, 12-25 m. for a two-horse carriage per diem.

V. Excursions on Foot.

The pedestrian is unquestionably the most independent of travellers, and to him alone the beautiful scenery of some of the more remote districts is accessible. For a short tour a couple of flannel shirts, a pair of worsted stockings, slippers, the articles of the toilette, a light waterproof, and a stout umbrella will generally be found a sufficient equipment. Strong and well-tried boots are essential to comfort. Heavy and complicated knapsacks should be avoided; a light pouch or game-bag is far less irksome, and its position may be shifted at pleasure. A more extensive reserve of clothing should not exceed the limits of a small portmanteau, which can be easily wielded, and may be forwarded from town to town by post.

Northern Germany comprises many attractive and picturesque districts, such as the Saxon Switzerland (R. 50), the Thuringian Forest (R. 66), the Harz (R. 71), the Giant Mountains (R. 39), the environs of Kiel (R. 21), and the island of Rügen (R. 30). The student of art is strongly recommended to visit Dresden, Berlin, and Copenhagen; and the archæologist will find many objects of interest in the ancient towns of Hildesheim, Brunswick, Lübeck, and Dantsic. By consulting the Handbook the traveller will discover many other interesting places, whether the object of his tour be amusement or instruction.

VI. Hotels.

The first-class hotels in the principal towns and watering-places throughout Germany are generally good and somewhat expensive; but it sometimes happens that in old-fashioned hotels of unassum-ing exterior, particularly in places off the beaten track, the traveller finds more real comfort and much lower charges.

The average charges in the first-class hotels are as follows: bed $2^{1}/_{2}$ -3 m., plain breakfast 1 m., dinner 3 m., tea with meat 2 m., attendance 1 m., light 1 m., boots extra.

When the traveller remains for a week or more at a hotel, it is advisable to pay, or at least call for his account every two or three days, in order that erroneous insertions may be at once detected. Verbal reckonings are objectionable, except in some of the more remote and primitive districts where bills are never written. A waiter's mental arithmetic is faulty, and the faults are seldom in favour of the traveller. A habit too often prevails of presenting the bill at the last moment, when mistakes or wilful impositions cannot easily be detected or rectified. Those who intend starting early in the morning should therefore ask for their bills on the previous evening.

English travellers often impose considerable trouble by ordering things almost unknown in German usage; and if ignorance of the language be added to want of conformity to the customs, misunderstandings and disputes are apt to ensue. The reader is therefore recommended to endeavour to adapt his requirements to the habits of the country, and to acquire if possible such a moderate proficiency in the language as to render him intelligible to the servants. For this purpose Baedeker's Manual of Conversation will be found useful.

Valets-de-place generally charge 2-3 m. for half a day, and $31/_2$ -5 m. for a whole day.

1. Berlin.

Arrival. A 'contrôleur' posted at the egress of each railway-station hands the traveller a metal ticket with the number of a cab, on his stating whether he wishes a first-class ('erste Klasse'), second-class ('zweite Klasse'), or luggage-cab ('Gepäckdroschke'). The vehicle is then summoned either by the traveller himself or by the porter. The ticket should not be given up till seats are taken. Porter 25 pf. for ordinary luggage; 50 pf. or more for luggage above the usual weight. Cab into the town: lat class (recommended to those with little luggage) 1 m. 25 to 1 m. 75 pf., 2nd class 85 pf. to 1 m. 25 pf.; luggage under 22½ sbs. free, boxes of 22½-55 lbs. 25 pf., of 55-110 lbs. 50 pf., of 110-220 lbs. 1 m. (comp. the tariff, p. 4). 'Gepäckdroschken' (see above), with two seats only, are necessary if luggage is heavy; tariff the same as that of cabs of the second class. If the train is crowded it is advisable to telegraph for a cab from the last important station before Berlin (50 pf.), particularly if a 'Gepäckdroschke' is required.

Departure. Railway-tickets for all the lines diverging from Berlin may be obtained at the Internationale Reisebureau der Schlafvagengeseltschaft (International Sleeping-Carriage Co.), Unter den Linden 67, or at its sub-offices in the Central Hotel, Kaiserhof, Hôtel de Rome, and Hôtel du Nord. Luggage may be dispatched by the same agency.

Railway Stations. There are six terminus railway-stations at Berlin, exclusive of the 'Stadtbahn' (see below). 1. Anhalf Station (Pl. g; H, 1), Ascanischer-Platz, for Dresden, Prague, Vienna, Leipsic, Halle, Thuringia, and Frankfort on the Main. — 2. Potsdam Station (Pl. r; G, 4), Potsdam-Platz, for Potsdam, Magdeburg, the Harz, Brunswick, the Lower Bhine, Cassel, Frankfort, Coblenz, Trèves, and Metz. — 3. Stertin Station (Pl. b; H, 3), Invaliden-Str., for Stettin, Stralsund, and Dantsic, and also for the trains of the Berlin North Railway (to Neu-Brandenburg and Stralsund). — 4. Hamburge Station (Pl. b; G, 4), outside the Neue Thor, at the W. end of the Invaliden-Str., for Hamburg, Mecklenburg, and Holstein. — 5. Görlitz Station (Pl. g; P, 2, 3), Wiener-Str., for Cottbus, Görlitz, and the Giant Mts. — 6. Leherts of Hamoverian Station (Pl. r; F, 1), near the Alsenbrücke, for Hanover, Cologne, and Bremen.

The 'Stadtbahm', or city railway (see p. 15), an engineering work of great interest, was constructed by Hr. Direkten from the designs of Hr.

The 'Stadtbahn', or city railway (see p. 10), an engineering work of great interest, was constructed by Hr. Direkten from the designs of Hr. Orth. It is 7 M. long, about 5 M. consisting of a viaduct of masonry and 1 M. of iron-work, while the remaining 1 M. occupies the filled in bed of the Königsgraben. The railway crosses the Spree thrice, and there are in all 64 bridges over streets and water-courses. The general elevation of the line is about 20 ft. above that of the streets. The line crosses the city from E. to W., starting at Stratau-Rummelaburg (beyond Pl. g; R, 1) and ending at Westend (beyond Pl. g; A, 1). The Stadtbahn is primarily intended to relieve the street traffic within Berlin, but the following four stations are also used for general traffic: — 1. The Silesian or Old Frankfort Station (Pl.r; P, 3, 4); 2. Alexander-Platz Station (Pl.r; M, 1); 3. Friedrich-Strasse Station (Pl. r; j, 1, 2); 4. Charlottenburg Station. At present all the trains of the E. Bailway (Dantsic and Königsberg) and of the Niederschlesischmärkisch Railway (Frankfort on the Odor, Posen, the Giant Mts., Breslau, and Vienna) run from these stations, and also the express trains of the Hamburg, Lehrte, Potedam, and Nordhausen-Frankfort lines. The Anhalt, Görlitz, Stettin, and N. railways have no connection with the Stadtbahn.

The following are the stations of the Stadtbahn for intramural and suburban traffic (named from E. to W.): Siralau-Rummelsburg, Schlesischer Bahnhof, Jamnowits-Brücke, Alexander-Plats, Börse (Exchange), Friedrich-Birasse, Lehrter Bahnhof, Bellevue, Zoologischer Garten, Charlottenburg, Westend. Trains run in both directions every 10 min. between the Silesian Station and the Zoological Gardens, and every 20 min. between the Silesian Station and Westend. - Tickets are usually checked on entering and leaving the platform. No time should be lost in taking seats, as the stoppages are extremely brief.

The 'RINGBAHN' is a railway forming a complete circle round Berlin, and running for the most part beyond the precincts of the city. Owing to the distance of its stations from the places they serve, the tourist will generally find the tramways more convenient (see p. 5). The railway is divided into two parts, the 'Nord-Ring' and the 'Süd-Ring', on which trains run at intervals of 20-40 min. The stations on the Nord-Ring are: trains run at intervals of 20-40 min. The stations on the North are strained sets in the North gare; Straiau-Rummelsburg, Friedrichsberg (p. 58), Central-Vielhof (Cattle Market, p. 58), Weissensee, Schönhäuser Allee, Gesundbrunnen (p. 66), Wedding (to the N.), Moabit (p. 61), and Westend (p. 66). The Süd-Ring, beginning at Westend, passes Grunewald (p. 66), Wilmersdorf-Friedenau, Schöneberg (p. 49; branch to the Potsdam and Anhalt stations), Tempelhof (p. 52), Rixdorf, Treplow (p. 68), and Straiau-Rummelsburg. — The Ringbahn connects with the Stadtbahn at Stralau-Rummelsburg on the E., and Westend on the W.

Hotels. Those in or near the Linden are best situated for ordinary travellers, and the most expensive: — Room on the upper floors, and looking to the back of the house, 2-21/2 m., on the ground-floor or first floor 4-7 m., with a second bed 2-4 m. more, breakfast 1-11/2 m., attendance 75-80 pf. light 1/2-1 m.; table d'hôte at 3 or 4 o'clock 3-4 m.; wine generally dear. Omnibuses traverse the city in every direction, but are rarely of much service to the visitor.

Steamboats on the Spree. From the Jannowitz Bridge (Pl. r; N, 3) to the Upper Spree (Stralau, Treptow, Eierhäuschen, Neuer Krug, Sedan, Sadowa, Köpenick) every hour or two; oftener on Sundays and in fine weather. Excursionists should not delay their return till the last boat.

Goeds Agents: Brasch & Rothenstein, Friedrich-Str. 78, with railway, booking, and luggage offices for all parts of the world.

Post Offices. The Reichs-Postant (Pl. r; J, 4), or office of the chief postal authorities of the German empire, with whom of course the public does not come into direct contact, is at Leipziger-Str. 15 (see p. 49). The Central Post Office (Hauptpostgebäude; Pl. r; L, 2), for the public service, with a telegraph-station, is at König-Str. 60 and Spandauer-Str. 19-22 (p. 56). Enquiries in case of doubt should be addressed to the porter (principal entrance from the König-Str.). The Poste Restante and Money Order Office are both in the first court. Letters for Berlin (10 pf.) reach their destination in 2-4 hours. Letters, books, and parcels are received, and money-orders issued, at all of the 100 branch-offices (e.g. in the Kaiserhof; in the Central Hotel; Dorotheen-Str. 28, near the Neustädtische Kirch-Str.; Behren-Str. 52, in the Kaisergalerie; Jäger-Str. 22; Tauben-Str. 17; and at all the railway-stations). The offices are open from 7 (in winter from 8) a.m. to 8 p.m.; closed on Sundays and holidays from 9 to 5 o'clock. — A system op.m.; closed on sundays and nondays run who be to clock.—A system of PNEUMATIC TUBES has recently been instituted for the rapid transmission of telegrams, letters, and post-cards from one part of Berlin to another. Letters or post-cards intended for transmission by this service must be marked 'Rohrpost' in the upper left hand corner of the address, and must not exceed b in in length by 8 in in breadth, or 1/3 os. in weight. Letters must not be sealed. The postage for letters is 30 pf., for post-cards 25 pf. The 'trains' are dispatched every 1/4 hr. from 7 (or 8) a.m. to 9 p.m. Pneumatic post offices are distinguished by a red lamp.

Telegraph Offices. Central office, Französische-Str. 33bc (Pl. r; K, 3), open day and night, and 45 branch offices (e.g. at the Exchange, in the Central Hotel, in the Kaiserhof, at the Potsdam and Brandenburg gates, in the Industrie-Gebäude, Kommandanten-Str. 77, and at all the railway stations), open from 7 or 8 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Telephone Offices at the Central Post Office, and at the post-offices Köpnicker-Str. 122, Oranienburger Str. 35, Halle Gate, Unter den Linden 5, and the Central Market. At these offices anyone can be put in telephonic communication with every person connected with the system (fee 50 pf.). Lists of those connected with the 'Telephonic Exchange' are provided.

Baths. *Admiratsgarten-Bad, Friedrich-Str. 102, close to the Weiden dammer-Brücke; *Hotel de Rome, see p. 2; Hotel de l'Europe, see p. 3; Dianabad, Französische-Str. 18, near the Friedrich-Str.; Ascanisches Bad (with swimming, Turkish, and vapour baths), Königgrätzer-Str. 19, near the Potsdam Gate; Kaiser-Wilhelm-Bad, Lützow-Str. 89, 90. — RIVER BATHS in the Spree, at the Oberbaum (Pl. g; P, 1), outside the Schlesische Thor. These baths are conveniently reached by steamboat.

Shops. The best are in the Linden, the Leipziger-Str., the Friedrich-, Jerusalemer-, Charlotten-, Markgrafen-, Jäger-Str. (E. end), etc. Special attention should be paid to the products of the artistic handicrafts, many of which are now practised at Berlin with marked success. Thus the gas-fittings, porcelain, earthenware, furniture, jewellery, etc., often display great taste both in design and execution. A good general survey of these Art Industries may be obtained by visiting the BAU- UND -KUNSTGEWERBE-AUS-STELLUNG of the Architects' Union (see pp. 11, 51), Wilhelm-Str. 92, the Magazin für Berliner Kunstgewerbe, Unter den Linden 54, 55 (free), the DEUTSCHE KUNSTGEWERBEHALLE (see below), or Busch's, Friedrich-Str. 71. The most noted firms in the different branches are mentioned below.

PHOTOGRAPHS of paintings in the Berlin and other calleries, views of Berlin, etc. at the Photographic Company, Krausen-Str. 36 (Dönhoff-Platz). Classical Music. *Singucademic (p. 22); rehearsals on Tuesdays 5-7 p.m., to which visitors are admitted on application to the director, Professor Blummer (at the building itself). "Stern's Gesangverein, another musical society of a high class, meets in the same building. The 'Symphony Soirées' are a series of concerts given in winter by the band of the Royal Opera in the concert-room of the opera-house. The admirably-trained *Cathedral Choir, instituted by Frederick William IV. for the promotion of sacred music, performs during divine service (p. 26) and also gives concerts. The performances of these different institutions are unsurpassed in any European capital. — Bites admirable orchestra plays daily in winter in the Concerthaus, Leipziger-Str. 48 (75 pf.), and in summer in the Flora Garden at Charlottenburg. One evening in each week is desired a stretch service of the stretch o voted to the works of a single composer (Beethoven evening, Wagner evening, etc.). — Good concerts are given in winter at the Philharmonie, Bernburger-Str. 22 a. (symphonies twice a week). - The Berliner Symphonie-Capelle plays at different places, which are ascertained from the advertisements (75 pf.).

Theatres. There are about twenty theatres at Berlin (plans may be consulted in the Berlin 'Adressbuch', or Directory; performances begin at 6.30 or 7 p.m.). The following are the most important:—

1. BOTAL OPERA HOUSE (Pl. r. K. 2), for operas, ballets, and a few of the most celebrated dramas (Faust, Tell, Maid of Orleans). Average charges: best boxes 9 m.; proscenium by the orchestra 8; 1st balcony and front boxes 6; parquet and parquet-boxes (the latter not recommended) 5; proscenium, 2nd balcony, 4; upper boxes 31/2; 3rd balcony 21/2; pit 21/2; gallery 1½m. — Admission higher when some of the greater operas are performed: best boxes 10 m.; proscenium 9; 1st balcony 8; parquet 7; etc.

 ROYAL THEATER (Schauspielhaus; Pl. r; J, 3), for tragedies, classical and modern dramas (Shakspeare, Schiller, Goethe): best boxes 7 m.; 1st balcony, and 1st balcony-boxes, 5; parquet-boxes, or parquet, 4; pit-boxes 3; 2nd balcony and 2nd balcony-boxes 3; pit 2; 3rd balcony 1½; proscenium of the 3rd balcony and amphitheatre 1 m.

Tickets for the opera and theatre are issued on week-days from 10.30 te 1, on Sundays from 11 to 1.30 o'clock, for the performance of the same day only. Strangers who are desirous of securing good places should order them by a post-card, bearing their address on the one side, and the date of the performance with the number and situation of the places desired on the other. The card should be placed, between 10 and 12 o'clock on the day before the performance, in the letter-box of the Opera House (Door No. 7), opposite the Roman Catholic Church. It is returned the same day, either stamped 'bewilligt' (granted), or with a pencil-mark across it to indicate that the application has been unsuccessful. In the former case the tickets bespoken are obtained on the following morning between 9 and 10 (Sundays and holidays between 8 and 9) o'clock, at the ticket-office of the Opera-house (or theatre), 50 pf. extra being paid for each seat. When very popular pieces are to be performed, a great number of the tickets are purchased by speculators, from whom they can be obtained only at exorbitant prices. In such cases the porter of the traveller's hotel will often be found useful in preventing excessive extortion. Places may also be booked between 9 and 11 a.m. on the previous day at the office of the 'Invalidendank', Markgrafen-Str. 51a, near the Behren-Str. (fee 50 pf.). -- The court-theatres are closed for one or two months in summer.

3. DEUTSCHES THEATER OF GERMAN THEATER (formerly Friedrich-Wilhelmstadt Theatre; Pl. b; H, 4, and r; H, 1), for classical pieces; best bexes, orchestra-boxes, and ist balcomy 71/2 m.; ist balcomy boxes 6; parquet 41/2, 2nd balcomy 3; gallery 1 m.

4. WALLINER THEATER (Pl. r; N, 2, 3), for comedies and popular farces:

best boxes 6 m.; 1st balcony 31/2; parquet 3 m. On Sundays the theatre is generally crowded.

5. VICTORIA THEATRE (Pl. b; M, 4), Münz-Str. 20, comprising a winter and summer theatre, handsomely fitted up, for pantomimes and dramas: best boxes 7 m.; 1st balcony 4-5; parquet 4 m.

6. KROLL'S THEATRE, see below.

7. FRIEDRICH-WILHELMSTADT THEATRE (Pl. b; H, 3), Chaussee-Str. 27, auteide the Oranienburg Gate, for operettas: best boxes 6; parquet 3 m. 8. RESIDENZ-THEATER (Pl. r; N, 2), Blumen-Str. 9, chiefly for modern dramas and comedies; good acting; parquet 3 m.

Berlin (110 ft. above the sea-level), the capital of Prussia, residence of the Emperor of Germany, and seat of the imperial government, as well as of the highest Prussian authorities, contains 1.200,000 inhab., including the garrison of 25,000 soldiers, and thus occupies the third place among the cities of Europe. Its situation, in the midst of an extensive sandy plain on the Spree, has often been spoken of disparagingly, but is in fact very favourable and one of the chief causes of the town's prosperity. Lying about halfway between the S.W. and N.E. extremities of the Empire (465 M. from Mülhausen in Alsace, and 405 M. from Memel), equidistant from the German mountains and the sea, and connected with N.E. Germany and Poland by the navigable Spree, it is at the same time an important centre of the railway-system of Germany, one of the foremost seats of commerce in the country. and perhaps the greatest manufacturing town in continental Europe, The staple commodities of its trade are cattle, grain, spirits, and wool; the principal branches of industry are engine-building, brewing, dyeing, the artistic handicrafts, and the manufacture of chemicals, woollen and silk goods, and fancy articles. The moneymarket of Berlin is also of great importance. The traffic on the Spree and its canals is even busier than that on the Rhine.

The boundaries of the city now enclose an area of about 25 sq. M. The buildings have filled up the whole of the Spree valley, which here averages about 3 M. in breadth and is intersected by numerous water-courses, and are beginning to encroach on the surrounding plain, raised some 30 or 40 ft, higher. The city consists of twenty different quarters, divided into 211 municipal and 71 police districts. The oldest quarters are Alt-Berlin (on the right bank of the Spree, bounded by the Ringbahn), Alt-Kölln (on an island in the river), and Friedrichswerder and Neu-Kölln am Wasser (on the left bank of the Spree, bounded by the Grünegraben). These form the heart of the city, and were originally enclosed by fortifications. Beyond them is a second zone, the external boundary of which is formed by the ring of streets occupying the site of the old town-walls of the 18th century. It embraces the districts of Dorotheenstadt, Friedrichstadt, and Luisenstadt on the left bank of the Spree, and Friedrich-Wilhelmstadt, the Spandau Quarter, Königstadt, and the Stralau Quarter on the right bank. The two last-named districts encroach upon the outermost zone, or suburbs, which include on the left bank the Outer Friedrichstadt, the Schöneberg Quarter, and the Tempelhof Quarter, and on the right bank Moabit, Wedding, and the Outer Spandau Quarter.

In external appearance Berlin is somewhat deficient in interest; its situation is unpicturesque, and it lacks the charm of mediæval and historical edifices. There is, however, no want of architectural display, the last ten years in particular having witnessed the erection of many handsome buildings in every part of the city. Those erected by private enterprise often present considerable individuality of style and taste.

For many years back Berlin has been undergoing an extensive series of alterations and improvements, the favourable results of which are now evident. The removal of the town-walls in 1864-66 and the rapid extension of the tramway-system gave a great impulse to the city's prosperity, and diverted the current of traffic into many new channels; while the intramural railway (see p. 1), opened in 1882 and intersecting the city from E. to W., is at least of equal importance. The older bridges are also being restored, and the system of water-courses and drains improved, so that in no long time Berlin may hope to rank with the older capitals of Europe in the comfort and completeness of its public works.

History. Berlin first appears in history in the early part of the 13th cent., when it was already a double town of some importance (Berlin and Kölln). In all probability the original Wendish settlements had been taken possession of by German colonists at the end of the preceding century. The name of Kölln is mentioned for the first time in a document tury. The name of Kölla is mentioned for the first time in a document of 1238, and that of Berlin in 1242, after which the town soon began to be regarded as one of the most considerable in the Mark, next to Brandenburg, the residence of the Margraves. The two towns were united in 1307, and by their prudent policy during the troublous times of the 14th cent, under the Bavarian and Luxemburg princes, raised themselves to a position of great importance. About 1340 Berlin-Kölln became a member of the Hanseatic League, as representative of a confederation of towns of the Mark. Such a position, however, almost amounting to the independence of an imperial town, could not be maintained against the might of the Hohenzollern perial town, could not be maintained against the might of the consequence of its unsuccessful opposition to Frederick 'with the Iron Tooth' (1440-70), the second Elector, the town was deprived of its privileges (1442, 1448), and a fortified castle was erected to keep it in check. John Geero (1486-1499) made Berlin-Kölln his permanent abode, and since that period the forting the second that the country of the Hobert learning with those of the Hobert learning the second that the country of the Hobert learning the second that the country of the Hobert learning the second that the country of the Hobert learning that the second the second the second the second the second that the second that the second the second that the seco tunes of the town have been interwoven with those of the Hohenzollern family and their other dominions. In 1539 the townspeople and the Elector Joachim II. (1535-71) embraced the Reformed faith. This splendour-loving prince and his successor John George (1571-98) undertook spiematur-foring printer and his successor John George (1971-95) undertook the alteration of the palace in the Renaissance style, but the reverses of the Thirty Years' War prevented the execution of their plans, and reduced the population of the town from 12,000 to 6000.

To Frederick William, the 'Great Elector' (1640-88), the founder of the Prussian monarchy, Berlin is chiefly indebted for its modern importance.

He accorded municipal privileges to the Friedrichswerder, and founded the new town, which he named Dorotheenstadt in honour of his wife. The forest which extended on this side of the town nearly as far as the Spree was now removed, and on its site was planted the Linden-Allee, or double avenue of lime-trees, on each side of which gradually sprang up the handsome modern street of that name. Owing to the introduction of foreign settlers, and particularly French Protestant refugees (after the Revocation of the Edict of Nanies in 1686), the population of the town increased to 20,000. Its commerce now flourished to an extent hitherto unprecedented, while the court actively promoted artistic enterprise and strove to embellish the town, chiefly with the aid of Dutch architects. The nucleus of the royal library and art-collections was also formed at this period.

Frederick III. (1688-1713), who became King Frederick I. in 1701. erected the Friedrichstadt, constituted Berlin a royal residence, and united the administration of the five quarters of the city. In 1694 he founded the Academy of Art, and in 1700 that of Science, the first president of the latter being the celebrated Leibnits; while in the province of architecture he was fortunate in obtaining the services of one of the greatest geniuses of his age, whose works were destined entirely to eclipse those of his predecessors. This was Andreas Schlüter (b. at Hamburg in 1684, d. at St. Petersburg in 1714). He was first employed as a sculptor in the embellishment of the Lange Brücke, in the Schloss, and in the Arsenal begun by Nehring (d. 1695). He then erected the Château of Charlottenburg, and his successful completion of that edifice next led to his being engaged as the architect of the imposing new Palace of Berlin, which he began in 1699, but which was not completed until long after his death. He has also left a monument of his talent as a sculptor in the Equestrian Statue of the Great Elector, 1708. The other works of the reign of the first king of Prussia include the Academy, several churches, two townhalls, and numerous palatial private residences, but after the time of Schlüter the architecture of Berlin shows a great falling off. In 1710 the town possessed ten printing-offices, and the population, which had been steadily augmented by French and Walloon immigrants, was 61,000.

Under the patriarchal government of Frederick William I. (1713-40)

the city made no less substantial, though less striking progress. This monarch enlarged the Friedrichstadt and the Dorotheenstadt, devoted the space occupied by the fortifications to building purposes, and added the N. and E. suburbs to the town. He also completed the royal palace, and erected the Supreme Court of Justice and several churches. All these operations, however, were conducted in so economical a spirit, that the buildings are generally insignificant in appearance. During this reign the administration of justice was reformed, the municipal guilds re-organised, and the Charité Hospital founded. In 1740 the population had increased to 91,000, including 2000 Bohemian Protestants.

Frederick the Great (1740-86), who possessed more taste for building than any of the other Prussian sovereigns, was unwearied in his efforts to extend and embellish his capital, though he seldom made it his residence. In Knobelsdorff (b. 1699, d. 1758) he found an architect who was capable of executing his plans in a tasteful style. Thus in 1743 he completed the Opera House in a noble, almost classical style, which presented a marked contrast to the capricious and degraded taste of the age, and which, although since extended, and adorned with a decorative addition at the back, is externally but little altered. As the great monarch, however, had a strong predilection for designing his new buildings in person, and for materially altering the designs submitted to him, he found the less independent successors of Knobelsdorff more subservient to his wishes. The University (formerly the palace of Prince Henry), the Cathedral, the Hedwigskirche, the Königs-Colonnaden, the Library, and the Dome-Towers in the Gensdarmen-Markt are the principal edifices of this period. In a spirit very different from that of his frugal father, Frederick also presented his citizens and officials with several hundred palatial dwelling houses, which gave the town a handsome and imposing appearance. Commerce and industry were fostered; the academy of sciences, under the auspices of French savants, awoke to new life; and the collections of art were materially increased. At the same time a new intellectual era began to dawn, and to this period belong the authors Lessing, Moses Mendelssohn, and Nicolai, and the artist Chodowiecki. Although Berlin suffered severely during the Seven Years' War, having been twice occupied by foreign troops, the population had increased by the end of Frederick's reign to 145,000.

Under Frederick William II. (1786-97), Frederick's successor, the population increased much more rapidly, and in the year 1800 it amounted to no fewer than 172,000 inhabitants. Considerable progress was also made in the province of art. In 1798 C. G. Langhans (b. 1788, d. 1808), following the example of Knobelsdorff, erected the Brandenburger Thor in the classical style, while G. Schadow's Quadriga with which it was adorned formed a new triumph in the province of sculpture. The architects Gents, the builder of the Old Mint, and Gilly also adopted the classical style, while Carstens, a native of Slesvig, and a teacher at the Berlin Academy, inaugurated the revival of classical taste in painting. The theatre, formerly devoted to French plays, was now dedicated to the national German drama, which was zealously cultivated under Iffland's auspices.

The Napoleonic disasters by which Berlin was overtaken during the reign of Frederick William III. (1797-1840) presented only a temporary obstacle to the progress of the city. The battles of Jena and Auerstädt, and the occupation of Berlin by the French in 1806, produced a depressing effect, but this was in some degree compensated for by the foundation of the University in 1808; and on the occasion of the general rising against the French in 1813 the citizens of Berlin, whose 'Landwehr' was chiefly instrumental in gaining the victory of Grossbeeren, set a noble example of patriotic seal. After the establishment of peace in 1815, art, science, and commerce began to flourish anew. The University now took the highest rank among the institutions of learning in Germany; William and Alexander von Humboldi, Ritter, Hegel, Schleiermacher, Böckh, and many other famous men now lived and worked at Berlin; and at the same time the drama attained its highest pitch of excellence. Of this period the most distinguished architect was SCHIMERI (b. 1781, d. 1841), who was equally eminent as a painter, as his sketches for the frescoes of the hall of the old museum testify, and by this great master were erected many admirable buildings, both in the classical and Gothic style, in Berlin and the environs. He was the architect of the Königswache, the Schauspielhaus, the Schlossbrücke, the Old Museum, the Werder'sche Kirche, the Bau-Academie, the Monument on the Kreusberg, and the Palace of Count Redern at Berlin, and of the Palace of Babelsberg, Glienicke, Charlottenhof, and the Nicolaitirche at Potsdam, while his numerous designs exercised no inconsiderable influence on the architecture of other countries. — As Schinkel reigned supreme at Berlin in the province of architecture, so did CHRIS-TIAN RAUGH (1777-1857) in that of sculpture, eclipsing his senior, G. Schadow, and still more so his contemporary, Fr. Tieck. In him the heroworship of the period of the wars of independence found an admirable illustrator, and portrait-sculpture now received a new impulse. Very inferior to these architects and sculptors were the painters of this period (Wach, K. Begas, Hensel, Klöber, and Krüger), whose names are hardly known out of their native place. — The long years of peace in the latter part of this reign contributed materially to the external prosperity of Berlin. Commerce and industry, the latter stimulated by the exertions of Besth, were greatly benefited by the construction of high-roads, the foundation of the Zollverein, and the abolition of the monopoly of the guilds; and the city now began to lose the official and garrison-like air with which it had hitherto been pervaded. In 1838 the railway to Potsdam was opened. From 201,000 in 1819 the population had in 1840 increased to 329,000.

During the following reign, that of Frederick William IV. (1840-61), the cultivation of art seemed likely to progress far more rapidly. The favourable conditions of that monarch's reign were enhanced by the enthusiasm and refined artistic taste of the king himself, who often acted as his own architect. The prospect, however, was not entirely realised. The building of a cathedral, the king's favourite project, was never carried out; and although the architecture of the city was enriched by the completion of the New Museum, the dome of the palace, and numerous other edifices, most of them lack the imposing grandeur of Schinkel's creations. The leading architects of this period were F. A. Stüler (d. 1825), to whom most of the government-buildings were entrusted, Knoblauch, Histig (d. 1881), Soller (St. Michael's church), C. F. Langhans (Opera), and Strack (St. Peter's).—
In the department of painting also the revival which had been anticipated from the presence of Corwellus (from 1841; d. 1867) and Kaulbach (p. 38) was never realised; while the originality of Ad. Mansel (b. 1815) was not duly appreciated. To the labours of Rauch, on the other hand, whose master-piece, the statue of Frederick the Great, is justly admired, and to those of his numerous pupils (Drake, Biliser, A. Wolff, Kiss, etc.), the art of sculpture was indebted for its high repute during this reign. — Since the introduction of railways Berlin has increased rapidly in importance as a manufacturing and industrial centre. In 1849 the population was 424,000, and in 1860 it had increased to 496,000.

During the reign of the Emperor William (who became Prince Regent in 1858, and acceded to the throne of Prussia in 1861) the prosperity of Berlin, now one of the great capitals of the world, has made still more rapid strides. The population has more than doubled, rising to 702,000 in 1867, to 968,000 in 1875, to 1,122,830 in 1880, and to 1,190,000 in 1888 ix new lines of railway have been opened, and trade has been greatly extended. — Art also has revived, especially in the department of architecture. tecture. The Rathhaus, the Exchange, and the Synagogue, all begun in 1859, were the first of a long series of imposing edifices, in which a complete revolution in taste manifests itself. The prevailing tendency is to substitute the Renaissance style for the more sober classical forms of Substitute the Renaissance style for the more source classical norms of Schinkel, to attach more importance to solidity of material and the artistic ornamentation of the interior, and to use colour more freely. Many private buildings rival the public edifices, and indeed often surpass them internally. Among the chief architects of the period have been Strack, Hitzig (see above), Adler, Lucae (d. 1877), Orth, and Ende & Böckmann. Painting and sculpture have also made marked progress, the prevalent tendency being towards a realistic style. The most eminent painters are Ad.

Menzel, L. Knaus, G. Richter, A. von Werner, C. Becker, and P. Meyerheim, while A. Wolff, Reinhold Begas, Siemering, Schaper, Encke, Calandrelli, Eberlein, and Gever are the most successful votaries of the sister art.

a. Unter den Linden. Platz am Opernhaus.

The handsomest and busiest part of Berlin, which likewise comprises the most interesting historical associations, is the long line of streets extending from the Brandenburg Gate to the Royal Palace. consisting of *Unter den Linden (Pl. r; H, J, 2), the Platz am Opernhaus, and the Lustgarten. The Linden, a street 196 ft. in width, deriving its name from the avenues of lime-trees (interspersed with chestnuts) with which it is planted, resembles the Boulevards of Paris, although inferior in length, and is flanked with handsome palaces, spacious hotels, and attractive shops, between which the long vistas of a number of side-streets are visible at intervals. The length of the street from the Brandenburg Gate to the Monument of Frederick the Great is about 2/3 M., to the palace-gate about 1 M.

The *Brandenburg Gate (Pl. r, G, 2), at the W. end of the Linden, forms the entrance to the town from the Thiergarten. It was erected in 1789-93 by C. G. Langhans in imitation of the Propyles at Athens (85 ft. in height, including the figure, and 205 ft. in width), and has five different passages (that in the centre reserved for royal carriages), separated by massive Doric columns. The material is sandstone. The structure is surmounted by a *Quadriga of Victoria, in copper, by Schadow, taken to Paris by the French in 1807, but restored in 1814. Adjoining the gate on the side next the town are two wings resembling Grecian temples, of which that on the right or N. side contains a Telegraph Office and a Pneumatic Post Office, while that on the left (S.) is the Guard House. On the outside are handsome open Colonnades for foot-passengers: the statue of Mars in that to the S. is by Schadow.

Between the gate and the beginning of the Linden lies the PARISER PLATZ, so named after the victories of 1814. The buildings adjoining the gate are by Stüler. On the S. side of the square are Prince Blücher's Palace (No. 2), now a private residence, the Officers' Casino (No. 3), by Stralendorff, and the handsome palace of Count Arnim-Boitzenburg (No. 4), by Knoblauch. No. 5, on the opposite side, is the palace of the French Embassy, recently rebuilt.

UNTER DEN LINDEN, No. 1 (S. side), at the corner of the Pariser-Platz, is the Palace of Count Bedern, erected by Schinkel in 1833 in the Florentine style, containing a picture-gallery of considerable merit (works by Netherlands masters, and by Gallait, Hildebrandt, etc.), and several sculptures by Rauch, Schwanthaler, E. Wolff, and Kümmel (admission, see p. 12). The effect of the building is marred by the execution of its façade in plaster instead of in stone. On the right, beyond it, is the handsome Wilhelm-Strasse (p. 48). No. 4, farther on, is the residence of the Minister of Religion and Education; No. 7 is the palace of the Russian Embassy, erected by Knoblauch in 1841. No. 73 on the opposite side is that of the Minister of the Interior, completed by Emmerich in 1877, with an imposing sandstone façade, in the Greek Renaissance style.

The building No. 68a, on the left, at the corner of the Schadow-Str., contains the *AQUARIUM (Pl. r; H, 2), well stocked with salt and fresh-water fish, besides which there is a collection of birds, amphibious animals, apes, etc. The interior, with its grottoes and imitations of various natural objects, has been skilfully fitted up by Lüer (adm., see p. 11: catalogue 50 pf.).

Lüer (adm., see p. 11; catalogue 50 pf.).

In the Schadow-Str. (Nos. 6, 7) are the new buildings of the Union Club and of the Ressource, a society established in 1794. — In the vicinity, between the Dorotheen- and Mittel-Str., is situated the Donotheenstadd Church (Pl. r; H, 2), founded in 1678, and entirely remodelled in 1860-62, containing the monument of Count von der Mark, a natural son of Frederick William II., Schadow's first important work, executed in 1790. Sacristan, Mittel-Str. 28.

Farther along the S. side of the Linden (Nos. 22, 23), near the Friedrich-Str., is the Passage, or *Kaisergallerie (Pl. r; J, 2), which leads to the corner of the Friedrich- and Behren-Strasse. It was erected by Kyllmann and Heyden in 1869-73, and, though not one of the largest, is one of the handsomest and busiest arcades in Europe The façades both within and without are finished with terracotta in a rich Renaissance style. The arcade contains shops, restaurants, a café, the Panopticum (p. 11), and a post and telegraph-office.

Between the Friedrich-Str. and Charlotten-Str., Linden 26, is the *Café Bauer, the handsomest in Berlin, tastefully adorned with mural paintings by Werner and Wilberg. No. 34 is a palatial structure occupied by the Central-Bodencredit-Gesellschaft. — On the N. side of the Linden, No. 39, is the new Hôtel de Rome, by Ende and Böckmann, next to which, in pleasing contrast, is a house in the German Renaissance style.

At the E. end of the Linden rises the Statue of Frederick the Great (Pl. r; J, 2), in bronze, an impressive and masterly work by Rauch, erected in 1851, and probably the grandest monument of its kind in Europe (44 ft. in height).

The great king is represented on horseback with his coronation-robes and his walking-stick. The pedestal is divided into three sections. The upper section contains allegorical figures and scenes from Frederick's education and domestic life, and his apotheosis, with figures of Moderation, Justice, Wisdom, and Strength at the corners. At the corners of the central section are four equestrian figures, Prince Henry of Prussia and Duke Ferdinand of Brunswick on the E., and Generals Zleten and Seydlits on the W., between which are placed spirited groups of other contemporaries and officers of the king (thus on the E. side Prince Augustus William and Keith, on the N. side Kleist, Winterfeldt, and Tauenzien, on the S. side Leopold of Dessau and Schwerin, on the W. side Lessing and Kant, all life-size). The lower section contains names of other distinguished men, chiefly soldiers of the time of Frederick. The pedestal is of polished granite. The foundation-stone was laid on 3ist May, 1840, the hundredth anniversary of the accession of Frederick to the throne of Prussia, and the monument was completed and inaugurated in 1851.

To the right of the statue rises the Palace of the Emperor William (Pl. r; J, 2; adm., see p. 12), erected by C. F. Langhans in 1834-36. The building extends behind the Royal Library as far as the Behren-Str., and contains a suite of apartments sumptuously fitted up, a reception-room 75 yds. in length, and a summer and winter-garden. The Emperor's apartments are on the ground-floor facing the Opera House; and a flag is holsted when he resides here.

Opposite the palace is the Academy Building, erected in 1690 and remodelled in 1749, containing the Academy of Art and the Academy of Science, founded in 1699 and 1700 respectively by Frederick I. in accordance with plans by Leibnitz. The clock above the gateway is one of the standard time-keepers of Berlin.

The University Buildings (Pl. r; J, 2), formerly the palace of Prince Henry, brother of Frederick II., erected in 1754-64, and fitted up in 1809 for the then recently-founded university, contain some of the lecture-rooms and scientific collections (4000 students). The garden in front is adorned with statues of William and Alexander von Humboldt, the former by M. P. Otto, the latter by R. Begas.

The Zoological Museum (adm., p. 12) is one of the most valuable in Europe, and contains a remarkably fine collection of birds. Among the curiosities of the "Mineral Cabinet (adm., p. 11), the most extensive collection of the kind on the continent, may be mentioned a piece of amber weighing upwards of 14 lbs., found 100 M. from the Baltic, and numerous meteorolites. The objects brought by Humboldt from Southern and Central America form an additional ornament to the collection.—The Anatomical Museum (adm., p. 11), in the W. wing, is also very extensive.—The Christian Museum (adm., p. 11), in the left wing, contains original and copied Christian inscriptions and monuments of art; the casts, arranged in chronological order, illustrate the whole Christian period down to the present day.

To the University belong also the following buildings: the Library, Dorothen-Str. 9 (p. 22); the Dissecting Room, in the garden of the Veterinary College (p. 61); the Chemical Laboratory, Georgen-Str. 34-36 (p. 22); the new Physiological and Physical Institutes, Neue Wilhelm-Str. 15, 16 (p. 22); the Institute for Pathological Anatomy, at the Charite (p. 61); the Midwifery Institute, Artillerie-Str. 18-16 (p. 61); and the Surgical Operating Room, Ziegel-Str. 6.

The Royal Library (Pl. r; J, 2), in the Opern-Platz, adjoining the Palace, erected in 1774-80, was built in imitation of the Royal Winter Riding School at Vienna, and is one of the most effective rococo structures in Berlin, though sometimes likened to a chest of drawers. The ground-floor contains the maps on the right, and the reading-room on the left (open on week-days, 9-4). The

The Library, which was founded in 1861, now contains 900,000 vols. and 15,000 MSS., among which may be mentioned the MSS. and first impressions of Luther's translation of the Bible, Melanchthon's report of the Diet of Worms, Gutenberg's Bible on parchment, of 1450, the first book printed with movable types, the Codex Wittekindi, a MS. of the Gospels of the 8th cent., said to have been presented by Charlemagne to the Saxon duke Wittekind, miniatures by Lucas Cromach, 36 vols. of portraits and enterprise of calculated characters. Chinese books, a small outcome. Saxon duke witekind, miniatures by Zacar Cromaca, so vois. of portrains and autographs of celebrated characters, Chinese books, a small octagonal Koran, important musical works, the air-pump and hemispheres with which Otto von Guericke (p. 88) made his first experiments, &c. — Some of the MSS, from the celebrated collection of the Duke of Hamilton have also been deposited in this library (comp. p. 41).

Opposite the Library is the Opera House (Pl. r. K., 2), with a portico of six Corinthian columns, erected by Knobelsdorff in 1741-43, with seats for 1800 spectators. The interior was fitted up anew by C. G. Langhans in 1787, and after a fire in 1843 the whole edifice was restored in the original style by C. F. Langhans. The tympanum contains an admirable *Group in zinc, designed by Rietschel: in the centre the muse of music; on the right the tragic and comic muse with the bantering satyr, the dramatic poet with the arts of painting and sculpture; on the left a dancing group with the Three Graces. The corridors and ante-rooms are sadly out of proportion to the spacious and effective interior. Performances, see p. 9. — In winter a series of symphony-concerts is given fortnightly in the concert-room: see p. 9.

At the back of the Opera House is the Roman Catholic Church of St. Hedwig (Pl. r; K, 2), erected by Frederick the Great in 1747-73, a plain imitation of the Pantheon at Rome. Opposite the church, towards the E., is the Prussian Bodencredit-Action-Bank, erected in 1871-73 by Ende and Böckmann.

Five *Statues by Rauch, over life-size, embellish the Opern-Platz. Between the palace of the crown-prince and the Opera House is that of Blücher (d. 1819), erected in 1826; at his right hand Gneisenau (d. 1831), at his left York (d. 1830), both erected in 1855; all three in bronze. In front of the guard-house Bulow (d. 1816) and Scharnhorst (d. 1813), in marble, erected in 1822. The pedestals are adorned with reliefs referring to the events of 1813-15.

The Royal Guard House (Königswache, Pl. r; K, 2), opposite the Opera, was constructed by Schinkel in the Doric style in 1818 in the form of a Roman fortified gate, such as the Porta Nigra at Trèves.

Adjoining it are three large cannon; the central one ('Valérie') was captured at Fort Mont Valérien at Paris in 1871. Military music here on Sat., Sun., and holidays at noon, on other days at 11 a.m.

At the back of the guard-house is the residence of the Minister of Finance (Pl. r; K, 2). To the left of this, and farther back, is the Singing Academy (Pl. r; K, 2), founded by Fasch in 1791, and now under the management of Prof. Blumner (adm., see p. 9).

A colossal Bust of Hegel, by G. Blesser, was erected in 1871 in the Dorotheen-Str., beyond the 'Chestnut Grove'. Farther to the W. in the same street (No. 9), on the right, is the University Library (comp. pp. 11, 20), a tasteful brick building, erected by Spieker in 1871-73; the interior is admirably fitted up. The new Friedrich-Werder'sche Gymnasium, a brick admirably inted up. The new Interactic-werder size dymansum, a brick building, with terracotta embellishments, by Blankenstein, is also in this street. The Dorotheenstadt Industrial School, the Chemical Laboratory, the Military Academy, and the Physiological, Physical, and Pharmacological Institutes, all in the Georgen-Str., which runs parallel with the Dorotheen-Str. on the N., are buildings in a similar style. Opposite the Dorotheenstadt church is a handsome Masonic Lodge ('Royal York'), built by Ende and Böckmann in 1883.

The Palace of the Crown Prince (Pl. r; K, 2; adm., p. 12), adjacent to the Opera, owes its present form to the alterations made by Strack in 1857 on an earlier palace, which was occupied from 1780 to 1810 by Frederick William III. The arch over the Oberwall-Strasse leads to the so-called Palace of the Princesses, which contains the interesting art-collection of the Crown-Princess. -Farther to the right is the Residence of the Commandant.

The *Arsenal (Pl. r; K, 2), erected by Nehring, Schlüter, and De Bodt in 1685-1706 under Frederick I., whose bust is placed over the principal portal, one of the best buildings at Berlin, is a square structure, each side of which is 288 ft. in length, with a quadrangle in the middle. The exterior is richly adorned with fine sculptures by Schlüter, among which the *Heads of Expiring Warriors on the keystones of the window-arches in the court are especially remarkable for the vigour of their expression. In 1877-80 the interior underwent a thorough alteration under the superintendence of Hitzig (d. 1881), and in 1883 it was re-opened as a Military Museum and 'Hall of Fame' (adm., see p. 11).

The rooms to the right of the entrance contain the Collection of Firearms, which is more remarkable for its historical completeness than for specimens of fine workmanship. Many of the pieces are spoils of war. The rooms to the W. (left) of the entrance are devoted to the Collection of Engineering Apparatus and Models, which includes sapping, mining, and other engineering implements, models of old French fortresses brought from Paris in 1814, plans of the storming of Düppel and the battle of Königgrätz, the keys of several captured fortresses, and a few pictures of historical interest (portraits of the gigantic grenadiers of Fred. William I., etc.). Most of the flags on the pillars were also brought from Paris in 1814.

Opposite the vestibule is the entrance to the glass-roofed Court, round which are ranged groups of French cannon, overhung by French dags, both captured in the war of 1870-71. The centre is to be occupied by a colossal figure of Borussia. — From the back of the court two flights of steps ascend to the Hall of Fame (not yet open), which consists of three sections — 'the Herrscherhalle' in the middle and the two Feldherrnhallen' at the sides. The former is to contain a figure of Victory and bronze statues of Prussian monarchs, while the latter will contain busts of $2$ eminent Prussian generals. All three rooms are to be adorned with historical frescoes. Those already finished include a "Triumphal Procession, by Geselschap, on the dome of the Herrscherhalle, considered the finest specimen of monumental painting in Berlin, and three scenes of modern history by Camphausen, Bleibtreu, and Werner (Proclamation of the German Empire at Versailles in 1871).

The W., N., and E. wings of the upper floor contain the Collection of Weapons, which is divided into three sections, the Oriental, the Mediasval, and the Modern. The last two are arranged in historical order. The collection is inferior to those of Madrid, Turin, Vienna, and Dresden, but has recently been enlarged by the purchase of the armoury of Prince

b. The Schloss-Brücke and Schloss.

In a straight line with the E. prolongation of the Linden is the *Bchloss-Brücke (palace-bridge), 106 ft. in width, constructed in 1822-24 from designs by Schinket, and crossing the arm of the Spree which separates Alt-Kölln from the Friedrichs-Werder. It was adorned by Frederick William IV. with eight groups in marble, over life-size, illustrative of the life of a warrior.

On the 8.: 1. Victory teaches a boy the history of the heroes, by E. Wolff; 2. Minerva instructs the youth in the use of weapons, by Bchievlein; 3. Minerva presents the combatant with arms, by Moller; 4. Victory crowns the conqueror, by Drake. On the N.: 5. Victory raises the wounded warrior, by Wichmann; 6. Minerva protecting and adding a combatant, by Bidser; 7. Minerva inciting him to a new contest, by A. Wolff; 8. Iris conducts the victorious fallen warrior to Olympus, by Wredow.—

The handsome parapet also merits attention.

To the left, beyond the bridge, extends the Lustgarten (Plr; K, 2), a square 247 yds. in length, and 220 yds. in width, originally a garden belonging to the palace, and afterwards converted into a drilling-ground by Frederick William I. It is now planted with trees and is enclosed by the Royal Palace (S.), the Cathedral (E.), and the Old Museum (N.; p. 27). In the centre, on a pedestal of granite 20 ft. in height, rises the equestrian *Statue of Frederick William III., by A. Wolff, inaugurated on 16th June, 1871, during the festival in celebration of the victories over the French. The pedestal is adorned with allegorical figures of Clio (in the front), Borussia with the Rhine and Memel on the right, Science with Industry and Art on the left, and Religion at the back. Beyond the statue, in front of the steps of the old Museum, is a huge Granite Basin, 22 ft. in diameter, and 75 tons in weight, hewn out of a solid erratic block of ten times the weight.

The *Royal Palace (Pl. τ ; K, L, 2) is in the form of a rectangle 650 ft. in length and 380 ft. in depth, enclosing two larger and two smaller courts. It rises in four stories to the height of 100 ft., while the dome above it is 230 ft. high.

The original building was a castle erected by Elector Frederick II. on the Spree in 1451. In 1588 Joachim II. added a wing by Caspor Theiss, facing the Schloss-Platz, the whole forming a handsome example of the German Renaissance, highly praised by contemporary critics. Elector John George finished the enclosure of the E. court in 1580-95 and began another one to the W. Under the Great Elector, who at first directed his energies to laying out the Lustgarten, Norting erected the Throne Room in 1681, and the round-arched gallery on the Spree in 1685. The Elector's successor, Frederick I., the first King of Prussia, determined to replace the irregular pile of buildings that had now arisen by a uniform structure of massive and imposing proportions, and confided the execution of this task to the architect Schtüter, who began his work in 1699. The gigantic scheme of alteration thus projected has, however, never been fully carried out, the part of the building on the Spree still retaining its original form. Schlüter was succeeded by Eosander v. Gosthe, to whom is due the architecture of the largest court and of the façade towards the Schlossfreiheit. In 1716 the process of alteration was brought by Bohme to a conclusion for the nonce, and during the reigns of Frederick William II. comparatively trifling additions only were made. The spacious chapel in the W. wing, with its vast dome, was constructed in the reign of Frederick William IV. by Ställer and Schadow (1845-48), and greatly enhances the effect of the exterior. From that time to the present the exterior and interior alike have been undergoing a gradual process of renovation. — In the time of Frederick the Great the palace served as a residence for almost all the members of the royal family, contained all the royal collections, and was the seat of several government-officials. Nowadays Prince Frederick Charles (second story of the S.W. part) and Prince Leopold (ground-floor towards the Schloss-Platz) are the only princes of the blood who have apartments here, the rest of the building consisting of reception-rooms, rooms for royal guests, and the dwellings of a few officials.

The exterior of the palace is in general effect massive and imposing. It has, however, received but little of the intended plastic embellishment. The two principal façades, both by Schlüter, display a pleasing diversity of style, that to the S. being distinguished by monumental severity, while that to the N. is enlivened with light and elegant details. The portal in the W. façade, by E. v. Goethe, is an imitation of the triumphal arch of Septimius Severus. The best example of Schlüter's work is seen in the *Inner Court, which is surrounded with arcades on three sides. The block of buildings that separates this from the Outer Courts belongs to the edifice of 1580, but its ornamental details are modern. The S. portion of the water-front, next the Kurfürsten-Brücke, which is well seen from the Burg-Str., formed part of the castle of Joachim II.; the adjoining, projecting portion, with the turret, was built early in the 17th century. Next to the latter is the gallery, built by Nehring in 1685, with High Renaissance details. In the Lustgarten, adjoining the Schloss, is the Schloss-Apotheke, built in 1595.

At the portal towards the Lustgarten are the Horse-Tamers, two large groups in bronze, by Baron Clodt of St. Petersburg, presented by the Emp. Nicholas in 1842. The first court is adorned with St. George and the dragon, a group in bronze by Kiss, erected in 1865.

"Interior. Admission, see p. 12. Visitors, who are only admitted in parties, apply to the castellan in the inner court, on the ground-floor to the left, and enter the palace by the large portal on the E. side of the quadrangle. The building contains about 600 apartments. The first room shown is the Schweizer-Saal, or old guard-room. Next to it come two ANTE-CRAMBERS, one of which contains portraits of the mother, sister, brother, and wife of Frederick the Great, by Pesne; in the other are two portraits of the Great Elector as crown-prince by Pesne and portraits of Peter the Great and Catharine II. of Russia by Levitski. The Königs-

ZIMMER, which we next enter, lies in the N. wing of the palace, and derives its name from the portraits it contains of all the Prussian monarchs and their consorts down to Frederick William IV. The Königssimmer is adjoined on the right or Spree side by the so-called OLD Exception Rooms (Alle Paradekommers), the handsome floors and other rich decorations of which date from the early part of the reign of Elector Frederick III. (1688-1713). The first of these is the Wainscoted Gallere (Boisrite Gallerie), with portraits of the Great Elector, his two wives, his parents, his children, and other relatives. The Kurdübernermer contains portraits of all the Hohenzollern Electors, and is supplemented by an ante-room devoted to the old Counts of Zollern and Burggraves of Nuremberg. We next traverse Frederick III. 8 Orators, the Keon-Karner, in which the crown-jewels used to be kept, and the Bridal Chamber, still used for the royal marriages.

To the W. of the Königszimmer is a series of RECEPTION ROOMS by Schitter, all somewhat overladen with ornament. The ROTHE DRAP d'OR KAMMER, which we first enter, contains a handsome silver memorial of the creation of the Order of the Iron Cross in 1813, and also a large picture by Camphausen representing Emperor William at Gravelotte. The ROTHE ADLER KAMMER is adorned with Camphausen's picture of the Great Elector and his generals. In the RITTER-SAAL, OF OLD THEORE ROOM, the gorgeous rococo decoration reaches its culmination. The well-designed allegorical *Groups of the four quarters of the globe, above the sidedoors, are among the best efforts of Schlüter. The beautiful carving of the large central door also deserves notice. The gallery above it was formerly of solid silver. Among the gold and silver plate on the handsome side-board, mostly dating from the time of the first two Prussian kings, are two tankards by Jamnitzer. Above the massive silver thrones is a large silver shield presented by the town of Berlin to Frederick William IV. In front of the window is a massive silver column 8 ft. in height, presented to the present emperor by the officers of the army and navy in 1887 on the 60th anniversary of his admission to the military service. The SCHWARZE ADLER SAAL contains a large picture by Camphausen, representing Frederick the Great surrounded by his generals. In the RED VELVET ROOM are good portraits of the Great Riector, of Frederick I., and of Sophia Charlotte, wife of the latter, all in handsome old frames. The old CHAPEL has lately been restored in the original style and fitted up for the meetings of the Order of the Black Eagle.

The Picture Galler, 196 ft. in length, contains numerous portraits and scenes from recent Prussian history. Above the entrance-door, Peter the Great; adjacent, Sultan Solyman II., by Livens; above the other doors, Gustavus Adolphus and Maria Theresa. Among the portraits of other foreign monarchs the most interesting are: Charles I. of England and his queen, by Van Dyck; Catharine II., by Eriksen; Napoleon crossing the St. Bernhard, by David, brought from Paris by Blücher. The portraits of Prussian monarchs include the Emperor William and Empress Augusta by Winterhalter, a large equestrian portrait of Fred. William III. by Krüger, and a fine portrait of Fred. William I. Among the historical pictures are: Steffeck, King William at the Battle of Sadowa, or Königgrätz, in 1866; Krüger, The Estates doing homage to Fred. William IV. in 1840; Camphausen, Emp. William entering Berlin in 1871; A. v. Werner, King William proclaimed Emperor at Versailles in 1871, presented by the German princes.

We next enter the Königin-Zimmén, containing portraits of queens, and then the White Saloon, a large hall in the wing on the Schlossfreiheit, 105 ft. in length, 50 ft. in width, and 40 ft. high, completed by Stuller in 1857. The marble statues of the twelve Electors of Brandenburg were executed in the reign of the Great Elector. The Victory, in a sitting posture, is by Rauch. In the vaulting are allegorical figures and paintings referring to the eight original Prussian provinces. — The adjoining Staircase is embellished with marble statues and reliefs. — The "Palace Chapel, an octagonal edifice, 113 ft. in height, and 68-75 ft. in diameter, is lined and paved with marble of different colours, and adorned with frescoes on a gold ground. The altar with its four columns is of yellow Egyptian marble, the pulpit and candelabra of Carrara marble. The acoustic properties of the chapel are very poor.

The chapel terminates the series of rooms shown to the general public, but the attractions of the palace are by no means exhausted by the foregoing inspection, and a small party will generally gain permission to visit some of the other parts of the building. The most interesting of the remaining rooms on the second floor are the Neue Gallerie, the Beddength Rapathements, the Thurmentment in the 'Grüne Hut', adorned with views of the palace in the time of the Electors by C. and P. Graeb, the adjoining Kapellenzimmen, the Kleist Apartments, in the German Renaissance style, the Elisabeth-Kammen, and lastly the Apartments of Princess Elizabeth, in one of which Frederick the Great was born on 24th Jan., 1712. On the first floor are the rooms of Frederick William II., and also those once occupied by Frederick the Great, and afterwards converted into a *Buite for Fred. William IV. and his queen. The rooms of Fred. William I. on the ground-floor of the N.W. wing, afterwards known as the 'Petits Appartements' of Fred. William II., are maintained in the taste of last century. They contain Schadow's beautiful group in marble of Queen Louise and her sister.

Distributed throughout these apartments are a number of paintings of the French school of the 18th cent., principally by Westess and his followers, and many of great excellence. The best of the larger works of Watteau, the 'Departure for Cythera' and the 'Arrival at Cythera', two other pictures by him of scenes at a Parisian art-dealer's, and the finest portraits by Pesne are all in the Eliasbeth-Kammern. The Hohensollern-

Kammern also contain several works by Wattau, including the 'Swing'.

The White Lady, a spectre which traditionally haunts the palaces of Baircuth and Berlin, and periodically appears to portend the death of a member of the royal house of Hohenzollern, is said to be the ghost of the Countess Agnes of Orlamünde, who murdered her two children in order that she might be enabled to marry the Burggrave Albert of Nuremberg, ancestor of the Electors of Brandenburg.

On the E. side of the Lustgarten, between the palace and the Museum, is situated the insignificant Cathedral (Pl. τ ; K, 2), erected in 1747 and restored in 1817. It contains a monument to the Electors John Cicero (d. 1499) and Joachim I. (d. 1535), cast by Johann Vischer of Nuremberg in 1540, and the handsome sarcophagi of the Great Elector (d. 1688) and King Frederick I. (d. 1713). Beneath the church are the burial-vaults of the royal family. The sacristan lives to the left of the cathedral. — Music in the Cathedral, see p. 9.

Fred. William IV. undertook the erection of a new cathedral more worthy of the great capital, but did not complete more than the foundations and part of a burial-hall for the royal family (Campo Santo), for which the distinguished painter Cornelius designed his spirited compositions illustrative of the Christian doctrines regarding Sin, Death, and the Redemption (p. 45). — The Campo Santo temporarily contains a series of casts of the statues and reliefs found at the Greek sanctuary of Olympia, in the course of the excavations carried on there since 1875 at the expense of the German government. The finest are the two pediments of the Temple of Zeus, the *Nike of Paionios and the *Hermes of Praxiteles. Closed in winter.

c. The Royal Museums. The National Gallery.

The  Old Museum (Pl. r; K, 2), on the N. side of the Lustgarten, an admirable building in the Greek style, the finest in Berlin, with an Ionic portice of eighteen columns, and approached by a broad flight of steps, was erected by Schinkel in 1824-28 (length 284 ft., depth 175 ft., height 62 ft.). The central part of the structure, rising above the rest of the building and corresponding with the rotunds in the interior, is adorned at the corners with four colossal groups in bronze: in front, the Horse Tamers of the Monte Cavallo at Rome, a copy by Tieck; at the back, Pegasus refreshed and caressed by the Horæ, by Schievelbein and Hagen. The steps are adorned with two large groups in bronze: right, *Amazon on horseback, defending herself against a tiger, by Kiss: left, Lion combat, by A. Wolff.

The VESTIBULE contains marble statues of Schinkel (d. 1841) by Tieck, Ottfr. Müller by Tondeur, *Rauch (d. 1857) by Drake. Winckelmann (d. 1768) by Wichmann, G. Schadow (d. 1850) by Hagen, and Cornelius (d. 1867), by A. Calandrelli. The *Freecoes, designed by Schinkel, and executed under the direction of Cornelius, represent in an antique style (on the left) the development of the world from chaos, and (on the right) the progress of human culture. (Schinkel's original designs, in the Schinkel Museum. p. 53, with a key attached, afford more satisfaction than the fres-

Short Wall to the left: Uranus surrounded by the Constellations. -Long Wall to the left: Saturn and the Titans conquered by Jupiter. The Long watt to the test: saturn and the Intana conquered by Jupiter. The Dioscuri, the first distributors of light, precede him; Prometheus steals the fire from him. Selene (Luna) drives her chariot to illumine the night, which conceals numerous figures, including art, love, and war, in her outspread mantle. Maternal love is developed; a child waters the earth with fruitful rain. A cock proclaims the dawn; Venus and Cupid arise; the god of the sun rises from the ocean amidst the music of harps; the Graces soar upwards. Long Wall to the right: Spring, Morning, the Infancy of nations, Pastoral life, Hunting, Prize contests. The Muses and Psyche and the Genius of poetry minister to the poet. A youth traces the outline of the form of his mistress; art begins. - Summer, Noon, the Youth of nations, Harvest, Music. Beneath the hoofs of Pegasus, whom the nymphs caress, springs Hippocrene, the fountain of inspired imagination. In the grotto of the spring cower the Fates. — Festive joy, Evening and Autumn of life, Vintage. Sculpture (with Schinkel's portrait), Architecture (invention of the Corinthian capital by Callimachus). Victorious return, Vintage festival, Dance of the Muses, Astronomy, Navigation. — Night and Winter; Luna descends into the sea. — Short Wall to the right: Mourning at the tomb.

The UPPER VESTIBULE, to which a double staircase ascends, is adorned with a copy of the celebrated ancient Warwick Vase in England. The FRESCORS, also designed by Schinkel (p. 53), represent the struggle of civilised mankind against barbarians and the elements.

On the left, wild horses penetrating into a shepherd's dwelling; on Flora; *755b. Leaping Satyr, torso of the time of the Diadochi. - Comp. XVIII: *74. Girl playing with astragali. — Comp. XIII: 140a. Statue of a boy, in bronze, found in the Rhine, near Xanten; *475. Torso of Venus, an admirable Greek work. — Comp. XII: 149. Head of Dionysus. — Comp. XI: 156a. Head of Antinous, recently found in Egypt.

Etruscan Cabinet. In the centre, 542. Sarcophagus. In the left corner, 539. Urn in the shape of a house; 519. Sarcophagus in clay, with the recumbent figures of a man and woman on the lid; 566. Proserpine en-

Bacchus leaning on a satyr, a fragment; without a number, 'Head of a girl, a Greek work of the 4th century. On the right, *773a. Torso of a colossal female figure with classical drapery (4th cent.); *219. Youth, in the heroic style, by Antiphanes of Paros, according to the inscription; *488. Torso of Marsyas; several archaic reliefs; many Greek tombstones, including a fine *Alto-relief with four almost life-size figures.

Roman Saloon, containing statues and busts of the latter period of the Republic and of the Empire. Comp. X: no number, Alto-relief of the siege of a seaport-town, a fine early-Roman work; 407 a. Old Roman, in nummulite limestone; *410a. Scipio Africanus, in alabaster. — Comp. IX: 399 a. Bust of Hadrian, in green basalt; 411. Head of a Barbarian; 318, 819. Busts of two young brothers. — Comp. VIII: in the centre, 290. Julius Cæsar, draped statue; *291. Julius Cæsar, in basalt.

We now reach the Mediæval and Renaissance Sculptures. The collection of works of the Italian Renaissance in marble, bronze, terracotta, and painted stucco is now unequalled out of Italy save at the South Kensington Museum and the Louvre.

Comp. V. *705. A. Leopardis, Shiell-bearers from the tomb of Vendramin (d. 1478) in SS. Giovanni e Paolo at Venice; *1039. Donatello, Bronze figure of the Baptist; *1084. M. Montaker, Mater Dolorosa, a painted wooden bust, of startling realism; 1014. Fr. Francia, Terraccita bust, painted; *1086. Benedetto da Majano, Painted terracotta bust of Filippo Strozzi; *1040, *1041. Bronze busts of aged generals by a Florentine Master of the end of the 15th century. — The cases by the window contain a collection of *Ivory Carvings of the 3rd-16th cent., and also a collection of small Recover Reliefs. In the layer cashiest arging the well are the of small Bronze Reliefs. In the large cabinet against the wall are the or small Bronse Reliefs. In the large cabinet against the wall are the Smaller Italian and German Sculpiures.

Comp. IV. *1070. Michael Angelo, John the Baptist when a boy, an early master-piece, bought in 1879 for 100,000m. (50001.); *667. Desiderio da Settignano, Bust in marble of a Florentine girl; *1082. Luca della Robbia, Stucco relief, bronzed, of the Madonna and Saints; *1087. Florentine Master (about 1450), Bust of Giov. Eucellai; *653, 653a. Alessandro Vittoria, Marble busts of members of the Grimani family.

The last room, overlooking the court, also contains mediæval and Renaissance sculptures.

COMP. I. 689a. Pigalle, Statue of Mercury (1748); 1050. Mino da Fie-sole, Bust of Niccold Strozzi, dated 1454; 1043. Desiderio da Settignano, Bust of Marietta Strozzi (both from the Pal. Strozzi).

COMP. II. 640. Bust of Pope Alexander VI. (Borgia); *Bronze bust of Pope Gregory XIII.

Comp. III. 1073. Schlüter, Model for the equestrian statue of the Great Elector on the Kurfürsten-Brücke (p. 55).

Opposite the entrance from the rotunda, a staircase descends from the Hall of the Heroes to the ground-floor of the Old Museum, containing the Library for the use of the officials, and the Cabinet of Coins.

The *Cabinet of Coins contains 200,000 specimens, of which about 90,000 are ancient (55,000 Greek and 35,000 Roman). The collection of Greek coins has lately been much enriched by the purchase of the Fox and Prokesch-Osten cabinets (each of which cost 15,000), and other additions. The collection of oriental, mediæval, and modern coins is also very extensive. The Collection of Italian Medals of the 15th and 16th cent., formerly in the possession of Elisa Bonaparte-Bacciocchi, Grand Duchess of Tuscany, and also the collection of German Medals are remarkably complete. A selection of the finest medals and coins, and a collection of box-wood and soapstone matrices for the German medals, are exhibited in glass-cases. Catalogue for sale. Visitors who wish to examine the coins more closely must apply to the director.

The double staircase from the Hall of the Gods ascends to the Passage connecting the old and new Museums, where several casts of ancient portrait-statues are placed, whence we proceed direct to the Roman Cupola Saloon of the New Museum (p. 39); or we may turn in the opposite direction and ascend a few more steps to the Second Floor of the Old Museum, containing the picture-gallery.

Another approach to the picture-gallery is from the vestibule of the Old Museum facing the Lustgarten; a double staircase ascends thence to a landing, from which folding-doors lead to Saloons No. III (to the right, p. 36) and No. IV (to the left, p. 36). — Another door on the highest landing of the staircase opens on the gallery of the Rotunda (p. 28).

As already mentioned, the upper walls of the ROTUNDA are hung with the celebrated  Topestry woven at Brussels for Henry VIII. in 1515-16 from designs by Baphael (now in the South Kensington Museum), being, like that at Dresden, a repetition of the famous tapestry in the Vatican. The colours are unfortunately faded. It was once in the possession of Emp. Charles I., then in that of the Dukes of Alva, and was purchased by Frederick William IV. in 1844. The subjects, with which every one acquainted with the cartoons or the engravings from them is familiar, are from the Acts of the Apostles and the Life of Christ: 1. Death of Ananias; 2. Christ giving Peter the keys of heaven; 3. Paul and Barnabas at Lystra; 4. The sorcerer Elymas struck with blindness; 5. Conversion of 8t. Paul; 6. Paul preaching at Athens; 7. Stoning of 8t. Stephen; 8. Miraculous draught of fishes; 9. Peter and Paul healing the lame man. (The 10th, Paul in prison at Philippi, has unfortunately been destroyed.)

The nucleus of the *Picture Gallery consists of the collections of Mr. Solly, an Englishman, purchased in 1821 for 750,000 dollars, and of a selection made from the various royal galleries in Berlin and Potsdam on the establishment of the Museum in 1829. The Solly collection yielded most of the Italian pictures of the 14th, 15th. and 16th cent., most of the works of the early Flemish and German schools, and numerous examples of later Dutch and Flemish painters. The contributions from the royal collections embrace the master-pieces of the Dutch and Flemish schools, the majority of the German works, many of the Italian paintings of the 16th and 17th cent., and a small but choice cabinet of French pictures. Nearly all the works of Caravaggio and the other Italian 'academics' and 'naturalists' now in the Gallery once formed part of the Giustiniani Collection, one-half of which was purchased at Paris in 1815. - After the opening of the museums the work of extension progressed steadily under Dr. Waagen (d. 1867), the first director, who acquired numerous pictures of various periods and schools, though few of them were works of the first order. After 1840 the progress of the Gallery came almost to a stand-still, but in 1873, under a new director, the spirit of rivalry with the other European galleries gave it a fresh impetus. Since that date numerous admirable works of various schools have been added, the most important acquisition having been the Suermondt Collection, consisting chiefly of Dutch paintings, which was purchased in 1874 for 50,000L.

The importance of the Berlin Gallery consists rather in its representation of the most various styles and epochs, than in its possession of masterpieces by the great painters, although it is by no means entirely deficient in works of the highest class. In historical completeness it vies with the National Gallery at London, which has been formed during the same period and under similar auspices.

Among works of the EARLY NETHERLANDISH SCHOOL the Gallery possesses the large winged altarpiece from Ghent by the brothers Hubert and Jan van Eyck, the finest work of the school, and the first painting executed wholly in oils. Roger van der Weuden the best of the followers of the Van Eycks, is represented by three admirable altarpieces. Petrus Cristus and Dierick Bouts are also well represented. The Virgin and Child of Quinten Massys, who forms a link between the early Flemish school and the Renaissance, is one of that master's best efforts.

The EARLY ITALIAN MASTERS are particularly well represented in the Berlin Gallery. Among the painters of the 14th century we meet Giotto, Gaddi, Simone Memmi, and Lorenzetti. The Madonnas with saints of Sandro Botticelli and Cosimo Tura, the Pan of Luca Signorelli, the large altarpiece by Vivarini, the Pieta of Giov. Bellini, and the small portrait by Antonello da Messina rank among the finest creations of these leading masters of the 15th century. The Madonna of Andr. Verrocchio, the Annunciation of Piero Pollajuolo, the allegorical piece by Melozzo da Forli, three small panels by Masaccio, and the Adoration of the Magi by Vittore Pisano are perhaps the greatest rarities in the Gallery. - The GOLDEN PRRIOD OF ITALIAN ART is neither so fully nor so well represented. Of the four works by Raphael three belong to his earliest period. and one, the Madonna di Casa Colonna, is unfinished. Sebastiano del Piombo is illustrated by several works. The admirable altarpiece by Andrea del Sarto was spoiled by an attempt at restoration in 1867. The Assumption of Fra Bartolommeo belongs to the period of his co-operation with Albertinelli. His rare contemporary Franciabigio is represented by two portraits. Bronzino, the best-known portrait-painter of Florence, is illustrated by a masterly portrait of Ugolino Martelli. - Among the Masters of Chiaroscuro Leonardo da Vinci is unfortunately absent. Correggio, however, is represented by one of his most attractive works, the Leda. The Io is merely a well-executed copy by a contemporary. - Titian, the chief of the VENETIAN SCHOOL, is illustrated by a few portraits only. The Gallery also contains altarpieces by Bordone, Francesco Vecellio, Tintoretto, and Lor. Lotto, all of which, however, are inferior to several admirable portraits by Lotto. — The Brescian School is unusually well represented by works of Romanino, Savoldo, Moroni, and Moretto (a master-piece).

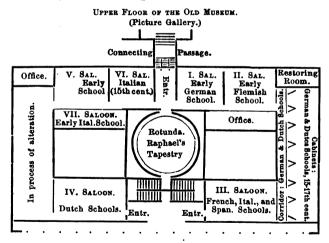

ITALIAN ABT IN THE 17TH CENTURY is abundantly and well exemplified by a number of the naturalistic works in which it was most successful. Caravaggio, in particular, is represented by works of every size and description, while Guido Reni is seen to advantage in a fine altarpiece of his early period. Carto Maratti contributes an admirable portrait; and from the hand of his pupil, the Flemish painter Ferdinand Voet, we have the celebrated but somewhat over-rated portrait of Cardinal Azzolini, which has in turn been attributed to Murillo. Velazquez, and Maratti. — The second short revival of the Venetian school is represented by good works by Tiepolo, Canaletto, and Bellotto.

The gem of the Early German School is Holbein's portrait of the merchant Gisze, which formed part of the Solly collection, and is justly regarded as one of the very finest works by this master. Two other admirable portraits by Holbein belonged to the Suermondt Cabinet. The gallery has recently been enriched by three genuine specimens of Albrecht Dürer: a very unprepossessing Virgin, a portrait of Elector Frederick the Wise (of his early period), and the admirable portrait of Muffel (1526). The collection also contains master-pieces of two of his best pupils, Hans von Kulmbach and Albrecht Altdorfer. Of the examples of Lucas Cranach, the 'Jungbrunnen' and a few of the small portraits only are in his best style. Pencs, Amberger, and Bruyn, and also the early Cologne and Westphalian masters, are represented by characteristic examples.

The NETHERLANDISH ART OF THE 16-17TH CENTURIES, the period of the development of the two great national schools of the Flemings and the Dutch, may be studied here to great advantage in all its various departments. Of the works of Peter Paul Rubens, the versatile chief of the FLEMISH SCHOOL, the Gallery possesses a small but choice collection, nearly all executed without the aid of pupils. The Raising of Lazarus is one of his best altarpieces, the Rescue of Andromeda and Diana at the Chase are charming examples of his mythological style, and the St. Cecilia is unique in its bloom of colour. The unfinished Capture of Tunis affords an instructive insight into the technical method pursued by the great master. The St. Sebastian and the Neptune and Amphitrite are characteristic specimens of his early period. The school of Rubens is also well represented. The talents of Van Duck are exhibited in a Pieta, one of his master-pieces, and in three altarpieces of his first period, showing an exaggerated imitation of Rubens. The collection also contains good examples of Diepenbeeck, Van Thulden, Van Mol, Adrian Brouwer, Snyders, and Fyt. The best works by Teniers the Younger are the Backgammon Players, the Temptation of St. Anthony, and a Rural Feast. A large landscape by Adriaera Brouwer is remarkable for its idealised fidelity to nature.

The Durch School is also well represented. Frans Hals, the chief master of the earlier period, is nowhere else studied to so great advantage, except in the museum of his native town of Haarlem. the best examples of his skill being the Nurse and the Hille Bobbe. The paintings by Rembrandt include characteristic specimens in both his earlier and later manner. The two portraits of himself and that of the so-called Duke of Guelders are early works; the two small Biblical scenes, the admirable portrait of his wife, the Vision of Daniel, the Joseph and Potiphar (a master-piece of colouring), and the exquisite Susanna are in his most mature style; while the portrait of a young woman at a window dates from his last period. Among the ten landscapes by Jacob van Ruusdael three are master-pieces. The Scissors-grinder of Terburg is perhaps his most finished work. P. de Hooch, Van der Meer of Delft, A. van de Velde. Du Jardin, and Wouverman are admirably represented; and the gallery also contains excellent examples of De Heem. Huysum, Rachel Ruysch, and other depictors of still-life.

The pictures are arranged in strict historical order, interrupted here and there only by newly-acquired works, or in consequence of the alterations now taking place in the building, which will not be completed till the autumn of 1884. We begin our enumeration of the most important works with Saloon I., entered from the landing at the top of the double staircase (see p. 31). — Catalogue, with facsimiles of the signatures, 3 m. Each picture is inscribed with the name of the painter and the date of his birth and death.

From Room II. we enter a Corridor containing the Flemish and Dutch Pictures of historical interest, on the other side of which is a row of cabinets, with the master-pieces of the German and Netherlandish Schools.

Cabinet 1. (behind Cab. 2). 512-517. Alterpiece of the Lamb, by Hubert and Jan Van Eyck, the first picture ever painted in oils, the master-piece of the early Netherlandish school, and the most valuable work in the whole collection. It was begun by Hubert for a Ghent patrician named Jodocus Vydts, and was finished by Jan after his brother's death (1426-32). The central portion of the altarpiece, representing the Adoration of the Mystic Lamb, surmounted by figures of God the Father, the Virgin Mary, and John the Baptist, is still in the Chapel of St. Bayon at Ghent; two other panels (Adam and Eve) are in the Museum at Brussels. The remaining panels, six in number, were purchased by Mr. Solly for 4000t., and were afterwards secured for the Berlin Museum along with the rest of that gentleman's collection. The four lower panels (512, 513, 516, 517) depict knights, crusaders, hermits, and pilgrims moving in procession to the Fountain of Life (central panel, see copy by Coxie, No. 524); the two upper [614, 516) represent respectively a group of singing angels, and 8t. Cecilia attended by angels with musical instruments. The back of the panels (in Cabinet 2.) bears the Annunciation, portraits of Jodocus Vydts and his wife, 8t. John the Evangelist, and John the Baptist. "There is not to be found', say Crowe and Cavalcaselle, 'in the whole Flemish school a picture in which human figures are grouped, designed, or painted with so much perfection as in this of the mystic Lamb. Nor is it possible to find a more complete or better distributed composition, more natural attitudes, or more dignified expression'. The visitor is charmed both by the naïve and careful realism and by the brilliancy of the colouring. - *534. Roger van der Weyden, Winged altarpiece, with the Nativity, Pieth, and Resurrection; *638a. Altdorfer, Rest on the Flight into Egypt, resembling Dürer (1510); *588. Amberger, Seb. Münster, the geographer, Amberger's best work. *586. Hans Holbein the Younger, Jörg Gisze, a Bâle BERLIN.

merchant in the Steelyard at London (1582); the simplicity and truthfulness of the conception, the careful handling of texture, and the luxurious surroundings of the apartment, which heighten rather than detract from the importance of the figure, form a conjunction scarcely paralleled in any other of Holbein's works. - 586b, 586c. Holbein the Younger, Portraits.

Cabinet 2. 518-523. Hubert and Jan van Eyck, Back of the Ghent altarpiece (see above). - *525a. Jan van Eyck, Man with carnations, a fine work, showing on a smaller scale much of the finished execution and work, showing on a smaller scale much of the finished execution and powerful general effect of the Ghent altarpiece. — *A. Dürer, Portrait of Senator Muffel of Nuremberg, dated 1576 (acquired in 1883); *984b. Roger v. d. Weyden, Winged altarpiece with scenes from the life of John the Baptist (amall replica at Frankfort on the Main).

Cabinet 3. *688a. Jon Brueghel, Flowers; *788. Von Dyck, Prince Thomas of Carignano (1834); *828h. Rembrandt, Joseph and Potiphar (1655), bought for 12.0001; *768. Rubens, Head; *656. Teniers, Backgammon.

2. Collections in the New Museum.

Approaching the New Museum from the Old by the connecting passage (p. 28), the visitor is recommended to traverse Rooms X.. XI., and XII. (see Plan, p. 39) and enter the spacious *Staircase (Pl. II), 125 ft. in length, 50 ft. in width, and 65 ft. in height. which forms the centre of the building. A broad flight of steps leads from the ground-floor to the first story, and two narrower ones from the first to the second.

Six magnificent  Mural Paintings by Kaulbach, executed in 1847-66, representing important epochs in the history of mankind, adorn the upper walls of the staircase.

1. FALL OF BABEL, with Nimrod in the centre. — 2. PROSPERITY OF GREECE, with Homer reciting his works to the Greeks. — 3. DESTRUCTION OF JERUSALEM by Titus. — 4. BATTLE OF THE HUNS, considered the finest of the six paintings. According to a legend, the combatants were so exasperated that the slain rose during the night and fought in the air. Above, borne on a shield, is Attila with a scourge in his hand, opposite him Theodoric, king of the Visigoths. (The sketch in oils, in different shades of brown, which gave rise to the composition of the whole cycle, is in the collection of Count Raczynski, p. 46.) — 5. The Chusaders before Jerusalem under Godfrey de Bouillon. — 6. Age of the Reformation, comprising numerous historical personages.

Adjoining and between the great paintings are several figures on a gold ground, over the doors Tradition and History, Science and Primitive Art (poetry). Between the large pictures, the law-givers Moses, Solon, Charlemagne, Frederick the Great; above them, Egypt, Greece, Italy, Germany. On the window-walls, the arts of Sculpture, Painting, Architecture, and Engraving.

Around the entire hall, beneath the richly-decorated pendent work, runs a Frieze, bearing a humorous representation (in grisaille) of the history of the development of mankind, terminating with Humboldt leaning on his Cosmos, the whole hardly intelligible without a detailed explanation.

The First Floor of the New Museum, which is first entered by the connecting passage (p. 28) from the Old, is entirely occupied by the very extensive and valuable *Collection of Casts, arranged in twelve saloons. This collection has been so much enriched during the last few years, particularly with casts of Italian sculptures of the middle ages and Renaissance, that it will be necessary to erect a new building for it, where the objects can be arranged chronologically. Short new catalogue 50 pf.; scientific catalogue by Friedrichs.

I. The Gallery of the N. Court (Pl. I), which adjoins the staircase (Pl. II), contains casts of the most ancient works of the plastic art: Assyrian reliefs, early Greek statues and reliefs, and metopæ, friezes, and Assyrian refless, early Greek Statues and refless, and metope, friezes, and other architectural sculptures.

III. GREEK SALOON. Tympanum groups from the Temple of Minerva at Ægina (originals at Munich), tympanum groups and frieze from the Parthenon by Phidias (originals in the British Museum), and similar works. Above are ten Mural Paintings, of architectural views of Greece by Gräb (Ancient Athens and Olympia), Schirmer, Biermann, Schmädt, and Pape.

IV. Cabinet. Laocoon group (original in the Vatican).

V. SALOON OF THE FARMESE BULL. Group of the Farnese Bull (original at Naples). Figures of Apollo, Artemis, and Amazons.

VI. ROTUNDA. Figures of Athene of different periods (among them, 664. Athena-Medici, now in the Palais des Beaux Arts at Paris, and perhaps belonging to the Parthenon sculptures), and of Hercules; Menelaus with the body of Patroclus. Mural Paintings: Exploits of Theseus, Perseus, Bellerophon, and Hercules, by Dage, Steinbrück, Schmidt, and Hopfgarten.

FIRST FLOOR OF THE NEW MUSEUM. (Collection of Casts.)

VII. NIOBE SALOON. Children of Niobe (originals chiefly at Florence), different renderings of Zeus and Hera, and Greek works from Asia Minor and the Grecian Archipelago. The stereochromatic Mural Paintings represent Greek heroic scenes by Kaselowski, Henning, Becker, and Peters (after Genelli).

VIII. BACCHUS SALOON. Small casts and figures of animals.

IX. ROMAN SALOON. Representations of Aphrodite and Bacchus and their satellites. Roman portrait-busts. On the walls are seventeen encaustic paintings of ancient Roman buildings, designed by Stüler and executed by Pape and Seiffert.

X. CUPOLA SALOON (adjoining the passage connecting the new with Roman historical-statues and three large stereothe old museum). chromatic Mural Paintings: Consecration of the Church of St. Sophia by Justinian, by Schrader; Subjugation of Wittekind by Charlemagne, designed by Kaulbach, executed by Gräf; Christianity adopted as the religion of the state, by Stilke.

XI. MEDIEVAL SALOON. Casts of Romanesque and Gothic sculptures in German, French, and English churches. Equestrian statues of Colleoni by Verrocchio (d. 1488) and of Gattamelata by Donatello (d. 1466).

XII. RENAISSANCE SALOON. Renaissance works, from those of Ghiberti down to those of Michael Angelo.

In the staircase (Pl. II), as already mentioned, a flight of steps descends to the GROUND FLOOR OF THE NEW MUSEUM, which contains the collection of Northern Antiquities, the Ethnographical Collection, and the Greek Court, on the right, and the Egyptian Museum on the left.

The Northern Antiquities and the Ethnographical Collection are to be transferred in the course of 1884 to the new Ethnographical Museum (p. 50); and the space which they at present occupy will be devoted to Egyptian antiquities, Assyrian sculptures, and newly-acquired sculptures of the early-Christian period.

The Northern Antiquities, arranged in twelve cabinets and along the walls, consist of various kinds of weapons, household utensils, cinerary urns, gold and silver trinkets, &c., provided with the names of the places where they were found. Most of them were found in tumuli, and belong to various periods, ranging from the flint to the bronze and the Roman.

The stereochromatic Mural Paintings, by Bellermann, Müller, Heidenreich, and Richter, illustrate the mythology of the North. W. Wall, beginning opposite the entrance: 1st window: Hertha, the Ceres, and Odin, the Jupiter of the North; above them day and night. 2nd window: Baldur, the northern Apollo, and Hulda, the goddess of domestic life. 3rd window: Freyr, god of spring, and Freya, his sister, goddess of love; above them, dwarf ship-builders. 4th window: Odur and Freya on the battle-field, marking with blood the dead who are worthy of Valhalla (paradise of the heroes); in the centre Valkyries conducting the dead to Valhalla; right, Tyr, god of war. — Above the door: Odin, the universal father, left, the Valhalla. right, Helheim, the abode of those who have died a natural death. — E. Wall: wicked deities. By the first window left, Hel; right, Loki; by the 2nd window Nornas (fates); by the 3rd window watersprites, the griffin, and contest of the giants with the dragon; by the 4th window Titania and elves; Thor, god of thunder, in a chariot drawn by mountaingoats.

We next enter a room containing the extensive and instructive *Ethnographical Collection, arranged geographically, and consisting of numerous costumes, weapons, and other objects from foreign countries, models of dwellings, etc., all provided with labels. Catalogue, 25 pf.

The most interesting sections are those devoted to Central and South America, Africa, and the Asiatic islands, the contents of which have been enriched by the collections of Nachtigat, Schwein/wrth, Richthofen, and other eminent travellers. Dr. Bastian, the director of the Ethnographical Department, has greatly improved the collection by numerous judicious purchases. The Indian Collection is in the old Mining Academy.

On leaving the Ethnographical Museum we pass through a door to the right leading to a passage with Egyptian casts. On the right is the so-called GREEK COURT (no admission).

The *Esyptian Museum, one of the most important collections of the kind, founded by Passalacqua, and greatly extended by Levsizes in 1845, is arranged in five saloons, the artistic embellishment of which contributes materially to explain the nature of the different objects. Instructive catalogue by Lepsius, 25 pf.

I. The MYTHOLOGICAL SALOON is chiefly occupied by sarcophagi and mummies. The most valuable of the former, placed under glass in the centre, was found at Thebes. The mural paintings afford a survey of the principal forms of the Egyptian gods.

II. Saloon of the Tomes. The "Tomb Chambers here, entirely covered internally and externally with hieroglyphics, were brought in fragments from the Necropolis at Memphis by Professor Lepsius, and reconstructed in their original forms. They all belong to the ancient Egyptian kingdom, dating from between 3000 and 2000 years before Christ.

III. HYPOSTYLE. On the walls between the columns are papyrus MSS. preserved under glass. A niche in the background contains the colossal statue of King Horus.

IV. The Passage Room to the historical saloon also contains papyrus rolls, as well as tiles of the clay of the Nile.

V. The Historical Saloon contains figures of gods, kings, priests, and dignitaries of the kingdom, monuments, alters, inscriptions, mural paintings, &c., chiefly of the later kingdom, B.C. 1650-525. The glass cabinets contain various smaller objects of a religious and domestic nature, utensils, heads of mummies, mummies of sacred animals, cats, fish, crocodiles, frogs, ibises, grasshoppers, amulets, cut stones, trinkets, coins, fruit. The mural paintings beginning on the E. side, and continuing towards the left, present a chronological review of the different periods of the history of Egypt: 1-17. The old kingdom, 18-40. The later kingdom.

VI. The COLONMADE COURT, together with the contiguous hypostyle and the niches terminating the latter, the central of which is occupied by the colossal figure of King Horus, represents the main features of an Egyptian temple. In the centre of the entrance-court stands an altar. In front tian temple. In the centre of the entrance-court stands an altar. In front of the hypostyle are two colossal figures of kings in a sitting posture, in porphyry; to the left Ramses II., called Sesostris by the Greeks, entirely uninjured; to the right Usortesen I. (B.C. 2000), consisting chiefly of fragments reunited and supplemented. In the centre two ram-sphynces in grantic (that on the right a cast), and two smaller ones in limestone. The hieroglyphics on the entablature record that these monuments were arranged here in 1848 by order of Frederick William IV. The mural paintings by Schirmer, Pape, and others, represent Egyptian landscapes.

On the highest landing of the staircase (comp. p. 38), to the left, is the entrance to the *Cabinet of Engravings, open to the public on Sundays, and on other days to students only.

The collection, which is one of the most extensive in Europe, embraces engravings and wood-outs by masters of the 15th-19th cent., drawings by artists who died before 1860, miniature-paintings from the 10th to the 16th cent., and early illustrated books. The drawings and engravings the 10th cent., and early illustrated books. The drawings and engravings by German and Dutch masters are especially numerous. In 1877 an important collection of the engravings and wood-cuts of Dürer was purchased, along with 40 of his drawings. In 1882 the German Government bought the celebrated "Manuscript Collection of the Duke of Hamilton, containing nearly 700 MSS. The MSS. of purely scientific or literary value were deposited in the Royal Library (p. 21), while those interesting from their artistic merit were placed in the Cabinet of Engravings. The gem of the collection is a unique copy of Dante, with 84 illustrations by Bandro Botticelli.

New acquisitions of importance are exhibited for some time in frames or cases, and some of the most valuable drawings are hung on the walls.

— The other engravings and drawings are preserved in portfolios, which are exhibited to students only.

Opposite the Collection of Engravings is the entrance to the rooms that now contain the *Antiquarium.

Room I. In front are the Bronzes, among which are several beautifully chased "Toilet Caskets, from Præneste, near Rome (under glass); then, "Group of Theseus and the Minotaur, a fine work of the Alexandrian period, found in Asia Minor, and interesting as being a small replica of a celebrated group at Athens which is otherwise known only by a relief on a coin. Works in iron and lead, "Etruscan mirrors in metal, mosaics, mural paintings, weapons, trinkets, domestic utensils, etc., affording an insight into the public and domestic life of the Greeks and Romans. — Farther on are the "Terracettas, the finest of which are Greek. Those found at Tanagra in Bœotia, to judge from the pleasing movement, drappery, and delicate colouring of the groups and figures, date from the 3rd and 4th cent. B.C. Many of them are highly humorous in conception. The gilded terracotta groups of the Rape of Proserpine and Theseus carrying off Helen, from the pediment of a wooden sarcophagus, are unique of their kind. Numerous terracottas from Asia Minor have lately been added to the collection.

Booms II & III contain the Vases (the finest being in the last room but one), 2300 in number, a collection inferior in value to those at Paris, London, and Munich, but including many of great artistic value, and important in the history of Greek painting and mythology. The extensive collection of Attic Lekythi, or anointing-vessels, is noteworthy.

In the 'Sternsaal' is the Collection of Gems (Intaglios, receding, and Cameos, raised), and objects in the precious metals, to which Frederick the Great made a most valuable addition by the purchase of the Stosch collection. It contains a "Cameo of the Apotheosis of Septimius Severus, measuring 9 by T/y inches, one of the largest and most valuable in the world (purchased for 12,000 Thir.). The glass cabinet in the centre contains the "Silver Treasure found near Hildesheim (p. 117), consisting of Roman plate of the time of Augustus. Some of the articles possess great artistic merit, especially four round dishes with reliefs at the bottom: "Minerva, Young Hercules, Deus Lunus, and Cybele; and several wide goblets with feet. The "Antique Gold Ornaments from the Sabine Mts. were purchased for 60,000 m. (3000t.). Casts and imitations of the best gems may be purchased of the custodians.

3. THE NATIONAL GALLERY.

To the E. of the New Museum, in the centre of a square surrounded with Doric colonnades and embellished with statues, flower-beds, and a fountain, rises the new *National Gallery (Pl. r; K, 1), designed by Stiller in accordance with a plan of Frederick William IV., and built by Strack in 1866-76. The building is in the form of a Corinthian temple, 200 ft. long and 105 ft. wide, elevated on a basement 39 ft. in height. At the S. end is a portice of eight columns, and at the N. a semicircular apse. The sculptures are by M. Schulz, Calandrelli, and Moser. The rich and appropriate decorations of the interior, designed by Strack, are executed in more solid materials than those of the Museums. The collection in the National Gallery, the nucleus of which was formed by 250 pictures bequeathed by Herr J. H. Wagener (d. 1861) to the Emperor William (then Prince Regent), now contains about 500 paintings, 100 cartoons and drawings, and 40 sculptures; the names of the artist and subject are given on each work. Director Dr. Max Jordan. Catalogue, containing a description of the works and biographies of the artists, 1 m. Admission, see p. 12 (refreshmentroom on the ground-floor.

Returning to the Vestibule by the transverse corridor, and ascending the staircase, we come to the Second Floor. - In the staircase is a frieze in stucco by Otto Geyer, representing the growth of German civilisation from the time of Arminius the Cheruscan down to the Franco-Prussian war. On the walls are hung: 327. Schrader, Surrender of Calais in 1347; 452. A. Feuerbach, Plato's banquet. - We then pass through an ante-room, containing other works by Feuerbach (475. Concert; *473. Medea; *474. Battle of Amazons), and enter the - CUPOLA SALOON, in which are exhibited the portraits of the Emperor and the Empress, by Pieckhorst. The frieze in the vaulting, by A. v. Heyden, represents the signs of the zodiac; the four lunettes above the door, scenes from the history of German art, are by the same artist : Emp. Henry II. laying the foundation-stone of the cathedral of Bamberg : Dürer painting a portrait of Emp. Maximilian, while Kunz von der Rosen entertains the emperor with a song; contest of the singers on the Wartburg; Adam Kraft in his workshop. - The visitor had better now traverse the lateral saloons and cabinets, and visit the Cornelius Saloons last; or he may prefer to devote a special visit to the latter. The contrast between the usual pictorial style and the Cartoons of Cornelius is so great, that a sudden transition from one to the other can hardly fail to be prejudicial to their due appreciation.

We begin, as on the ground-floor, to the right. Room I. *220. Mensel, 'Modern Cyclops'; *414. Leu, Lake of Oeschinen, near Kandersteg, Switzerland; *422. Scherres, Inundation in E. Prussia; 423. Henneberg, The Wild Huntsman; 308. Schirmer, Lake in a forest.

Henneberg, Pursuit of pleasure.

We finally regain the Cupola Saloon, and proceed through the central door to the

I. Cornelius Saloon, which is tastefully decorated. The paintings of the upper part of the walls were designed by Ed. Bendemann, who has endeavoured to illustrate the composition of a work of art by a series of allegorical figures (beginning with the wall on the left of the cupola-saloon: Grace, Peace, Poetry, Investigation, Humility, Enthusiasm, Strength, Joy). This saloon chiefly contains the Cartoons for the CAMPO SANTO in Berlin (p. 26). Soon after his removal to Berlin (1841) cornectius commenced this work, and he was engaged upon it down to the day of his death (1867). These scenes were intended to extend over the four walls of the Campo Santo, and to represent in close connection with the Apocalypse, the Redemption of Man, the Appearance of Christ on Earth, the Sway of the Church, and the Last Judgment. Above each painting is a semicircular lunette, and below is a narrow painting in which the chief subject is illustrated and explained by ingenious allusions, whilst between the principal paintings were to be placed eight groups, embodying the Beatitudes of the Sermon on the Mount. The finest of these principal paintings are the Descent of the Holy Ghost (17), the Resurrection (9), and the Apocalyptical Riders (6). While in these we admire the richness of conception, the dramatic life, and the boldness of the drawing, the groups of the Beatitudes (14, 15) awaken our highest admiration by the beauty and compactness of their outlines, no less than by the expressiveness of their figures. - Of less importance are the cartoons of the frescoes in the Ludwigskirche at Munich (1834-40), representing Evangelists, Prophets, and (on the left side-wall), the Last Judgment. -Older cartoons are preserved in the -

II. Cornelius Saloon, the painting of which (Myth of Prometheus) was executed by P. Janssen of Düsseldorf. This saloon contains the cartoons of the frescoes in the GLYPTOTHEK AT MUNICH (Hall of the Gods and Heroes), with which Cornelius began his monumental compositions in Germany (1819). The leading ideas of the representation in the Hall of the Gods are partly borrowed from Hesiod, and are embodied by the artist in ceiling and mural-paintings; the former are emblematic of the Swaw of Cupid, and the Seasons and Hours: whilst in the arches of the walls the three kingdoms of the gods, Olympus, the Ocean, and the Infernal Regions, are represented. — In the Hall of the Heroes in the Glyptothek the Myth of Troy is illustrated, the cartoon of the Destruction of Troy (side-wall to the left, No. 51) being considered the most impor-tant. — In a niche behind the colossal bust of Cornelius, by Wittig, is placed the design for a picture intended for the Cathedral at Berlin, representing the Expectation of the Day of Judgment.

The Third Floor, to which a marble staircase ascends, is used for periodic exhibitions. On the walls of the staircase: *82. Brook, The ambassadors of Ladislaus, King of Hungary and Bohemia, at the French court, soliciting the hand of the daughter of Charles VII. for their sovereign; *448. Makart, Venice doing homage to Catherine Cornaro. The ANTE-ROOM at the top of the staircase contains pictures of the seasons by Wisticenus (401-404), above which are good mural paintings by Paul Meyer-heim, representing Nature at the different seasons. — The CRATEAL ROOM, opposite the staircase, contains the Collection of Drawings, consisting of about 7000 sketches and water-colours by German artists of the present century (Bellermann, Henneberg, Ed. Hildebrandt, Krüger, Schnorr, etc.). The five cartoons for Rethel's scenes from the life of Charlemagne, in the Rathhaus at Aix-la-Chapelle, are also exhibited here.

The Rooms to the right of the ante-room contain the choice *Picture Gallery of Count Raczynski, which has been lent to the government for public exhibition. It is especially rich in modern works, but also contains a few valuable old Italian and Spanish paintings.

The N. point of the Museum-island is occupied by the so-called Packhof (Pl. r; K, 1; bonded warehouses), designed by Schinkel, and by the building in which the Exhibitions of the Academy of Art are at present held (see p. 20). The former is, however, to be removed, and the whole space occupied by Museum buildings.

d. Friedrich-Strasse, Gensdarmen-Markt. Wilhelm-Strasse, Leipziger-Strasse, Aeussere Friedrichstadt. Belle-Alliance-Platz.

To the S. of the Linden begins the FRIEDRICH-STADT (p. 14), the most regularly built quarter of Berlin, founded by Frederick I. and Frederick William I. It was formerly a dull part of the town, but the N. part o in the Linden is now the great centre of business and the principal rendezvous of travellers. The most important streets intersecting it are the Friedrich-Str. from N. to S., the Wilhelm-Str. to the W. (p. 48), and the Charlotten- and Markgrafen-Str. to the E. The principal cross-streets are the Behren-Str., containing several of the chief banks of Berlin and many handsome buildings which have sprung up within the last few years, and the busy Leipziger-Str. (p. 49).

The Friedrich-Strasse, which runs nearly due N. and S., is the longest street in the inner town, measuring (with its prolongation to the N. of the Linden, p. 60) 2 M. from the (former) Oranienburg to the (former) Halle Gate, and 11/4 M. from the Linden to the Halle Gate. The busiest parts of it are between the Linden and the Leipziger-Str. (p. 49), and between the Linden and the Dorotheen-Strasse. The office of the Germania Insurance Company, at the corner of the Französische-Str., is a handsome edifice in the German Renaissance style, with columns of polished granite. Opposite is a similar building, erected in 1883 for the well-known pencil-manufacturing firm, A. W. Faber of Nuremberg.

In the N. part of the Friedrich-Stadt, a few paces from the square by the Opera House (p. 21) and the Linden, is situated the *Gensdarmen-Markt (Pl. r; J, 3), the central part of which is now officially called the 'Schiller-Platz', with the Schauspiel-Haus, the French Church, the New Church, and several handsome private edifices of last century. The three buildings just named form the finest architectural group in Berlin; their outline is very effective by moonlight.

The *Schauspielhaus, or Theatre (Pl. r; J, 3), 84 yds. long, 55 yds. in depth, and 125 ft. in height, was erected by Schinkel in 1819-21, to replace the original building which was burned down in 1817. The skilful application of Greek forms to a modern edifice of several stories and the vigorous articulation render it one of Schinkel's finest works; some defects (such as the entrance) are due to the cramping nature of his instructions and to the necessity of using the old walls. The principal façade towards the E. is embellished with an Ionic portico, approached by a prominent flight of steps, under which are the entrances for the spectators. At the sides of the steps are two groups in bronze by F. Tieck, genii riding on a panther and a lion. The tympanum of the portico contains a Group of the Children of Niobe in sandstone, by the same sculptor. The summit of the principal part of the building is crowned with an Apollo in a chariot drawn by two griffins, a group in bronze by Rauch and Tieck, in the tympanum beneath which are Melpomene and Polyhymnia. On the W. summit of the building, corresponding to the Apollo, is a Pegasus in copper. The large N. tympanum contains the Triumphal Procession of Bacchus with Ariadne: in the S. tympanum, Orpheus bringing back Eurydice, both by F. Tieck, and probably his finest works. Besides the theatre, with seats for 1500 spectators, the building contains a large *Concert Room, accommodating 1200 persons. This finely-proportioned hall, richly adorned with paintings and sculptures, and probably the best of Schinkel's interiors, has been restored.

In front of the steps of the theatre stands the Monument of Schiller, 19 ft. in height, in marble, by Begas. The figure of the poet, 9 ft. in height, stands on a pedestal originally destined to serve as a fountain, and adorned at the corners with allegorical figures of lyric and dramatic poetry, historical composition and philosophy. The effect of this fine monument is unfortunately much impaired by its unavoidable coating of smoke and dust.

To the N. of the theatre is the French Church, to the S. the New Church, or German Cathedral, both dating from the beginning of last century. The former still retains its original insignificant appearance, but the latter, with its pentagonal ground-plan, has been eleverly remodelled by Von der Hude. The handsome detached towers covered with domes (230 ft. in height) were added by Gontard in the reign of Frederick the Great.

The *Wilhelm-Strasse (Pl. r; H, 3, 4, and g; J, 1, 2), which forms the W. boundary of the Friedrich-Stadt, diverges from the Linden near the Pariser-Platz towards the S.E., and like the Friedrich-Strasse terminates in the Belle-Alliance-Platz (p. 52). The N. half of this street is considered the most aristocratic quarter of the city. No. 70, on the right, close to the Linden, is the English Embassy. No. 72, on the right, is the Palace of Princes Alexander and George of Prussia. Opposite, to the left, No. 67, is Hr. Pringsheim's House, built by Ebe & Benda in 1873. with a polychrome facade, and a mosaic frieze by Anton von Werner. No. 73. on the right, is the house of the Minister of the Household: No. 74 is the office of the Chancellor of the Empire. No. 65, opposite, to the left, is the residence of the Minister of Justice: No. 63 is the Palace of Count Stolberg-Wernigerode. Then on the right, No. 76, part of the foreign office. No. 77 is the Residence of the Chancellor of the Empire, where the Congress of European Powers for the settlement of the Eastern Question met from 13th June to 13th July. 1878. No. 78 is the new palace of the Prince of Pless, designed by the French architect Destailleurs, in the style of the period of Louis XIII.

On the opposite side of the street is the WILHRLMS-PLATZ (Pl. r; H, 3), adorned with flower-beds and with Statues of six heroes of the three Silesian wars of Frederick the Great: Schwerin, who fell at Prague in 1757; Winterfeldt, Frederick's favourite, who fell at Moys, near Görlitz, in 1757; Seydlitz, the hero of Rossbach, who died in 1773; Keith, who fell at Hochkirch in 1758; the gallant Zieten, who died in 1786; and *Prince Leopold of Anhalt-Dessau, the victor at Kesselsdorf, who died in 1747. The marble statues with which the Platz was formerly embellished were replaced by bronze statues in 1862, Schwerin and Winterfeldt having been newly designed by Kiss, and the others copied from the original figures, of which Zieten and Leopold of Dessau were by Schadow.

On the N. side of the Wilhelms-Platz is the Palace of Prince Frederick Charles (Pl. r; H, 3), erected in 1737, remodelled by Schinkel in 1827-28, and again undergoing alteration. To the E. of the square lies the Kaiserhof (p. 2), built in 1873-75, with its principal façade towards the Zieten-Platz; close to it is the Church of the Trinity, of which Schleiermacher, the eminent preacher and philosopher, was pastor from 1809 until his death in 1834.

On the S. side of the Wilhelms-Platz rises the imposing new building of the Foreign Office of the German Empire, in sandstone, erected by W. von Mörner in 1873-76.

The new Voss-Strasse, leading to the Königgrätzer-Str., here diverges to the right. At the corner (No. 1) stands the new Palace of Hr. Borsig by Lucae, a noble structure in the Italian Renaissance style, with sculptural decoration by Begas, Encke, Hundrieser, and Lessing. No. 35, at the opposite corner, is the residence of the Leipziger-Strasse.

Minister of Public Works, the staircase of which is adorned with paintings by Meurer and Geselschap. No. 4 is the Imperial Court of Law. The street also contains numerous handsome private dwellings.

A few paces to the S. of the Wilhelms-Platz we reach the busy *Leipziger-Strasse (Pl. r; H, J, K, 4), about 1 M. in length, running parallel with the Linden, and leading to the Potsdamer-Platz. It contains many handsome buildings of the 18th and 19th centuries. At the S.W. corner of its intersection with the Friedrich-Strasse is the attractive depôt of the Royal Porcelain Manufactory, on the first floor. To the E. of the Wilhelm-Str., Leipziger-Strasse No. 15, is the imposing new Reichs-Postamt, built by Schwatlo in 1871-73; it contains the Post Office Museum (p. 11), a collection of models and drawings of the postal and other conveyances of different epochs and nations, new telegraphic apparatus, telephones, phonographs, etc. - No. 5, to the W. of the Wilhelm-Strasse, is the War Office, another handsome edifice, restored in 1847, according to plans by Stüler. The four figures in terracotta at the portals represent a hussar, a gunner, a grenadier, and a cuirassier.

No. 4, adjacent, is the temporary Reichstags-Gebäude, or Hall of the Imperial Diet (Pl. r; J, 4), hastily erected in 1871 on the site of the old porcelain manufactory. The entrance to the assemblyhall is by the central door (adm., see p. 12); that of the galleries is reached by passing through the gateway on the left and crossing the court. In the latter is situated the office where cards of admission to the sittings may be obtained.

Adjoining the Hall of the Diet is the Herrenhaus, or Upper Chamber (Pl. r; H, 4), beyond which the Leipziger-Str. expands into the octagonal LEIPZIGER-PLATZ (Pl. 7; G. H. 4), adorned with grounds. On the S. side of the latter are the Governor's Residence (No. 10) and the Ministry of Agriculture, Domains, and Forests (Nos. 8, 9); No. 13 on the N. side is the Admiralty. On the right side of the street that intersects the Platz rises the bronze statue of the Prussian general and premier Count Brandenburg (d. 1850), by Prof. Hagen. Adjacent is a statue of Field-Marshal Wrangel (d. 1877), by Keil, placed here in 1880.

The Acussere Friedrichstadt, formerly called the Potsdam Suburb, outside the Potsdam Gate, one of the finest quarters of Berlin, is the residence of the wealthier members of the community. The N. half, lying between the canal and the Thiergarten, and also the Kurfürsten-Str. to the S.W., are chiefly noticeable for their handsome detached villas, surrounded with gardens, which are perhaps the most pleasing efforts of modern Berlin architecture.

Nearly all the streets are planted with rows of trees.

This quarter contains few public buildings. In the Potsdamer Platz stands the handsome Potsdam Station, built in 1870-72. The König-Wilhelm-Gymnasium, Bellevue-Str. 15 (court), was erected by Lohse in 1862-65. To the N. of the canal is the church of St. Matthew, by Stüler (1846); to the S. that of the Twelve Apostles, by Blankenstein (1874). The Office of the Engineers, Kurfürsten-Str. No. 70, is a dome-covered edifice built by Gödeking in 1876. In the Lützow-Str., Nos. 24-26, is the Elisabeth Hospital; between the Lützow-Str. and the Steglitz-Str. are two large schools.

The 'Betanical Garden (adm., p. 11; reached by tramway-line No. 16), situated at the village of Schöneberg, 1 M. beyond the Potsdam Gate, is one of the most extensive in Europe, and contains 20,000 species of plants. The palms and cacti are particularly fine. The extensive Palm House was built in 1858, and the Victoria Regia House in 1882. On the 8. side of the garden, in Grunewald-Str., is the new Botanical Museum and Herbarium.

— In the same neighbourhood is St. Matthew's Cemetery (Pl. g; F, 4), containing the graves of Jacob and Wilhelm Grimm (d. 1868 and 1859) and numerous handsome monuments.

From the Königgrätzer-Strasse, which leads to the S. E. from the Potsdamer-Platz, a new street has been carried through to the Zimmer-Strasse. At the corner is the new, unfinished building of the Ethnographical Museum (Pl. r; H, 4), adjoining which is the Industrial Museum (see below). The site opposite the latter is to be occupied by a building for the Prussian House of Deputies.

The *German Industrial Museum (Pl. r; H, 4), founded in 1867, and rapidly extended by purchases at the recent great industrial exhibitions and elsewhere, is now a very extensive and valuable collection of the products of many different countries, both ancient and modern (adm., see p. 11). Director, Herr C. Grunow. The new and imposing building which now contains it, opened in 1881, was designed in the Hellenic Renaissance style by Gropius & Schmieden, and is constructed of hewn stone, with effective details in terracotta and coloured tiles. The exterior is also adorned with mosaics, executed by Salviati from the designs of Ewald and Geselschap, and representing the principal epochs in the history of art. At the sides of the flight of steps ascending to the door are statues of Peter Vischer and Holbein, by Sussmann-Hellborn. The interior is grouped round a large central court, intended for loan exhibitions, and encircled by two rows of arcades, borne by slender syenite pillars. Above the upper arcade is a frieze in low relief, by Geyer and Hundrieser, representing a procession of the nations most distinguished in art, saluting Borussia. The frieze has been coloured by Schaller in imitation of majolica, and is a very successful attempt at a resuscitation of painted sculpture.

The Collection, along with the library and offices, occupies the whole of the rooms in the first and second stories. Excellent handbook to the collection, 50 pf.

First Floor. We begin on the W. side, to the right of the central court, and first enter Boom XVII. (Gothic Room). Domestic furniture. Case 115 contains early mediæval vory carvings; Case 117, objects in perforated leather. — R. XVI. Gothic church furniture. — R. XV. (Burgundian Room). Tapestry and furniture of the early-German Renaissance. — We now return through R. XVII to R. XVIII, which contains Chinese and Japanese lacquer-work. — R. XIX. Objects in plaited straw, wood, stone, and paper; mossics. — We then again return to R. XVIII and from it enter the GALLERY round the Central Court, the N. half of which (Sections IV and V) contains works in hammered iron, while the S. half (Sections VI, VII) contains copies of decorative paintings and sculptures. In the S.W. corner of this gallery is the entrance to R. XIV, in which Schliemann's Collection of Trojan Antiquities has found a temporary shelter. - On the E. side (to the left of the Court) we first enter Room X. (Great Renaissance Hall), containing the largest and finest Benaissance and Rococo works. Among the most noteworthy objects are: No. 43. Chest with Niobe and her children (ca. 1500); 45. Bridal chest from the Palazzo Strozzi at Florence (ca. 1500). - The door to the left leads to R. IX. (Rococo Room); that opposite to B. XII. (Intarsis Room), which contains inlaid furniture of the 16th and 17th cent., and also Renaissance and modern carvings in ivory.

of furniture of the 16-18th centuries.

Second Floer. Beginning on the E. side, we pass through the Gallery (SEC. XXV, Persian fayence, painted tiles) into E. XXVIII, which contains the collection of Majolica. - To the left is R. XXVII, with common earthenware and pottery. - On the other side of R. XXVIII are RR. XXIX earthenware and pottery. — On the other side of R. XXVIII are E.E. XXIX XXXI, containing a collection of fayence, stoneware, and porcelain. — We then pass through the Gallery (Sec. XXIV, German stoves) to the W. side, where we first enter E. XXXII, containing objects in glass. — R. XXXVIII. Objects in tin, copper, and brass. — E. XXXIV. Bronzes and mediteval enamels. — B. XXXV. Gold and silver ware; precious stones; Limoges enamels. In Case S77 is the 'Lümeburger Rathssilberzeng', a fine service of plate formerly belonging to the town of Lümeburg (15-16th cent.). The 'Pommersche Kunstschrank' is a beautiful cabinet made in 1617 for Philip II., Duke of Pomerania. - R. XXXVI. Oriental works in metal. - The N. part of the GALLERY (Sec. XXII, XXIII) contains woven fabrics and embroideries.

In connection with the museum are a School of Design, attended by about 800 pupils, and a valuable Library (adm., see p. 11).

The district between the Potsdamer-Platz and the Ascanischer-PLATZ (Pl. g; H, 1), dating from about 1845-50, is still sometimes called the 'Privy Councillor Quarter' ('Geheimrathsviertel'), though the W. suburb, near the Lützow-Platz, is now the fashionable residence of government-officials. In the Ascanischer-Platz is the extensive *Anhalt Station, the finest in Berlin, erected by Schwechten, and handsomely embellished in terracotta. The starting-pavilion, 200 ft. in breadth, is the largest on the continent. The Church of St. Luke, in the Bernburger-Str., was built by Möller in 1862. No. 22a. in the same street is the Philharmonic (p. 9).

The S. HALF OF THE FRIEDRICHSTADT is comparatively dull and uninteresting.

In the Wilhelm-Str., Nos. 92, 93, is the Architects' Union (Pl. r; H, 4), opened in 1876, containing an extensive Architectural and Decorative Exhibition (adm., see p. 11) of ornaments used in building, stained glass, stoves, furniture, etc. (frequently changed). The rooms are adorned with frescoes by Prell. - In the same street. No. 102, opposite the Koch-Str., is the Palace of Prince Albert (Pl. r, g; H), erected in 1737, and remodelled by Schinkel in 1833. The entrance-court is separated from the street by a colonnade. At the other end of the Koch-Str., at the point where the Linden-Str., Jerusalemer-Str., and Oranien-Str. diverge, stands the JERU-SALEMS-KIRCHE, a handsome edifice with terracotta details, recently rebuilt by Knoblauch.

the Observatory (Pl. g; J, 1) erected by Schinkel in 1835 (adm., p. 12; entrance, Linden-Str. 91). Near it, Linden-Str. 14, is the Kammergericht (Pl. g; K, 1), built by Gerlach in 1734, the court of which contains a marble statue of the chancellor Cocceti (d. 1755).

The Wilhelm-Str., Friedrich-Str., and Linden-Str. converge in the circular Belle-Alliance-Platz (Pl. g; J, 2), which is laid out as a garden. In the centre rises the Friedens-Saule, or Column of Peace, 60 ft. in height, erected in 1840 to commemorate the 25th anniversary of the peace of 1815. It consists of a column of granite with a marble capital, placed on a lofty pedestal, and is crowned with a Victory by Rauch, holding a twig of palm in her left hand, and presenting the victor's wreath to the city with the right, Four groups in marble, representing the four principal powers that took part in the war of 1815 (England, Prussia, the Netherlands, and Hanover), designed by Prof. Fischer, and executed by Professors Franz and Walger, surround the column. On the S. side of the Platz is a flight of steps ascending to the street, the sides of which are adorned with two allegorical figures in white marble by Wolff and Hartzer. Opposite the top of this staircase is the Halle Gate, a monumental edifice by Strack, embellished with figures of the Seasons by L. Drake and Pohlmann. Beyond it the canal is crossed by a vaulted bridge, 110 ft. wide, on the buttresses of which stand marble groups of Navigation, Fishing, Industry, and Trade.

stand marble groups of Navigation, Fishing, Industry, and Trade.

On the other side of the bridge are the Tempelhof and Schöneberg Quarters, both rapidly increasing in size and population. In the Belle-Alliance-Str., which diverges to the right, stand the Barracks of the 1st Dragoon Guards; in the Wartenburg-Str. is the new building of the 8s. Gertraudt-Stiftung, by Koch. — About $\frac{1}{4}$ M. from the gate (tramways Nos. 9, 12, see p. 6) is the "Kreuzberg (213 ft. above the sea-level), a sand-hill rising about 100 ft. above the city, of which, being the only eminence in the environs, it affords a fine survey. On the top rises a Gothic Obelist in rion, 62 ft. in height, dedicated by Frederick William III. to his people, and inaugurated in 1821. The basement, 26 ft. high, was added in 1878. The obelisk was designed by Schinkel; statues and reliefs by Rauch, Ticck, and Wichmann. — The extensive Twoib browery is situated to the S. of and Wichmann.— The extensive Twoki brewery is situated to the S. of the Kreuzberg; to the E. is the group of villas called Withelmshöhe; to the W. the barracks of the Railway Service Corps.

In the Tempelhofer Feld, an open piece of ground extending south-wards from the Kreuzberg to the village of Tempelhof, the annual manœuvres and reviews of the Berlin garrison have taken place since the days of Frederick the Great.

The Pionier-Str., containing the barracks of the Second Dragoon Guards and the Emperor Franz Grenadiers, leads E. (left) from the Halle Gate to the Hasenhaide (tramway-line No 10, p. 6), on which are the infantry rifle-ranges and a large gymnastic ground, with a statue of F. L. Jahn (d. 1852), the German "Turnvater" (father of gymnastics), crected in 1872. To the W. lie the Military Cometery and the isolated and singular-looking Mohammedan Burial-Ground. On the outskirts of the wood are the 'Neue Welt' (p. 11) and other places of popular resort. — In the Urban is the Institution for Deserted Children.

Outside the Halle Gate lie several large Cemeteries (comp. Plan): the Jerusalemer Kirchhof contains the graves of Iffland (d. 1842) and Chamisso (d. 1838), the Alte Dreifaltigkeits Kirchhof those of Mendelssohn (d. 1847) and Varnhagen von Ense (d. 1858), and the New Dreifaltigkeits-Kirchhof those of Schleiermacher (d. 1858) and Tieck (d. 1853).

e. Bau-Academie. Ravene's Picture Gallery. Luisenstadt.

To the S. of the Schlossbrücke (p. 23) rises the *Bau-Academie. or Academy of Architecture (Pl. r; K, 2), a lofty square edifice erected by Schinkel in 1835, each side measuring 150 ft. in length. The successful union of mediæval structural forms with Greek details in the brick and terracotta façades stamps this as one of Schinkel's most masterly creations. The interior contains a handsome staircase, and accommodates 700 students.

On the Ground Floor is the "Beuth-Schinkel-Museum (adm., p. 11), an extensive collection of architectural sketches, plans, etchings, the designs of the frescoes in the vestibule of the Old Museum (p. 27), etc., comprising the finest and most important of Schinkel's works. It also contains a collection of engravings bequeathed by Beuth, and the architectural results of the Schinkel's works.

tectural models formerly in the Museum.

The Schinkel-Platz, on the N. side of the Bau-Academie, is adorned with three statues in bronze. In the centre that of * Schinkel (d. 1841), by Drake; on the right that of Theor (d. 1828), the agriculturist, Rauch's last work, completed by Hagen; on the left that of Beuth (d. 1853), to whose efforts Prussia has been much indebted for her advance in industrial pursuits, designed by Kiss, with reliefs by Drake.

In the Werder Market, near the Academy, is the Werder Church (Pl. r; K, 2), a brick and terracotta structure erected by Schinkel in 1824-30. The exterior, in modified Gothic, is not happy, but the vaulted interior is more pleasing. The altarpiece is a Resurrection by Begas; at the sides Four Evangelists by W. Schadow. On the front of the organ - choir, * Faith, Hope, and Charity, by Wach. Sacristan, Oberwall-Str. 21.

Opposite the church is situated the Old Mint, built in 1798-1800. Its fine sandstone frieze, designed by F. Gilly and executed by Schadow, representing the processes of obtaining and treating the metals, has been removed to the New Mint (Pl. r; K, 3), Unterwasser-Str. 2, 3 (adm., see p. 11).

In the vicinity, at the corner of the Französische-Str. and Oberwall-Str., is the large Telegraph Office (Pl. r; K, 3), with a facade in the Venetian style turned towards the Jäger-Str.

In the Jäger-Str., between the Oberwall- and Kur-Str. rises the *Deutsche Reichsbank (Pl. r; K, 3), a noble Renaissance edifice, built by Hitzig in 1869-76, and an admirable example of the fine effects of colouring that can be produced by a judicious mingling of sandstone and brick. The soulptures, representing Germania as patroness of Commerce, Navigation, Cattle-rearing, and Industry, were executed by Professor Franz. The richly-adorned interior is also worthy of inspection.

From the adjacent Hausvogtei-Platz we may now proceed by the Jerusalemer-Str. to the Dönnoff-Platz (Pl. r; K, 3, 4), where the Abgeordneten - Haus, or Chamber of the Prussian Deputies (Leipziger-Str. 75), is situated (adm., p. 11). Opposite to it rises a monument to the Prussian Minister, Baron vom Stein (b. 1757, d. 1831), inaugurated in 1875; the statue of the great man, who laid the foundation for Prussia's subsequent development, is $11^{1}/_{2}$ ft. high; on the pedestal are allegorical reliefs and figures representing Patriotism, Energy, Truthfulness, and Piety, and a frieze in relief with scenes from his life. The design and part of the execution are by Schievelbein, after whose death (1863) Hagen completed the work. — No. 77 Leipziger-Str., also in the Dönhoff-Platz, is the Reichshallen (p. 4), and No. 48 is the Concerthaus (p. 9). No. 83, opposite, with a richly-adorned façade in French limestone, polished granite, and bronze, is occupied by the firm of Spinn & Menke; the hall and staircase are also artistically embellished. Another fine building, by the same architects as the last (Kayser and Grossheim), is that at Leipziger-Str. 107, occupied by Henninger & Co.

No. 77-79 in the Kommandanten-Strasse, which diverges from the Dönhoff-Platz to the S. E., on the left side, opposite the Linden-Str., is Geber's extensive 'Industrie-Gebäude' (Pl. r; K, L, 4), one large saloon in which contains the *Picture Gallery of the 'Verein der Berliner Künstler', or Artists' Association, and another (opposite) that of the Kunstfreunde im Preussischen Staat (entrance by the 2nd portal; adm., p. 12). At the back of the building is the end of the new Beuth-Strasse, the buildings in which are all in the German Renaissance style.

A little to the W., at Nos. 92, 93 Wall-Strasse, is *Ravené's Picture Gallery (Pl. r; L, 3), a choice collection of about 160 works by modern German and French masters, and admirably lighted (adm., see p. 12). Entrance by No. 93; visitors ring on the upper floor. Catalogues for consultation.

LARGE ROOM. Long wall on the right: 60. Hübner, Game Law; 9. Begas, Moor-washing; 67. Knaus, Peasant girl gathering flowers; 128. Stevens, Visit of condolence; *22. Gallati, Lost in pain; *131. Tridemand, Norwegian funeral-scene; 111. Ritter, The drowned fisher-boy; 46. Hiddebrandt, Winter-landscape; 134. Troyon, Pasture; 3. A. Achenbach, Pier in a storm; 25. Gräb, Interior of the cathedral at Halberstadt; 17. T. Couture, Falconer; 11. Biard, Smuggling; 135. Troyon, Leash of hounds. — 2nd Wall (short side of the room): 66. Knaus, Girl playing with two cats; 137. H. Vernet, Zousve acting as a nurse; 142. R. Fleury, Massacre of the Jews in London on the coronation-day of Edward II.; 45, 42, 41. E. Hiddebrandt, Scenes from Lyons, Rouen, and S. Gloria (near Rio Janeiro). — 3rd Wall (long side of the room): 14. A. Bonheur, Pasture; 1. A. Achenbach, Norwegian coast; 122. Schmitton, Hungarian horses (uncompleted); 89. Mensel, Frederick the Great travelling; 69. Koekkock, Forest landscape; 10. Brendel, Sheep leaving their pen; 80. Lessing, Landscape; 63. H. ten Kate, Genre-piece; 125. Schreyer, Prussian hussars attacking artillery; 47. E. Hüdebrandt, Boa Viagem, near Rio Janeiro; 62. Jordan, Funeral of a child in Heligoland; Hasenclever, *The lesson, 32. Scene in a cellar, 35. Portrait of himself, 36. Portrait of Preyer, 33. Jobs (a dunce) as a night-watchman, 31. Jobs undergoing examination; 94. Meyerheim, Aged mother going to church. — 4th Wall (short side, by the entrance): 130. Tidermand, The wolf-hunter's tale; 120. W. A. Schmidt, Charles V. receiving the sacrament at St. Just. — In the adjoining Canners are smaller pictures: 102, 104. Preyer, Sparrows' breakfast; 90. Meissonier, Man reading; 123, 124. Schrader, Bacchanalian scenes.

On quitting the gallery we may proceed to the N. by the Grünstrassen-Brücke, the Petri-Platz, and the Brüder-Strasse to the Schloss-Platz (see p. 23 and below). [Or we may make a short detour by the Gertraudten-Str., the Kölln Fish Market, and the Breite-Str.] In the Petri-Platz is situated the Gothic Church of St. Peter (Pl. r; L, 3), erected from designs by Strack in 1846-50. The siender tower, 315 ft. in height, is the loftiest in Berlin. In the Breite-Str., No. 37, are the Royal Stables (adm., see p. 12), below which is a private house dating from 1624. In the Köllnische Fischmarkt stands the Kölln Rathhaus (with an unfinished tower), on the first floor of which is the Märkisches Provinsial-Museum, containing an extensive collection of antiquities illustrating the historical progress of the Mark of Brandenburg. Adm., see p. 11.

The collections include prehistoric antiquities in fint, bronse, and

The collections include prehistoric antiquities in flint, bronze, and iron from lake-dwellings, tumuli, etc.; wespons, armour, and instruments of torture; ecclesiastical antiquities; coins and medals; implements of the chase articles in glass and porcelain, ornaments, clothing, etc.

The LUISENSTADT, extending to the S. of the Wall-Strasse, a manufacturing district that has chiefly sprung up since 1855, is now the largest and most populous, but least interesting quarter of Berlin. At the Engel Becken, formed by the branch-canal that intersects the district, rises the Romanesque *Church of St. Michael (Pl. r; N, 4), designed by Soller, and erected in 1853-6 as a Roman Catholic garrison-church. Farther to the S.E. is the *Church of St. Thomas (Pl. g; O, 1), built by Adler in 1864-69. Both churches are among the most successful modern buildings in Berlin, exhibiting a happy combination of Romanesque plans with Renaissance details; the former is most remarkable for its exterior, the latter for its interior. — Near the church of St. Thomas, in the Mariannen-Platz, rises the large and gloomy building of the Bethanien (Pl. g; N, 1), an admirably-organised hospital with 350 beds, managed by Protestant sisters of charity (adm., see p. 11).

The Jacobistrche (Pl. g; L, 1), Oranien-Str. No. 133, by Stüler, completed in 1845, is a brick edifice in the early-Christian basilics style. The Government Printing Office (p. 12) is in the same street (No. 90). In the Prinzen-Str. rises the spacious Turnhalle, or gymnastic establishment (adm., see p. 11). — On the S.E. verge of this quarter lie the Görlitz Railway Station (Pl. g; P, Q, 2, 3) and the Barracks of the 3rd Foot Guards.

f. Kurfürsten-Brücke. Rathhaus. Stralau Quarter. König-Stadt.

From the Schloss-Platz (p. 23), to the S.W. of the Palace, the Lange, or Kurfürsten-Brücke (i. e. Bridge of the Elector; Pl. r; L, 2) leads to the old town of Berlin. The bridge is adorned with an equestrian *Statue of the Great Elector (d. 1688) in bronze, designed by Schlüter and erected in 1703. This clever and artistic group is one of the few really good works of a period when art was generally in a very debased condition. In spite of the outlandish Roman costume, the figure is remarkable for its air of majestic repose, which is heightened by contrast with the movements of the four slaves round the pedestal. — Looking from the bridge to the right, up the river, we see the Königliche Mühlen. or Royal Mills. erected by Strack in 1846.

The König-Strasse, which begins beyond the bridge, and intersects the Old Town, is a great artery of traffic, presenting almost as busy a scene as the Leipziger-Strasse. No. 60 in this street is the extensive Central Post Office (Pl. r; L, 2; comp. p. 8), lately rebuilt from plans by Tuckermann. The street also contains several effective private houses of the 18th century. To the S., in the Post-Str., is the Church of St. Nicholas (Pl. r; L, 1), the oldest church in Berlin, lately restored by Blankenstein and provided with two lofty towers. The basements of the towers, consisting of square blocks of granite, date from the beginning of the 13th cent., the nave and choir from the 14th and 15th centuries.

The *Interior (sacristan, Probst-Str. 14-16, 2nd fl.) deserves a visit for the sake of its picturesque general effect, and also for the numerous tablets, screens, etc., restored in their original form and colouring. Every kind of artistic style, from the end of the Gothic period down to the roccoo, is here represented, in some cases by works of great merit. The church contains the tomb of *Pufendorf (d. 1690), the celebrated jurist; and on the outside is the monument of Philip J. Spener (d. 1705).

The Kurfürstenhaus, or House of the Electors, Post-Str. 5, a building of the 15th cent., was lately restored by Schwatlo.

To the N., in the Neue Markt, rises the Marienkirche (Pl. r; L, 1), the second parish-church of Old Berlin, restored in the 14th century. The spire of the tower (295 ft.), in a very peculiar Gothic style, was added by Langhans in 1790. In the hall below the tower is a Dance of Death, a mural painting of the end of the 15th century. In the interior are the tombstone of Count Sparr, a field-marshal under the Great Elector, a pulpit by Schlüter, and a bronze font of 1437.

Farther on in the König-Strasse is the *Bathhaus (Pl. τ ; L, 2), an imposing brick edifice with tasteful terracotta embellishments and granite facings. Like many of the other modern buildings of Berlin it exhibits a union of a mediæval structural system (round-arched) with Renaissance details, and resembles the edifices of North Italy. The principal entrance is in the tower, which rises to a height of 243 ft. (to the top of the flag-staff 318 ft.). The dial-plates of the clock measure 15 ft. across, and are illuminated after dusk. The reliefs on the front of the balcony, representing scenes in old and new Berlin, are by Calandrelli, Schweinitz, Geyer, and Brodwolf.

The bronze statues in the niches by the portal, representing Emperor William and Frederick I., the Elector, are executed by Keil and Energy *Interior (admission, see p. 12). We enter by the PRINCIPAL PORTAL and ascend the main staircase to the Passage with its star-vaulting and stained-glass windows bearing the arms of 84 Prussian towns. Towards the right is the LIBRARY, a spacious saloon with vauled ceiling.

The doors of the book-cases are adorned with medallion-portraits of celebrated men connected with the books within, by Zurstrassen. The paintings are by E. Ewald. Beyond the small Reading Room, the celling of which is adorned with "Figures from German legends by Burger, and which contains busts of Bismarck and Moltke by Drake, we reach the handsome "Feetraal, with its fine coffered ceiling, massive candelabre, and beautifully-carved oaken doors. Pictures in the lunettes by Begas. Statues of Frederick the Great and Fred. William III. by Sussmann-Helborn. This hall also contains the well-known picture of the Berlin Congress of 1878, by Werner. — Adjacent is the Town Council Chamber, with panelled walls and appropriate paintings by Burger. — On the other side of the passage (to the left at the top of the staircase) is the Magistrates' Saloon with fine panelling and full-length portraits of the Great Elector and the seven kings of Prussia. The architectural "Decoration of these handsome apartments is by Wassemann and his assistant Kolscher. — The walls of the Staircase leading to the upper floor, and the gallery of the Magistrates' Saloon are to be adorned with freesoes.

The SUNKEN FLOOR contains the Rathskeller (p. 4), a popular place of refreshment, the central room of which is adorned with paintings by Aug. Heyden and contains a copy of the column in the Gerichtslaube (p. 74).

To the E. of the Rathhaus, at the corner of the Jüden-Strasse, is one of the District Courts of Berlin. — At Nos. 35 and 36 Kloster-Str. (the next cross-street; to the right) is the old Industrial Academy (Pl. τ ; M, 2), now part of the Technical High School, containing valuable Models and a Technological Collection (adm., p. 11).

Opposite the Academy is the Lagerhaus (Pl. r; M, 2), on the site of the old palace of the Markgraves. To the left in the courtyard is a police-court, behind which are the State Archives. To the right, opposite, is the new School of Art, by Gropius and Schmieden, containing the studios of several sculptors. Beyond this, in rooms once used by Rauch as a studio, is the *Rauch Museum (p. 11), a collection of casts and models of the works of that distinguished master, the originals of most of which are in Berlin.

Adjoining the School of Art in the Kloster-Strasse is the Gymnasium sum Grauen Kloster, founded in 1574, and containing some of the convent and chapter-rooms of the old monastery in good preservation. The Gothic Klosterkirche (Pl. r; M, 2), erected at the end of the 13th cent. by the Franciscans, is the finest and best-preserved mediaval building at Berlin. The choir dates from 1345, the choir-stalls from 1383. The interior contains a painting in memory of a Count Hohenlohe (d. 1412), and the tombs of several princes of the 14th century. The church was restored in 1840-46, when the incongruous vestibule, towers, and belfry were added. — Beyond it is the Parochial Church (Pl. r; M, 2), erected by Nehring in 1695-1703; the tower, containing a peal of bells, was added by Gerlach in 1713.

At the E. end of the Königstrasse is an elegant colonnade, built by Gontard in 1777. Adjacent is the Alexander-Plats Station of the Stadtbahn, a tasteful structure by Jacobsthal; and adjoining the station is the *Panorama of the Battle of Sedan, by Werner and Bracht (adm., see p. 12). — Another colonnade, begun by Neh-ring in 1687 and enlarged by Stüler, masks the 'Mühlendamm' (Pl. r; L, 2, 3), which connects Berlin with Kölln and is the chief seat of the small Jewish dealers. At the end of the colonnade is the Molken-Markt (Pl. r; L, 2), the oldest square in Berlin, containing the Principal Police Court and the Criminal Court.

containing the Principal Police Court and the Criminal Court.

To the S.E. of the old town of Berlin, on the right bank of the Spree, and reached by the Stralau Bridge, lies the Stralau Quaeter, another modern part of the town, with numerous factories, where the Wallner Theatre (Pl. r; N, 3; p. 10) is situated. In the N. part, known as the 'Weavers' Quaeter', near the Grosse Frankfurter-Str., rises the Church of St. Mark (Pl. r; O, 1, 2), built by Stüler in 1848-55. To the S.E. are the Church of St. Andrew (Pl. r; O, 4), in the Stralauer-Platz, erected by Stract in 1853-56, the Silesian Railway Station (Pl. r; P, 3, 4) by Römer (now used by the 'Stadtbahn'), and the East Railway Station (Pl. r; Q, 3; disused) by Lohse. — Beyond the Stralau Gate, on the bank of the Spree, are the Old Berlin lies the Königstadt, which contains the handsome Victoria Theatre (Pl. b; M, 4; p. 10). On a height to the right, near the old Königs-Thor, stands the Gothic Church of St. Bartholomew (Pl. b; N, 4), with a tower 210 ft. in height, erected by Stüler in 1854-58.

Outside the Königs-Thor, to the right, and towards the S.W. as far as the Landsberg Gate (Pl. r; P, 1) extends the Friedrichshain, a pleasant park affording good views of the town, laid out in 1845 (reached by tramway-line No.1, 'Ringbahn'). — At the entrance is a monument by Calandrelli, erected in memory of the soldiers of the E. districts of Berlin who of the 11 in 1977 of 'Ringbahn').

drelli, erected in memory of the soldiers of the E. districts of Berlin who fell in 1870-71. The highest point in the park is adorned with a bust of Frederick the Great. — The large Städtische Krankenhaus (Hospital; Pl. b; P, 4) with 600 beds, was completed in 1874, on the 'pavilion' system, by Gropius and Schmieden. — The neighbouring Cemetery of St. Peter contains the handsome mortuary chapel of Herr Wagener, erected by Lucae in 1869.

To the extreme E., outside the old Frankfurter-Thor and to the N. of Friedrichsberg (p. 2), lie the new Cattle Market and Slaughter Houses, opened in 1881 and among the largest establishments of the kind in existence (tramway-line No. 30). The busiest time is on Monday forenoon.

g. Exchange. Monbijou. Synagogue.

Opposite the Museums (p. 27), on the other side of the Spree. rises the imposing Börse, or Exchange (Pl. r; K, 1), erected in 1859-63 by Hitzig, and the first modern building of Berlin executed in stone instead of brick. The chief façade towards the Spree is embellished with a double colonnade, above which, in the centre, is a group in sandstone by R. Begas, representing Borussia as the protectress of agriculture and commerce: on the wings are smaller emblematic groups and figures. It is now being enlarged.

Entering from the Burg-Strasse, we pass through the ANTE-CHAMBER, adorned with a statue of the present emperor by Siemering, to the GREAT HALL, the largest in Berlin, 226 ft. in length, 88 ft. in width, and 66 ft. in height. It is lined with imitation marble and divided by arcades into two parts, one of which is the money, the other the corn-exchange, both adorned with appropriate frescoes by Kibber. More than 3000 people congregate here daily. During the business-hours, 12-2, visitors are admitted to the gallery, which affords the best survey of the busy scene. Entrance by the first door to the right in the Neue Friedrich-Strasse, by a staircase ascending to the first floor, then by the first door to the left (no fees).

L. 1), built at the end of the 13th century. Adjacent, in the Neue Friedrich-Strasse, between Nos. 45 and 46, is the Garrison Church (Pl. r; L, 1), built at the beginning of last century. The interior, which contains pictures by Rohdo and K. Begas, was altered to its present appearance in 1816.

To the N.W. of the new Exchange is the tasteful little station of the Stadtbahn (Börse), beyond which we pass under the railway viaduct and reach the royal château of Monbijou (Pl. r. K. 1). standing in the midst of an old garden. The nucleus of the edifice consists of a villa erected by Eosander v. Goethe in 1708 for Countess Wartenberg, which was afterwards enlarged as a residence for Oneen Sophia Dorothea, wife of Frederick William I. The two detached buildings facing the Monbijou-Platz were added by Unger in 1788 for Queen Frederica Louisa, wife of Fred. William II.; that to the right contains the English Chapel (p. 14).

The *Hohenzollern Museum, which occupies the rooms towards the garden, consists of personal reminiscences of the Prussian rulers from the time of the Great Elector down to the present day. It includes a large number of objects of genuine artistic interest, and affords a good survey of the progress of the last two centuries.

Admission, see p. 11 (fee i m.). The two rooms first visited are devoted to the Emperor William and the Empress Augusta. Among the contents are the table at which Napoleon III. signed the declaration of war at St. Cloud in 1870, and various addresses received by the German Emperor at important epochs of his life.

The rooms of Frederick William IV. and Queen Elizabeth contain portraits of contemporary artists and savants (brought from Potsdam), copies of drawings by the king, and a collection of the seals of Prussian monarchs. — The room of Queen Louise is adorned with 15 portraits and a bust of the queen, and contains the cradle of Emp. William. — The room of Fred. William II. contains portraits of that monarch's generals, Napoleon's knife and fork and his orders (captured at Waterloo), and orders worn by Blücher. - The most striking object in the section devoted to Frederick William II. and Queen Frederica Louisa is a magnificent cabinet made at Neuwied, embellished with paintings and marquetry.

We now traverse a room containing a collection of Porcelain, and reach the three rooms assigned to Frederick the Great, which are the most interesting in the palace. Wax models of Frederick's face after death; his clothes from childhood to death; sketch of Sanssouci Palace; musical compositions; his horse Condé in its state-trappings.

The room of Queen Sophia Dorothea, mother of Frederick the Great. contains interesting furniture and several views of old Berlin. Next contains interesting furniture and several views of old Berlin. Next comes a Gallery containing busts of members of the royal family, chiefly by Schadow and Rauch. The Palace Chapel is adorned with a panelled ceiling, and contains plaster casts of Rauch's monuments of Fred. William II. and Queen Louise, and other sculptures. — Adjacent are the apartments of Queen Elizabeth Christine, consort of Frederick the Great, and another Gallery, with busts of eminent personages, chiefly from the time of Frederick William III.

We next pass through a room containing the table-services of the various kings, and a collection of early glass and tankards, dating in part from the days of the Electors. Then comes the room of Frederick William I., containing portraits of his whole family, his turning-lathe, the sandstone trough from Schloss Wusterhausen which he used as a basin, the table and chairs of his 'Tobacco College', etc. — The last and largest room is chiefly devoted to reminiscences of Frederick I. and the Great Elector. Fine old Berlin tapestry; several admirable "Works by Schlüter; state-sledges, cabinets, caskets, etc.; portrait-figures in wax with the costumes of the originals; hat, boots, and sword worn by the Great Elector at the battle of Febrbellin; etc. — The visit is brought to a close by the inspection of a small collection of older pictures and curiosities, some of which date from the 15th century.

To the N. of the Monbijou-Platz rises the Sophienkirche (Pl. b; K, 4), with an effective roocco spire, 230 ft. high, added by Graël in 1732-34. — Opposite, in the court of the house No. 10 Grosse Hamburger-Str., is St. Hedwig's Hospital, a Gothic brick building by Statz, built in 1855, and recently enlarged. The interesting old Jewish Cemetery in the same street (No. 26) contains the grave of Moses Mendelssohn (d. 1786). In the Oranienburger-Str., which bounds the Monbijou Park on the N., is the Domcandidaten-Stift (No. 76a), a theological seminary, with a chapel by Stüler.

Farther to the N.W., Oranienburger-Str. No. 30, rises the *New Synagogue (Pl. b; J, K, 4), one of the finest modern buildings in Berlin, begun in 1859 in a modified Oriental style from designs by Knoblauch, and completed in 1866 under the superintendence of Stüler. The façade, which is constructed of brick with details in granite and sandstone, is yery effective in spite of its lack of width. The gilded dome attains a height of 158 ft.

The Interior, which is most sumptuously decorated with painting and sculpture, is entered by three bronze doors separated by columns of green granite. A vestibule leads to the Small Synagogue, in which minor religious rites are performed, beyond which is the magnificent Principal Synagogue, containing seats for 3000 persons, and measuring 130 ft. in length exclusive of the apse. The curious vaulted ceiling, with its iron tie-beams and cramps, is supported by slender iron columns. The most richly decorated part is the apse. During the evening-service (Fridays at dusk) the 'dim religious light' from the stained glass and the cupolas produces a remarkably fine effect. Admission (see p. 12) on application to the sacristan, who lives in the building.

No. 67 Oranienburger-Str., to the left, farther on, indicated by a granite slab, is the house which Alexander v. Humboldt occupied from 1842 to 1859. At the corner of the Artillerie-Str. (Nos. 35, 36) is the Parcel Post Office, a handsome new building.

To the N., beyond the Rosenthal Gate, is the "Zionskirche (Pl. b; L, 2), erected by Orth in 1868-73, a handsome structure in brick, resembling the churches of St. Michael and St. Thomas (p. 55); the tower is 216 ft. high. — The adjoining Humboldthain (Pl. b; H, J, 1) has been recently laid out.

In the Wedding-Platz (Pl. b; F, 1), outside the Oranienburger Thor, stands the Dankeskirche, erected, from designs by Orth, to commemorate the Emperor's escape from assassination in 1878, and consecrated in 1884.

h. Nordliche Friedrich-Strasse. Oranienburg Suburb. Luisen-Strasse. Moabit.

The FRIEDRICH-STRASSE (p. 46) runs in a straight direction towards the N. from the Linden to the old Oranienburg Gate. Between the Dorotheen-Str. and the Georgen-Str., next to the Bahnhof Friedrichstrasse, the main station of the Stadtbahn, rises the new Central Hotel (p. 2), built by Hude & Hennicke. It contains an immense banqueting-hall and a winter-garden measuring 250 ft. in length by 75 ft. in breadth (concerts every evening, see p. 11).

From the Weidendamm Bridge (Pl. r; J, 1), we see to the right, on the opposite bank of the Spree, the new Clinical Institute in the Ziegel-Str. and the Midwifery Institute in the Artillerie-Str. both built by Gropius & Schmieden; on the left, to the S. of the Carl-Strasse, is the Market Hall, built in 1867, a spacious structure of glass and iron, at present used as a circus (p. 10).

Outside the Oranienburg Gare, which now exists in name only, to the right in the Chaussee-Strasse, is Borsig's Engine Factory (adm., p. 11), a vast establishment where 160 locomotives are manufactured annually. The architect was Strack. (Borsig's other establishments and hot-houses, see p. 62.) Opposite the factory are the French Cemetery, where Devient (d. 1832), the actor, and Ravené (p. 54), the wealthy merchant and patron of art, are interred (sarcophagus and life-size figure), and the Old Dorotheenstadt Cemetery with the graves of Schinkel, the architect (d. 1841), Schadow (d. 1850) and Rauch (d. 1857), the sculptors, Hepel (d. 1831) and Fichte (d. 184), the philosophers, and Stüler, the architect (d. 1865). In the new Roman Calholic Cemetery, more to the N., is the tomb of the eminent painter Cornelius (d. 1867). — In the Invaliden-Str. is the new Stettin Railway Station.

The N. prolongation of the Wilhelm-Strasse (p. 47), running parallel with the Friedrich-Strasse, intersects the FRIEDRICH-WILHELM-STADT, and leads to the New Gate (Pl. b; G, H, 4). As far as the Marschalls-Brücke (Pl. r; H, 2) it is called the New Wilhelm-Strasse, and beyond it the Luisen-Strasse. This neighbourhood is the 'Quartier Latin' of Berlin, and contains several institutes connected with the medical faculty of the university. To the N. is the Veterinary College (Pl. b; H, 4), erected by Hesse in 1840, adjacent to which is the Anatomic, or dissecting-room, built by Cremer in 1863-65. Opposite the Veterinary College is the Royal Charité (Pl. b; G, 4), a hospital founded in 1710, with accommodation for 1500-1800 patients; united with it is the Pathological Institute. A handsome monument to Prof. von Gräfe, the oculist (d. 1870), by Siemering, was erected at the S. end of the garden in 1882.

To the right, outside the New Gate, are the handsome new buildings of the Mining and Geological Institute and the Agricultural Museum (see p. 11) and Academy (Pl. b; G, H, 3), each of which possesses a fine interior court used for exhibitions.

The former contains the Mining Museum (see p. 11). — The Agricultural Museum includes a collection of agricultural implements, mineralogical, geological, botanical, and soological cabinets, and an interesting collection of hunting and fishing apparatus.

The protty Invelider Book to the

The pretty Invaliden-Park, to the left, contains an obelisk commemorating the loss of the corvette Amazone in 1861, and the Warriors' Monument, a Corinthian column of iron erected in 1854 to the memory of soldiers who fell in 1848-49 (view from the top). The Invalidenhaus (Pl. b; G, 3), erected by Frederick the Great in 1748 'læso et invicto militi', is entirely devoid of architectural interest.

The adjoining Invaliden-Kirchhof (Pl. b; F, G, 3) is the burial-place of many distinguished officers, including Scharnhorst (d. 1813), over whose grave a marble monument 18 ft. in height, designed by Schinkel, crowned with a recumbent lion in iron, was erected in 1826 by his comrades of 1813.—A little farther on is the Königh Augusta Hospital, erected for those who were wounded in the wars of 1866 and 1870-71, and the 'Cen-those who were wounded in the wars of 1866 and 1870-71, and the 'Central Turn-Anstat', for training teachers of gymnastics for the army.

To the W. of the Invalidenhaus, beyond the Berlin and Spandau Canal, which is crossed by the Invaliden-Strasse and is connected with the Spree by means of the Humbold-Hafen, is situated the Hamburg Station (Pl. b; G, 4); the directors' room is adorned with tasteful mural paintings. Beyond it is the Zellengefängniss, or Prison (Pl. b; F, 4), a model establishment for the reception of 566 immates, consisting of a central structure with wings radiating from it in the form of a star. Adjacent are the handsome Barracks of the 3nd Uhlans, and at the opposite and of the adjoining drilling-ground those of the 1st Artillery. The space between the barracks was occupied in 1879 by an Industrial Exhibition and in 1883 by the Hygienic Exhibition. To the S., near the Spree, is the handsome Lebric Station (Pl. r; F, 1).

Several of the last-named buildings belong to the suburb of Moabit, which extends along the right bank of the Spree to a point opposite Charlottenburg (p. 66). It was so named by French immigrants, chiefly gardeners, who on account of the sandy and sterile nature of the soil styled the country 'Pays de Moab'. It formerly consisted mainly of manufactories and places of recreation for the lower classes, but has lately been much improved (tramway-lines Nos. 8 & 4). Two of the principal buildings are the Criminal Courts (adm., see p. 12), and the Johanniskirche (Pl. b. D. 4), erected by Schinkel in 1834. Among the manufactories is that of Borsig, with the Villa Borsig and its interesting "Hot-houses and Palm-houses (adm., p. 11). Opposite is the Kleine Thiergarten, with a war-monument by Neumann. — To the N. of Mosbit, near the Pivizensee, is the Pentientiary (Pl. b; A, 1), a model establishment for 1200 prisoners.

i. Königs-Platz. Thiergarten. Zoological Garden. Charlottenburg

Outside the Brandenburg Gate (p. 17) the Friedens-Allee leads to the right to the *Königs-Platz (Pl. r; G, 2), which with its environs forms one of the most imposing parts of the city. The Platz is embellished with flower-beds and two fountains.

The *Monument of Victory (Pl. r; G, 2) in the centre, 200 ft. in height, designed by Strack, and inaugurated on 2nd Sept., 1873, stands on a circular terrace approached by eight steps of granite. The massive square pedestal is adorned with reliefs in bronze, commemorating the great victories of 1870-71 and others of earlier campaigns. On the E. side is the Danish War of 1864, by A. Calandrelli, which is probably the finest composition; on the N. the Battle of Königgrätz, 1866, by M. Schultz; on the W. the Battle of Sedan, 1870, by K. Keil; on the S. the return of the troops, 1871, by A. Wolff. The base of the column is surrounded by an open colonnade, and embellished with Venetian Mosaics designed by Anton von Werner, illustrating, in figures partly allegorical, partly historical, the war of 1870 and the restoration of the German empire. Below are the names of the battles and the generals. Above, in the flutings of the column, which consists of yellowish grey sandstone, are placed three rows of captured Danish, Austrian, and French cannon (60 in all). The summit consists of a capital formed of eagles, crowned with a Borussia, 48 ft. in height, by Drake. (Fine view from the capital, 152 ft. high; tickets obtained at the entrance, 50 pf.)

The E. side of the Königs-Platz has been chosen as the site for the new Reichstags-Gebäude, now being built from the designs of Paul Wallot. Formerly it was occupied by the Raczynski Palace (Pl. 7; G, 2), the residence of the owner of the fine collection of paintings in the National Gallery (p. 45).

To the N. of the Königs-Platz lies the Alsen-Platz, adorned with fountains, flower-beds, and four groups of sculpture representing scenes from military life (Setting out for the campaign, by Wittig; the Battle, by Schweinitz; the Hospital, by Brodwolf; and the Return, by Calandrelli). Beyond the Alsen-Platz stretches a new and handsome quarter, intersected by the Alsen-Strasse, and consisting almost wholly of fine modern mansions. The Alsen-Strends to the N. in the Alsen-Brücke. In the Moltke-Strasse are situated the extensive premises of the General Staff, the two different portions of which were built in 1871 and 1877. To the W., in the Herwarth-Str., is the *National Panorama, containing a representation of the Storm of St. Privat by Hünten and Simmler (adm., see p. 12). The tasteful Moltke-Brücke unites this suburb with Moabit (p. 62).

On the W. side of the Königs-Platz is Kroll's Establishment (p. 10), beyond which, on the Spree, are the popular places of recreation known as the Zelte. Farther to the W. is the royal château of Bellevue (Pl. r; D, 2), opposite which, on the right bank of the Spree, is the station of that name on the Stadtbahn.

The broad Sieges-Allee, or Avenue of Victory, which leads S. from the Königs-Platz through the Thiergarten, is one of the most fashionable promenades of the Berliners, especially in spring. At the S. end of the avenue, where it meets the Thiergarten-Str., Lenné-Str., Bellevue-Allee, Bellevue-Str., and Victoria-Str., stands the Wrangel Fountain (Pl. r; G, 3), cast in bronze from designs by Hagen. The roads skirting the Thiergarten (see below) on the E. and S. are also favourite drives.

The *Thiergarten, the largest and most attractive park near the town, lies to the W. of the Brandenburg Gate, and is bounded on the N. by the Spree, and on the S. by the Aeussere Friedrichstadt (p. 49). It is about 2 M. in length and 3/4 M. in breadth, and covers upwards of 600 acres of ground. It is enlivened by several sheets of water, and combines the character of a natural forest with the trimmer beauties of a public park. The pleasantest parts are the Seepark on the W. side, and the neighbourhood of the Rousseau Island, where numerous skaters display their skill in winter. The finest statue in the Thiergarten is the marble *Monument of Frederick William III. (Pl. r: F, 3), admirably executed by Drake in 1849, the pedestal of which, 18 ft. in height, is adorned with *Reliefs representing the blessings of peace. The monument is covered in winter. The corresponding Statue of Queen Louise (Pl. r; F, 3, 4), by Encke, was erected in March, 1880; the relief on the pedestal represents woman's work. The *Monument to Goethe, by Schaper, facing the Königgrätzer-Str. (Pl. r; G, 3), was unveiled in June, 1880: on the pedestal are allegorical figures of Lyric Poetry. Tragic Poetry, and Science, Near the Bellevue-Allee stands a Vinedresser by Drake, and in the avenue diverging to the left from the Brandenburg Gate is a group of lions by Wolff. In the socalled 'Grossfürsten-Platz', near the Spree, are sandstone groups representing the chief rivers of Prussia. There are also a few zinc casts from the antique.

Opposite the Seepark, on the S. bank of the canal, lies the *Zoological Garden (Pl. r; B, C, 4; adm., p. 12; tramways Nos. 24, 19, 17), founded in 1844 and recently greatly extended. It now contains one of the finest collections of animals in the world. The extensive, well laid-out grounds attract numerous visitors, and concerts are frequently given in the afternoon (see p. 10; guide by the director, Dr. Bodinus, 50 pf.). The houses and sheds for the animals were executed from appropriate designs by Ende & Böckmann; the most striking are the Antelope House, in an Arabian style, and the Elephant House, a gaily-coloured structure resembling an Indian pagoda. There is a second entrance to the gardens at the corner of the Kurfürsten-Str. and the Kurfürstendamm, and a third on the W. side, opposite the station of the Stadtbahn (p. 1).

Adjoining the gardens on the N.W. lies the Hippodrome, beyond which rises the Artillery and Engineering School. To the S. is the Joachimsthal Gumnasium.

The Charlotteneurg Road leads from the Brandenburg Gate across the Thiergarten, which it divides into two unequal parts, to (3 M.) Charlottenburg: tramway every 5 min. (see p. 7), also viâ Moabit; cab to the Charlottenburg Bridge (Pl. r; A, B, 3), 1st class 1-2 pers. $1^{1}/_{2}$ m., 2nd class 1 m.; see p. 5.

At the end of the Thiergarten, to the right of the high-road, stands the Royal Porcelain Factory (Pl. r; B, 2, 3), under the artistic management of Prof. Sussmann-Hellborn. Adm., see p. 12; see also p. 9.

The Porcelain Manufactory was founded in 1761 by a merchant named Gotzkowsky, and was acquired for the state by Frederick the Great two years later. It soon employed 500 workmen, and its wares were at one time preferred even to those of Meissen. The artistic style impressed upon it by the taste of subsequent monarchs did not usually commend itself to the public, though the ware was always in demand for chemical and industrial vessels on account of its hardness and capacity of resisting heat.

Latterly, however, the director has been more successful in meeting the popular taste, and the manufacture has been largely increased. The show rooms of the factory contain about 2000 models.

Beyond the canal-bridge, to the left, rises the new Technical High School (Pl. r; A, 3), a building of imposing style and dimensions, designed by Hitzig. To the right, in the Sophien-Str., are March's Pottery Works, an extensive and well-known establishment. with interesting show-rooms.

Charlottenburg (Cafés), a dull town with 30,500 inhab.. but now rapidly increasing in extent, lies on the site formerly occupied by the village of Lietzow, where Sophia Charlotte, wife of Frederick I., founded a country residence at the end of the 17th century.

The Royal Palace consists of a large group of adjoining buildings, of a total length of 550 vds. The central portion, erected by Schlüter in 1699, was enlarged by Eosander von Goethe in 1706, and provided with its effective dome. The right wing was added by Knobelsdorff in 1742, while the theatre at the end of the left wing and the belvedere in the park were erected by Langhans in 1788. The palace, which was for some years untenanted after the death of the Dowager Queen Elizabeth in 1873, is now occupied by the Crown-Prince of Meiningen.

The rococo decorations in the interior of the old central portion and in the apartments once occupied by Frederick the Great, and also the wain-scoted rooms of Queen Louise in the 'Neue Schloss', fitted up in the style of the period of Louis XVI., are well worthy of inspection. For admission apply to the castellan in the right wing of the front court.

Between the two barracks opposite the palace are two groups in bronze representing soldiers of the Gardes du Corps, by Kiss.

The entrance to the pleasant Palace Garden, laid out by the eminent French landscape-gardener Le Nôtre, is near the small guard-room, adjoining the W. wing. Crossing the orangery to the right, turning to the left and skirting it on the farther side, and then following an avenue of pines to the right, we reach (in 10 min. from the entrance) the *Mausoleum, erected by Gentz in the Doric style, where Queen Louise (d. 1810) and her husband Frederick William III. (d. 1840) repose.

One of the servants from the palace shows the tomb (fee usual, although officially prohibited; comp. pp. 11, 68), the arrangement and decoration of which were designed by Fred. William IV.

The recumbent figures of the illustrious pair, executed in marble by Rassa's masterly hand, are strikingly impressive. The beautiful figure of the queen, executed at Carrara and Rome in 1812-18, was placed here in 1815 and at once established the sculptor's fame. At the sides are beautiful candelabra, that on the right with the three Fates by Rauch, that on the left with the three Horse by Tieck; the crucifix by Achtermann of Rome. The heart of Frederick William IV. is placed at the feet of his parents in a marble casket. The anniversaries of the deaths of the king (7th June) and queen (19th July) are observed by a private service in the mausoleum for the members of the royal family.

At the upper end of Charlottenburg are the garden and park of the *Flora society, containing a large *Palm-house, a winter-garden, and a spacious concert-room, which attract numerous visitors (adm., see p. 11). The tasteful brick and timber building containing the concert-room was erected by Stier in 1873. — The Lützow-Platz is embellished with a simple but pleasing War Monument.

On an eminence on the Spandau road, beyond Charlottenburg, lies Westend, a number of villas which have sprung up within the last few years (station of the Stadtbahn). On the left stands the huge reservoir of the Westend water-works, and to the right one of the reservoirs of the new Berlin water-works, which derive their supply from springs near the Tegeler-See (see below).

The Spandauer Bock, 3/4 M. farther, is a popular beer-garden commanding a view towards Spandau. Pleasant walk hence to (11/2 M.) Pichelsberg, situated among woods on a bay of the Havel, opposite the island of Pichelswerder. The shooting-lodge of Grunewald, situated on the lake and in the forest of that name, 3!/2 M. to the S.W. of Charlottenburg, is another favourite point; it may be reached either by the 'Bingbahn' or the Stadtbahn (stat. Hundekehle).

The next station in the direction of Potsdam (comp. p. 67) is Wannsee, on the lake of that name, a group of picturesque villas in the midst of a characteristic N. German landscape of wood and water. Near the station is the grave of the poet Heinrich von Kleist, who shot himself here in 1811. — A shady forest-path leads hence to (1 hr.) Glienicke (p. 73).

k. Environs of Berlin.

The pleasantest points have already been mentioned, viz. the Thiergarten (p. 63), Charlottenburg (p. 65), the Zoological Garden (p. 64), Schöneberg and the Botanical Garden (p. 49), Moabit (p. 61), Pichelsberg see above), the Kreuzberg and Tempelhof (p. 52). Then Stralau and Treptow, villages on the Spree, 2 M. to the S.E. of the Köpenick Gate, reached by steamboat (p. 7). — To the N., 1½ M. beyond the Rosenthal Gate, is the Gesundbrunnen, with a park and restaurants. About 3 M. from the Schönhausen Gate are situated Pankow and the château of Schönhausen with its park, both connected by tramway with Berlin. - The principal Berlin Race Meetings take place in spring and autumn at Hoppegarten, a station on the Ostbahn.

To the S.W. is Lichterfelde, a group of villas, with stations on the Anhalt and Potsdam railways (pp. 67, 269, 368). The principal German Cadet School was transferred hither from Berlin in 1878, and occupies a large building surmounted by a dome 200 ft. high, and containing accommodation for 880 pupils. In the vestibule are the marble statues formerly in the Wilhelms-Platz at Berlin (p. 48). The Protestant and Roman Catholic chapels are both richly decorated. The 'Field Marshal Hall' contains the portraits of upwards of 61 Prussian marshals, and a frieze by Pfuhl representing the campaign of 1870-71, the training of the cadets in the old school, and the opening of the new building. The 'Flensburg Lion' stands in front of the commandant's house (comp. p. 163). The school is connected with the station of the Anhalt line (p. 259) by an electric rail-Horse-races are held at Lichterfelde also.

Pleasant excursion by tramway (No. 6, p. 6) or steamer (from Spandau) to (9 M.) Tegel, formerly the residence of the Humboldt family, originally a hunting-lodge of the Great Elector, but altered by Schinkel in 1822 in imitation of a Roman villa. The interior is decorated with valuable works of art and casts. The park contains the burial-place of William (d. 1835) and Alexander (d. 1859) v. Humboldt, marked by a granite column with a statue of Hope by Thorealdsen.

The traveller whose stay at Berlin is short will hardly be repaid by a visit to any of these points, but he should not omit to devote a day to Potsdam with its environs (see R. 2).

Transways. From the Lange Brücke: 1. To Glienicke (p. 73); 2. To the Brandenburger Thor (near Sanssouci) and the Victoria-Strusse, near the Charlottenhof (p. 71); 3. To the Russian Colony (p. 72), near the New Garden (p. 72). — 4. From the Victoria-Str. to Glienicke.

Plan of Excursion. After a glance at the town, visit the "Friedenskirche, "Sanssouci, the so-called "Orangery, the Sicilian Garden, the Japanese House, Charlottenhof, the "New Palace, and then return to the town. Drive by the "Pfingsthery to the "Marble Palace, and by Glienicke to "Babeliberg; then to the rallway-station, from which a visit may be paid to the Braukausberg, an admirable point of view, especially by evening-light. It is possible to visit all these points by carriage in one day, but very fatiguing. — Smoking is prohibited in the royal gardens, except at Babelsberg.

The Fountains of Sanssouci usually play in summer on Sundays, from noon till dusk. The great fountain also plays on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons (see p. 12).

Fees to the attendants at the different palaces, although strictly speaking prohibited: 1 pers. 1-11/2 m., a party 3 m.; comp. p. 65. Admission to the New Palace is granted by ticket (25 pf. for each pers.;

no fee). Hotels. EINSIEDLER, Schloss-Str. 8; DEUTSCHES HAUS, Schloss-Str. 6, good wine; STADT KÖNIGSBERG, Brauer-Str. 1, with a veranda on the Havel, good cuisine.

Restaurants. Railway Restaurant. - In the Town: Besides the abovementioned hotels: Schirmer, Kreuz-Str. 16; Niedt, Wilhelms-Platz 10; Hormess, Wilhelms-Platz (for luncheon). — In the Environs: Café Sanssouci, outside the Brandenburg Gate; Wackerman's Hobe, on the Brauhausberg, with fine view; Wildpark Station (see p. 67); Blubme, near the Orangery; Hayer, at Glienicke, near the Berlin high-road.

Potsdam (48,500 inhab., garrison 7000), the seat of government for the province of Brandenburg, is charmingly situated on the Potsdamer Werder, an island in the Havel, which here expands into a series of lakes and is bounded by wooded hills. The town is of ancient Slavonic origin, but was a place of no importance until the Great Elector founded his palace and park in the neighbourhood. It is indebted for its modern splendour to Frederick the Great, who generally resided at Potsdam, and in whose reign the palace of Sanssouci, the New Palace, and a number of handsome private residences were erected, and the grounds greatly extended.

Crossing the Lange Brücke, which leads from the station to the town, we perceive the Royal Palace opposite to us. On the right stands the lime-tree (protected by a metal covering) where petitioners used to station themselves to attract the attention of Frederick the Great. To the S. of the palace, enclosed by two rows of columns, extends the Lustgarten, in which there are bronze busts of York, Blücher, and twelve other celebrated personages, by Rauch, and a series of statues and groups, executed at the beginning of the last century, of little artistic value.

The adjoining Palace (castellan in the court to the left), erected in 1660-1701, but dating in its present form from 1750, is interesting for the reminiscences it contains of Frederick the Great.

His rooms, adorned with pictures by Watteau, Lancret, and Pesne, have been preserved in their original condition. His ink-stained writingtable, music-stand, autograph notes, travelling-cup, etc., are shown here. Adjoining the library, which is separated from the bedroom by a massive silver balustrade only, is a cabinet with double doors, from which the dining-table could be let down by means of a trap-door, and where the king occasionally dined with his friends without risk of being overheard by his attendants. — The study of Frederick William I. contains a few pictures painted by that monarch 'in tormentis' (i.e. during an attack of court) and also a large expectation portest of him by Companyee. The gout), and also a large equestrian portrait of him by Camphausen. The apartments of Frederick William II., with wainscoting in the Louis XVI. style, and those of Frederick William III. and his consort Queen Louise are also preserved unaltered. Those occupied by the late King Frederick William IV. are adorned with a number of good modern pictures. The Oranienkammern contain some old tapestry.

The *Church of St. Nicholas, to the N. of the palace, erected in 1830-37 from a plan by Schinkel, a lofty edifice of cubical form. with a dome added in 1842-50, contains a large freeco in the apse, of Christ with the apostles and evangelists, designed by Schinkel, and four prophets by Cornelius in the angles of the vaulting under the dome. The tympanum of the entrance-portico contains a relief of the Sermon on the Mount, by Kiss, from designs by Schinkel. Fine view from the open colonnade of the dome. (Sacristan at the parsonage, adjoining the church on the right.)

The neighbouring Rathhaus, the gable of which is adorned with a gilded figure of Atlas bearing the globe, was built in 1754. The Obeliak in front of it, 75 ft. in height, is embellished with medallion-busts of the Great Elector and the first three kings of Prussia. Adjoining the royal palace is the Barberini Palace, built in 1850-52, containing large assembly-rooms for scientific and other societies.

A vault under the pulpit of the Garrison Church, more to the W., contains the remains of Frederick the Great and of his father Frederick William I., the founder of the church. A number of flags, chiefly French, captured in 1813-15 and in 1870-71, are suspended on each side of the pulpit. The tower contains musical bells, which play every half-hour. Sacristan, Kiez-Str. 24.

The Wilhelms-Platz is adorned with a Statue of Frederick William III., designed by Kiss.

The Military and the Civil Orphan Asylums, the Casino, the French Church, built in 1752, the *District Courts, in the Maurer-Str., the Theatre, the Hussars' Barracks, the new Roman Catholic Church, in the Bassin-Platz, and the Uhlan Barracks are also handsome buildings. The Weinbergthor, in the N.W. part of the town, was designed by Hesse in the style of the Arcus Argentarius at Rome, and is adorned with terracotta reliefs by Schievelbein and Bläser, representing the return of the Crown Prince of Prussia (the present Emperor) from the campaign against Baden.

Outside the (W.) Brandenburg Gate, erected in the form of a Roman triumphal arch by Unger in 1770, with a handsome new allegorical fountain-group of five figures near it, an avenue to the right leads to the *PARK OP SANSSOUCI. At the entrance to the park, 11/2 M. from the station, rises the *Friedenskirche, or 'Church of Peace', in the early-Christian basilica style, designed by Persius, and completed in 1850, the favourite building of Fred. William IV.

We first enter a QUADRANGLE, enclosed by arcades, adjoining which rises the clock-tower, 130 ft. in height, with openings adorned with miniature columns. In the cloisters, at the foot of the tower, are some interesting Romanesque Italian sculptures. Beyond the cloisters, the entrance to which from the park is formed by a modern Romanesque portal in terracotta, we enter the somewhat smaller Aprium (the 'paradise' of the ancient basilicae), where to the left stands Rietschel's 'Pietas (the Saviour's body and the weeping mother); opposite to it Rauch's 'Group of Moses (Moses, supported by Aaron and Hur, praying for victory); and in the centre a copy of Thorvaldsen's Risen Christ. The somewhat hare Interaction of the basilica, borne by sixteen Ionic columns in black marble, contains, in front of the chancel, the burial-vaults of Frederick William IV. (d. 1861) and of his Queen Elizabeth (d. 1878); the angel in Carrara marble is by Tenerani of Rome. The apse is adorned with an old Venetian mosaic from S. Cipriano di Malamocco, representing Christ, Mary, and Peter on the right, and John the Baptist and St. Cyprian on the left.

Entering the garden, we soon reach the *Great Fountain, the water of which rises to a height of 112 ft. (p. 68), and several others near it. Of the twelve figures surrounding the basin (18th cent.), the Venus by Pigalle alone merits inspection. The equestrian Statue of Frederick the Great in Carrara marble, to the S. of the Great Fountain, is freely copied from Rauch's celebrated work (p. 20), and the reliefs on the neighbouring bronze vase are a repetition of those on the pedestal of the monument of Fred. William III.

A broad flight of steps, 66 ft. in height, intersected by six Terraces, ascends from the great fountain to the palace. Frederick the Great's greyhounds and chargers are buried at the E. end of the highest terrace. This was once a favourite resort of the king, who expressed a wish to be buried at the foot of the statue of Flora here in the Thiergarten (p. 64).

The Palace of Sanssouci, a building of one story, erected by Knobelsdorff for Frederick the Great in 1745-47, and that monarch's almost constant residence, stands on an eminence above the town. His rooms are still preserved almost unaltered. It was afterwards occupied by Frederick William IV., who died here in 1861.

The castellan lives in the building to the E. of the palace. The main interest of the palace consists in the numerous reminiscences it contains of its illustrious founder. A clock, which he was in the habit of winding up, is said to have stopped at the precise moment of his death (2.20 p.m., 17th Aug., 1786). His portrait (in his 56th year) by Pesne is said to be the only likeness for which he ever sat. The walls are hung with pictures by Pesne, Lancret, Watteau, and others. The library contains a few ancient busts, the best of which is one of *Homer. In the dining-room stands a bronze bust of Charles XII. of Sweden. The W. wing contains the room in which Frederick William IV. died (kept unaltered) and also that once occupied by Voltaire. In the latter are some wood-carvings and embroidery.

The Picture Gallery, in a separate building, has yielded up its finest works to the Museum at Berlin, though some of those remaining are ascribed to the great masters. The building was erected by Frederick the Great at a cost of 160,000 thalers (24,0001.), and the interior is lavishly adorned with stucco and Italian marbles.

From Sanssouci a path leads in 1/4 hr. to the Ruinenberg (see Plan), an eminence with artificial ruins, beneath which is the reservoir for the fountains of Sanssouci. The water is pumped into it from the Havel by means of steam-engines. The tower (129 steps; fee 30 pf.) commands a beautiful and extensive prospect.

The way to the Orangery leads past the famous Windmill, the owner of which is said to have refused to sell it to Frederick the Great (now royal property), and through the Northern Garden or 'Pinetum'.

The *Orangery, an extensive structure in the Florentine style, 330 yds. in length, was completed in 1856 from plans by Hesse. On the terrace are two columns with statues of Ceres and Flora, and a copy of the Farnese Bull. Below are two ancient sarcophagi, used as fountain-troughs. The long façade is adorned with numerous statues: the Seasons and the Months executed by Stützel, from the designs of Schievelbein, Wittig, E. Mayer, and Franz; in the centre Agriculture, Architecture, Industry, and Science by A. Wolff and E. Mayer. In front of the building is a statue of Fred. William IV.. by Blaceer.

The Central Saloon on the ground-floor contains forty-five Copies from Raphael and numerous original sculptures. Among these are: Steinhäuser, Girl listening with a shell; Troschel, Spinner saleep; Imhof, Miriam; Yoss, Hebe giving water to the eagle, and Cupid warding off the eagle.—Next Saloon: Franz, Butterfly-catcher; Wittzach, Ball-player (in bronze).—Malachtte Saloon: Troschel, Sleeping Faun, and the infant Bacchus in a basket; Thorvaidsen, Head of Adonis, and Head of a sleeper; Hasenpfup, Cupid and Psyche. Paintings: Stange, Palace of the Doges (uneral of the last doge at night); O. Achenbach, Park near Frascati; Hagen, Wieland at the court of Weimar; Oer, Frederick the Great in boat, playing.—In the Loogia are statues in marble: Troschel, Woman spreading flax; E. Mayer, Girl putting on ear-rings; Steinhäuser, Boy playing at ball.—Next Roow: Rauch, Danaide; E. Hitdebrandt, Bethesda, Nazareth, Bethlehem, and Jerusalem from the Mt. of Olives.

The upper terrace (door to the left in the court) commands a magnificent *Panorama of the country round Sanssouci, Potsdam, the Havel, and the neighbouring hills.

From the Cavalier Wing we now proceed to the Paradeisgärtl, which contains a charming Atrium in the Greek style. The Belvedere at the N.W. end of the garden, beyond the Paradeisgärtl, commands a pleasing view.

From the Orangery we proceed to the S. through the 'Sicilian Garden', containing tropical plants, fountains, and statues (*Girl drawing water, in marble, by E. Wolff), and then between the Sea-horse Fountain, by Kiss, and the Japanese House (called the 'ape-saloon' by Frederick the Great from the figures with which it is decorated) to (1 M.) the Charlottenhof. Before reaching the château we pass on the left the Boman Bath-house, containing a valuable bath of jasper, a fine group of Ganymede and Hebe in marble by Hentschel, and some old engravings.

The *Charlottenhof, originally an unpretending country-house, was tastefully transformed by Schinkel in 1826 into an Italian villa. The vestibule contains a bust of Schinkel by Rauch, and two vases of jasper from the Ural. In one of the rooms is a chair of steel and silver, made by *Peter the Great. In the dining-room, Ganymede by Wredow, and David by *E. Wolff. (Castellan on the sunk floor.)

To the E. of the park of Sanssouci, 1 M. from the Orangery and about the same distance from the Charlottenhof, rises the *New Palace, founded by Frederick the Great in 1763, after the termination of the Seven Years' War, and completed by him at a vast expense in 1769. Visitors enter from the back, opposite the 'Communs', or old servants' offices, now barracks for a battalion of infantry composed of members of all the different regiments, and trained here to ensure uniformity of drill throughout the army. The façade is 375 ft. long. Many of the 200 apartments are richly decorated. Those once occupied by the founder are preserved unaltered. Part of the upper floor is fitted up as a summer-residence for the Crown Prince and his family.

Visitors are admitted to the greater part of the palace even when the royal family are at home, but in this case they must approach from the royal family are at home, but in this case they must approach from the Wildpark station, and wait at the bridge. The best time for the visit is between 11 a.m. and 5 p.m. The castellan lives in the one-storied house to the N.W. of the palace. Admission 25 pf.

The Vestibule contains a large porcelain vase, presented by the Emp. Nicholas. The "Grotto Saloon is inlaid with shells, the friezes with minerals and precious stones. The upper rooms contain several pictures by ancient masters: Tintoretto, Danae; Poussin, Moses; Domenichino, Artemisia; Guido Reni, Cleopatra, Mary; Titian, Christ at Emmaus; Rubens, Adoration of the Magi. The Apartments of Frederick the Great contain relics of that monarch and a portrait of Voltaire drawn by him. The Theatre has seats for 600 persons. In the Concert and Ball Room: G. Reni, Lucretia, Diogenes: L. Giordyna, Judgment of Paris, Rape of the Sabines. rectia, Diogenes, L. Giordano, Judgment of Paris, Rape of the Sabines, Vanioo, Sacrifice of Iphigenia. The handsome MARBLE SALOON is 100 ft. long.

The castellan of the New Palace also keeps the key of the Antique Temple or Mausoleum, containing an admirable marble *Statue of Queen Louise by Rauch, somewhat more realistic than that at Charlottenburg (p. 65). Opposite to it is the elegant Temple of Friendship, erected by Gontard by order of Frederick the Great to the memory of his sister the Margravine of Baircuth, and containing her bust.

The Wildpark Station (p. 67) is 1/2 M. to the S. of the New Palace.

To the N. of Potsdam, about 1/2 M. from the Nauener Thor, is the Russian colony of Alexandrowka, consisting of eleven houses and a Greek chapel, founded in 1826 by Fred. William III. for the accommodation of the Russian singers who were at that time attached to the 1st Regiment of Guards.

To the E. of the Russian colony lies the *Neue Garten, or New Garden, laid out by Fred. William II., and containing a fine rosary. At the N. corner of the garden is the Meierei (Restaurant, unpretending) or dairy, prettily situated on the Jungfernsee (boats to Glienicke, etc.). In the E. part of the garden, on the Heiligen-See, rises the Marble Palace, erected in 1786-96 by Fred. William II., who died here in 1797, and completed by Fred. William IV. in 1845. A number of good sculptures and pictures are preserved here. The palace is at present occupied by Prince William, and not open to visitors.

In the COURT, in front of the palace, Prometheus, by E. Wolff. In the ABCADES, rich ornamentation by Kolbs and Hesse. Marble sculptures in the INTERIOR: "Rauch, Figure putting on sandals; "Ticck, Marble disc, with a portrait of Wackenroder on one side, and Clio on the other; E. Wolff, Angler, Shepherd-boy, Hebe and Ganymede, Venus and Cupid; Wichmann, Cupid and Psyche; Trippel, Bust of Morcury; Berges, Lorelei, Cupid and Pysche; Troschel, Satyr; Hopfgarten, Bacchante and infant Bacchus planting vines; Schadow, Reliefs; Canova, Vase. — Pictures: Hackert, Two Neapolitan landscapes; Frey, Simoona in Egypt, Views of the Pyramids; Eichhorn, Greek landscapes; Little, Groups of trees, after Claude, 1791; "Kretschmer, The Margrave of Schwedt and Scydlitz on a dangerous expedition, and Sevdlitz's equestrian exploit. — Geiling by Frisch (1796). expedition, and Seydlitz's equestrian exploit. - Ceiling by Frisch (1796), Kipfel, and Klöber: the four Seasons. Boom painted by Klöber in 1847: Apollo, Venus, Morpheus, God of Dreams, large Bacchic scene.

The Kitchen, which externally looks like a temple sunk in the lake, is connected with the palace by a subterranean passage 50 paces long.

On the *Pfingstberg, which rises in the vicinity, stands a handsome ornamental building, part of a projected villa, designed by Hesse, the towers of which (152 steps) afford an extensive view of the environs, with Berlin, Spandau, Nauen, and Brandenburg in the distance, most striking by evening-light. A carriageroad ascends to the summit of the hill. The castellan lives in the N. W. tower. At the base on the S. side lies the extensive Exercising-Ground.

At Glienicke on the Berlin road (tramway, see p. 67), on the left bank of the Havel, is situated a Château of Prince Frederick Charles, with a garden and large *Park.

If, from the entrance next to the fountains near the road, we follow the first road leading to the right, we reach the so-called Roman Bench, on the banks of a small artificial lake and waterfall. On a slight eminence above lies the *Weisse Bank, affording a capital survey of the whole basin of the Havel; we then follow the road and come to the Victoria-Bank, of the Havel; we then follow the road and come to the Victoria-Bank, whence we enjoy an extensive view of the other side of the river. We now return to the Château. The 'Newgierde', or entrance-court, and the 'Cassino' contain a number of antique sculptures, paintings, and inscriptions; the latter also commands a beautiful view. To the N.W. of the palace is a 'restoration' of the court of an old monastery, the older parts of which came from Padus (admission on application to the porter). It contains, amongst numerous other medieval reliefs, the old coronation-chair of the German emperors from Goslaz, which Emp. William used at the first opening of the Imperial Dict. The reserved park is noted for its well-kent turf; admission on application to the Impector, who lives close by kept turf; admission on application to the Inspector, who lives close by.

On the other side of the road rises the Böttchers-Berg, surmounted with a Loggia, commanding a fine *Panorama. At the foot of the hill is an old Hunting-Lodge of the Great Elector, whose bust is placed above one of the gates, in the rococo style, restored as a residence for Prince Frederick Charles.

In the vicinity (3/4 M.) is the entrance to the park and the palace of Babelsberg, the property of the Emp. William and open to the public in his absence. The porter at the gate provides a guide through the park, if required (1/2-1 m.). — Those who wish to visit Babelsberg first leave the railway at Neu-Babelsberg station (v. 67).

The picturesque palace of *Babelsberg was erected in the English Gothic style by Schinkel in 1835, and extended in 1848. It stands in a beautiful park, laid out by Prince Pückler.

Stands in a deautiful park, laid out by Frince Puckler.

The "Interior of the château is tastefully decorated, and contains numerous works of art. Pictures: "Wittich, Page; "Th. Hildebrandt, Othello; Meyer of Bremen, Mother giving her child to a kneeling girl; Hagn, Conversation; C. Becker, The young recruit; Spangenberg, Sleeping forester; Dannhauser, Beene from the Danish war; "Bleibireu, At Königgräts; landscapes by Däge, Hummel, Harrach, and others. Also memorials of the campaigns of 1864, 1868, and 1870-71. Charming Views through the dense foliage, of Potedam, Sanssouci, the Pfingstberg, the Marble Palace, Glienicke, the broad expanse of the Havel, and the wooded hills. The water of the fountains in front of the palace is forced to the height of 100 ft. from the Havel by means of a steam-engine. On the E. side of the palace is a monument with the Archangel Michael, by Kiss. The adjacent Gothic building to the right is the kitchen.

On the neighbouring Lenné-Höhe stands the so-called Gerichtslaube, a Gothic colonnade, which was detached from the old Rathhaus in Berlin in 1871, and re-erected here. Extensive view. — To the S. rises the Flatower Thurm, a copy of the Eschenheimer-Thor Thurm at Frankfort, erected in 1856 and commanding a fine view.

The Pfaueninsel, 3 M. to the N.E. of Potsdam, once a favourite resort of Frederick William III., converted by him into a park, and abounding in beautiful oaks, is now rarely visited. The Château is in the form of a ruined Roman villa with two round towers connected by a bridge, and the Form at the extremity of the island in that of a Gothic ruin. The Cavalierhaus was built with the stones of Count Schlieffen's old house at Danisic. Between Glienicke and the Pfaueninsel, on the right bank of the Havel, lies Sacrow (Restaurant on the river), with the Church of Our Saviour, a basilica built by Persius for Frederick William IV.

The *Brauhausberg (Restaurant, p. 68), adjoining the railway-station on the S., commands a beautiful view of the town and the wide expanse of the Havel, finest by evening-light. - Farther to the S., on the Telegraphenberg, stands the Astronomical and Physical Observatory, an admirably-equipped institution, built by Spieker in 1875-79 (visitors admitted on Fridays 3-6; custodian in the main building).

The line to Dortmund traverses one of those flat agricultural tracts so characteristic, even in the time of Tacitus, of this part of Germany, with the addition of frequent signs of modern industry.

73 M. Dortmund (Rail, Restaurant; *Römischer Kaiser, R. & A. 21/2, B. 1, omn. 1/2 m.; Middendorf, R., L., & A. 21/2 m., well spoken of; Kölnischer Hof; Kühn), a town with 66,544 inhab... the most important in Westphalia, is the central point of a mining district, with numerous foundries, the headquarters of the mining authorities of Westphalia, and the meeting-point of several railways. It is at the same time one of the most ancient places in this part of the country, being mentioned in history as early as 927, probably fortified in the 10th cent., and frequently chosen for the meeting of imperial diets and ecclesiastical assemblies. It afterwards became a free imperial and fortified Hanseatic town, and in 1387-88 successfully resisted a siege of 21 months by the Archbishop of Cologne and other princes. After the Thirty Years' War, however, the place lost its importance. The greater part of the massive walls has been removed, and the town now wears a modernised aspect. The church of St. Reinoldi (Pl. E, 3), in the transition-style of the 13th cent., contains stained glass, a font, and a brazen reading-desk of the 15th century. Adjacent is the lofty Marienkirche (Pl. E, 3), a Romanesque structure built after 1150, with a Gothic choir of 1350; the high-altarpiece is by a master of the early Cologne school. The Petrikirche (Pl. C, 3), recently restored, contains a late-Gothic altarpiece and carvings. The Roman Catholic Pfarrkirche (Pl. D. 3), once the church of the Dominicans, is a Gothic edifice, finished in 1353; it contains an interesting but badly-preserved altarpiece by Victor and Heinrich Dünwegge of Dortmund (1521). The old Rathhaus (Pl. D. E. 3), in the market-place, is a monument of Dortmund's importance as a free imperial town. A large War Monument (Pt. C, 3) was erected here in 1881.

The Vehngericht, a celebrated Secret Tribunal, was founded in Westphalia after the fall of Henry the Lion, at a time when anarchy and law-lessness prevailed throughout Germany, and in the 14th and 15th centuries had extended its sway over the whole empire. The number of the initiated, bound by the most fearful oaths to execute the decrees of the tribunal, is said to have exceeded 100,000. In Westphalia alone the Freigraf, or president, was privileged to hold meetings for receiving new members. Dortmund was the seat of the supreme court, and here, in the 'Königshof under the Linden', the Emp. Sigismund was himself initiated in 1429. Latterly, however, the tribunal degenerated to little more than a police-court, before which the inhabitants of Dortmund and the neighbourhood carried their grievances. The last meeting held by this society here was in 1803.

One of the lime-trees is still standing near the railway-station, and is believed to be upwards of 400 years old.

FROM DORTMUND TO DÜSSELDORF, 44 M., a line of the Bergisch Mürkisch Ratiway runs vià Langendreer, Bochum, Steele, and Essen (see R. 5), and thence down the pretty Ruhrthal. — 271/2 M. Werden (Hocking; Unisrharnscheidt), an ancient town, with 7590 inhab., was formerly the seat of a Benedictine abbey, now used as a penitentiary. The handsome Church was built in the transition-style of the 12th and 13th cent. on the site of an earlier edifice partly destroyed by fire in 876, and was restored in 1849. The crypt dates from 1060, the W. part of the nave and the tower from 160. In the crypt is the burial-vault of St. Ludgerus (d. 809). The Platte and the Pastoratsberg are fine points of view. — 30 M. Kettwig (Schiesen) with old-established cloth-factories, is prettily situated. Branch-line from Kettwig to Mülheim an der Ruhr (p. 91). — 44 M. Düsseldorf, see Baedeker's Rhine.

FROM DORTHUND TO DÜBSELDORF by the Rhenish Railway, 481/2 M., in 21/2 hrs. (fares 5 m. 80, 4 m. 40, 2 m. 90 pf.). This line runs viä Herdecke (p. 92) and Hagen (p. 83), beyond which it coincides almost exactly with the Bergisch-Märkisch Railway; comp. R. 5, p. 82, and Baedeker's Rhine.

83 M. Camen. — 93 M. Hamm (*Graf von der Mark, R. & B. 3 m., Stadtkeller, Rheinischer Hof, in the town; Besing, Wieseler, at the station), with 20,783 inhab., once the fortified capital of the County of Mark, which in 1660 was annexed to Brandenburg, is now a manufacturing place, iron wire, tacks, and engines being the staple commodities. The large Protestant Church was built in the 13th and 14th centuries. The Roman Catholic Church, built in 1510, is remarkable for its great length and narrowness, there being only one aisle (that on the S.). The new Gymnasium and the Supreme Court of Westphalia are handsome buildings. About ½ M. from the town are the thermal baths of the same name. — Hamm is the junction of the Westphalian line: N. to Münster (p. 127) and Emden (p. 138), S.E. to Soest (p. 84), and S.W. to Unna and Schwerte (p. 83).

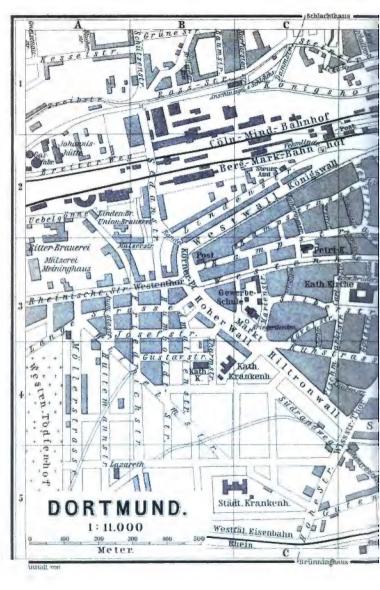

The train crosses the Lippe. 100 M. Ahlen. 106 M. Beckum, the junction for a short branch-line to the (4 M.) small town of that name (Post, Jürgens), near which are several limestone quarries.

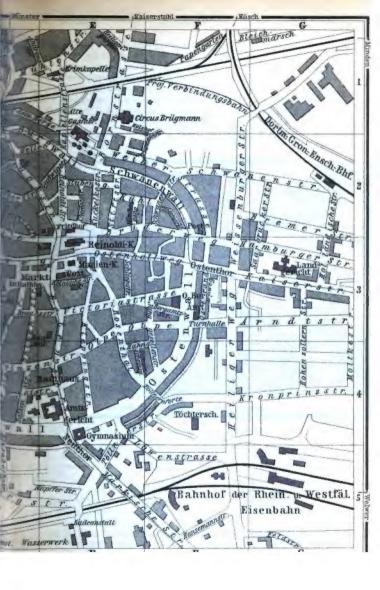

About 4 M. from Beckum is a well-preserved Roman camp. The large stone monuments here, as well as other reasons, have led many to suppose that this was the scene of the defeat of Varus by Arminius (or Hermann). A hill commanding the district is known as the Hermesberg, and a neighbouring estate is named Römelick (i. e. Römerleiche, or Roman burial). Guide necessary.

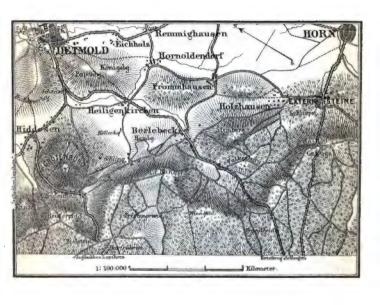

111 M. Oelde. Near (117 M.) Rheda, the Ems is crossed. — 124 M. Gütersloh (Schmale; Barkey), with 5045 inhab., is a great depôt of Westphalian hams and sausages, which are largely exported. The 'Pumpernickel' of this district, a dark brown bread made with unsifted rye-flour, is considered extremely nutritious. Beyond (132 M.) Brackwede the train enters a more hilly district.

135 M. Bielefeld (Drei Kronen, R., L., & A. 3, B. 1 m.; Spengler; Boucher; Westfälischer Hof, well spoken of; Teutoburg, R., A., L., & B. from 2 m., D. 1½ m), with 30,679 inhab., the central point of the Westphalian linen-traffic, which was introduced here by Dutch settlers in the 16th cent., is a busy manufacturing town. The Marienkirche, with a fine alterpiece (14th cent.), and the Nicolaikirche, with a carved altar of 1508, are two interesting Gothic churches of the 13th century. The castle on the Sparenberg, rising above the town, erected in the 12th cent., was partly destroyed by fire in 1877, but has been restored. It is surrounded with pleasant grounds. The *Berglust, a plain restaurant at the foot of the castle, commands a fine view. The Johannisberg, to the S.W., is another good point of view (Schützenhaus, halfway up).

143½ M. Herford (Stadt Berlin; Rorig's Hotel, at the station; Stadt Bremen), with 13,596 inhab., the second town in the County of Ravensberg, possesses numerous cotton and flax mills. It owes its origin to a nunnery which was founded in the 9th cent. on a hill on the N. side of the town, the abbess of which enjoyed princely rank and was entitled to a seat in the Imperial Diet. The Marienkirche, or Abbey Church, founded about 1030, and re-erected in 1325, is a handsome building with remains of old stained glass, a stone altar of the 14th cent., and an antique carved-wood altar. The Münster, a Romanesque structure of the beginning of the 13th cent., with a Gothic apse of the 15th cent., contains some silver vessels of the early Romanesque period and a font of the 15th century.

Enger, a small town 4 M. to the W. of Herford, was the seat of Charlemagne's obstinate opponent, Wittekind, Duke of Saxony, after he became a Christian. His bones are still preserved here in the Abbey Church, which was built in the 12th cent. but afterwards much altered.

FROM HERFORD TO DETMOLD AND BERGHRIM, 29 M.; railway to (17 M.) Detmold in $^3/_4$ -11/ $_4$ hr. (fares 2 m. 30, 1 m. 70, 1 m. 20 pf.); diligence thence to (12 M.) Bergheim thrice daily in $^{21}/_2$ hrs. — The first station is (5 M.) Salzuften (Grimme; Stadt Bremen), with saltbaths and a large starch-factory. 7 M. Lage (Nolte's Inn), a small town in a hilly district on the Werre.

From Lage a diligence plies thrice daily, in 1½ hr., to (5½ M.) Lemge (Wülker), a small town of 6100 inhab, with a Romanesque church altered in the Gothic style about 1290, a handsome town-hall, and many gabled houses (in stone and timberwork) in the Renaissance style of the 16th century. Meerschaum pipes are extensively made here. — From Lemgo to Binteln (p. 127), 15½ M., diligence daily in 3¼ hrs.; to Detmold (see below), 8 M., twice daily in 1½ hr.

17 M. Detmold (Lippescher Hof; Stadt Frankfurt; Deutsches Haus; two-horse carr. to Bergheim 12 m. and fee, to the Externsteine 71/2 m. and fee), the pleasant little capital of the principality of Lippe-Detmold, with 8000 inhabitants. In the middle of the town lies the Residenz-Schloss, a Renaissance structure, dating from the 16th cent. and worthy of a visit. It contains some fine silver vessels and tapestry. To the N. of the palace-square are the prince's stables, containing about 80 horses ('Senner', see p. 78). At the S. end of the town is the New Palace, occupied by the prince (built 1708-18, enlarged in 1850). The beautiful palace-garden, with fountains, is accessible by permission of the prince's gardener. Near the Gymnasium is a Natural History Museum. The Library contains 50,000 vols., including several incunabula, and about 70 MSS. A War Monument has been erected in the Kaiser-Wilhelms-Platz. In the Wehm-Str., near the market, are the house in which the poet Freiligrath (1810-76) was born and that in which Grabbe (1801-36) died. Pleasant walks on the Büchenberg.

About 3 M. from Detmold, to the S.W., rises the Grotenburg; the route, which cannot be mistaken, leads through the Avenue by the canal (Friedensthal Restaurant), traverses the entrenchment, and follows the road to Hiddesen for five minutes. At the Teutehof we diverge by a footpath to the left, which farther on passes some ancient German fortifications called the Kleine Hünenring and is indicated by stone pillars. The high-road leads upwards in a long curve, after passing Hiddesen. On the "Grotenburg (162 ft. above the sea, 840 ft. above Detmold; "Reineke's Inn), one of the highest points of the Teutoburgian Forest, rises the colossal Hermanns-Denkmal or Monument of Arminius, which was inaugurated on 16th August, 1875. Upon an arched substruction, 100 ft. in height, stands the figure (56 ft.) of the Prince of the Cherusci, with raised sword. (The point of the sword is 30 ft. above the top of the helmet, so that the total height is 186 ft.) The work was exercised. cuted by the sculptor Ernst v. Bandel (d. 1876), who devoted to it a great part of his life. The substructure was begun in 1838 and completed in 1846. The different parts of the statue are cast in copper, and attached to a strong iron frame-work. The cost of the work amounted to about 270,000 m. The gallery of the monument commands an admirable Panorama. Traces of old Germanic fortifications, the Grosse and Kleine Hunenring (see above), are still visible. The precise position of the battle-field where in the year A.D. 10 Arminius the Cheruscan gained a signal victory over the Roman general Varus, cannot now be determined (comp. p. 76). -The nearest way to the Externsteine, to the S.E. of the Grotenburg, is by Berlebeck, 21/2 hrs.; guide unnecessary.

About 31/2 M. to the S.W. of the Grotenburg lies Lopshorn, where a sturdy race of horses called the 'Senner' is bred.

Between Detmold and Bergheim the diligence (see p. 77) stops at (6 M.) Horn (Post), a small town with 1870 inhabitants.

About 1 M. to the S. of Horn, on the road to Paderborn, rise the *Externsteine (Ulrich's Inn), a curious group of five rocks 100-130 ft. in height, protruding from the earth like gigantic teeth, which to a certain height can be ascended by steps. The name occurs in documents of 1093 in the form of 'Agistersteine'. In one of the rocks is a grotto, 33 ft. in length, 9½ ft. in breadth, and 6½ ft. in height, into which opens the mouth of a cave (17 ft. in length, 11 ft. in width, and 7½ ft. in height). According to an inscription of 1115 in the grotto itself, it was fitted up by the Benedictines of Paderborn in imitation of the Holy Sepulche. Outside Benedictines of Pagernorn in initiation of the rock somewhat in the old Oriental style, is a relief representing the Descent from the Cross (16 ft. high, 10 ft. broad) in two sections; in the upper are represented, in colossal figures, the dead body of Christ being removed from the Cross by Joseph of Arimathea and Nicodemus, with the Virgin and the Evangelists. Above hovers God the Father with the banner of the Cross, and the figure of a child (the soul of the Saviour?), or perhaps Christ himself; at the side, the sun and moon. In the lower section are seen a man and a woman kneeling (Adam and Eve), entwined by a serpent, waiting for redemption.

About 21/2 M. to the E. of Horn and 9 M. from Bergheim is Meinberg, a watering-place, with sulphur, salt, and mud-baths, which are beneficial in cases of gout and rheumatism.

12 M. Bergheim, see p. 127.

151 M. Löhne, the junction for Hameln (p. 126) and Rheine (p. 138).

154 M. Bad Ocynhausen. — Hotels. *Vogeler's Hotel; Rose; Pa-

VILLON; VICTORIA; BÖRSENHALLE; STARKE.

Restaurant at the Curhaus, and at the hotels.

Visitors' Tax 9 m., each additional pers. 3 m. — Music Tax 6 m., family 9-131/2 m. A band plays thrice daily near the Curhaus.

Bad Ocynhausen, or Rehme (233 ft.), a watering-place of some repute (about 3200 patients annually), picturesquely situated on the Werre, is named after an engineer of that name (d. 1865), who conducted the boring operations which led to the discovery of the thermal water. In the Cur-Park, three warm saline springs (93°, 80°, and 78° Fahr. respectively) issue from a shaft 2030 ft. in depth, the principal fountain rising in a jet 30 ft. in height. The water is considered especially beneficial in paralysis. Handsome bath-house. Favourite walks to the Siehl, to Mellbergen, to Eidinghausen, etc.

The train crosses the Weser near the village of Hausberg, and soon enters the Weserscharte, or Porta Westphalica, a narrow defile by which the Westphalian mountains are quitted. 160 M. Porta (Steinert's Hotel, on the right bank; Nottmeier's, on the left bank, both with pleasant grounds). The railway-station at the foot of the Jacobsberg (617 ft.) on the right bank resembles a small castle. On the opposite bank of the river, which is crossed by a chain-bridge, rises the Wittekindsberg (820 ft.), a tower (74 ft.) at the top of which commands a beautiful and extensive view. In the adjacent Margarethen-Klus, a chapel, of which the outer walls and a rude altar and font alone remain, the Saxon duke Wittekind is said to have been baptised under Charlemagne's compulsion (comp. p. 92). The neighbouring quarries of excellent sandstone afford an interesting view of the stratification of the rock.

The train soon emerges from the defile and traverses the small plain which lies between the Weser Mts. and Minden.

164 M. Minden (Rail. Restaurant; *Victoria Hotel and Stadt London in the town, 3/4 M. distant), with 17,867 inhab., the seat of a prince-bishop from the time of Charlemagne down to 1649, lies on the Weser, which is crossed here by a new bridge. The Roman Catholic *Cathedral is a well-proportioned edifice, of which the tower dates from 1062-72 and the nave from the end of the 13th cent.; the choir, built in 1377-79, has been recently restored. The cathedral treasury contains numerous valuable crucifixes, chalices, candelabra, and other objects. The four Protestant churches are insignificant. The handsome Government Buildings, constructed of the same brown, veined sandstone, which has been used for many other buildings in the town, were erected in 1846. The Rathhaus, in the market, possesses a Gothic portico with columns and a Gothic gable of brick. The new Gymnasium contains a tastefully-decorated aula. The fortifications of the town were levelled in 1872.

On the battle-field of Todtenhausen, 3 M. to the N., a Gothic monument commemorates the victory of Duke Ferdinand of Brunswick over the French, 1st Aug. 1759.

From Minden (Löhne) to Osnabrück and Rheine, see R. 8.

 $168^{1}/2$ M. Bückeburg (Deutsches Haus; Rathskeller), the capital of the principality of Lippe-Schaumburg, is a dull town, with 5000 inhab., a palace, and a pleasant park. The unsightly church bears the appropriate inscription, 'Religionis non structurae exemplum'.

The Papenbrink (988 ft.), 3 M. to the S. of Bückeburg (reached by following the Rinteln road to Klein-Bremen, and then turning to the left), commands an extensive panorama. The descent may be made to Rinteln (p. 127) in 1½ hr. — About 2½ M. to the N.W. of Klein-Bremen are the small sulphur-baths of Nammen.

Elisen, a small watering-place with sulphur and mud-baths, lies 41/g M. to the S.E. of Bückeburg (diligence in summer twice a day). Walkers diverge from the road to the right at Heinemeyer's restaurant, 3/4 M. from Bückeburg, and cross the Harri, a finely-wooded hill. — The 'Paschemburg (1148 ft.), a much-frequented inn on one of the highest hills of the Weser, may be reached hence in 21/2 hrs. viā the Arnsburg and Bernsen. Fine view of the Schaumburg below, the ancestral seat of the counts of that name, and of the valley of the Weser. Ristein (p. 127) lies about 6 M. to the S.W., and Bückeburg 8 M. to the N. of this point. From Hessisch-Oldendorf (p. 126) the Paschenburg may be ascended in 13/4 hr. viā Welsede, Koverden, and the ruins of Schaumburg.

177 M. Stadthagen (Stadt London), an ancient town with an old château and Rathhaus, chalybeate baths, and many timber-buildings; by the church the mausoleum of the princely family. 186 M. Haste, whence a branch-line runs by the small baths of Nenndorf to Weetzen (p. 126). 1891/2 M. Wunstorf, the junction for Bremen (p. 131), with a large seminary and a monastery founded in 871, the church of which has been successfully restored.

203 M. Hanover, see p. 108; from Hanover to Göttingen and Cassel, see R. 7; to Altenbeken, see R. 12.

213 M. Lehrte, the junction of the Harburg (R. 18), Brunswick

(p. 81), and Hildesheim (15 M.; p. 114) lines.

238 M. Gifhorn (Deutsches Haus); 246 M. Fallersleben, where the poet Hoffmann von Fallersleben was born in 1798; 252 M. Vorsfelde, to the left of which is the large château of Count Schulenburg-Wolfsburg; 258 M. Oebisfelde, the junction of a line to Magdeburg (p. 81); 267 M. Gardelegen, an old town with dilapidated walls and a Romanesque church; 288 M. Vinzelberg.

296 M. Stendal (Adler; Schwan; Rudolphi; *Rail. Restaurant), a town with 14,393 inhab., founded in the 12th cent. by Albert the Bear on the site of a Slavonic settlement, was once the capital of the Altmark. The Cathedral, a noble late-Gothic structure, was erected in 1420-24 and restored in 1857. The W. portions with the towers, in the transition-style, date from 1257. In the choir stained glass of 1480. Gothic cloisters of 1460. The imposing late-Gothic Marienkirche was completed in 1447. In front of the late-Gothic Rathhaus is a Roland's Column of 1535. A monument was erected here in 1859 to the celebrated antiquarian Winckelmann.

who was born at Stendal in 1717. The town is still partly enclosed with picturesque old *Fortifications of the 13th-15th cent., of which the Uenglinger and Tangermunder Thor are the finest parts.

Tangerminde, picturesquely situated on the lofty bank of the Elbe, 7 M. to the S.E. of Stendal (diligence 4 times daily), is remarkable for its highly ornate brick-buildings of the 14th cent., the finest of which are the gateways and the recently-restored Rathhaus. The Schloss, most of which is now modern, was long the residence of the Margraves of Brandenburg. It commands a fine view of the Elbe and of the monastery

FROM STENDAL TO BREMEN, 145 M., in 51/4-61/2 hrs. (fares 17 m. 5, 12 m. 80, 8 m. 60 pf.). Country flat and uninteresting. The most important station 80, 8 m. 60 pf.). Country flat and uninteresting. The most important station is (36 m.) Salawedel (Deutscher Hef), one of the oldest places in the March, and once a Hanseatic town (8780 inhab.), containing a number of interesting buildings. The chief of these are the Marienkirche of the 18th and 14th cent. (containing the Markprefenstuhl, a "Crucifix, and other works of art); the Katharisenkirche, begun in 1247, altered in the 15th cent., possessing an admirable carved altar; the Lorenskirche (Rom. Cath.), of the 13th and 14th cent.; the Altstadt-Rathhaus, of 1509; and lastly a number of late-Gothic timber-buildings. — 66 M. Velsen (p. 144) is the junction for Hamburg. At (127 M.) Languedel our line joins that from Hanover (p. 131). Bremen, see p. 131.

From Stendal to Hamburg (110 M.) and to Magdeburg (53 M.), see R. 56; to Wittenberge, see also R. 56.

The train soon crosses the Elbe. 305 M. Schönhausen, the property of the Bismarck-Schönhausen family since 1562, and the birthplace of the Chancellor of the German Empire in 1815.

From Schönhausen diligence daily in 1 hr. to (71/2 M.) Jerichow, with the interesting Romanesque church of a Premonstratensian convent founded in 1144. — From Jerichow a diligence plies daily to (121/2 M.) Stendal.

318 M. Rathenow (Grosser Kurfürst), with 11,394 inhab., manufactures glass and spectacles. 325 M. Nennhausen; 344 M. Wustermark. Country flat and uninteresting.

353 M. Spandau (Adler) on the Havel, with 29,300 inhab., is strongly fortified. The church of St. Nicholas, of the 16th cent., contains interesting monuments and a very ancient font in metal. The cannon-foundry is a conspicuous building.

361 M. Berlin, see p. 1.

FROM HANOVER TO MAGDEBURG (92 M.), in 23/4-4 hrs. (fares 12 m., 9 m., 6 m. 10 pf.; express 13 m. 10, 9 m. 60, 6 m. 80 pf.); through-trains also run on this line from Cologne to Berlin and to Leipsic. Another railway between Magdeburg and Hanover, the Magdeburg - Oebisfelde, joins the Berlin - Stendal - Hanover line (p. 80), and also runs express trains.

The first station beyond Lehrte (p. 80; junction for Hamburg, Stendal, and Hildesheim) is Hämelerwald. To the left the churchtower of Sievershausen comes into view, where the Elector Maurice of Saxony, the opponent of Charles V., lost his life in 1553 in a battle against Margrave Albert of Brandenburg-Baircuth. From (24 M.) Peine (*Tullmann's Hotel) a branch-railway runs to (41/2 M.) Gross-Ilsede, with a large foundry, and an omnibus to Oelheim (Hôtel Neu-Pennsylvanien), a small place which owes its existence to petroleum springs discovered in 1880. - 29 M. Vechelde.

371/2 M. Brunswick (p. 117; *Refreshment Room), junction for the Harz line (R. 69). The train skirts the ducal park and the châteaux of Alt-Richmond and Neu-Richmond (comp. p. 126).

Stations Weddel, Schandelah, Bornum. 56 M. Königslutter. a small town on the Lutter, once the seat of a Benedictine abbey founded in 1110, the Romanesque church of which was built by Emp. Lothaire II. in 1135, with Gothic additions; handsome cloisters. The church contains the tomb of Lothsire, his wife, and his son-in-law. — 62 M. Frellstedt.

65 M. Helmstedt (Erbprins; Petzold), an ancient town with 8684 inhab., was once famous for its university, founded in 1575, and closed in 1810. Memorial tablets to many of the old professors have been placed on the houses they occupied. The old university building, in the Renaissance style, contains a library and the gymnasium. The town boasts of several handsome dwelling-houses of the 16th century. The Stephanskirche dates from the 12th century. On a hill to the W. stands the old church of a suppressed Augustinian nunnery, consecrated in 1256, now a Protestant place of worship (transition-style). The Lübbensteine near the town were probably once heathen altars. To the E. of the town is the Benedictine abbey of St. Ludgeri, secularised in 1803, the church of which is still used for Roman Catholic worship. About 21/4 M. farther on are Bad Helmstedt and the Clarabad, two small wateringplaces with mineral springs, situated in a valley of the Lappwald.

About 3 M. to the E. is Sommerschenburg, the seat of Count Gneisenau, where the celebrated Marshal Gneisenau (d. 1831) is buried.

Branch-line (in 40 min.; 1 m. 80, 1 m. 20, 75 pf.) from Helmstedt to Jerxheim (p. 87). Stations Eilsleben (junction for Kreiensen and Cologne, p. 87), Niederndodeleben, and Sudenburg (p. 87), a suburb of Magdeburg. 92 M. Magdeburg (p. 87): thence to Berlin, see R. 4.

4. From Cologne to Berlin by Soest and Magdeburg.

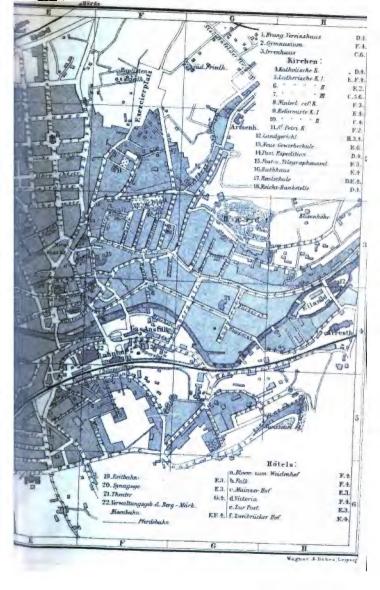

384 M. Railway (Rergisch-Märkisch) in 11-20 hrs. (express fares 52 m. 60, 89 m. 10, 28 m. 10 pf.; ordinary 47 m., 84 m. 60, 22 m. 80 pf.).

The train starts from Deuts, opposite Cologne (see Baedeker's Rhine). 21/2 M. Mülheim, on the Rhine; 7 M. Schlebusch; 9 M. Opladen (branch-line to Burscheid, Born, and Lennep, p. 83); 12 M. Leichlingen; 17 M. Ohligs-Wald (branch-line in 1/4 hr. to Solingen, an important manufacturing place); 20 M. Haan; 23 M. Vohwinkel, junction of the line to Steele, an important coalrailway; 241/2 M. Sonnborn. The line now crosses the Wupper, and reaches -

27 M. Elberfeld (Hôtel Bloem sum Weidenhof; Victoria; Post; Mainzer Hof; Rheinischer Hof) and (201/2 M.) Barmen (*Hôtel Vogeler; Prinz Wilhelm von Preussen; Vereinshaus, all at the station; Zur Pfals; Schütsenhaus), which now form an uninterrupted succession of manufactories and dwelling-houses, about 5 M. in length. The sister towns, which have risen to importance since the middle of last century, now contain 189,000 inhab. (Elberfeld 93,500: Barmen 95,900), and rank among the richest manufacturing towns on the continent. The chief products of their very numerous and extensive factories are cotton, calico, silk, ribbons. Turkey-red dved goods, soap, candles, and chemicals. Since the introduction of power-looms the value of the cotton and silk manufactures has risen to 130 million marks annually. For a description of the towns, see Baedeker's Rhine.

BRANCH BALLWAY FROM BARMEN to the manufacturing places Lensep, Remscheid, Hückeswagen, and Wipperfürth.
FROM ELBERFELD TO DÜSSELDORF by railway in 1 hr. (fares 2 m. 40, 1 m. 80, 1 m. 20 pl.). Stations Somborn, Volwinkel, Haan (see above), Hochdahl, Erkrath, Gerresheim, Düsseldorf; comp. p. 76, and see Baedsker's Rhine.

The line skirts the E. side of the valley of the Wupper. 30 M. Rittershausen. It then crosses the Wupper, quits the Duchy of Berg, and enters the County of Mark. The river anciently formed the boundary between Franconia and Saxony, and now separates the Rhine-land from Westphalia.

34 M. Schwelm (Rosenkranz), a town with 12,227 inhabitants. 361/2 M. Milspe. Pleasing view up the valley of the Ennepe, which the train crosses by embankments and a viaduct, 100 ft. in height, to (38 M.) Gevelsberg, a town consisting of a long row of detached houses. The stream turns the machinery of numerous small iron-works, where scythes, sickles, and shovels are largely manufactured. A kind of axe for felling the sugar-cane is also made here for exportation. At (41 M.) Haspe are extensive puddling-works and rolling-mills.

44 M. Hagen (*Lunenschloss, at the station; *Kaiserhof, Glitz, Voss, in the town), a flourishing manufacturing town with 26,295 inhab., is the junction of several railways, which diverge in all directions to the industrial valleys of the Ennepe, Volme, Lenne, and Ruhr. Railway to Siegen, see pp. 92, 93; to Witten and Dortmund, see p. 92.

The train crosses the Ruhr just below its confluence with the Lenne; to the left rises an abrupt hill with the tower of Hohensy-burg. 50 M. Westhofen.

53 M. Schwerte (Sternberg), a small town with 6057 inhab. and an extensive iron-foundry. The Romanesque church, altered in the early-Gothic period, contains a carved altar of 1523, and stainedglass windows of the 14th and 15th centuries. Schwerte is the junction for the line to Arnsberg, Scherfede, and Cassel (R. 6).

59 M. Holzwickede. 63 M. Unna (Deutscher Kaiser), a town of 7690 inhab., with salt-works, the junction for Hamm and Dortmund (R. 3). Königsborn, 3/4 M. to the N., is visited for its salt-springs. — 67 M. Hemmerde; 72 M. Werl, a resort of pilgrims;

761/2 M. Ostönnen.

81 M. Soest (*Overweg; Voswinkel), an old town with 13,985 inhab., in the fertile Soester Börde, lies on a road that was once the great commercial route between Saxony, Westphalia, and the Lower Rhine. It is mentioned in documents as early as the 9th cent., and afterwards became a fortified Hanseatic town of such importance that in 1447 it successfully repelled an attack by the Archbishop of Cologne with 60,000 men. It once possessed the most ancient and excellent municipal code in Germany (termed the 'Schraa'), which served as a model to many other towns in the 12th cent., and even to Lübeck. The town is still surrounded by broad walls: the moats have been converted into promenades. Of the ancient gates the Osthofenthor alone is preserved. The Romanesque Cathedral, founded by Bruno, brother of Otho the Great, in the 10th cent., dates in its present form from the 12th cent.: the mural paintings in the choir were executed about 1100, the stained glass about 1200. The Petrikirche contains paintings ascribed to Heinrich Aldegrever, and several Gothic chalices. The finest church. however, is the Gothic * Wiesenkirche ('St. Mary of the Meadow'). founded in 1314, completed in the following century, and restored in 1850-82. The picturesque apse should be observed. The N. aisle contains a fine altarpiece of 1473, with wings, and a curious embroidered altar-cloth of the beginning of the 14th century with a border of the 15th. The stained glass in the window (15th cent.) over the N. side-entrance represents the Last Supper, at which the Westphalian ham, the staple dish of the country, takes the place of the Paschal lamb.

Dringgelis, on the road to Arnsberg (p. 94), 41/2 M. to the S. of Soest, possesses a curious twelve-sided chapel of the middle of the 12th century. The road then traverses the pleasant Arnsberger Wald. From Soest to Arnsberg, 15 M., diligence twice daily.

From Soest To Hamm, 15 M., railway in 35-40 minutes. This line forms part of the direct route from Casel to Münster and Emden (p. 138). From Soest via Dortmund and Essen to Dusseldorf, see p. 76.

83 M. Sassendorf, with valuable salt-works; 89 M. Beninghausen, 95 M. Lippstadt (Köppelmann), a town with 9349 inhab., on the Lippe, which here becomes navigable. The extensive Marienkirche, built in 1189 and 1290, contains fine carved choirstalls. 102 M. Geseke; 106 M. Salzkotten.

117 M. Paderborn (Vereins-Hôtel, Lohmann, at the station; Löffelmann, Preussischer Hof, Westfälischer Hof, in the town), an ancient town with 14,689 inhab., where Charlemagne held a diet in 777, has been an episcopal see since 795 and a town since 1000.

The Cathedral, in the transition-style, has been repeatedly ravaged by fire; the W. part, with the handsome tower and the crypt, dates from about 1143, the E. portions from about 1263. The principal *Portal, on the S. side, is adorned with sculptures of New Testament subjects and scenes from German fables of animals.

INTERIOR. In the N. transept stands a finely-carved, late-Gothic altar of the 15th century. The choir contains the monuments and brasses of several bishops. In the treasury is the silver Reliquery of St. Liberius, a substitute for one carried off by Duke Christian of Brunswick in 1622, of substitute for one carried on by Duke Christian of Brunswick in 1022, of the silver of which he caused dollars to be coined, bearing the inscription, Gottes Freundt, der Pfaffen Feindt' (God's friend, the priests' foe). Other valuable objects of art are a portable alter of 1100, two silver chalices of the 12th and 15th cent., and silver statues of SS. Kilian and Liborius, executed in the 14th century. The Clotters contain numerous tombstones. Above the central window is a curious sculpture representing three hares with three ears only, but so placed that each appears to possess two.

The old and externally insignificant Chapel of St. Bartholomew in the vicinity, erected in 1017 by Italian builders, restored in 1852, contains dome-like vaulting, borne by slender columns. Beneath the cathedral and on its N. side the Pader takes its rise from 198 springs, which are so copious as to turn seven mills within 200 vards of their source. Hence the name of the town, Pader-Born. or 'source of the Pader'. The water is cold in summer, but in winter so warm as to give off steam. - The Busdorfkirche was originally erected on the model of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem; the present edifice dates from the 14th century. The choir contains a large Romanesque candelabrum, with seven branches. - The Jesuits' Church was built in the 17th century. - The Rathhaus, of 1473 and 1616, has recently been well restored.

The Inselbad (Curhaus), with mineral springs, used for vapour and other baths, is 3/4 M. from the Paderborn station.

From Paderborn a diligence runs several times daily in summer (in winter once daily) to Lippepringe (384 ft.; Old and New Curhaus; Concordia, open in summer only; Hôtel Wegener, R. & B. 2½ m., well spoken of; Krieger; Brackmann; Rath; Trentmann), situated 5½ M. to the N.E., which has recently become a frequented watering-place. It possesses a thermal spring (70° Fahr.), containing Glauber's salts, discovered in 1832, which is beneficial in the case of chest complaints and attracts upwards of 2000 visitors annually. The waters are used for baths, as well as drinking; there are also rooms for inhaling the steam, a whey-cure establishment, and pleasant grounds. Lippspringe is mentioned in history as the seat of three diets in the reign of Charlemagne (776, 880, 882). The sources of the Lippe burst copiously from the earth here at two places; one of these, 1/2 M. to burst copiously from the earth here at two places; one of these, '/2 m. to the N. of the Curhaus, was called the Jordan, in commemoration of the baptism of Charlemagne's Saxon converts; the other rises near the mineral spring, below the lofty ruins of the old castle, which was founded before 1310 by the Paderborn Chapter. — From Lippspringe by Schlangen to the Externateine (p. 78), 9 M.; from Schlangen the old high-road leads through fine avenues of oaks to Detmoid (p. 77).

The railway now crosses the Dune Viaduct, 237 yds. long and 84 ft. high, immediately beyond which is another, 528 yds. long and 114 ft. high, crossing the Beeke Valley. Near the railway is the Bullerborn, a spring, formerly intermittent, at which the exhausted soldiers of Charlemagne quenched their thirst in 772.

128 M. Altenbeken, the junction for Pyrmont and Hanover

(R. 12) and for Warburg and Cassel (R. 6).

133 M. Driburg (Brockmann). About 1/2 M. to the E. lies Bad Driburg, a watering-place which has attracted visitors for the last two centuries, in a healthy situation among wooded hills, with powerful chalybeate springs and good baths. The château of Count Sierstorpff, the owner of the place, contains a collection of pictures. Excursions may be made to (11/4 M.) the Iburg, (4 M.) Neuenheerse with an old abbey-church, etc.

140 M. Brakel (Robrecht; Meyer), a very ancient little town, with a Roland's column (p. 134). On a hill in the distance stands Schloss Hinnenburg, at the foot of which rises the Brakel mineral spring. From (146 M.) Otthergen a branch-line diverges to Carlshafen (p. 95) and Northeim (p. 106). 149 M. Godelheim.

153 M. Höxter (Schwiete; Goldschmidt), a venerable place, once a member of the Hanseatic League, with a Romanesque church (5186 inhab.). At the Brunsberg, 3 M. to the W., Charlemagne overthrew the Saxons in 775.

A double avenue of lime-trees leads from Höxter to (3/4 M.) Corvey, once the most celebrated Benedictine abboy in N. Germany, the abbot of which was of princely rank. It was founded in 816 by Louis the Pious, and was the cradle of Christianity in this district. It was suppressed in 1808, and now belongs to the Duke of Ratibor, Prince of Corvey. The castellated building, with its numerous towers, court, and church forms a large quadrangle. In the library, which is now dispersed, were found in 1514 the first five books of the Annals of Tacitus, which had been believed to be lost. The upper cloisters contain portraits of all the abbots. Pleasant excursion down the Valley of the Weser, on the left bank, to Polle (*König von Hannover), with a ruined castle; Bodenwerder (Traube); Kemnade, with an old church containing monuments; Hehlen, with a chateau of Count Schulenburg, of the 16th cent.; Grohnde, with Hagenohsen and an old château opposite; Ohr (p. 127); and Hameln (p. 126), about 28 M. from Höxter. Steamboat during the summer.

167 M. Stadt-Oldendorf: 171 M. Vorwohle, Beyond (179 M.)

Naensen the Leine is crossed.

185 M. Kreiensen (Railway Restaurant, D. 2 m.; Hôtel Maigatter, at the station), the junction of the Hanover and Cassel line (R. 7). 189 M. Gandersheim, an old town, formerly the seat of a nunnery founded about 844. Romanesque abbey-church, dating from 1172.

198 M. Seesen (*Kronprinz; Wilhelmsbad), one of the oldest places on the margin of the Harz Mts., founded in 974 by Emp. Otho II, and presented to the nunnery of Gandersheim. Railway to Nordhausen via Herzberg, see p. 372. - 2031/2 M. Neuekrug, the junction of a branch-line to Grauhof (p. 375) and Vienenburg (p. 371). At Lutter am Barenberge, % M. to the E. of (207 M.)
Lutter, Tilly gained a victory over Christian IV. of Denmark on 27th Aug. 1626.

211 M. Ringelheim, junction of a branch-line to Vienenburg and Hildesheim (p. 114). 214 M. Salzgitter, with saline springs.

2231/2 M. Börssum (Rail. Restaurant, D. 2 m.), the junction of the Brunswick and Harzburg line (p. 871). 233 M. Mattierzoll; Tramway every 10 min. from Neustads and Buckau along the Breite Weg to Sudenburg.

Magdeburg (165 ft.), the capital and seat of government of the Prussian province of Saxony, the headquarters of the 4th Corps of the army, and a fortress of the first rank, with 97,600 (includ. suburbs 137,200) inhab., is chiefly situated on the left bank of the Elbe, which is here divided into three arms. It consists of the town proper and the four suburbs of Sudenburg and Buckau to the S., Neustadt to the N., and Friedrichstadt to the E., on the right bank of the so-called Alte Elbe. Between the town and the lastnamed suburb lies the Werder, an island occupied by the Citadel, and connected with both banks by bridges. Since 1866 the town has been fortified with a series of advanced bastions instead of the old fortifications, and has thus obtained space for extending its formerly very narrow limits. A handsome new quarter has accordingly sprung up to the W. of the old town, containing the Theatre (Pl. 23; A, 4) by Luca, the Commercial and Industrial School (Pl. 20; A, 3), the School of Art (Pl. 14; C, 4), and the twin buildings of the Central Railway Station (Pl. A, 3, 4).

Magdeburg, one of the most important commercial towns in N. Germany, possesses numerous wool, cotton, sugar, spirit, tobacco, chocolate, chicory, and other manufactories, and is conveniently situated at the junction of numerous railways (to Berlin, Hamburg, Bremen, Hanover, Brunswick, and Leipsic).

Magdeburg, which was founded as a commercial settlement at the beginning of the 9th cent., is chiefly indebted for its early prosperity to Emp. Otho the Great (936-978) and his consort Editha (p. 88) who founded a Benedictine monastery here in 987. In 967 the town was raised to the rank of an archiepiscopal see, to which an ample jurisdiction and the primacy of Germany were annexed. In the 15th-15th cent. Magdeburg was a flourishing and powerful commercial place, with supremacy over an extensive territory, and a member of the Hanseatic League. The turbulent citizens gradually threw off the archiepiscopal yoke, and towards the close of the 15th cent. compelled the prelates generally to reside elsewhere. As early as 1524 they eagerly esponsed the cause of the Reformation. During the Thirty Years' War Magdeburg suffered terribly. In 1629 it successfully resisted the attacks of Wallenstein during seven months, but was taken by storm by Tilly in 1631, and almost wholly destroyed. Otto you Guericke, the inventor of the air-pump, was at that period the burgomaster of the town. After the Reformation the see was presided over by three Protestant archibishops, and at length in 1680 became incorporated with the March of Brandenburg.

The Repursu Warg, the principal business-street of Magdeburg

The Breite Weg, the principal business-street of Magdeburg, intersects the town from N. to S., from the Krökenthor to the Sudenburger Thor, and contains numerous handsome shops. The houses in it date mostly from the 17th century. The inscription on No. 146, 'Gedenke des 10. Mai 1631', is a reminiscence of the capture of the town by Tilly. — The sculptures in the pediment of the handsome Reichs-Bank, in the Grosse Münz-Str. (Pl. B, 3), were taken from the old house of Otto von Guericke (d. 1686; see above).

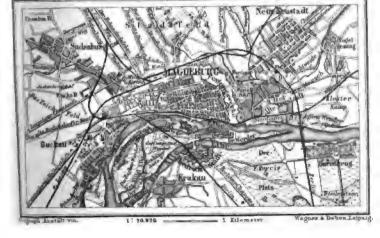

The *Cathedral (Pl. 6; B, C, 5), or Church of SS. Maurice and Catharine, a noble and massive structure, was erected in 1208-1363 on the site of the ancient Benedictine church, which had been burned down. The towers were completed about 1520, and the whole edifice restored under Frederick William III. The rich W. portal is worthy of inspection. The older parts, especially in the choir, which with its retro-choir and series of chapels recall the French style of building, still in many instances show the round arch, while the more modern parts are in the fully developed pointed style. Length 230 yds., breadth of nave 35 yds., height of N. tower 337 ft. The S. tower has been left without a spire. View from the gallery (166 steps) almost equal to that from the tower itself (438 steps). The sacristan (1 m.) lives in the handsome adjoining Cloisters, half Romanesque, half Gothic (13th and 14th cent.), with old sgraffito embellishments. The large bell weighs 13 tons.

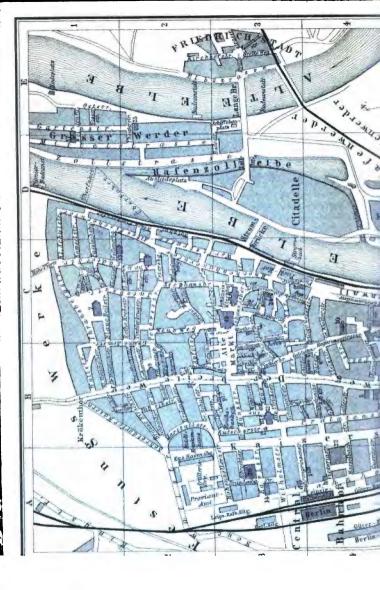

In the chapel beneath the towers is the "Monument of Archb. Ernest, one of the earlier works of the celebrated P. Vischer of Nuremberg, completed in 1497; on the sarcophagus reclines the archbishop, on the sides are the Twelve Apostles, two saints, and a variety of decorations. — Beneath a simple marble slab in the choir reposes the Emp. Otho I. (d. 973); behind the high-altar his consort Estitus (d. 947), daughter of Edmund of England; monument probably of the 14th century. Adjoining it an ancient baptistery. The church contains numerous other monuments of the 16th and 17th cent. of inferior interest. Pulpit in alabaster, 1697. Modern stained-glass windows. Figures on the S. side of the choir of SS. Innocent, Maurice, and John, said to date from the 10th, those of SS. Peter, Paul, and Andrew from the 13th century. Fine carved stalls of the 14th century. Tilly's helmet, marshal's staff, and gloves, and an indulgence-chest of the notorious Tetzel are also shown. Near the last is a large candelabrum, cast in 1494, probably by Peter Vischer. Fine view of the nave from the episcopal gallery in the choir.

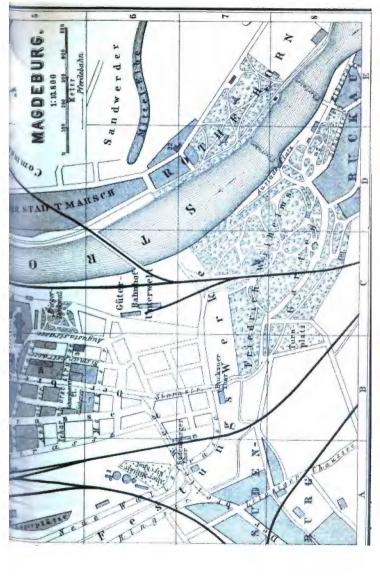

A little to the N. of the cathedral rises the Liebfrauenkirche

(Pl. 10; B, 4) or Church of our Lady, most of which is in the Romanesque style of the 12-13th centuries. The Romanesque cloisters and the abbey-buildings have been converted into a school.

In the ALTENMARKY, in front of the Bathhaus, rises the *Menument of Otho L (Pl. 1; C, 3), an equestrian figure on a pedestal 18½ ft. in height, erected by the municipality at the close of the 13th cent., and judiciously restored in 1858. At the corners are the Duke of Saxony, the Margrave of Brandenburg, and two other figures in armour. Beside the emperor are two allegorical female figures, one bearing a shield, the other a banner. The statues are all in sandstone and of life-size.

The adjoining Platz near the Hauptwache contains a bronze Statue of Francke (d. 1851; Pl. 2), burgomaster of Magdeburg.

The *Fürstenwall (Pl. C, 4, 5; Restaurant Belvedere), on the Elbe, is a favourite walk. Below it are casemates. At the W. end are a handsome terrace and pleasure-grounds, embellished with a War Monument. The terrace commands a fine view of Buckau, etc.

The Friedrich-Wilhelmsgarten (Pl. B, O, 7, 8) includes the grounds of the once celebrated Kloster Bergen. The eminence on which the latter once stood is now occupied by a restaurant with ballrooms, etc. A memorial stone records that the monastery was founded in 937, suppressed in 1810, and destroyed in 1812. On the S. side lies the manufacturing town of Buckau (p. 87), with numerous villas and gardens.

On the Werder (Pl. D, E, 1, 2) are situated the Victoria Theatre (Pl. 25) and a number of pleasure-resorts, such as the Odeon (Pl. 17) and Schützenhaus (Pl. 22).

On the right bank of the Elbe, 2 M. below Magdeburg, lies the Herrenkrug (steamers in the afternoon, Sun. from 7 a.m., 30 pf.), on the left bank the Vogelsang (tramway), both favourite resorts, with pleasant grounds.

The country between Magdeburg and Brandenburg is uninteresting. 277 M. Neustadi-Magdeburg. The train crosses the Elbe and reaches (280 M.) Biederits and (282 M.) Gerwisch.

325 M. Brandenburg (Schwarzer Bär; Schwarzer Adler), a dull town with broad streets and 29,000 inhab., lies on the Havel, which here forms a broad lake called the Plauesche See, and divides the town into the Altstadt, Neustadt, and Dominsel. Brandenburg occupies the site of Brennabor, a stronghold of the Slavonic Hevelli, which was taken by Emp. Henry I. in 927. It afterwards again fell into the hands of the Wends, but was taken in 1153 by Albert the Bear, Count of Askanien, who thenceforth styled himself Margrave of Brandenburg. The town was the seat of an episcopal see from 949 to 1544, and was long the chief place in the province, but was obliged at length to yield this rank to the more modern city on the Spree (comp. p. 15). Several interesting old buildings still exist.

From the station (Pl. C, D, 5) we proceed by the Schützen-Strasse, Annenthor-Brücke, and the St. Annen-Strasse to the Rathhaus (Pl. C, 3), dating from the 14th cent., but modernised and disfigured in the 18th. Near it stands a Roland (see p. 134), 18 ft. in height. Opposite rises the *Church of St. Catharine, a Gothic brick edifice, erected in 1381-1402, containing a fine old altar in carved wood of 1474, recently gilded and painted, an interesting font in bronze, of 1440, and several monuments. Fine perforated enrichments of the exterior worthy of inspection. — We next cross the Molkenmarkt and the Molkendamm, passing the early-Gothic Petrikirche (Pl. D, 2; 14th cent.), and reach the — Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul (Pl. D, 2), a late-Romanesque basilica, erected in 1170-1318, with a crypt in the transition-style, completed before 1235. The edifice was restored by Schinkel in 1836. It contains a good altarpiece on a gold ground, of 1465, by an unknown master. The tombstones which once covered the pavement are now built into the walls. Modern stained-glass windows.

The Grillendamm (Pl. D, 1) leads hence to the Altstadt, where the Church of St. Godehard (Pl. B, 1), partly Romanesque of 1164, and partly Gothic of 1348, the old Rathhaus (Pl. 2; B, 2), now a court of justice, dating from the 13th and 14th cent., and the new Commercial School (Pl. 12) are the most interesting buildings.—To the S.W. of the Altstadt is the Romanesque Nicolaikirche (Pl. A, 3), of the 12th and 13th centuries.

Fine view from the Marienberg (Pl. A, 1), an eminence (200 ft.) to the N.W. of the town, on which rises a tower designed by the architect Stier, and finished in 1880. This monument, 114 ft. in height, and adorned with reliefs by Siemering and Calandrelli, was erected to the memory of about 4000 Brandenburgers who fell in the wars of 1864, 66, 70, 71, and whose names it bears.

The first station beyond Brandenburg is (334 M.) Gross-Kreuts, from which a diligence runs thrice daily to (71/2 M.) Lehnin, with the fine church of the old abbey of Himmelpfort, founded in 1180 and restored in 1871-79. From Lehnin another diligence runs daily to Potsdam. — 341 M. Werder. As we approach Potsdam we obtain a fine view of the Havel, which the line crosses.

347 M. Potsdam, and thence to (364 M.) Berlin, see R. 2.

5. From Duisburg to Hagen and Siegen by Langendreer.

105 M. RAILWAY to Hagen in 2 hrs. (fares 5 m. 20, 3 m. 90, 2 m. 70 pf.); thence to Siegen in 3½ hrs. (fares 8 m. 50, 6 m. 40, 4 m. 30 pf.). The line at first traverses the Westphatian Coal-Measures, which are among the most productive in the world, extending to the E. from the Bhine as far as Unna and Camen, about 32 M. in length and 9-14 M. in width, and yielding 10-12 million tons of coal annually. The innumerable chimneys on both sides of the line testify to the enormous industrial activity of the district. The population is very dense, frequently averaging 1800 per Engl. sq. mile. The produce of the mines, manufactories, foundries, etc., is conveyed in different directions by numerous railways, forming a dense negwork without navalled in Germany. Comp. the Man. 9.80 ing a dense network without parallel in Germany. Comp. the Map, p. 82.

Duisburg, see p. 74. — 5 M. Mülheim an der Ruhr (Hôtel Middendorf), a prettily-situated town of 22.146 inhab., the junction of several railways.

As Essen is approached we gain a view to the left of Krupp's Cast Steel Works, a vast establishment of world-wide celebrity. covering an area of 63 acres. The tallest (220 ft.) of the numerous chimneys belongs to a huge steam-hammer. 50 tons in weight. The factory, to which visitors are not admitted, employs 11,000 workmen and supplies many railway and steamboat-companies in Europe and other parts of the world with rails, wheels, etc., and several of the great powers of Europe with iron and steel guns.

12 M. Essen (Essener Hof; Berliner Hof; Höltgen; Deutscher Hof: Rhein. Hof), a town with 57,000 inhab., founded at the end of the 9th century. Being the central point of a great coal-mining district, where about 850,000 tons of coals are raised annually, it has increased rapidly within the last few years (in 1854 there were 10,488 inhab. only), and is surrounded by lofty chimneys in every direction. An extensive and rapidly increasing iron-industry has recently sprung up in consequence of the abundant supply of fuel.

The *Münsterkirche, founded by Bishop Alfred of Hildesheim, and consecrated in 873, is one of the most ancient churches in Germany. The W. choir, with an octagon resembling that of the cathedral of Aix-la-Chapelle, dates from the 10th cent.; the nave was completed in 1316, the E. choir in 1445. The interior was restored in 1855, and the exterior more recently. The treasury contains several curious Romanesque works of art of the 10th century. The handsome cloisters date from the 11th and 12th centuries.

The Roman Catholic Gertrudiskirche and the Protestant Pauluskirche are two handsome modern edifices in the Gothic style.

Essen is also a station on the Rhenish Railway from Düsseldorf to Dortmund (p. 76), and on the Cologne-Minden Railway (Altenessen; see p. 75).

16 M. Steele (Badenberg), an old town on the Ruhr, is surrounded by coal-works (pop. 7214). The station is at Königsteele (Lindemann), 1 M. from the town. Branch-railway to Vohwinkel, see p. 82.

FROM STEELE TO HERDECKE, 22 M., railway in 1 hr. (fares 2 m. 70, 2 m., FROM STERLE TO HERDECKE, 22 M., railway in 1 hr. (tares 2 m. (0,2 m., a) m. 40 pf.). The line ascends the picturesque and winding valley of the Ruhr, crossing the stream frequently. 2½ M. Dahlhausen. — 5½ M. Hattingen (Westfälischer Hof), a prettily-situated old town, once fortified. View from the Isenberg (½ hr.). — 10 M. Blankenstein (Petring), one of the finest points in the valley; pleasing view from the Gethmann'sche Garten (open to the public; entrance by Petring's Inn). Farther on, the ruined Hardenstein lies to the right of the line. — 18½ M. Volmarstein (Webberg), on a wooded height on the left bank, commanding a splendid view, with a wired castle. Opposite lies Watter. 22 M. Herdecke case helow. a ruined castle. Opposite lies Wetter. 22 M. Herdecke, see below.

22 M. Bochum (*Mettegang; Hemmer; Kaiserlicher Hof), an increasing place with 33,440 inhab., possesses very extensive caststeel works and several large factories and foundries.

26 M. Langendreer, where the line diverges from that to Marten and Dortmund (p. 76).

29 M. Witten (*Voss; Dünnebacke, near the station), an industrial town with 21,554 inhab., pleasantly situated on the Ruhr. The train ascends the valley on the right bank, and Volmarstein (see above) is seen opposite.

34 M. Wetter, picturesquely situated on a height, with a ruined castle. The train crosses the river and skirts the Kaisberg, where Charlemagne is said to have once encamped; the tower on the top was erected in 1869 as a monument to the minister Baron Stein.

36 M. Herdecke, a town with 3790 inhab., opposite the influx of the Volme into the Ruhr. The valley is here crossed by the imposing viaduct of the Rhenish line from Düsseldorf to Dortmund (p. 76).

About 4 M. to the N. of Herdecke rises the "Hohen-Syburg, one of the Ardey Mts., with a tower 90 ft. in height, erected in 1857 in memory of Baron Vincke, President of Westphalia (d. 1844). The hill is said to have once been a stronghold of the Saxon duke Wittekind and to have been once been a stronguou of the parent duke whitekind and to have been acaptured by Charlemagne; and there is an unfounded tradition that Wittekind was baptised in the Petersbrunnen on its slope (comp. p. 79; the baptism really took place at Attigny in France). The ruined castle is of later mediæval origin. The Hohen-Syburg may also be reached from Löttinghausen, Kabel (see below), or Westhofen in ²/₄ hr.

39 M. Hagen, the junction of several railways; see p. 83.

The Ruhr-Siegbahn from Hagen to Siegen connects the busy and picturesque valley of the Lenne with the coal-measures of the Ruhr. - 44 M. Kabel.

50 M. Hohenlimburg (*Bentheimer Hof; Gerhardi), a prettily situated town with 5267 inhab., is commanded by the château of Prince Bentheim on a precipitous wooded height. *View from the top.

52 M. Letmathe (Titz), with 4028 inhabitants. Large zincfoundry near the station.

FROM LETMATHE TO ISERLOHN, 33/4 M., by a branch-line in 10-18 min. (fares 60, 50, 30 pf.). Stat. Dechenhöhle, see below.

Iserlohn (Sander; Higers), with 18,811 inhab. (5990 Rom. Cath.), is one of the most important manufacturing places in Westphalia, the chief products being iron and bronze wares, needles, and wire. Extensive trade. The picturesque environs are crowded with factories of every kind. The adjacent cadmia mines are also of some importance. Near the station is the Alexanderhöhe, a place of popular resort, whence a pleasant walk, commanding admirable views, may be taken along the Culturueg. - From Iserlohn to Hemer and Fröndenberg, see p. 93.

At the Grane (Inn), part of the valley of the Lenne between Iser-lohn and Letmathe, rise two detached rocks styled the 'Pater' and the 'Nonne', near which is the Grürmannshöhle, a cavern containing numerous fossil bones.

On the railway (see above), 10 min. to the E. of the Grune, is situated the highly-interesting Dechenkehle, a stalactite cavern discovered in 1868 (tickets of admission, 75 pf. each, at the station), lighted with gas, and extending about 800 yds. into the hill.

Pleasant route from Iserlohn to Menden (10 M., see below), or to Arnsberg (21 M.). The road leads to the E. to (31/2 M.) Sundwig, with an interesting stalactite grotto, in which bones of antedituvian animals have been found. On the hill (10 min.) is the Felsenmeer, a basin containing groups of rocks interspersed with trees. From Sundwig we proceed either by the high-road or by a footpath to the (3 M.) Klusenstein, a very picturesque ruin, with farm-buildings, rising precipitously above the wild valley of the Hönne. From this point down the valley of the Hönne to Mendon (rail. stat., see below), 1 hr., passing the Schiebelquelle, a clear and copious spring on the left. Or we may follow the high-road in the valley from Klusenstein to (3 M.) Sanssouci, a good inn, where the Hönne is quitted (about 1½ M. farther is the Balver Höhle, a large cave with numerous fossils). Thence over the hill to (6 M.) Hacken on the Röhr, from which a path (guide necessary) crosses the hills to Arnsberg in 2 hrs. (p. 94).

58 M. Altena (Klincke; Quitmann) is a picturesquely-situated little town, with the ancestral Schloss of the Counts von der Mark, which commands a good prospect. Pop. 8787. The red turreted building on the way to the Schloss contains a Local Museum (adm. 25 pf.). The grounds on the hills to the S. of the Schloss afford beautiful views. - 64 M. Werdohl; 69 M. Plettenberg; 77 M. Finnentrop, whence a branch-line diverges to the small town of Olpe (Deutscher Kaiser), with iron-foundries, and to Rothemühle. -81 M. Grevenbrück: 85 M. Altenhundem (Post; *Plücker), with blast-furnaces. At (92 M.) Welschen-Ennest the watershed of the Rahrbacher Höhe (1312 ft.) is penetrated by means of a tunnel, beyond which the train passes Kreuzthal, Geisweid, and Haardt, and reaches - 105 M. Siegen (*Goldner Löwe, R., A., & B. 3 m.; *Deutscher Kaiser), a busy old mining town (15,000 inhab.), with two castles of the Princes of Nassau-Siegen who became extinct in 1743. Rubens was born here (1577, d. 1640) while his parents were living in exile from Antwerp, their native place. Comp. also Baedeker's Rhine.

At Betsdorf the line unites with the Cologne and Giessen railway (see Baedeker's Rhine).

6. From Cologne to Cassel via Arnsberg.

168 M. RAILWAY in 69/4-81/4 hrs. (22 m. 50, 16 m. 95, 11 m. 20 pf.). Journey to (53 M.) Schwerte, the junction for Soest and Altenbeken, see R. 4. Then (59 M.) Langschede. 61 M. Fröndenberg, with an abbey-church of Cistercian nuns, begun in 1230, containing monuments of 1293 and 1308.

A branch-line runs from Fröndenberg to Menden (Beiderlinden) and Hemer, whence a diligence plies four times daily in 11/4 hr. to Iserlohn (p. 92; railway in progress). Pleasant walk from Menden to Iserlohn, see above. 65 M. Wickede, with iron-works; 72 M. Neheim-Hüsten, where the Möhne falls into the Ruhr. Schloss Herdringen, 3/4 M. to the W., erected by Zwirner, the late talented architect of the Cathedral of Cologne, is the seat of Count Fürstenberg, the owner of some exquisite goldsmith's work by Meister Anton Eisenhoidt of Warburg (1585-1618). Near Arnsberg the train passes through a tunnel below the Schlossberg.

78½ M. Arnsberg (*Husemann; Weipert), once the capital of the ancient Duchy of Westphalia, with 6131 inhab., is prettily situated on a height skirted by the Ruhr. The hill, crowned with the ruins of a castle which fell to decay after the Seven Years' War, commands a charming prospect. Another excellent point of view is the Eichholz, a beautiful park on the S. side of the town. At the foot of the hill is the former Præmonstratensian abbey of Weddinghausen.

The winding river is crossed five times between Arnsberg and Meschede. 80 M. Oeventrop; 84 M. Wennemen. Then two tunnels. Pleasing scenery. On the right near Meschede is Schloss Lacr, the property of Count Westfalen, above which rises a wooded hill crowned with a belvedere.

90 M. Meschede (Schäffer; Gerken), an ancient town with 2861 inhab., prettily situated on the Ruhr, was once the seat of a nunnery founded in the 9th cent.. with a late-Gothic church.

On the hill to the left of (92 M.) Eversberg are the village and ruin of that name. To the S. of (94 M.) Bestwich-Nuttlar opens the wooded valley of Ramsbeck, containing lead and silver mines. 98 M. Olsberg. The train ascends a steep incline; fine view to the right. On the hill to the right are the gigantic Bruchhauser Steine. The train now quits the Ruhr and penetrates the watershed between the Rhine and Weser by a long tunnel.

103 M. Stat. Brilon is 4½ M. from the town of that name (Lohmann; Westfälischer Hof; Teuto), one of the most ancient in Germany, mentioned as early as the year 973. It possesses a large Romanesque church with a late-Gothic choir and a huge tower; the sculptures on the N. portal are Romanesque (1150).

The line then descends the narrow and picturesque Hoppke-Thal. Beyond (109 M.) Messinghausen it passes through the Beringhauser Tunnel. Near (114 M.) Bredelar, which is prettily situated, are extensive iron-works, established in an old Cistercian monastery. Below Bredelar the Hoppke falls into the Diemel, an affluent of the Weser, and the train now descends the Diemelthal.

119 M. Nieder-Marsberg (Post), with a large lunatic asylum, lies at the foot of a hill, on which is situated the old town of Stadtberge or Ober-Marsberg, once a strong fortress, but destroyed during the Thirty Years' War. This was the site of the ancient Saxon fortress Eresburg, near which stood the most celebrated of the columns dedicated to the Germanic deity Irmin (comp. p. 116). The fort and column were destroyed by Charlemagne in 772. That emperor also founded here the first Saxon church. The abbey-church of St. Peter dates in its present form from the 12th and 13th centuries. In front of it stands a Roland's Column (p. 134). The large church of St. Nicholas is an interesting early-Gothic structure.

121 M. Westheim. 130 M. Scherfede (Railway Restaurant, D. 2 m.), the junction of the railway to Holzminden.

FROM SCHERFEDE TO HOLZMINDEN, 30 M., railway in 11/4-2 hrs. (fares 4 m., 3 m., 2 m.). 6 M. Eissen; 111/2 M. Borgholz; 181/2 M. Beversnen. At (22 M.) Wehrden, with an old château of Baron Wolf-Metternich, the train crosses the Weser. 251/2 M. Fürstenberg, with a château of the 16th cent., the station for Hoxter, on the left bank of the Weser (p. 86). 30 M. Holzminden, see p. 36.

The first station beyond Scherfede is (136 M.) Warburg (Hôtel zum Desemberge; Todt), an ancient and once powerful Hanseatic town (4592 inhab.), picturesquely situated on an eminence on the Diemel. Several interesting Gothic churches. To the left rises a conical hill, surmounted by the ruins of the Desemberg, which has belonged to the Spiegel family since 1310.

Diligence from Warburg (15 M.) twice daily, from Scherfede (see above; 131/2 M.) once daily, and from Nieder-Marsberg (p. 94; 121/2 M.) once daily to Arelsen (Waldecker Hof), with 2477 inhab., charmingly situated, the seat of Prince Waldeck, father-in-law of Prince Leopold of England (Duke of Albany), with a valuable collection of antiquities from Herculaneum and Pompeii. Bauch (1777-1857), the celebrated sculptor, and Kaulbach (1805-74), the no less distinguished painter, were both born at Arolsen. The Church contains three statuettes in marble by the former.

valley of the Diemel. 142 M. Liebenau; 150 M. Hümme,

FROM HUMBE TO CARLSHAPEN, 10 M., branch-railway towards the N. in ³/₄ hr. (fares 1 m. 40, 1 m. 10, 70 pf.). 2½ M. Trendelburg, on the Diemel, 4½ M. from which is the châcau of Sababurg, a shooting residence with a deer-park. 7½ M. Helmarshausen, commanded by the ruins of the Krušenburg. 10 M. Oarlshafen ("Schwan), a small town prettily situated at the influx of the Diemel into the Weser. It was founded in 1704 by the Landgrave Karl, in order to provide his dominions with a harbour on the Weser. Fine view from the (10 min.) Juliushühe (tavern).—Steamboats from Carlshafen to Hameln (p. 126) and Münden (p. 105) in summer. Carlshafen is also a station on the line from Northeim to Otthergen (p. 106).

154 M. Hofgeismar (Schwarzer Adler; Deutscher Kaiser), a small watering-place with a mineral spring. 158 M. Grebenstein, with ancient watch-towers and a ruin on the Burgberg. To the S. in the background rise the Dörnberg and Wilhelmshöhe. 163 M. Mönchehof; 1½ M. to the W., in a beautiful park, lies Wilhelmsthal, formerly a château of the Elector of Hessen, built in 1760, containing handsome rococo decorations and many pictures by Tischbein.

168 M. Cassel. — Hotels. Near the Station: *Hôtel du Nord (Pl. b; C, 2), R., L., & A. from 2, D. 3, B. 1 m.; *Hôtel Royal (Pl. a; C, 2), R., L., & A. from 2 m., with restaurant, both opposite the station; *Prinz Friedrich Wilkelm (Pl. a; C, 2), with garden-restaurant, in the Friedr. Principal Attractions: Picture Gallery (p. 98), Museum (p. 97), walk through the Auegarten (p. 102), excursion to Wilhelmshöhe (p. 108).

Cassel (492 ft.), an important railway-centre, formerly the capital of the Electorate of Hessen, and now the seat of government of the Prussian province of Hessen-Nassau, and headquarters of the eleventh Prussian Corps d'Armée, lies on the Fulda, which separates the Altstadt and Ober-Neustadt from the small Unter-Neustadt. The town, which was formerly remarkable for the dullness peculiar to the capital of a small principality, has assumed a busier and more prosperous aspect since its annexation to Prussia in 1866. Pop. (1864) 35,980; (1880) 58,290. Several new and handsome streets have recently been erected near the station.

From the station the short Museums-Strasse leads to the FRIRD-RICH-WILHELMS-PLATZ (Pl. C, D, 2), in the middle of which is the Löwenbrunnen, an ornamental fountain by Schneider, erected in 1881, with figures of the rivers Werra, Fulda, Lahn, and Edder by Echtermeyer. To the S.W. of this square is the STÄNDE-PLATZ (Pl. C, 3), with its double avenue of limes, in which are the Standehaus (House of the Estates; Pl. 11), built in 1836, and the Kunsthaus (Hall of Art; Pl. 5; see above). — From the Friedrich-Wilhelms-Platz the Kölnische-Strasse leads E. to the Königsplatz (Pl. D. E, 2, 3), containing the Post Office, the Government Offices (Pl. 9), and the above-mentioned hotels. The Königsplatz is the startingpoint of the tramway to Wilhelmshöhe. — A little to the N. E., in the Martins-Platz, rises the Protestant Church of St. Martin (Pl. 6; E, 2), in the Gothic style, with nave of the 14th and choir of the beginning of the 15th cent., judiciously restored in 1842. Sacristan. Hohenthor-Str. 18.

CHOIR. The Meanment of Philip the Generous (d. 1567) and his wife, erected by their son William IV., in black marble with white reliefs and profuse gilding, occupies the place of the high-altar. The Monument of the Landgrave Morite, in coloured marble, was erected in 1662; opposite to it a monument in bronze, with a likeness of the Landgravine Christina (d. 1549). — The Tower (230 ft.) overlooks the town and the environs as far as Wilhelmshöhe. Visitors ring at a small door to the right of the W. portal.

The OBERE KÖNIGS-STRASSE (Pl. D, C, 3, 4), which leads to the S.W. from the Königsplatz, is the chief business street of the town. It passes the Friedrichs-Platz (see below), the Opern-Platz (see below), and the Mess-Plats (Pl. C, D, 4), containing the Rathhaus and a bronze bust of Burgomaster Schomburg, and terminates at the Rondel (Pl. C, 4), by the Wilhelmshöher-Thor.

The spacious Friedrichs-Flatz (Pl. D, E, 3, 4), situated between the Altstadt and the Ober-Neustadt, is 335 yds. long and 165 yds. wide. It is bounded on the E. by the old electoral Palace (Pl. 10), which was built in 1769, and united with the Rothe Palais' in 1821; by the Museum Fridericianum (see below) with its projecting portico, the Royal Military School, and the Roman Catholic Church, erected in 1770-76. In the centre rises the Statue of the Landgrave Frederick II., a prince who in 1776-84 sent 12,000 of his subjects to aid the English in America in consideration of a sum of 22 million dollars.—The N.W. part of the Friedrichs-Platz, on the other side of the Obere Königs-Strasse, is named the OPERN-PLATZ. Here stands the Theatre (Pl. 3), in front of which a statue of Louis Spohr, who was conductor of the orchestra at Cassel from 1822 to 1859, was erected in 1883.

The S. side is terminated by the handsome Anether (Pl. E, 4), which was built in the reign of Frederick II., and enlarged in 1824. It is embellished with two bronze *Reliefs by Siemering (the farewell and return of the warriors), placed here in commemoration of the victories in 1870-71, and crowned with a large eagle by Brandt. From this point we obtain a fine view of the Carlsaue (p. 102), the valley of the Fulda, and the distant hills, of which the Meisner (p. 396) to the left is the most prominent. From the lower end of the Friedrichs-Platz we observe towards the N.E. the large new Law Courts and Government Offices, occupying the site of the Kattenburg, with the materials of which the new Picture Gallery was erected.

The *Museum Fridericianum (Pl. 7), erected in 1769-79 by the Landgrave Frederick II., contains a collection of ancient sculptures, plaster-casts, coins, historical relics, and objects of natural history. Admission gratis, Mon. and Thurs. 10-1, and in summer Tues. and Sat. also, 3-5 (entrance in summer by the principal portal, in winter at the back, through the court); at other times on application to the custodian, who lives in the little house by the S.E. passage at the back of the museum. Catalogue 60 pf.

We now return to through Room IV. to Room VI., which contains the Collection of Casts, arranged in chronological order. The general designation Room VI. includes the adjacent corridors, the rotunds at the back of the building, and two rooms to the left of the Hall of the Founders (see above).

The NATURAL HISTORY COLLECTIONS occupy rooms VII-XII., of which four are on the ground-floor, while the last two are on the first. The botanical collection boasts of the oldest herbarium in Germany, formed in 1556-82, and a collection of different woods in the form of books.—

XIII. Armoury (on the second floor). Old weapons, goblets, trinkets, hunting accourtements, models of buildings and ships, historical curiosities.

The Library (open daily, 10-1), occupying a large hall on the first floor of the building, in front, contains 145,000 wils, and 1500 MSS. (e. g. the oldest MS. of the 'Hildebrandshed', 9th cent.), Jacob and William Grimm were librarians here for about 15 years.

From the S.W. side of the Friedrichs-Platz runs the BELLEVUE-STRASSE (Pl. D, 4, 5), which commands a view of the Carlsaue and the valley of the Fulda. The large Bellevue-Schloss (Pl. 1), the residence of King Jerome in 1811-13, is now that of the general of the 11th Corps d'Armée, and the seat of the Academy of Arts.

At the end of the street rises the *Picture Gallery, an extensive Renaissance edifice with two corner-pavilions and a loggia in front of the principal story, erected in 1871-77 from plans by Dehn-Rotfelser. The main entrance, at the N.E. end, is flanked with statues of Rubens and Rembrandt; in front is a bust of E. von Möller (d. 1882), the first Prussian governor of Hessen. The plastic embellishments are by Hassenpflug, Echtermeyer, and Brandt. The first floor, reached by a staircase of marble, contains the valuable collection of pictures, in 4 large saloons and 20 cabinets. Admission free: Sun. 11-1, Tues., Wed., Frid., & Sat. 10-1; in summer on Mon. and Thurs. also, 3-5; at other times on application to the custodian. Catalogue 50 pf.

The Cassel Gallery was founded by the Landgrave William VIII., who, when governor of Friesland in the early part of last century, availed himself of that opportunity to collect a number of Dutch pictures, and after his return to Germany caused others to be purchased for him by his agents at Amsterdam and Hamburg. It is not known when or by whom the Italian pictures were brought to Cassel, but the gallery, though distributed throughout several different buildings, was more complete during the second half of last century than at present, as several of its gems were taken to Paris by the Brench in 1806 and not all restored after the second Peace of Paris. Moreover several important works, such as Potter's Bull, Rembrandt's Descent from the Cross, and Claude Lorrain's landscapes were purchased by the Emperor Alexander and sent to St. Petersburg, where they now grace the Eremitags. Many of the pictures recovered from the French were deposited at Wilhelmshöhe, where they were long withdrawn from public exhibition, while those preserved at the Believue Falace were not easily accessible; that these difficulties have been removed since the Frusslan occupation.

Among the best Italian works in the gallery is a fine portrait by Titton (No. 26), painted about 1550. The gallery also possesses a richly-coloured Family of Darias by Paglo Vergness (No. 89; a small replice of the famous picture in the National Gallery at London), and a vigerous Timoretto (No. 70).

Among the early-German pictures we may mention the Ursula Hans Tucherin (No. 16) and Elsbeth Tucherin (No. 7), both by Michael Wohlgemuth, the latter of which was once ascribed to Dürer, while several pictures were also erroneously catalogued as Holbein's. The best of the six paintings by Cranach is his Diana or Nymph (No. 10), resembling a composition by Dürer.

The Flemish and Dutch departments contain numerous gems. The Enthroned Madonna with saints by Rubens (No. 187), obviously composed under Venetian influence, the portraits by Van Dyck (Nos. 290-304), a family-piece by the rare Antwerp master Gonzales Coques (No. 458, Young scholar and his wife), and the Barber's Shop by David Teniers the Younger (No. 404) are all specimens of the golden era of the Flemish school, - In works by Hals and Rembrandt, Holland's two greatest masters, the Cassel gallery is probably the richest in Germany, possessing seven pictures by the former and apwards of twenty by the latter. Among those of FRANS HALS, the master of Haarlem, the following deserve special notice. His Laughing Peasant (No. 222) and above all the Cavalier with the broad-brimmed hat (No. 226, a late work) afford admirable specimens of his humorous and dashing style. His Two young musicians (No. 223) and the postraits of a Dutch gentleman and his wife (Nos. 224, 225) also display the master's individuality, but are comparatively tame in execution. Of REMBRANDT's pictures the most striking is his Jacob blessing the sons of Joseph (No. 367), painted in 1656, a marvel of artistic skill and profound religious sentiment. The Woodcutter's Family (the Madonna with the Infant Christ in the foreground, and Joseph splitting wood in the background; No. 366) shows how familiar the master was with idyllic subjects. Among the portraits both of the master's earlier and later period the palm is carried off by one of Saskia, the happy young wife of the painter (No. 356), dating from 1634. To the same period belongs a portrait of the master himself in a helmet (No. 357). The old heads, Nos. 348, 355, 362, and 365, date from 1630-32. Coppendi, the writing-master (No. 358), and Krul, the poet (No. 351), were also painted soon after Rembrandt's removal from Leyden to Amsterdam (1630). To his later period (1655-58) belong the socalled Six (No. 364), the Spear-bearer (No. 370), his own portrait (No. 360), and that of Nicholas Bruynink (No. 359). The Standard-bearer (No. 371) is a copy. Rembrandt's landscapes, particularly the Mountain and the Winter scene (Nos. 372, 368), are also well worthy of inspection. - The following Dutch masters are also admirably represented: Ph. Wouverman (No. 478, Harvest wain), Adr. Brouwer (No. 380, Card-players), Jan Steen (No. 576, Bean-festival: 575, Carousal), Adr. van Ostade, Metsu, and Terburg (No. 384, Lute-player). - The pictures belonging to the Habich COLLECTION, which has been lent to the gallery for 10 years, are distinguished in the following list by the letter (H).

The busts of Raphael, Titian, Guido Beni, and other painters are by Hassenphup. The mural paintings, by Merkel, represent in allegorical figures the different tendencies and schools of art.

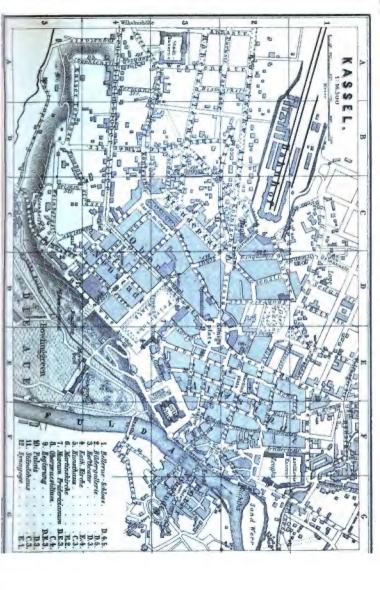

The Collections on the Ground Floor consist of plaster-casts of ancient and modern works of art, small objects of art, art-furniture, and porcelain and fayence from Wilhelmshöhe. Admission free, Mon. and Thurs. 10-1; in summer 3-5 also; at other times on application to the custodian. Catalogue 50 pf.

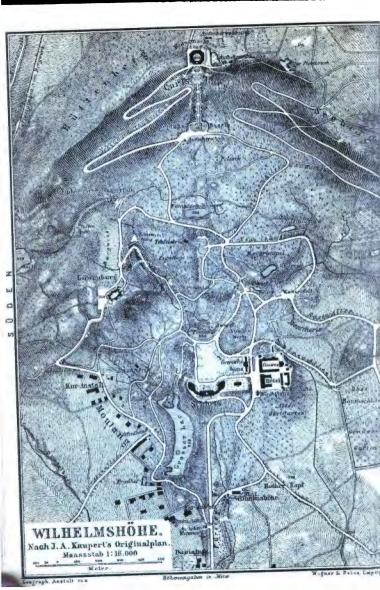

ANTE-ROOMS I & II. and HALL I. contain works of early German masters. - Central Hall: Works of Italian masters. - Hall III: Works of Hessian artists. The labels give information as to artist, subject, etc.

We now proceed to the rooms at the back of the building, which contain the smaller objects of art. Boom I.: Works in gold and silver, watches and clocks, ministures. - Room II.: Objects in ivory and amber, medals, and gems. — Room III.: Objects in wax, clay, bronze, and other meterials. — Room IV.: Objects in glass, stone, clay, and wood. — Room V.: Majolicas, mosaics, and scagliols work (imitation mosaic). - Rooms VI, VII.: Porcelain and favence.

The building is surrounded with pleasure-grounds: fine view from a pavilion at the back. A stone bridge across the Frankfurter-Str. brings us to the Weinberg (Pl. C, 5), and the Felsenkeller (p. 96), lying amidst pretty villas, and commanding a good view.

The *Carlsaue or Auc, near the Friedrichs-Platz (p. 97), and bounded by the Fulda on the E., the favourite promenade of the inhabitants, was planned by Le Nôtre, the French landscape-gardener, in 1709, and contains beautiful trees. Descending from the Auethor, we soon reach the large Orangery (Pl. E, 4, 5), built in 1709-11, and recently restored. The pavilion adjoining it on the W. is the Marmorbad, a bath-room erected in 1720-28, adorned with marble statuary, chiefly by Monnot, a French sculptor of last century. Among the statues are a Faun, a dancing Bacchante, Bacchus, and Leda: the reliefs represent scenes from Ovid's Metamorphoses. (Admission on Mon. and Wed. 10-12, Sun. 111/9-1; or by giving the custodian, who lives in the nearest corner-pavilion of the orangery, a fee of 1/2-1 m.) - About the middle of the park, to the right of the principal avenue leading to the 'Great Basin', is a cafe. - In the vicinity, below the Bellevae-Str., rises a Monument by Kaupert, representing a sleeping lion, erected in 1874 to the memory of Hessians who fell during the French domination.

Walks. To the N.E. to (1/2 M.) Wolfmager, in the valley of the Fulda, with a hydropathic establishment ('pens.' 5-8 m.); above the village is Raube's Fetenkeller, commanding a fine view. — To the W. to the Drusstind (Restaurants), whence the Hirschstein and Hohes Gras, two good points of view, may be visited.

cades' and the 'New Waterfall' on Sun. only) on Sun. at 3 and on Wed.

at 3.39 p.m. The visitor is recommended to be at the foot of the Cascades in good time (thence to the Teufelsbrücke, Aqueduct, Great Fountain, and New Waterfall), as the supply of water is limited and the exhibition therefore of brief duration.

From the Wilhelmshöher Thor (Pl. B, C, 4) a fine avenue of limes, flanked with handsome new houses in the villa style (to the right the Barracks and an Institute of Deaconesses, to the left a Prison), leads by the village of Wahlershausen to (4 M.) *Wilhelmshöhe, formerly the summer-residence of the Electors of Hessen, and celebrated for its park and fountains. The beautiful grounds, partly laid out at the beginning of the 17th cent., are chiefly indebted to the Landgrave Carl (d. 1730) and the Elector William I. (d. 1821) for their present extent.

The Schloss, erected since 1798, and occupied by Napoleon III. when a prisoner during the latter part of the Franco-Prussian war in 1870-71, is a somewhat heavy building, the body and wings of which are disposed in the form of a semicircle. The interior is sumptuously fitted up. The castellan lives on the ground-floor, close to the entrance. Near the Schloss are the Guard-house, the Marstall, or stables, which have been converted into a hussarbarrack, and Schombardt's Hotel.

A visit to the finest points in the *Park, which requires about 4 hrs.. may be made in the following order (compare Plan).

From the Hôtel Schombardt winding paths lead to the New Waterfall, 130 ft. in height. We ascend thence to the left to the Temple of Mercury, and proceed by wood-paths to the Riesenschloss, or Octagon, the highest point in the grounds, 1360 ft. above the Fulda, a bold structure consisting of three vaulted stories, the highest of which is borne by 192 clustered columns 48 ft. in height. The platform, which is easily ascended, and commands a beautiful panorama, bears an obelisk, 98 ft. in height, surmounted by a colossal statue of the Farnese Hercules in copper (33 ft. in height; room in the club for 8 pers., fee 50 pf.). The Grotto in front of the Octagon, to the right, contains a water-puzzle. — The Eleven Becches, 11/2 M. to the N. of the Octagon, command a fine view (tower); the route to them passes the restaurant and crosses the plateau of the Habichtswald.

The Cascades descending from the Octagon are 300 yds. in length, with large basins at intervals of 50 yds. On each side are long flights of steps (842 steps in all). Pleasant walks descend to the right, passing the Steinhöfer'sche Wasserfall, to the Löwenburg, a modern imitation of an ancient castle. The view from the platform of the tower is the chief attraction here (fee).

In front of the Schloss is the *Great Fountain, one of the highest in Europe, and the chief boast of Wilhelmshöhe, which sends up a jet of water 1 ft. in thickness and 200 ft. in height. Near it, to the left, is the Teufelsbrücke; to the right the Aqueduct, with a fine waterfall. The Grosse Lac, another large pond to the Münden (*Hessischer Hof, Goldner Löwe, both in the Lange-Str.; *Andrec's Hotel, D. 2 m., with 'pension', 1 M. from the station), charmingly situated on a tongue of land at the junction of the Fulda and Werra, the united waters of which form the Weser, is a pleasant, old-fashioned little town. Pop. 6354. The Church of St. Blasius is of the 14th century. The extensive Schloss, built by Duke Erich II, of Brunswick-Lüneburg in 1571, near which is the Forst-Academie, founded in 1869, is now uninhabited. In the promenade, near the Bahnhof-Str., is a War Monument in commemoration of the campaign of 1870-71. Picturesque views from Andree's Berggarten (10 min.), and from the Tivoli (Restaurant), near the station and the town.

In summer a steamer plies on the Weser from Münden to Carlshafen

(p. 95) and Hameln (p. 126). Railway to Nordhausen and Halle, see R. 68.

The train crosses the Werra (fine retrospect of Münden), follows the valley of the Weser for some distance, ascends gradually to (21 M.) Dransfeld, the culminating point of the line, and finally descends to the valley of the Leine.

36 M. Göttingen. - Hotels. *KRONE, R. & A. 2 m., D 2 m., omn. 60 pf.; *Gebhard's Hotel, Alte Wall 3, near the station; *Deutscher Haus, Weender-Str., R. & A. 1 m. 85, B. 75 pf. — Restaurants. Ernst, Weender-Str., Laux & Cron, also confectioners, Weender-Str., Alte Fink; Schwarzer Bär; Rathskeller. Burhenne's Garten, outside the Geismarthor, and Rohne's Garten, 1/2 m. to the E., with a fine view, are popular resorts.

Göttingen, an old town with 19,963 inhab., is famous for its University (Georgia Augusta, 1000 students), founded in 1737 by George II. Many of the houses bear inscriptions to the memory of distinguished scholars and students: thus, in the Allee-Str. 6, are recorded the names of Jacob and Wilhelm Grimm (1829-37), and on the ramparts close to the Leine, is a one-storied house, bearing the name of Prince Bismarck (1832-33). Near the station are the War Monument, the new Post Office, the Anatomical Rooms (a small building with a dome), and a new edifice for the Natural History Collection, containing Blumenbach's collection of skulls. -In the Wilhelms-Platz, which is adorned with a statue of King William IV., rises the old University building, erected in 1837, and called the Aula, containing a Picture Gallery, with several early German and Dutch pictures (such as Christ on the Cross by Joh.

Raphon of Eimbeck. Antony and Cleopatra by Jan Steen), and a collection of coins (visitors not admitted). The extensive University Library (400,000 vols. and 5000 MSS.) is kept in an old monastery near the church of St. John and in a modern addition tastefully built in the same style. At the end of the Weender-Str. rises a large building for Lectures, erected in 1865. Adjacent is the Botanical Garden, beyond which is the new Agricultural Institute. The town is encircled with ramparts planted with lime-trees, and affording a pleasant walk. - A favourite excursion is to the ruin of Please with its two towers, on a wooded height, commanding a charming view, and thence down to Mariaspring (2½ hrs.).

From Göttingen to Elomenberg (12 M.) by reshway in 35 min., accending the broad valley of the Leine. Thence to Bebra (and Frankfort), Gotha, Erfurt, and Halle, see pp. 371, 396.

40 M. Bovenden, commanded by the ruin of Plesse (see above). Above stat. Norten rises the rain of Hardenberg, with a modern chateau. Farther on we observe a slender watch-tower on an eminence.

48 M. Northeim (*Sonne; Englischer Hof), an old town, with a good church of 1519 (old carving on the altar; remains of fine stained glass of 1404 in the choir), is the station for travellers intending to explore the Harz Mts. from this side. Pop. 6628. A branch-line diverges here to Wehrden (p. 95) and Otthergen (p. 86).

From Northern to Herzberg, branch-line via Cattenburg and Hattorf.

From Herzberg to Nordhausen, see p. 372.

From (56 M.) Salzderhelden, with a saline spring and ruined castle, a branch-line diverges to (3 M.) Einbeck. or Eimbeck. an old town, once famous for its beer.

60 M. Kreiensen (Railway Restaurant) is the junction for the Holzminden and Magdeburg line (p. 86). 66 M. Freden is situated in one of the prettiest parts of the valley of the Leine, on which the ruins of Freden and the Winzenburg look down from the heights. 72 M. Alfeld lies at the base of the Sieben Brüder, a group of hills, the highest of which is 1480 ft. above the sea-level. The mountainous district is now quitted. 78 M. Banteln.

Beyond (83 M.) Else, the junction for (18 M.) Hameln (p. 126), the Leine is crossed. On an eminence to the left rises *Schloss Marienburg, built in the mediæval style by Hase, with a frieze by Engelhardt, illustrating northern lore.

87 M. Nordstemmen is the junction for the Hildeshelm-Ringelheim line (pp. 114, 86). 92 M. Sarstedt; 96 M. Rethen.

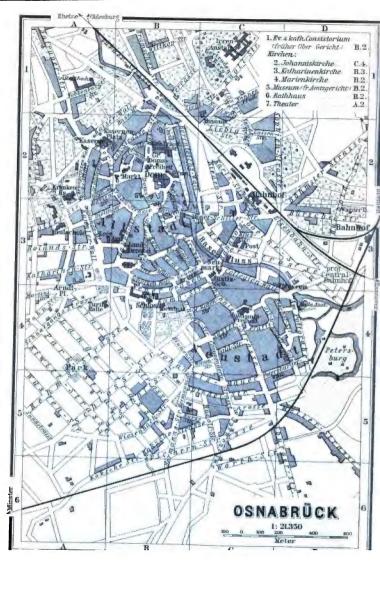

103 M. Hanover, see p. 108.

8. From Rotterdam to Hanover by Salzbergen.

266 M. RAILWAY in 10-13 hrs. (fares 19 fl. 95, 15 fl. 25, 10 fl. 9 cts.). -Shortest route between Rotterdam and Berlin (express in 131/2-15 hrs.). Custom-house formalities at Bentheim (see below).

From Rotterdam to (96 M.) Zutphen, see Baedeker's Belgium and Holland. The line then crosses the Yssel, traversing a district intersected by numerous canals. Five unimportant stations. Branch lines diverge from (114 M.) Hengelo, N. to Almeto, S. to Ensekede and Münster (p. 127). Beyond (121 M.) Oldenzaal the line crosses the Prussian frontier. The custom-house is at (140 M.) Bentheim (Bellevie; *Bad-Hôtel), a small town with an old château and a cold sulphureous spring. Next stations Schütterf, (149 M.) Salstergen (junction for Emden, p. 138), and (154 M.) Rheine (p. 138; *Ratt. Restruerant), the junction for Münster and Hamm, where carriages are changed.

183 M. Osnabrūńk (*Schaumburg, at the W. station, R. 3, B. 1, A. 1/2 m.; *Dütting's Hotel, R. & L. 21/2, B. 1, A. 1/2 m.; Kaiserhof; Hötel Rewwer), a prosperous town on the Haase, with 32,812 inhab., the capital of a bishopric founded by Charlemagne in 783, but suppressed in 1803 (governed alternately by a Roman Catholic and a Protestant prince after the Peace of Westphalia in 1648), has since 1858 again been the seat of a Roman Catholic bishop.

The Cathedral (Rom. Cath.; Pl. B, 2), of the 12th cent., is partly in the Romanesque and partly in the transitional style. It is a spacious cruciform structure, with three towers, the oldest of which is the octagonal one over the choir. The interior contains an old font of about 1300, and a treasury with beautiful crucifixes, reliquaries, and an ivory comb and set of chesemen, said to have belonged to Charlemagne, but probably of the 12th century.

The large Platz to the N. of the cathedral is adorned with a bronze Statue of Justus Möser, the patriotic author and philanthropist (d. 1794, and interred in the Marienkirche); it was designed by Drake, and erected in 1836.

The *Marienkirche (Prot.; Pl. 4, B, 2), or Church of St. Mary, is a noble Gothic structure of moderate dimensions, borne by very lofty, slender columns. The nave was erected in 1306-18, the choir and the retro-choir about 1420. The altarpiece is a beautiful and elaborate specimen of wood-carving, executed at the beginning of the 16th cent., and gilded, resembling the altarpiece of St. Michael's Chapel in the cathedral of Cologne, and representing scenes from the life of the Saviour. The paintings are of the old Westphalian school. The tower, partly in the Romanesque and partly in the transition style, dates from the middle of the 12th century.— In front of the church is a bronze statue of the Hanoverlan statesman Stüve (d. 1872), erected in 1882.

Adjacent is the Rathhaus (Pl. 6; custodian at the police guardhouse), erected at the close of the 15th cent., where the negociations for the Peace of Westphalia were carried on from 1643 to 1648. The 'Friedenssaal' contains portraits of princes and ambassadors, and other reminiscences of that period (comp. p. 129). — In the marketplace we observe some gabled houses in the Cothic style, and several timber buildings of the Renaissance period.

The Gothic Katharinenkirche (Prot.; Pl. 3, B, 3) dates from the 14th cent., and contains chalices in the transition-style. In 1881 the edifice was thoroughly restored, and the tower, 330 ft, high, which had been burned down in 1868, was rebuilt. — In the Johanniskirche (Pl. 2; C, 4), of the 13th cent., are some interesting woodcarvings, a fine ciborium, etc. — The new Hospital and the Commercial School are the most imposing modern buildings in the town; the Aula of the latter contains a fresco by Gey, representing the Proclamation of the Peace of Westphalia. — The Museum, founded in 1879, contains a natural history cabinet and Germanic antiquities (adm. on Sun., 11-1).

The small watering-place of Rothenfelde, with saline springs, lies 14 M. to the S.E. of Osnabrück (diligence in 3 hrs.; also accessible from Melle, see below.)

Osnabrück is the junction for the Cologne and Hamburg line. Railway to Quakenbrück and Oldenburg, see p. 143.

The next stations beyond Osnabrück are Wissingen and Melle, situated in a picturesque district.

The Dietrichsburg, a château 2 M. to the N. of Melle, commands an extensive prospect. At its foot lies the estate of Ostenwalde, the property of Baron von Vincke.

Stations Bruchmühlen, Bünde, Kirchlengern, and (2121/2 M.) Löhne, where the Cologne and Hanover line is reached. From Löhne to — 266 M. Hanover, see R. 3.

Hanover (256 ft.), formerly the capital of the kingdom of Hanover, and now that of the Prussian province of that name, and the headquarters of the 10th Corps d'Armée, with 145,227 inhab. (including the suburb of Linden), is situated in a well-cultivated plain on both banks of the Leine, which here becomes navigable, just above the influx of its small tributary the Ihme. The town has rapidly increased during the last fifty years (population in 1837 only 27,500); and in consequence of its advantageous situation at the junction of several important railways it has lately become a thriving manufacturing place. The irregularly-built old town still contains a number of antiquated houses of the 15th-17th cent., while handsome new quarters have arisen to the N. and E. In contrast to the older stucco fronts, most of the modern buildings are constructed of plain sandstone or brick, an improvement mainly due to the architect K. W. Hase (b. 1818).

In the spacious 'Platz' in front of the CENTRAL RAILWAY STATION (Pl. E, 4) rises an *Equestrian Statue of Ernest Augustus (Pl. 4), in bronze, designed by A. Wolff, the king (d. 1851) being represented in the uniform of a hussar. - Adiacent is the new Post and Telegraph Office (Pl. 26), a Renaissance edifice with a dome.

In the Theater-Platz (Pl. D, 5) rises the *Theatre (Pl. 31), one of the finest in Germany, with seats for 1600 spectators. The principal facade towards the Georg-Strasse is adorned with a handsome portico, under which there is a broad carriage-approach. On the balcony above are placed statues of twelve celebrated poets and composers. In front of the building rises a monument (Pl. 7: designed by Hartzer of Celle) to the composer Marschner (d. 1861). who, till within a few years of his death, was conductor of the royal orchestra. - In the Georgs-Platz, to the S. of the Theater-Platz, is the Lyceum (Pl. 19; D, 5), with its school, built in 1854; on the ground-floor is the Municipal Library, with 30,000 volumes. In front of the Lyceum rises a colossal Statue of Schiller (Pl. 8), by Engelhard, erected in 1863.

The Museum of Art and Science (Pl. 21: D. 5), Sophien-Str. 2. is a Romanesque edifice by Hase, completed in 1856. In the niches are statues of Leibnitz, Humboldt, Dürer, and Peter Vischer; in front of the entrance two fine lions by Engelhard and Dopmeier. The Museum contains the apartments of a Club of Artists and Architects on the ground-floor, and the Hanoverian Provincial Museum on the first floor, where annual exhibitions of art also take place in February and March. The collections, which relate to natural history, art, and historical research, are open 10-4 daily.

except Frid., adm. 50 pf.; Sun. 11-2, gratis.

The Matural Ristory Collections on the first and third floors of the principal building are chiefly remarkable for the minerals, birds, and butterflies.

The Historical Collections in an adjoining building in the court are rich in ante-Christian antiquities.

The Art Collection in the same building in the court consists of easts The Art Collection in the same building in the court consists of easts from the antique and of models and sculptures by Künmel (d. 1550) on the ground-floor. — Piorure Gallery on the first floor: Horemans, Violin-player; Pousin, Two landscapes; *Dou, Moor; Canaletto, Four views; A. Achendoch, Coast; Becker, Belisarius; *Flügen, Legacy-Innter; Geyer, Genre picture; Hübner, Soldier relating his adventures; Jordon, Burial; Kaulbach, Portrait; Kreling, Erwin of Steinbach; Oppenheim, Mignon and the Harper; *Schirmer, Two landscapes; Voliz, Two cattle-pieces; *Lessing, Four drawings; Koken, Landscapes; Knille, Walling in of a nun; *Platus Death of Caper. *Piloty, Death of Cesar.

A Gallery of Pictures, brought from different châteaux of George V., was formed in 1872 at Landschafts-Strasse 3 (Pl. D, 5), not far from the Museum (open daily, in summer 9-6, in winter

MODERN MASTERS (1st Floor, and to the right on the 2nd Floor): Acken bach, Dutch landscape; Adam, Napoleon at the battle of Ratisbon; Becker, Norwegian landscape; Begas, Lorelei; Bergmann, Emp. Henry V. at the monastery of Prüfening; Mets, Scene from the War of the Peasantry; Northen, Napoleon retreating, La Haye Sainte; Oesterley, Leonora, Jephthah; Schirmer, Forest.

ARCIERT MASTERS (2nd Floor, to the left): Lod. Carracci, Christ and the disciples at Emmans; Dou, Old man mending a pen; Van Dyck, Christ and the lame man; Van der Helst, Portraits; Holbein the Younger, Prince Edward, Melanchthon (anedallian); Microcch, Postrait; Panisd, Piazza Navona, St. Peter's at Rome; Poussin, Rape of the Sabine women; Rubens, Rape of Dejanira; Snyders, Bear; Snyders and Rubens, Man cutting up a deer; Ruysdest, Ruins; Teniers, Slaughter-house; Titian, Portraits; Veronese, Christ.

In the centre of the Altestadt is the market-place with the Marktkirche (Pl. 15; 0, 5), of the 14th century. On the outside are several tombetones of the 16th century. The interior, restored in 1855, contains fine modern stained glass and a modern altar carved in oak. In the chapel under the tower are the banners of the Anglo-German Legion of 1803-15. Tower 295 ft. high. — The handsome *Old Rathhaus (Pl. 27; C, 5), opposite the church, erected in the late-Gethic style in 1439-55, has a modern wing facing the Köbelinger-Strasse; the building was restored by Hase in 1878-79. The large reception-hall and the Rathsweinkeller (p. 109) are decorated with frescoes by Schaper.

The Markt-Strasse and Köbelinger-Strasse running to the S. from the market-place, and the Knochenhauer-Strasse and Schmiede-Strasse to the N., contain a number of picturesque late-Gothic brick buildings with lofty gables, of the 15th and 16th centuries. In the last-named street, near the Markthrohe, is a Statue of Pastor Bödsker, eracted in 1879. No. 10 in the same street, at the corner of the Kaiser-Strasse, was once *Leibnits's House (Pl. 18; C, 4), a Renaissance building in stone, of 1652, with an oriel adorned with 16 reliefs from Scripture. — The neighbouring Kreuskirche (Pl. 14; C, 4) contains a good altarpiece by Gonne from Schnorr's designs.

The Palace (Pl. 29; C, 5), an edifice of considerable extent, with its back to the Leine, is situated in the Leine-Strasse, to the S.W. of the market-place. It was built in the 17th cent., and attered in 1817. The intenier (accessible daily 9-5 o'clock; entrance by Portal No. 2) has been fitted up anew, and is at present occupied by Prince Albert of Prussia. The chapel contains an altarpiece by L. Cranach, representing the Crucifixion, and frescoes of the Ascension by Oesterley.

Opposite the palace is the Alte Palais (Pl. 22; C, 5), formerly the residence of King Ernest Augustus, and now the seat of the Oberpracaidium (government). Duke Charles of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, the father of Queen Louise of Prussia and Queen Frederica Hanover, who was Governor of Hanover in 1774-85, resided in it for some time. — At the corner of the Friedrich-Str. is the old palace of George V. (d. 1878), now the Rathhaus (Pl. 28; C, 5).

At the back of the Palace flows the Leine, beyond which extends a spacious drilling-ground called the WATERLOO-PLATZ (Pl. B, 5), at the farther end of which rises the Waterloo-Column, 154 ft. in height, erected 'by the grateful Fatherland' to about 800 Hanoverians who fell at the battle of Waterloo. Good survey of the town from the top (188 steps; fee). On each side are barracks, and to the left is also the spacious Arsenal built in 1846. At the N. end is the Statue of Count Alten (d. 1840; Pl. 5), the Hanoverian general at Waterloo, and commander of the Foreign Legion in Spain. In the grounds between this and the barracks is a small temple (Pl. 6) with a bust of Leibnitz (d. 1716), who is interred in the neighbouring Neustädter Kirche (Pl. 16; B. 4). His grave is marked by a marble slab with the words 'Ossa Leibnitii'.

At the back of General Alten's monument is the Royal Library (Pl. 3; B. 5), containing 175,000 vols, and 3000 MSS., comprising those left by Leibnitz and several valuable incunabula (open on week-days, 12-1).

The Poor House in the Neue-Strasse (Pl. B. C. 4) bears an inscription to the effect that the Duke of Brunswick dined here (the house being then an inn) when on his expedition from the Erzgebirge to the North Sea. - In the vicinity is the Synagogue (Pl. 30: B. 4), built in a mediæval style by Oppler (1870).

Herr Culemann, Oster-Str. 54, possesses a collection of mediæval works of art, autographs, early typography, etc., to which connoisseurs are readily admitted.

The Aquarium (Pl. 1; E, 5; adm. 50, Sun. 30 pf.), near the Tivoli, and not far from the station, is worthy of a visit.

The neighbouring streets, König - Strasse and Am Schiffgraben (Pl. E, F, 5), leading towards the Eilenriede (p. 113), are flanked with handsome new buildings in the villa style. The *House of the Provincial Estates, Schiffgraben, No. 3, in the Italian Renaissance style, was designed by Wallbrecht. At the beginning of the Thiercarten-Strasse is a handsome Gothic villa, by Lucr. The circular space at the end of the König-Str. is embellished with a War Monument by Volz.

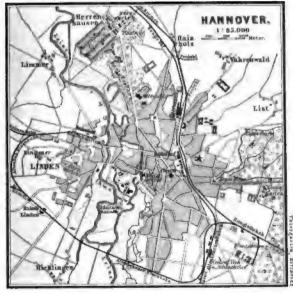

The Gewerbe-Ausstellung, or Industrial Exhibition, Brühl-Str. 1 (Pl. C, 3), consisting of machinery, manufactures, industrial models, etc., is open daily 11-3 (adm. 25 pf.), and on Sun. 11-2 (10 pf.). Opposite is the Veterinary School. No. 1 in the Lange Laube is the so-called Haus der Väter (Pl. C, 3), of 1619.

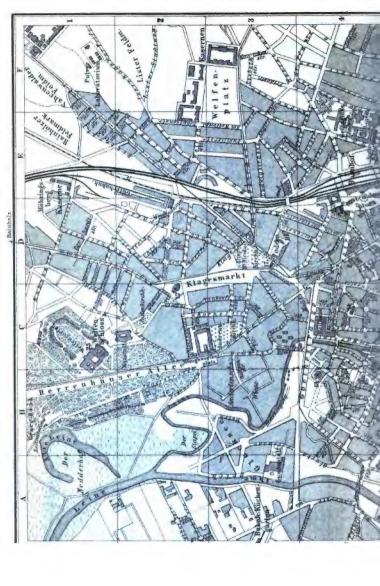

The *Christuskirche (Pl. 12; C, 2), a handsome modern Gothic church (1864), with good stained glass, is worthy of a visit (sacristan Oberstrasse 1). - The Prison (Pl. E, 4) was built by Schuster. Adjacent are the new Law Courts and a group of new Schools.

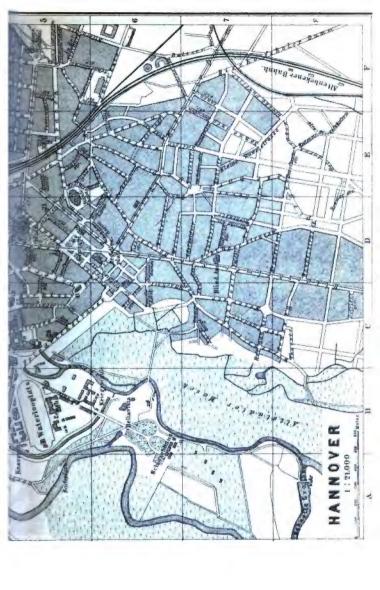

In the Vahrenwalder-Strasse is the Military Riding Institute (Pl. 20; F, 1), for training riding and fencing-masters for the army.

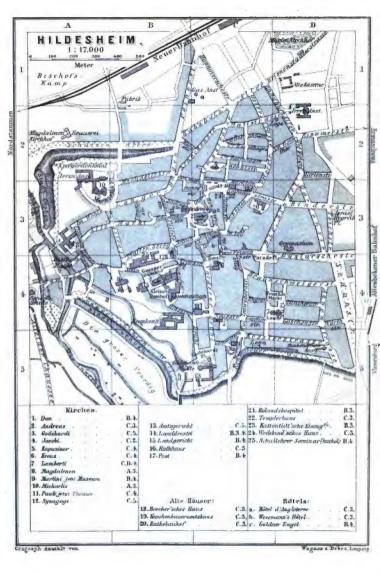

An *Avenue of Limes, 11/4 M. long, laid out in 1726, leads on the N.W. side of the town to Schloss Herrenhausen. On the E. side of it, not far from the town, is the imposing Welfensekloss, or Palace of the Guelphs (Pl. C, 1), in the Romanesque style, with five towers, fitted up in 1878-80 as a Polytechnic School (35 teachers, 450 students). Above the portal are statues of Henry the Lion.

Ernest the Confessor, the Elector Ernest Augustus, and King Ernest Augustus; the corridor is adorned with a frieze by Engelhard, representing scenes of Northern Mythology. The collections it contains may be inspected on application to the castellan. In the square in front is a colossal figure of the Saxon Horse. Close to it is the so-called Prinzenhaus (formerly on the Reitwall), where Queen Louise of Prussia is said to have been born, 10th March, 1776 (p. 111). On the other side of the avenue is the Georgen-Park (with a café), which extends to Herrenhausen and contains the Palace of King Ernest Augustus.

Schloss Herrenhausen, at the farther end of the avenue, was the favourite residence of George I. (d. 1727), George II. (d. 1766), and George V. (d. 1878). The garden, 120 acres in area, laid out in the old French style, contains statues copied from antiques, an open-air theatre, monuments of Hanoverian princes, fountains, and hot-houses. The colossal statue of the Electress Sophia, by Engelhard, stands on the spot where she expired in 1714. The fountains play every Wed. and Sat. in June (after Ascension Day) from 5 to 7 p.m., July 5.30 to 7.30, Aug. 5-7, Sept. 3-5. The waters of the great fountain rise to the unusual height of 222 ft. - Adjoining the château is a building containing a Collection of Ancient and Modern Sculptures (among the former are busts of the emperors, Perseus and Andromeda, Bacchus, etc.; among the latter, works by Rauch, Kümmel, Hesemann, and Engelhard). In the vicinity are two large orangeries and the beautiful *Berggarten with a fine collection of palms, and orchid and Victoria Regia houses. One large greenhouse is devoted to plants from Australia and the Cape Colony. -At the end of the garden is the *Mausoleum, containing the monuments of King Ernest Augustus (d. 1851) and his Queen Frederica (d. 1841) by Rauch (adm. from Apr. to Sept. 9-6, Oct. to March 10-4; apply to the castellan at the Schloss). - The house formerly occupied by the superintendent of the gardens now contains the *Welfen-Museum, where national antiquities are preserved (open on week-days, 10-5). — Opposite, in the so-called 'Garde Meuble', is a collection of paintings, containing good pictures of the Netherlandish, Italian, and early-German schools, - Adjacent are the Royal Stables, with some of the famous Hanoverian cream-coloured horses (fee).

To the E. of Hanover, adjoining the most fashionable quarter of the town (see p. 112), extends the *Rileariede, a wood belonging to the town, affording beautiful walks (several cafés, etc.). On the S. side of it, 1½M. from the town (comp. Pl. F, 5), is situated the Zoological Garden, with well-kept grounds (adm. 50 pf., Sun. 30 pf.; concerts four times a week).

About 3/4 M. to the S.E., on the way to the Pferdethurm (tramway, see p. 109), are the large new Cattle Market and Slaughter House.

Visitors are admitted on week-days to the Municipal Waterworks on the Lindener Berg by tickets obtained at the 'Stadtbauamt', in the old Rathhaus (p. 108). Fine view.

The Deer Park at Kirohrode (railway 25 pf.; carr. 4, through the Eilenriede 41/2 m.), which contains tame deer, is much visited. Refreshments at the forester's house.

Hildesheim, an ancient town with 25,887 inhab. (1/2 Rom. Cath.), situated on the Innerste, has retained many mediaval characteristics. It became an episcopal see in 815, and attained its greatest prosperity in the 13th-14th centuries. After the inhabitants had succeeded in shaking off the supremacy of the bishops it became a member of the Hanseatic League, and was a free town of the Empire down to 1803. For centuries the town was divided into the three parishes of the Altstadt, Neustadt, and Domfreiheit, a division that still leaves its mark.

At a very early period Hildesheim attained great importance as a cradle of art, chiefly owing to the exertions of Bishop Bernward (993-1022). According to tradition, the bishop himself was a practical worker in several branches of art, and it is at least well authenticated that he patronised all alike and that he personally superintended the various studios founded by him. A number of buildings were erected by him; and in particular several fine specimens of Bronze Workmanship, such as the cathedral doors, the Bernward Column, and the candelabrum and chalice in the cathedral treasury, were executed under his suspices. Under the fostering care of Bernward and his successor Godehard, and that of bishops Bernhard and Adelog in the 12th cent., Hildesheim became one of the most important seats of ROMANESQUE ART in Germany. Nor is the interest attaching to this venerable town confined to its mediseval art, for one of its most attractive and characteristic features consists of its timber-architecture in the German Renaissance style. In several of the buildings the traveller will observe traces of the obstinate resistance offered by the Gothic forms to the more modern ideas, the full sway of which was not established till the middle of the 16th century. The richly-decorated façades, executed by wood-carvers and sculptors, bear abundant testimony to the taste, the humour, and the enterprise of the burghers of that period.

Entering the town from the station, we reach the *ALTSTÄDTER MARKT, a fine mediaval square surrounded by several interesting buildings. The Rathhaus (Pl. 16; C. 3), with its arcades, erected in 1443, contains the valuable archives. The Templer-Haus (Pl. 22), built in the late-Gothic style, has a handsome oriel and two round corner-turrets; it has recently been disfigured by the opening of a shop in the middle of the façade. The *Knochenhauer-Amthaus (Pl. 19), or guild-house of the butchers, is probably the finest timber building in Germany, and is adorned with admirable carving, of 1529. The Wedekind House (Pl. 24), dating from 1598, is also adorned with carving. The Rolandstift, with gables, etc. The Roland Fountain in the middle of the Platz was erected in 1540. The Kaiserhaus, Langer Hagen No. 1836, is a Renaissance edifice of the 16th cent., adorned with medallion-reliefs and statues of Roman emperors.

Near the market-place is the Andreas-Platz, with the Protestant Andreaskirche (Pl. 2; C, 3). Opposite is the Annencapelle, with restored frescoes.

*8t. Michael's Church (Pl. 10; A, 3; the sacristan lives at the red house to the E. of the church, No. 1579), formerly belonging to the Benedictines, founded by Bishop Bernward, and consecrated in 1033, was afterwards injured by a fire, but was restored in the 12th and 13th centuries. It is one of the finest Romanesque churches in Germany, and possesses aisles, a double transept, and E. and W. choir, the latter considerably elevated, with a crypt beneath it, which was consecrated in 1015.

The INTERIOR is borne by pillars and columns alternately, two of the latter being placed between two of the former; this arrangement dates from the time of Bernward. The pillars are the original ones, and two of the old columns (last section to the N.E.) are preserved. The interesting PAINTINES on the flat wooden ceiling of the nave (genealogy of Christ up to Jesse, prophets, fathers, Christ as Judge, on a deep blue ground) date from the close of the 12th cent., and are the only ancient works of the kind on this side of the Alps. In the N. transept are the Right Beatitudes, curious stucco figures of the 11th or 12th century. — The Capper, resting on 10 pillars and 8 columns, contains the monument of 8t. Bernward, of the 13th cent., surrounded by a spring (key kept by the sacristan of 8t. Magdalene's Church). The adjacent abbey-buildings are now used as a lunatic asylum. The cloisters, to which visitors are admitted on application at the gate, are in the late-Romanesque style, but with pointed vaulting

St. Magdalene's Church (Pl. 8; A, 3; sacristan, No. 1406, opposite the church, to the S.W.) contains several interesting works from the studio of Bishop Bernward, and a fine late-Gothic chalice and candelabrum.

The famous Bernward's Cross (994) is a reliquary containing a piece of the True Cross, richly encrusted with gems. — In the nave stands the old Götzensäule, or 'Idols' Column', overthrown by Emp. Otho I. and presented to Bernward by Bishop Benno.

St. Martin's Church (Pl. 9; B, 4, the custodian lives at the back of the church, No. 1340), now fitted up as a Museum, contains weapons, ecclesiastical vessels, wood-carving, a few pictures, Hildesheim and Goslar coins, and copies of the Hildesheim Silver Treasure (p. 42); also a library containing 6000 vols., chiefly relating to the town and principality of Hildesheim, and a natural history collection, in which the geological section is especially rich.

The *Cathedral (Pl. 1; B, 4), in the Romanesque style, erected in 1055-61 on the site of an earlier church, with a late-Gothic S. aisle and N. transept subsequently added (1412), was entirely disfigured in the interior in 1730 (sacristan, Kleine Domhof 1198).

The brazen Doors which separate the W. vestibule from the nave, executed by Bishop Bernward in 1015, are adorned with sixteen reliefs (the Fall and Redemption) of considerable merit. The brazen Fost of the 19th cent., with reliefs, in the first chapel on the left, and the large "Candelabrum in the nave, presented by Bishop Hesilo (d. 1079), are also worthy of notice. The Irmandule, a small polished column of calc-shiter near the choir, is said to have been erected by the heathen Saxons in honour of their god Irmán, or Irman (Hermann). The Rood-loft is a fine Benaissance sculpture in stone, executed in 1546. On the right and left of the high altar are the gilded Sarcophagus of St. Godehard, with figures of the Apostles of the beginning of the 12th cent., and the gilded Tomb of St. Epiphanius, with silver reliefs, of the beginning of the 11th century. The modernised Crypt contains the so-called Wandelkreus, supposed to date from the 9th century. — The Treasury (of which one of the clergy is the custodian) contains a number of very valuable works of art of the 8th-12th cent.: e.g. the Jerusalem Cross, presented by Louis the Pious, a Byzantine work, probably of the 8th cent., with portraits of Constantine the Great and his mother Helena; an octagonal casket enclosing the head of Oswald, King of Northumbria (d. 642); a drinking-horn and fork of Charlemagne; two family-altars; several codices with ministures of the time of 8t. Bernward (some said to have been painted by himself), etc.

The "CLOISTERS in the late-Romanesque style, on the E. side of the cathedral, in two stories, contain tombstones of the 12th-16th centuries. In the upper story are the Cathedral or Beverin Library, and the old Ritterseal, with tapestry and ceiling-paintings by Wink. The Chapel of St. Anne in the centre of the court, of the 14th cent., possesses windows with fine tracery. On the outside of the wall of the cathedral-crypt grows a venerable Rose Bush, upwards of 30 ft. in height, and 30 ft. in width, connected by tradition with Louis the Pious and the founding of Hildesheim. It is said that ancient documents prove it to be 800 years old. The Romanesque Chapel of St. Lawrence on the S. side of the cloisters, with low vaulting borne by two series of round, and one of octagonal columns, contains a few architectural fragments and the tomb of Adamus Adamu (d. 1685), the historian.— The 'Cantabona', the largest of the peal of bells, weighs 3½ tons.

In the Domhof, on the N. side of the cathedral, rises the Christus-Säule, or Column of Christ, in bronze, 15 ft. in height, and adorned with 28 groups in half relief representing the history of the Saviour, executed by Bishop Bernward about 1022 and erected in the Church of St. Michael. In the same Platz stands the Post Office (Pl. 17), with an oriel dating from 1518.

*St. Godehard's Church (Pl. 3, C, 5; sacristan, No. 1101, Vordere Brühl), built in 1133-72, restored in 1848-63, and like the church of St. Michael, one of the finest Romanesque edifices in Germany, is a basilica with aisles and flat ceiling, a handsome choir in the French style, and three massive towers. The soulptures in the arch of the N.W. portal are worthy of note.

The body of the church rests on 6 pillars and 12 columns, the choir on 2 pillars and 6 columns. The candelabrum, an imitation of that in the cathedral, and the mural paintings in the choir in the Romanesque style by Welter of Cologne are modern. The church possesses a pyx of St. Godehard, supposed to date from the beginning of the 11th cent., a Gothic monstrance of the 15th cent., and a valuable Romanesque chalice executed in 1148-53 (shown by permission of the Dean).

Besides these buildings, Hildesheim contains many handsome private houses of the 16th and 17th cent., chiefly in the late-Gothic style. About one-sixth of the buildings in the town date from this period; many of them, generally corner-houses, are adorned with quaint inscriptions. - The ramparts afford pleasant views. On the Michaelis Rampart (Pl. A, 2) is a monument to the Hildesheim soldiers who fell in 1870-71.

The suburb of Morisberg, 1/2 M. to the S.W. of Hildesheim, possesses an abbey-church founded in 1160, the only pure columnar basilica in N. Germany, but partly modernised. The *Bergholz, to the S. of Moritzberg, is a beautiful point of view (concert at the restaurant two or three times a week). - Near the Galgenberg, another very fine point of view to the E. of Hildesheim, some valuable ancient Roman silver plate. now preserved at Berlin (p. 42), was found in 1868.

A pleasant excursion may be made by train to (1/2 hr.) Derneburg. with an old Cistercian abbey, and thence on foot to (3/4 hr.) Wohldenberg, with a ruin (view). The walk may be continued to the Bodensteiner Klippen and down to station Lutter (p. 86).

Brunswick, Ger. Braunschweig (203 ft.), the capital of the Duchy of that name, with 75.038 inhab., lies on the Oker, which flows through the town in several arms, in a fertile plain bounded on the S. by wooded hills. It is now an important industrial place, the staple products being sugar, tobacco, woollen goods, machinery, and carriages; and its sausages, cakes, and asparagus are also exported.

Brunswick is said to have been founded in 861 by Bruno, the son of Duke Ludolph of Saxony, and named after him Brunonis Vicus, or Bruns-Duke Ludoiph of Saxony, and named after him Brunonis vices, or Druns-wick, the thousandth supposed anniversary of which event was celebrated with great festivities in 1881. The place first acquired importance under Henry the Lion (1139-95), whose favourite residence was a fortified castle here. His son Emp. 0tho IV. granted the town important exemptions from customs, and it gradually attained to almost entire independence, while its favourable situation on the great route from Lübeck and Hamburg to S. Germany soon rendered it one of the most important commercial places in the interior of Germany. The town enjoyed its highest prosperity during the latter half of the 14th, and the beginning of the 15th cent., when it was the capital of the Saxon-Westphalian section of the Hanseatic League (p. 175). The finest churches, most of them entirely completed, date from that period. The Brunswickers afterwards eagerly embraced the reformed faith, and as early as 1528 appointed the eminent Reformer Bugenhagen their preacher. With the decline of the Hanseatic League Brunswick fell into decay. After various vicissitudes and internal dissensions during the 16th and 17th centuries, the town at length succumbed to the power of the dukes in 1671. It has been the ducal residence since 1753, except during dukes in 16/1. It has been the ducal residence since 1703, except during the brief period of the French supremacy (1806-18).

Duke Charles William Ferdinand of Brunswick, distinguished when heir-apparent to the Duchy as an officer under Frederick the Great, was commander-in-chief of the Prussian army in 1806, and the same year (14th Oct.) was mortally wounded at the battle of Auerstädt (near Jena). He died on 7th Nov., 1807, at Ottansen, near Altona. After the peace of Tilisit the duchy was annexed to the 'Kingdom of Westphalia'. The last duke's youngest son Frederick William, entitled Duke of Brunswick-Oels duke's youngest son Frederick Wittiam, entitled Duke of Brunswick-Oeis from his Silesian principality of Oels, and in 1806 major-general in the Prussian army, raised a corps of 1500 volunteers (remarkable for their black uniform) in 1809, with which he aided the Austrians in Saxony and Bohemis. After the armistice concluded between the French and Austrians at Znaim, the Duke with his intrepid black band proceeded by Halle, Halberstadt, and Brunswick, where he repulsed the Westphalian troops, to Bremen, embarked near Eisfleth, and arrived safely in England. He then sailed for Spain, where his corps again greatly distinguished itself, and in 1813 returned to Germany to enter on his duties as prince of Brunswick. In 1815 he took part in the campaign in the Netherlands, and on 15th June died a glorious death on the field of Quatre Bras.

and on 10th June died a glorious death on the field of Quatre Bras.

Like Dantsic and Lübeck, this city of the Guelphs (from whom Queen Victoria and the ex-royal family of Hanover are descended) has externally preserved a marked mediæval aspect, and occupies an interesting position in the history of art. In pleasing contrast to the large public buildings are numerous fine specimens of Timber Architecture, both of the late-Gothic and the Renaissance period. A peculiar feature of these buildings is, that the side is turned towards the street, and not the gable end.

The *ALTSTADT-MARKT (Pl. B, 5), where the Altstadt-Rathhaus, the Church of St. Martin, and several fine old private buildings (e.g. the 'Huthaus', No. 8, of the end of the 17th cent.) are situated, forms the centre of the S.W. quarter of the town, which adjoins the railway-station. The Platz is embellished with a Fountain, cast in pewter in 1408, and restored in 1847, bearing texts from Scripture in the Low German dialect.

The *Altstadt-Rathhaus (Pl. 1; B, 5), consisting of two parts, one 56 ft., the other 62 ft. long, at right angles to each other, is an elegant Gothic edifice, begun about 1250, continued in 1893-96, and completed in 1447-68. Facing the market-place, both stories of both wings have open areades, on the nine pillars of which are statues of Saxon princes, from Henry the Fowler to Otho the Child and their wives, most of them executed about 1455 by Haus Hesse.

The beams supporting the Gothic roof of the Great Hall (or 'Dornse') in the interior are richly carved (restored in 1852). The Small Hall contains the picture-gallery of the Brunswick Kunst-Verein, with several modern pictures by Hildebrandt, Lessing, and Kindler, and others chiefly by Brunswick painters. When the town lost its independence in 1671 the Rathaus was closed, and subsequently opened on the occasion of fairs only.

St. Martin's Church (Pl. 22; B, 5), opposite the Rathhaus, originally a Romanesque basilica, was enlarged in the early-Gothic style in the second half of the 13th cent.; the Chapel of St. Anne, added on the S.W. side in 1434-38, is of the late-Gothic period; and the retro-choir was built in 1490-1500. The S. and N. façades are remarkable for their rich portals and fine sculpturing; to the S. is the so-called Priests' Gate, to the N. the Bridal Portal. The portal in the tower is Romanesque.

A tombstone built into the wall at the corner towards the Rathhaus represents the Ensign v. Rauchkaupt in full armour, who fell in the service of the duke during a siege of the town in 1615.

In the Interior (sacristan in the house No. 9, to the S.E.) the brazen Font with reliefs of 14A1 is of considerable artistic merit. The Pulpit, by G. Röttger, 1617, is adorned with reliefs in marble. Opposite to it is the monument of a burgomaster by Hans Jürgen, the inventor of the spinning-wheel, adorned also with a likeness of himself (1554). High-alter of 172b. Dr. Martin Chemnitz (d. 1586), the theologian, is buried in front of the sacristy.

In the streets adjoining the Altstadt-Markt are many handsome old private houses, such as No. 38 Gördelinger-Str., and Nos. 15 and 22 Südklint (Pl. B, 4). The new Gymnasium (Pl. 13; B, 5), Breite-Str., is also a handsome edifice. Close to the market-place, and opposite the end of the Post-Str., rises the Gewandhaus (Pl. 12; B, 5), in the Renaissance style, with the inscription, 'quod tib hoc alteri'; the E. gable was constructed by the masters Magnus Klinge and Balzer Kirchner in 1590. No. 5 Post-Str. is a Renaissance house of 1591; No. 10, Gothic, of 1467.

At the corner of the Stein-Str. stands the Synagogue (Pl. 40; B, 6), built by Uhde in 1875 in the Moorish style. The richly-adorned interior is shown by the custodian of the adjacent school. Nos. 11 and 13 Knochenhauer-Str. are interesting old edifices of 1489, with statues. No. 3 Stein-Str., dating from 1512, is adorned with a curious relief. No. 1 Bank-Platz, formerly the Gymnasium, is a Benaissance edifice of 1591. The *Post and Telegraph Office, in the Friedrich-Wilhelm-Str. (Pl. C, 6), is by Raschdorff.

Traversing the Kohlmarkt and the Schuh-Str., we observe several other handsome dwelling-houses, but the finest building of the kind is No. 5, in the Sack, a little to the N., with burlesque ornamentation, dating probably from 1586. We now reach the Burg-Platz (Pl. D, 5), in which rises the —

*Cathedral of St. Blasius, or Burgkirche (Pl. 20; D, 5), with a vaulted interior borne by pillars, and a spacious crypt. It was begun in 1172 in the Romanesque style by Henry the Lion, after his return from the Holy Land, and the choir and nave were completed in 1194. The Gothic S. aisle was added in 1344, the N. aisle with its spiral columns in 1469. The towers were burned down in 1195, and have never been rebuilt. The church is now undergoing restoration.

"Interior. (The sacristan lives at No. 12, opposite the W. portal; fee for showing the church and the vaults, which require to be lighted, 1-4 pers. 2 m., 5-8 pers. 3 m., 9-12 pers. 4 m.; for the church alone a smaller fee.) Navr. The "Monument of the founder (d. 1195) and his consort Matilda (d. 1189), in the early-Gothic style, probably executed shortly after their death, with life-size recumbent figures in sandstone, is a work of great value in the history of art. Nearer the choir, beneath a brass with a long inscription, reposes Emp. Otho IV. (p. 118). Monument of Duke Lewis Rudolph (d. 1735), in zinc, in the S. aisle. The old mural psintings of the N. aisles have been restored; those in the nave are new, from the designs of Prof. Essenwein. The Romanssque altar, a slab of marble resting on five columns of metal, in front of the Choir, was presented by the Duchess Matilda in 1188. The seven-branched candelabrum, adorned with quaint monsters, was executed by order of Henry the Lion (pedestal modern). To the right and left of it are Gothic sandstone figures, of the 13th cent., of Henry the Lion and Bishop Hermann of Hildesheim. The vaulting of the choir and the S. transept is adorned with Romanesque Mural Paintings, representing the history of Christ, dating from about 1224; those in the N. transept are modern. In the latter are some wood-carvings of the 15th cent.; the drinking-horn of Henry the Lion (?); an ancient crozier; Gothic monstrances, &c. — The Carry, with its three apses, partly supported by butresses and partly by columns, situated below the choir and the transept, has for centuries been the burial-place of the warlike Guelph princes, nine of whom fell in battle (see p. 124). The oldest sarco-phagus is that (in the entrance-hall) of the Margrave Ribbert II., who was assassinated in 1080 by his own servants; beside it that of Gertrude (d. 1117), mother-in-law of the emperor Lotheire, and grandmother of Henry the Lion. The Cathedral contains an admirable peal of bells.

In the Burg-Platz, on the N. side of the cathedral, rises a handsome bronze *Lion (Pl. 11; D, 5), on a modern pedestal, erected here in 1166 by Henry the Lion as a symbol of his supremacy, and restored in 1858. Down to 1486 the Burggrafen, or ducal bailiffs, publicly administered justice here. The old Barracks (Pl. 4; D, 4, 5), occupy the site of the venerable ducal castle of Dankwarderode, dating mainly from the time of Henry the Lion, but restored after a fire in 1254. One of the side-walls, with triple groups of windows and Romanesque columns, has recently been exposed to view.

In the Wilhelms-Platz, to the S. of the cathedral, is an old limetree, which an incredible tradition dates from the time of Henry the Lion. To the E., in the Münz-Str., are the new Court House and the Police Office, two edifices in the Italian Renaissance style. In the prolongation of the same street towards the S. rise the handsome Offices of the Gas and Water Company, in the Gothic style.

We next visit the Schloss-Platz (Pl. E, 5), in which, in front of the palace, admirable equestrian statues of the dukes Frederick William (Pl. 7) by Hähnel, and Charles William Ferdinand (Pl. 8). by Pönninger, were erected in 1874.

The *Palace (Pl. D, E, 5), erected by K. Th. Ottmer in the Renaissance style on the site of the 'Graue Hof', which was burned down in 1830, and almost entirely rebuilt after the destructive fire of 1865, is a sumptuous modern edifice. The principal facade towards the town is 137 vds. in length and 110 ft. in height. The imposing portal is crowned by a celebrated *Quadriga designed by Rietschel, and executed by Howaldt in copper. The colossal statues of Otho IV. and Otho the Child, and also the group in the pediment are by Bläser. The facade at the back is tastefully adapted to its position overlooking the gardens. The interior, which is richly fitted up, is shown on application to the castellan at the portal. The public are permitted to pass through the portal and to visit the gardens.

The small Church of St. Magnus (Pl. 23; E, 6), at the back of the palace, founded in 1031, dates in its present form from the 13th and 15th cent., and was restored in 1877. The interior contains some interesting wood-carving.

The *Ducal Museum (Pl. 33; D, 4), to the N. of the palace, is reached thence by the Bohlweg. Part of the building was formerly a Pauline monastery. The foundation of the valuable collections it contains was laid by Duke Anton Ulrich of Brunswick-Lüneburg, who purchased a number of paintings and works of art during his travels in the middle of the 17th cent., and deposited them in his château of Salzdahlum. With these and other materials Duke Charles I. formed a museum at Brunswick in 1755. After the battle of Jena the finest paintings were taken to Paris and Cassel, and several hundred were sold by auction in 1811. Most of the former were restored after the conclusion of peace, but many others were afterwards sold privately. In 1859, however, the collection was at length properly organised. The Museum is open from May 1st to Oct. 15th daily, except on festivals, 10-1.30 (on Sun. 11-1), on Wed. and Sat. 3-5 also; strangers admitted at other times on application to the custodian, Hagenscharn 11, Director, Prof. Riegel. Catalogue 1 m. [A new building for the Museum has been begun in the Ducal Park.

On the STAIRCASE are a marble bust of Duke Charles I., by Cavaceppi (1772), and the design of Reischell's Quadriga (see above).

Room I. Valuable Italian and French Majolicus of the 16th and 17th cent., one of the finest collections in Germany, comprising 1075 specimens, arranged according to the makers.

Room II. In front is a table of Florentine mosaic on which rests a crucifix of ivory and should be sacribed to Michael Angelo (more probably by Giovanni da Bologna). In the centre cabinet is preserved the *Mantuan Vase (No. 21), which fell into the hands of a soldier at the taking of Mantua in 1630, then came into the possession of Duke Francis Albert of Sachsen-Lauenburg, and in 1666 into that of the Princes of Brunswick, and has been preserved in the Museum since 1767. In 1830 it was carried off by Duke Charles, but was restored to the Museum on his death in 1874.

It is cut out of a single sardonyx, consisting of five laminæ; the relief probably represents a spring festival (Demeter with Triptolemus in the centre). The antiquity of this gem has sometimes been disputed. The same cabinet contains Luther's 'doctor's ring' (No. 20), the wedding-ring of Catharine von Bora (22), and the seal-ring of Mary, Queen of Scots (24). In the middle of the room: Time-pieces of the 17th and 18th centuries. Opposite the entrance are portraits of the princely founders and benefactors of the gallery, by Querfurth, Battoni, etc. — The mediæval objects are arranged at the back of the room: *1. Imperial robe of Otho I., a Sicitian-Moorish work of the beginning of the 18th cent.; 8. Silken cope with embroidery, 15th cent.; *58. Rune-casket, of Irish workmanship, 8th cent.; 59. Ivory reliquary with reliefs from the life of Christ, 11th cent.; 122-127. Wedding-dishes with oil-paintings, 16th and 17th centuries.

Room III. contains historical curiosities, weapons, and armour.

Adjoining is the *Picture Gallery. As in most of the German galleries founded in the 17th cent., the Dutch school is best represented; there are also, however, some good specimens of the Italian, such as Adam and Eve by Palma Vecchio (formerly attributed to Giorgione), and Cephalus and Procris, by Guido Reni. The young man, dressed in black, with a cap on his head (9), by Holbein the Younger, is a genuine picture, but badly preserved. Like other princely collections, this gallery is abundantly provided with good portraits (by Mierevelt, van Ceulen, Ant. Mor, Frans Floris, and others), the finest being several by Rubens. A visit to the Brunswick gallery is almost indispensable to the student of the Dutch school. A full-length portrait by Frans Hais (119), regarded by the late M. Burger of Paris, the greatest connoisseur of the Dutch school, as one of the most remarkable works of this master, is now considered of doubtful genuineness. We become acquainted here with Rembrandt as a painter of religious subjects, such as the Entombment and Risen Christ with Mary Magdalene. These belong to the later period of the master; so also the Head of a warrior, the Family portrait, and a fine Storm-scene, pronounced by Burger to be as 'fantastically-postical as an inspiration of Shakspeare'; the two portraits (131, 182), as well as the Philosopher, belong to an earlier period (1631-33). Amongst the best works of Rembrandt's school are St. Peter in the house of Cornelius, by the rare master Bernhard Fabrities, and Abraham embracing Isaac, by Jan Livens. Rembrandt's influence is strongly traceable in the small picture of the Annunciation, by Adrian van Ostade. The gallery also possesses the Girl with the wine-glass, by Van der Meer of Delft, who, like Frans Hals, has lately come into notice, a work of a very high class, and perhaps the most charming ever executed by the master. Jan Steen's Marriage Contract is also a work of pre-eminent merit. Palamedesz, Molenaer, Metsu, Dirk Hals, and Mass are well represented.

The Seasons; also still-life, flower, and fruit-pieces.

II. Gallery, chiefly landscapes: Palma Giovane, 244, 245. Marsyas and Midas, 246. Venus and Adonis; 468. Jordens, Bean-King; 770. Elsheimer, Landscape; 692. A. van der Neer, Winter-landscape; 700. However the Interpret, Lot-trait; 119. Fr. Hals (P), Portrait; *614. Mosquert, Calling of St. Matthew; $44. Johann Raphon (d. 1528). Condemnation and mocking of Christ, a triptych from the cathedral; 548. Cranach the Elder, Hercules and Omphale; $51. Cranach the Younger, Preaching in the wilderness, with portraits of Melanchthon and other contemporaries of the artist (1549).

A gallery facing the court leads to another series of rooms, fitted up in 1878.

I. ROOM. Engravings, changed periodically. Cartoons by R. Henneberg. II. BOOM. Ivory Carvings, including some of great artistic merit. Enamels from Limoges, the home of the art of enamelling. Antique and modern Bronzes: Drunken Silenus; *Dog, by Peter Vischer; Italian powderhorn in embossed copper, 16th century. Antique Vases, Porcelain, Chinese and Japanese Pottery, etc.

III. ROOM. Germanic Antiquities, chiefly from the collection of Dr. Thiele.

The Neustadt-Rathhaus (Pl. 34; C, 4), a late-Gothic edifice, sadly disfigured in the 18th cent., a little farther to the W., contains the Town Archives, the Town Library (14,000 vols.; Mon. and Frid., 10-1), and the Städtische Museum, a collection of old German ecclesiastical and national antiquities, coins, dies, plans, casts, etc. (open on Sun. 11-1, and in summer also Thurs. 3-5). The council-chamber contains some fine panelling of 1573.

The neighbouring HAGHNMARKT (Pl. D, 4) is embellished with a Fountain Statue of Henry the Lion (Pl. 9) by A. Breymann, exeouted in bronze by Howaldt, with an early-Gothic pedestal by L. Winter. - Opposite to it rises the Church of St. Catharine (Pl. 19, D 4; the sacristan lives at No. 3, to the S.), a handsome edifice, containing numerous tombstones of the 16th-18th cent., the finest being that of Count von der Schulenburg, of 1619. The building was begun by Henry the Lion in 1172, and continued in 1252; the early-Gothic S. aisle dates from 1379, the choir from about 1500. - There are several handsome buildings in the neighbouring Wenden-Str. (thus No. 6, of 1512), in the Fallersleber Str. (No. 6), and in the S. Wilhelm-Str. (No. 95, of 1619, now a school).

*St. Andrew's (Pl. 17; C, 3) was begun in the transition-style about the year 1200, but the greater part was erected in the late-Gothic style in 1360-1420; the S. tower, built in 1518-32, destroyed by lightning and rebuilt in 1740, is 300 ft. high. The gable of the S. aisle is adorned with curious sculptures of 1401, representing the Annunciation and the Magi, the Flight into Egypt, and Christ on a throne, on the steps of which cripples of every description are standing. This is an allusion to the tradition that the church was founded by wealthy cripples. The adjoining street still bears the name of Kröppel-Strasse. The chapel-like edifice here was erected in 1418 as the library of St. Andrew's. — The *Alte Waage (Pl. 43), opposite the church, to the S.E., is a handsome late-Gothic timber structure of 1534, restored in 1856. Among the old private houses in this neighbourhood are No. 3 Reichen-Str. (Pl. C, 3, 4), a Renaissance structure of 1630, and *No. 9 Langen-Str. (Pl. C, 4), dating from 1536, with fine wood-carving. The house Bäckerklint No. 11 (Pl. B, 4) is said to have been the scene of one of Till Eulenspiegel's pranks.

The Bradernkirche (Pl. 18; C, 4), a large Gothic edifice, completed in 1450, and restored in 1865, contains a late-Gothic font in copper of 1450, with reliefs, borne by four standing figures, and an admirable Gothic winged altarpiece with numerous gilded and painted figures, dating from the close of the 14th century. Fine stained glass and choir-stalls. Late-Gothic cloisters. Opposite the church is the Commercial School (Pl. 14), in a Gothic style.

The ancient fortifications of the town were levelled in 1797. and their site has since been converted into beautiful *Promenades. They are adjoined by private gardens and modern dwelling-houses, and bounded by the old most ('Umfluthgraben'). In the midst of those on the S. side of the town is the Railway Station (Pl. C. 6. 7). in the Renaissance style, designed by Th. Ottmer; to the E. of which are the Waterworks, with a tower commanding a good view. - In the Sieges-Platz rises the *National Monument of Victory in memory of the campaign of 1870-71, designed by Breymann (d. 1878) and Diez, and consisting of a colossal Germania on an obelisk adorned with reliefs in bronze. To the right is the Hollandt'sche Garten, to which visitors are admitted. - To the N. of the Sieges-Platz is the Lessing-Platz, with a *Statue of Lessing (Pl. 10; D. 6, 7), in bronze, erected in 1853, and designed by Rietschel, who has judiciously represented 'the great thinker and author' in the costume of his time. -- In the vicinity is the Egydienhalle (Pl. 16), an old Gothic church of the 13-14th cent., now employed for exhibitions of art and industry. Lessing died at No. 12 Egydienmarkt on 15th Feb., 1781. L. Spohr, the composer (p. 97), was born in 1784 at No. 12 in the Mönch-Str. (Pl. D. 7), an adjoining street.

The prettiest part of the Promenades is that between the Augustus-Thor and the theatre. Near the Augustus-Thor rises the Windmühlenberg, which commands an admirable view of the town.

The Monuments-Platz (Pl. E, 6) is adorned with an iron Obelisk, 40 ft. in height, erected in 1822 to the memory of dukes Charles William Ferdinand and Frederick William, the heroes of Jena and Quatrebras. At the N. end of the Platz are the Hussars' Barracks. The space between the Steinthor and the Fallersleber Thor is occupied by the Ducal Park (open to the public).

In the park, on the Steinweg, rises the handsome *Theatre (Pl. E, 4), in the Romanesque style, opened in 1861 on the thousandth anniversary of the foundation of the town. Outside the Fallersleber Thor are the handsome Infantry Barracks (Pl. F, 3), in the Florentine style. Opposite is the Botanical Garden (Pl. E, F, 2, 3), open the whole day except 12-2, closed on Sundays and festivals.— Further on, towards the Wendenthor, in the New Promenade, stands the *Ducal Polytechnicum (Pl. E, 2), a college founded in 1745, and converted into a technical school in 1862. The present building, a Renaissance edifice with a frontage of 330 ft., was completed in 1877 from the designs of Uhda and Körner.

Interior. The vestibule contains two groups by Echterraeyer, representing Art and Science. The staircase is adorned with two ceiling-paintings by Groll of Vienna. — The ground-floor is occupied by extensive collections illustrative of Architecture, Engineering, Mechanics, and Physics (with Guericke's air-pump and other historical relics), and by a Cabinet of Minerals. — The N. staircase ascends to the "Natural History Collection (Sun. 11-1, Wed. & Sat. 2-4), the ornithological section of which is particularly fine.

The Ducal Hospital (Pl. 27; D, 2), by the Wenden-Thor, founded in 1764 and extended in 1876, contains a good Anatomical Museum. Outside the gate is the Municipal Slaughter House, built by Winter in 1879. — Beyond the Gaussberg or Anatomieberg (Pl. D, 2) rises a *Statue of Gauss (1777-1855), the great mathematician, by Schaper. Gauss was born at No. 30 in the adjacent N. Wilhelm-Str. Between the Gaussberg and the Petri-Thor is the Rammelsburger Teich (Pl. P, 2, 3), a pretty little artificial lake.

An oak enclosed by a railing, near the Petri-Thor (Pl. A, 3), and an iron obelisk at the village of Oelper, 11/2 M. farther, are memorials of the spirited march from the Erzgebirge to the Baltic Sea accomplished by Duke Frederick William of Brungwick in 1809. — Between the Petri-Thor and the Hafen-Thor stands the Municipal Hospital (Pl. A, 4), erected in the Gothic style in 1879.

Outside the Steinthor (Pl. F, 5), Helmstedter-Str. 7, is the bronze foundry of Prof. Hovaldt, in which almost all the bronze monuments of Brunswick have been cast. A column in the neighbouring Exerciter-Plats is to the memory of Gen. Olfermann, the commander of the Brunswickers at Waterloo after the death of the Duke.

To the right of the Helmstedter-Str. lie the Cemeteries (Pl. F, 6) of the Domgemeinde and Magnigemeinde (i.e. of the Cathedral and St. Magnus parishes). Lessing's grave in the latter, near the gate, is marked by a monument with a relief by Th. Strümpel.

At the S.E. corner of a large sandy space, bounded by the cemeteries on one side and the quarter of St. Leonhard on the other, about 3/4 M. from the Steinthor (comp. Pl. F, 7,8), rises the Menument of Schill, erected in 1837 to that officer and the fourteen sergeants of his corps, who after a brave, but ill-concerted rising against the French were taken prisoners at Stralsund in 1809 and shot on this spot, where their remains are interred (see p. 202).

The small Chapel adjoining the custodian's house contains memorials of Schill and his period (1809), 'a year full of glory and disaster, as it is termed by the inscription; they consist of his bust, executed by Stiglmays in 1839 from the cast taken from his face after death; his sword, mayr in 1839 from the cast taken from his face after death; his sword, pistols, cartridge-case, waitecoat, purse, and his pocket-book, containing the words, written by Queen Louise herself: "To the brave Herr von Schill. Königsberg, 21. May, 1808. Louise." The chapel also contains portraits of Archduke Charles, Hofer, and the Duke of Brunswick-Oels.

Vieweg's Garten (Pl. F, 8), in the Campe-Str., contains the grave of Joachim Campe (d. 1818), the author.

About 1 M. beyond the Augustus-Thor (Pl. D, 7) are situated the ducal château of Alt-Richmond, erected in 1768, and the villa Neu-Richmond, a Norman-Gothic edifice of 1890, with beautiful grounds.

To the E. of Brunswick, 3 M. from the Steinthor, lies Riddagahausen, with a fine church in the transition-axive, once helonging to a Clisterian with a fine church in the transition-style, once belonging to a Cistercian monastery, and consecrated in 1278. Handsome W. portal.

12. From Hanover to Altenbeken.

68 M. RAILWAY in 3-31/4 hrs.; fares 8 m. 90, 6 m. 70, 4 m. 40 pf.

Hanover, see p. 108. The train crosses the Leine and halts at Linden, the S. W. suburb of Hanover. 71/2 M. Ronnenberg. At (10 M.) Weetzen a branch-line diverges to Haste (p. 80). 15 M. Bennigsen; 181/2 M. Eldagsen, 4 M. from the little town of that name. In the foreground rise the wooded Deister Hills. - 21 M. Springe, with a shooting-box and large deer-park belonging to the emperor. On the hill to the right is the Deisterpforte (Restaurant), a tower commanding a fine view. - 26 M. Münder, 281/2 M. Hasperde.

33 M. Hameln (*Thiemann; *Dose; Sonne; Stadt Bremen), a town with 10,924 inhab., is pleasantly situated on the right bank of the Weser, which is crossed here by a suspension-bridge, below the influx of the Hamel. The salmon-fishery here is important. The handsome Münster, dedicated to St. Boniface, was founded in the 11th cent., rebuilt after a fire in the 14th cent., and thoroughly restored in 1870-75. The town also contains a large number of Renaissance buildings, of which the Rattenfängerhaus (1642) and the Hochzeitshaus (1610), both in the Oster-Str., are the finest. An old legend called the 'Rat-catcher of Hameln', made familiar to English readers by Browning's ballad, has been explained in various ways. One of the latest theories is based on the alleged fact that some of the youth of Hameln were seized in 1284 with the 'dancing mania', left the town, and never returned; but it is equally probable that it is a distorted recollection of the Children's Crusade of 1211. An inscription on the Rattenfängerhaus records the legend, The Post Office and the Marktkirche are also imposing buildings.

The Ktat, a hill on the left bank near the town, once fortified, is a good point of view and a favourite resort (cafés, etc.). Farther up lies good point of view and a tavourite resort (cares, etc.). Farsace up nes Ohr, with a château and park.

15 M. Rinteln (*Stadt Bremen; Stadt Cassel), formerly the capital of the 10 M. Rantein ("Stadt Bremen; Stadt Cassel), formerly the capital of the county of Schaumburg, with a stone bridge across the Weser, was the seat of a university from 1619 to 1809. The Paschenburg (p. 80) is situated 6 M., and the Papenbrink (p. 80) 4½ M. to the N. — A shadeless road leads from Rintein viā Mollenbeck, with an ancient Gothic church, to (5 M.) Varenholz, with a château of 1695. About 3 M. to the N. lies Steinbergen (1nn), whence a walk may be taken to (6 min.) the Arnsburg (p. 80) and (½ hr.) the Lubdener Klippen (view).

18 M. Eisbergen. 25 M. Flotho (Götte), a busy town, beautifully situated, with a fine view from the Ambaughaux (1/2 hr.) which lies the wined with a fine view from the Amthausberg (1/2 hr.), on which lies the ruined castle of Vlotho. — 281/2 M. Oeynhausen (p. 79); 32 M. Löhne (p. 79).

Beyond Hameln the train crosses the Hamel and the Weser, passing the châteaux of Hastenbeck (left) and Ohr (right). (37 M.) Emmerthal, with a large sugar-refinery, it enters the valley of the Emmer; on the hill rises the (3 M.) château of Haemelschenburg, an imposing Renaissance edifice of 1588-1612. Beyond (41 M.) Welsede the Emmer is crossed.

43 M. Pyrmont. - Hotels: Grand Hotel des Bains; Krone, R. & A. 3, B. 1, D. 3 m.; *LIPPESCHER HOF, R., A., & B. 3, D. 2½ m.; STADT BREWER; VOGELER'S PENSION & RESTAURANT, well spoken of. — Furnished Apartments to be had in most of the houses of the place; double-bedded room, 20 m. a week and upwards. — Meyer's Wine Rooms. — Visitors' Tax 10 m., families 15 m. — The station is at Ligde, $/4 M. distant; tramway to the town.

Pyrmont, a pleasant little town in the valley of the Emmer, at the foot of the Bomberg, with mineral springs which have been known since the middle of the 16th century, was formerly one of the most famous watering-places in Europe, and is still visited by 10,000 patients annually. The principal springs are the chalybeate Stahlbrunnen at Pyrmont, and the Salzbrunnen, a saline spring near the station, both with bath-houses. The water has exhilarating and refreshing properties. The Haupt-Allee, an avenue extending from the spring to the château of Prince Waldeck, flanked with the Cursaal, theatre, cafes, and shops, is the chief rendezvous of the visitors. - The Dunsthöhle, a cavern filled with carbonic acid gas, produces effects like those of the famous Grotta del Cane near Naples. Excursions to the Königsberg, Friedensthal, the Schellenberg, etc.

The train again crosses the Emmer. 511/2 M. Schieder, with a château and park belonging to the Prince of Lippe. 561/2 M. Steinheim; 591/2 M. Bergheim (diligence to Horn and Detmold, see p. 78); 621/2 M. Sandebeck. The train now passes through the Egge Hills by a tunnel 11/3 M. long.

Münster, situated on the brook Aa, in a flat district, the capital of the Prussian province of Westphalia and headquarters of the 7th Corps d'Armée, with 40,434 inhab., has been an episcopal see since the 9th century. In the 13th and 14th cent, it was a prosperous Hanseatic town, and even carried on commerce beyond seas on its own account. At the time of the Reformation it was the scene of the fanatical excesses of the Anabaptists under Johann of Leyden (1534-35; see below), and in 1661 it finally succumbed to the episcopal voke of the warlike Bishop von Galen. In the 18th cent., when Fürstenberg, Hemsterhuis, the Princess Gallitzin, F. L. Stolberg, and other notabilities resided here, Münster was one of the chief intellectual centres of Germany. Of the university established at this period, the theological and philosophical faculties still exist under the name of an Academy (p. 130; 300 students). The bishopric was secularised in 1803 and annexed to Prussia.

The town still retains many medizeval characteristics, which are most conspicuous in the Prinzipal-Markt and Roggen-Markt with their arcades, picturesque old gabled houses, the Church of St. Lambert, and the Rathhaus. Besides these Gothic buildings, there are many dwelling-houses of the Renaissance period, and even those of the 17th cent. present a medieval appearance, with their lofty gables and arcades on the ground-floors. Amongst the peculiarities of Münster, are the 'Höfe', or mansions of the wealthy nobility (Romberger Hof, Erdotosten Hof, and others), some of which are in the roccoo style of last century.

To the left as we enter the town from the station, on the Promenade, rises the dome of the new Synagogue. A little farther on, also to the left, is the Church of St. Servatius (Pl. 14; F, 4), erected as a chapel in the Romanesque style in 1197, afterwards enlarged, rebuilt in 1537, and restored in 1854-58, when the stained glass, carved altars, and upper story of the tower were added.

The beautiful Gothic *Church of St. Lambert (Pl. 10; E, 3), built in the latter half of the 14th cent. on the site of an earlier church, with its chief portal of the beginning of the 15th cent., has recently been restored. The choir contains a fine open staircase. On the outside, over the S. portal, the genealogy of Christ. The edifice is characterised by its graceful proportions and bold walting.

The tower, the lowest part of which belonged to the original church, was condemned as unsafe in 1881, and had to be taken down to be rebuilly. On it were suspended the three iron cages in which the bodies of the fanatics John of Leyden, Knipperdolling, and Krechting, the leaders of the Anabaptists, were placed after they had been tortured with red-hot pincers and executed in 1536.

The Anabaptists, a sect widely spread over Germany and the Netherlands about the beginning of the Reformation, added at that period to their rejection of infant-baptism a number of other starting and pernicious doctrines. One of their most fanatical adherents was Thomas Münzer, leader of the insurgent peasantry. In Holland they were known, and still exist, under the name of Mennonites, derived from their founder Menno Simons. In 1533 a number of Dutch Anabaptists, headed by John Bockhold, a tailor from Leyden, and Matthiesen, a baker from Haarlem, settled the Münster, where with the aid of the Pastor Rottmann and Counsellor Knipperdolling they succeeded in establishing their supremacy in the town and in banishing the episcopal party. Bockhold (John of Leyden) was proclaimed king of the 'New Sion' in 1534. A reign of terror now began, polygamy was introduced, and many atrocities committed, while famine and pestilence devastated the town. The following year, however, Münster was compelled to capitulate to the bishop and his army, and Bockhold, Knipperdolling, and Krechting, the leaders of the Anabaptists, ware cruelly tortured and executed.

To the S. of the Lambertikirche is the Prinzipal-Markt, surrounded by Gothic arçades (see above). Here stands the *Rathhaus (Pl. 20; E, 4), with a beautiful Gothic gable, containing the 'Friedenssaal' where the Peace of Westphalia was signed on 24th Oct.. 1648. The W. facade dates from the second half of the 14th century. Entrance from the back.

The FRIEDENSSAL, built in 1577 and restored in 1853, contains a picturesque chimney-piece of 1577, and portraits of several ambassadors and princes, present at the conclusion of the peace, said to have been painted by Terburg, the well-known Dutch master. It also contains old armour, goblets, etc., and the pincers with which the unfortunate Anabaptists were tortured before their execution. On the first floor is the Large Salcon, in the Gothic style, designed and executed by Salzenberg, which was added in 1862, and is adorned with twelve historical portraits.

Adjoining the Rathhaus, on the side next the church, Prinzipal-Markt 8, is the old Weigh-House, a Renaissance building of 1615, with a gable and balcony. — On the other side of the Rathhaus, Prinzipal - Markt 18, is the old Stadtkeller, another Renaissance edifice with traces of the mediæval style (1569-71); it contains the collections of the Kunstverein (Pl. 16; E, 4), consisting mainly of early Italian and German paintings. The Westphalian school is represented by Ludger tom Ring (d. 1547), his son Hermann (d. 1599), and other masters.

We now proceed through the Michaelis-Platz to the Dom-Platz, which is shaded with lime-trees and embellished with a bronze Statue of Fürstenberg, the statesman (d. 1811). To the left is the new Post Office, in a Gothic style

The *Cathedral (Pl. 7; E, 3), begun in 1225 on the site of an earlier building, and consecrated in 1261, was not completed till the next century. The altar stands in a pentagonal apse, round which runs an ambulatory. The S. vestibule centains old Romanesque sculptures and columns, with statues of Christ and the Apostles (11th cent.). The W. portal dates from 1516.

Interior. The ancient decorations were almost entirely destroyed by the Anabaptists, and the harmonious proportions of the building have lately been disguised by gaudy painting. In the W. part of the Nave, a Pieta by Achtermann of Rome, 1860. Over the S. portal the Last Judgment in relief, 1692. Opposite to it, over the N. portal, is an old painting of the 14th cent., Frisians offering tribute to St. Paul. — RETRO-CHOIR. Achtermann's Descent from the Cross, a fine group in marble; to the right, Crucifixion by Hermann tom Ring. On the wall, an astronomical clock, constructed in 1400. Behind the high-altar, the chapel and monument of the warlike bishop Bern. v. Galen (d. 1678). Farther on, Raising of Lazarus by Ludger tom Ring. — Choir. House, adorned with elaborate wood-carvings, contains the credence-table, which was used as a draught-board by the Anabaptists.

In the Domplatz is the Episcopal Residence (Pl. 3; D, 3). Adjoining it are the Academy (see p. 128) and the Museum of Ecclesiastical Antiquities (Pl. 18; No. 25), the latter a Romanesque edifice by Manger, finished in 1866. Opposite the cathedral is the Ständehaus (Pl. 23), or Chamber of the Estates; at the entrance the statues of Arminius and Wittekind. Adjacent is the Ludgerianum, containing the interesting Historical Museum.

The noble Gothic *Liebfrauen or Ueberwasser-Kirche (Pl. 11; D, 2) dates from the 14th cent., but most of the internal decorations belong to a recent period. In the choir are three fine stained-glass windows. The mural paintings, by Mosler and Settegast, depict the foundation of the original chapel on this site by Ludger, first Bishop of Münster (802-809), and the foundation of the Convent of the Virgin in 1040. Below the organ-loft are two votive pictures by Ludger tom Ring, and in the sacristy are paintings of the Evangelists by the same artist. — The finest part of the Tower, which was begun in the 14th cent., is the upper story, dating from the 15th century. A spire is now being added.

St. Ægidius (Pl. 6; D, 4), once the church of the Capuchins, of the 18th cent., is adorned with freecoes by Steinle, Settegast, and Mosler.

St. Ignatius (Pl. 9; F, 2), a modern Gothic church of the Jesuits (1857-58), is sumptuously fitted up.

The Ludgerikirche (Pl. 12; E, 5), with a *Tower terminating in a picturesque lantern, was erected in the Romanesque style in 1170 and extended in the Gothic style after a fire in 1383. The whole was judiciously restored in 1856-60. — By the Ludgeri-Thor (Pl. E, 5, 6) is a War Monument, in memory of 1870-71.

Outside the Mauritz-Thor is the abbey-church of St. Mauriee, founded about 1070, and rebuilt in 1862 in the Romanesque style, with three towers and a Gothic choir of 1451. The chief tower dates from the 12th century. The monuments of the founders Bishop Frederick (1063-84) and Bishop Erpo (1097-1118) were descerated by the Anabaptists, but restored in 1820 and 1768. The church also contains old stained glass and mural paintings. Near it is the modern Gothic Hospital.

The Church of St. Martin (Pl. 13; F, 4), a Gothic edifice begun in 1187, and finished towards the end of the 14th cent., was restored in 1859.

Other noteworthy public buildings are the Schoehaus, or old guild-hall of the shoemakers, Alter Fischmarkt 27; the Krameramthaus, Alter Steinweg 7, renewed about 1620; and the new Prison, containing 360 separate cells. On the S. side of the Neu-Platz are the new Law Courts, and on the W. side is the Schloss (Pl. 22; B, 2, 3), formerly the episcopal palace, built in 1767 on the site of the old citadel. It is adorned with allegorical sculptures. and possesses a chapel with an altarpiece by Tischbein.

At the back of the Schloss are pleasant grounds (cafe) and the Botanical Garden (Pl. 4) of the Academy. The *Zoological Garden, to the S. of the latter, is a favourite place of resort.

The fortifications of the town were converted into promenades after the Seven Years' War, the only relic of them being the Zwinger and the Ruddenthurm.

General Scharnhorst (d. 1813) received his first military training here. The fortress is carefully kept up, and contains a collection of cannon and weapons of various kinds. Rehburg, on the W. bank, is a pleasant watering-place, with baths and whey-cure, 21/2 M. to the S. of the small town of the same name.

Bremen, the second in importance of the three independent Hanseatic cities, with 112,453 inhab., one of the chief commercial places in N. Germany, lies in a sandy plain on both banks of the Weser, about 37 M. from its influx into the German Ocean. On the right bank is the Altstadt, formerly enclosed by ramparts, round which the Suburbs are situated, and on the left bank the Neustadt, to which the suburb outside the Bunte Thor has been recently added. Many well-preserved old buildings testify to the mediæval importance of the place, while the numerous handsome edifices erected within the last twenty or thirty years, entitle it to a respectable rank among the modern cities of Europe.

The Bishopric of Bremen was founded in 788 by Charlemagne. In The Bishopric of Bremen was founded in 188 by Unstremagne. In the 10th cent, the town, in consequence of certain privileges accorded to it by the archbishops, began to flourish as a seaport and a commercial place; but in the 13-14th cent. the citizens contrived gradually to shake off the archiepiscopal yoke. They joined the Hanseatic League (p. 175), but for a long time kept aloof from its proceedings. In 1235 they were formally excluded from it, and, although admitted again in 1358, they were afterwards repeatedly expelled. In 1622 Bremen embraced the Reformation, and in 1547 gallantly repelled an attack by the Imperial army. The citizens bravely defended themselves against the Swedes also, who had obtained possession of the episcopal see by the Peace of Westphalia, and stoutly maintained the position of Bremen as a free city of the Empire. The town is now chiefly indebted for its importance to its seaport, Bremerhaven (p. 137), which is entered yearly by upwards of 3000 seagoing vessels. The value of the imports amounts to about 500 million, of the exports to about 430 million marks. The staple commodities are tobacco, petroleum, rice, grain, wool, and cotton. In 1882 the merchants of Bremen possessed 344 sea-going vessels, including 81 steamers. Bremen is one of the principal starting-points of German emigrants to America, many thousands of whom quit their Fatherland by this port every year (in the years 1832-81: 1,680,000; in 1881: 98,510).

The *Promenades, or Wall-Anlagen, laid out by Altmann on the old ramparts, and separating the old town from the suburbs. constitute the principal ornament of the city. A bust of Altmann has been erected on a bastion near the Doven-Thor (Pl. C. 3). The moat is crossed by six bridges, named after the old gates. Nearest the station is the Heerden-Thor (Pl. E, 4), and farther W. the Ansgarii-Thor (Pl. D. 4). To the E. of the Heerden-Thor is the Bischofs-Thor (Pl. F. 5), near which is the Theatre (Pl. 23), built in 1843 and renovated in 1863. In the promenades, not far from the Heerden-Thor, is a Marble Vase with reliefs by Steinhäuser, representing the so-called 'Klosterochsenzug', which formerly took place here annually. - Near the Ansgarii-Thor is a *Monument (Pl. D. 3) to the natives of Bremen who fell in 1870-71. On a round granite pedestal, bearing the names (58 in all), rises an admirably-conceived bronze figure of a victorious young warrior; the bronze relief represents the battle of Sedan. - The Kaiser-Strasse, constructed in 1874, leads from the Ansgarii-Thor to the Kaiserbrücke (p. 136).

The principal business part of Bremen consists of the three squares, the Domshof, Domsheide, and the Market, situated near each other in the Altstadt; from the market diverge also the two principal streets, the Langen-Str., containing several buildings of the 16th cent., and the Obern-Str.

In the *MARKET-PLACE (Pl. D, 5) are the Rathhaus, the Exchange, the 'Schütting', and several handsome old dwelling-houses.

The *Bathhaus (Pl. 19), in its main features a Gothic building, was erected in 1405-10; at a late period of the Renaissance a new façade was added, resting on twelve Doric columns, and remarkable for its richly-decorated bow-window and handsome gable. The sixteen statues between the windows are mediæval, those towards the market represent the Emperor and the seven Electors.

Traversing the lower corridor, we ascend a winding wooden staircase to the Great Hall, which is always open to the public (about 49 yds. long, 15 yds. wide, and recently handsomely restored). On the ceiling are medallion-portraits of German emperors from Charlemagne to Sigismund. The stained-glass windows contain names and armorial bearings of counsellors of Bremen. In a corner of the hall stands a *Statue of Smidt (d. 1857), burgomaster of Bremen, in Carrara marble, by Steinhäuser. The Galidenkammer, where the women formerly assembled on the occasion of grand processions, is approached by a finely-carved old staircase. On the W. side is the entrance to the celebrated Rathskeller, lately considerably enlarged and adorned with admirable *Frescoss by Fitger.

On the W. side is the entrance to the celebrated "Rathakeller, lately considerably enlarged and adorned with admirable "Freecoes by Fitger. The cellar, which contains Rhine and Moselle wines exclusively, is open daily till '11 p.m. (on Sundays not before 3 p.m.). Wine may be purchased by the glass or bottle; oysters and various cold viands are also supplied. The oldest casks are the 'Rose' (dating from 1653) and the 'Twelve Apostles', which are kept in another part of the cellar, and are shown to the curious. The 'Rose' derives its name from a large rose painted on the ceiling, beneath which the magistrates are said in ancient times to have held their most important meetings, such deliberations 'sub rosa' being kept profoundly secret. Travellers versed in German literature will recognise several of the 'dramatis personse' in Hauf's 'Phantasien im Bremer Rathakeller', to which some of the frescoes also refer.

In front of the Rathhaus stands the *Roland (Pl. 7), a colossal figure in stone, 18 ft. high, erected in 1412 on the site of an earlier figure of wood, a symbol of free commercial intercourse and supreme criminal jurisdiction, and the palladium of civic liberty. In his left hand the giant bears a shield with the imperial eagle, and a naked sword in his right, while the head and hand of a criminal at his feet indicate the extent of the municipal jurisdiction.

On the S.E. side of the market rises the *Exchange (Pl. 2; D, E, 5), designed by H. Müller, and completed in 1864, an imposing edifice in the Gothic style. The W. façade is adorned with six figures emblematical of the different branches of commerce and manufacture. At the N. portal, on the left Fortune, on the right Prudence. The handsome *Hall, with a coffered ceiling, and richly decorated with gilding, has double sisles supported by twelve columns. The staircase is adorned with mural paintings by Arthur Fitger, and the S. wall of the hall is occupied by a large painting by Janssen, representing the colonisation of the Baltic provinces by the Hanseatic League. Opposite rises a figure representing Brema, by Kropp. Business-hour 1 o'clock (adm. from 12.30 to 2; fee).

To the W. of the Exchange, and S. of the Rathhaus, is the Schütting (Pl. 20), or Chamber of Commerce, erected in 1538-94. To the N.W. is the Liebfrauenkirche (Pl. 14), dating from the 12th and 13th cent., recently restored on the side facing the market. The modern Stadtkaus (Pl. 22) adjoins the Rathhaus on the N.E. side.

The *Cathedral (Pl. 12; E, 5), a Romanesque edifice with double choir, the main parts of which belong to the original building, was begun in the 11th cent. and greatly altered in the 13th. The N. aisle, which is of equal height with the nave, was added in the 16th century. The principal façade was greatly disfigured by the falling of the S. tower in 1638, the ruins of which were exposed by the removal of a neighbouring house in 1876.

The Interior (entered through the house of the sacristan, Sand-Str. 9) has been restored and fitted up for Protestant worship. Admirable Organ. In front of it are fine reliefs dating from 1500, representing Charlemagne, St. Willehad with the model of the cathedral, bishops, and others; the modern stained glass Windows, with portraits of Luther and Melanchthon, were executed at Nuremberg. Rococo Pulpit, presented by Queen Christina of Sweden. In the low S. Aiste is a Pont, in bronze, of the 11th century. A few steps here descend into the Bleiteller (i. e. lead-cellar, where the lead for the roof was melted), which contains several mummies, the oldest having been 400, the most recent 100 years in this undecayed condition. This vault still possesses the property of proventing decomposition, a proof of which is afforded by the dried poultry suspended in it some years ago.

In the Domshor (Pl. E, 5), an extensive Platz on the N. side of the cathedral, is the Museum (Pl. 17), beautifully decorated in the interior, and dedicated to social purposes; strangers may be introduced by a member. — The neighbouring Rutenhof, a private edice erected in 1875, contains in the court (open to the public) a frieze, painted by Fitger with frescoes from German history. — In the vicinity, between the Katharinen-Str. and the Söge-Str., is the Stadt-Bibliothek (Pl. 21; 70,000 vols.; open daily, 11-1, on Wed. 3-5 also).

Adjoining the S. tower of the cathedral, at the back, is the Gothic building of the Künstlerverein (artists' association; Pl. 10). The upper floor of the new wing (entrance adjoining the cathedral; open Sun., Tues., Thurs., 11-1) contains a valuable Natural History Collection, which is specially rich in its ornithological and ethnographical departments.

The DOMERBIDE is adorned with a Statue of Gustavus Adolphus (Pl. 4; E, 5), designed by the Swedish sculptor Fogelberg, and cast in bronze at Munich. It was destined for Gothenburg, but the vessel in which it was conveyed having been wrecked, the statue was rescued by boatmen of Heligoland, purchased by merchants of Bremen, and presented to their native city in 1856. — The handsome new Post Office, in the Renaissance style, stands here. Beyond it is the Haustschule.

The Roman Catholic Johanniskirche (Pl. 13; E, 6) is a lofty edifice, with a nave 60 ft. in height, borne by eight slender columns; it contains some fine stained glass.

Near the Osterthor, in the Wall-Anlagen, is situated the Kunsthalle (Pl. 9; E, F, 6), containing pictures, chiefly modern, a few sculptures, and a good collection of drawings by Dürer, old engravings, woodcuts, etc. Admission on Sun. 2-4, 20 pf.; Tues. 11-2, 50 pf.; at other times on payment of a fee to the keeper. Entrance on the left side.

GROUND FLOOR. *Leutze, Washington's passage of the Delaware, on the right a number of sculptures in marble and casts by Steinhäuser, Hirt, and others. — Staircase. *Stitke's cartoons of two frescoes at Stolzenfels: King John of Bohemia at the battle of Crécy, and Emp. Frederick II. receiving his bride Isabella of England. — FIRET FLOOR. Steinhäuser, Psyche, Pandora, sculptures in marble; Saal, The midnight-sun in Norway; Schwerdgeburt, Departure of the Salsburg Protestants; Zimmermann, Forest-scene, A. Achenbach, Westphalian mill; Meyer of Bremen, Penitent daughter; Bamberger, English coast near Hastings; Gude, A coast-scene in Norway; Calame, Swiss mountains; Ritter, The son's last letter; Camphausen, The passage to Alson. Also several Dutch, early German, and Italian works; Backgammon-players, by Terburg; sea-pieces by Gruyter and Koekkoek. Amongst the sculptures: Violin-player, Mignon, etc., by Steinhäuser.

The Altmannshöhe (Pl. E, 6; comp. p. 133), at the S. end of the promenades, affords a pleasant view of the busy Weser and the Neustadt; opposite lie the water-works of the town. — To the W. of this point, in the Körner-Platz, is a monument to Theodore Körner (Pl. 5; G, 6). — In the promenades, to the N. of the Kunsthalle, rises the marble *Statue of Olbers (d. 1840; Pl. 6), a distinguished physician and astronomer, by Steinhäuser.

The new quarters of the town outside the Osterthor and Bischofsthor (Pl. E, F, 5, 6), and the Osterdeich on the banks of the Weser (Pl. F, G, 7), contain many handsome private houses. The modern Gothic Rembertikirche (Pl. 16; F, 4), built in 1870, is also noticeable.

The Ansgaritkirche (Pl. 11; D, 4), erected in 1229-43, with an altarpiece by Tischbein, has been recently restored and adorned with stained-glass windows. The tower, 357 ft. in height, commands an extensive view. Opposite the W. portal is a group in sandstone by Steinhäuser, representing St. Ansgarius, the apostle of the north, and first archbishop of Bremen and Hamburg (d. 865), in the act of releasing a heathen boy from the yoke of paganism. — Beyond it is the Gewerbehaus (Pl. 8), erected in 1619 as a guild-hall of the cloth-merchants, with a well-preserved Renaissance facade in sandstone. The interior is restored, and has been emploved for commercial purposes since 1863. It also accommodates the Technical Institution, with its collection of models (adm. daily. except Sat., 10-1). - Adjoining the tower of the Ansgarijkirche is the new Savings Bank, in the Renaissance style.

Several Bridges connect the Altstadt on the right with the Neustadt on the left bank of the Weser. In the centre of the town the Grosse Brücke (Pl. D. 6) crosses from the Wachtstrasse to the Werder, from which a smaller bridge crosses the Kleine Weser to the Neustadt. Below the Werder is the recently-finished Kaiser-Brücke (Pl. C, 4, 5), which connects the Kaiser-Strasse (p. 133) with the Grosse Allee in the Neustadt. The ancient Haus Seefahrt, an asylum for aged seamen and their widows, founded in 1525, was removed on the construction of the Kaiser-Str.; the famous inscription above the door, 'Navigare necesse est, vivere non necesse', has been placed on the new institution outside the Stephani-Thor. The hall of the new building is adorned with paintings by A. Fitger. — At the lower (W.) end of the town the river is crossed by the Railway Bridge (Pl. A. 3, 4: p. 138), which is also available for foot-passengers.

To the N.E. of the town, about 1/4 M. from the central railway station, is situated the Bargerpark (Pl. F, G, H, 1, 2), laid out since 1866, and now a favourite resort, especially on evenings when concerts are given (Restaurant). — To the E. of Bremen is Schwachhausen (on the tramway-line to Horn, p. 182), another popular resort.

Pop. 4066. The harbour, completed in 1863, has excellent magazines and cranes, and there is a separate harbour for petroleum.

Steamers to Norderney, see p. 139; to Heligoland, see p. 156. —

On the opposite bank of the Geeste lies -

Bremerhaven (Beermann's Hotel, R., L., & A. 21/2, B. 1, omn. 3/4 m.; Steinhoff; Löhr, all three in the market-place; Winter, on the quay), the prosperous seaport of Bremen, founded by the advice of the burgomaster Smidt (p. 133) on a small piece of land purchased from Hanover in 1827, and enlarged by later treaties with Hanover and Prussia. It is now a rapidly-increasing town with 14,239 inhab, and extensive shipping traffic. The Docks are commodious and well organised, and, in practical arrangement, equal to those of Antwerp. Close to the two old docks, completed in 1830 and 1851, a third dock, on a very large scale, was constructed in 1872-76. A visit may be paid to the extensive work-shops and dry-docks of the Norddeutsche Lloyd, and also to one of the large Transatlantic steamers usually lying here (tickets at the Lloyd Office). The Lighthouse commands a good survey of the environs. The 'time-ball' falls at noon by Bremerhaven time, and 24 min. later falls again at noon by Greenwich time. The lofty open spire of the modern Gothic church is a conspicuous object for miles around.

On the N.E. Bremerhaven is adjoined by Lehe, a small town of 9092

inhab., connected with Bremerhaven and Geestemunde by tramway.

15. From Cologne to Bremen and Hamburg by Münster. From Münster to Emden.

RAILWAY to (101 M.) Münster in 31/4-51/2 hrs. (fares 13 m. 20, 9 m. 20, 6 m. 70 pf.; express 14 m. 70, 11 m., 7 m. 60 pf.); to (207 M) Bremen in 58/4-12 hrs. (fares 26 m. 40, 19 m. 80, 13 m. 30 pf.; express 30 m. 10, 22 m. 40, 15 m. 60 pf.); to (277 M.) Hamburg, express in 81/2-9 hrs. (fares 41 m. 50, 30 m. 90, 21 m. 50 pf.). — From Cologne to (212 M.) Emden in 12 hrs. (fares 25 m. 90, 18 m. 90, 12 m. 90 pf.).

From Cologne to (44 M.) Oberhausen and (59 M.) Wanne, see R. 3. The Hamburg line here diverges to the N. from the Minden railway. Beyond (66 M.) Recklinghausen the train crosses the Lippe. 75 M. Haltern is the junction for the Hamburg and Flushing line. 82 M. Dülmen, the junction for the Dortmund, Gronau (60 M.). and Enschede line. 90 M. Appelhülsen.

101 M. Münster, see p. 127. From Münster to Emden, see p. 138; to Hamm, p. 76. Another railway leads from Münster to Burgsteinfurt (with a fine park) and (35 M.) Gronau.

The train crosses the Ems. 108 M. Westbevern; 116 M. Kattenvenne; 120 M. Lengerich, on the N.W. spurs of the Teutoburgian Forest. Tunnel, 820 yds. long.

Diligence from Lengerich twice daily to (4 M.) Tecklenburg (Steinert; *Rest. Felsengrotte), a small town with a ruined château. — Iburg (*Inn), 6 M. to the E. of Tecklenburg and 91/2 M. to the S. of Osnabrück, is another favourite resort of the Osnabrückers. It possesses an old episcopal château and Benedictine abbey. Fine view from the neighbouring 126 M. Hassbergen, whence diverges a short branch to the Georg

Marien-Hütte.

130 M. Osnabrück, see p. 107. The line here crosses the Hanover and Rheine line (p. 107). - 138 M. Vehrie: 147 M. Bohmis.

About 3 M. to the S. of Bohmte are the small saline baths of Essen (Siek), lying amid the woods at the base of the low Santel Hills. Hence to Ostenwalde (p. 108), 9 M.

154 M. Lemforde, to the W. of which lies the Dümmer Sec. abounding in fish. 174 M. Barnstorf; 182 M. Twistringen, a strawplaiting place, with a new Gothic church: 187 M. Bassum: 192 M. Syke; 197 M. Kirchweyhe. The train now crosses the Weser by a handsome iron bridge. 203 M. Hemelingen (for Sebaldsbrück, p. 131).

207 M. Bremen, see p. 131.

Stations Oberneuland, Sagehorn, Ottersberg, (233 M.) Rotenburg, Lauenbrück, Tostedt. At (258 M.) Buchholz a branch diverges to Lüneburg (24 M.; p. 144).

270 M. Harburg, see p. 145, - 277 M. Hamburg, see p. 145.

From Münster to Emden.

111 M. RAILWAY in 4-53/4 hrs.; fares 14 m. 80, 10 m. 70, 7 m. 20 pf. Münster, see p. 127. Flat, moorland country, 9 M. Greven: 16 M. Emsdetten.

24 M. Rheine (*Rail. Restaurant; *Hôtel |Schulze), a cottonmanufacturing town on the Ems, with a fine old Gothic church, is the junction of the line to Osnabrück and Hanover (p. 107).

501/2 M. Salzbergen is the junction for Arnheim - Rotterdam and for Amsterdam (comp. p. 107). 44 M. Lingen; 56 M. Meppen, near the confluence of the Hagse and the Ems. 84 M. Pavenburg, the largest settlement on the Hoch-Moor, a marshy district 120 sq. M. in extent, intersected by canals. 90 M. Ihrhove, whence a line diverges to Neuschanz and other places in Holland (see Baedeker's Belgium and Holland).

95 M. Leer (*Möller; Voogdt), a busy mercantile place, with 10,074 inhab., lies on the Leda, at its union with the Ems, in the most fertile part of Ostfriesland. (Railway to Oldenburg and Bremen, see R. 17. Steamboats to Norderney, see p. 139.)

111 M. Emden (*Sonne; Weisses Haus, near the steamboatquay, R. 2 m., B. 1 m.; Bellevue, Heeren's Hotel, both near the station: *Prinz von Preussen), with 13,667 inhab., a free town of the Empire down to 1744, formerly situated on the Ems, but now 11/2 M. distant from it, is a prosperous, Dutch-looking place, intersected by navigable canals, which are connected with the Ems and the Dollart (p. 139), and at high tide are 111/2 ft. in depth. The *Rathhaus, a rich Renaissance structure of 1574-76, contains an interesting *Arsenal, where a number of very curious old firearms of the Thirty Years' War are preserved. There are also various French weapons, captured in 1870-71, and presented by the emperor. The tower commands a good survey of the town and environs (fee 50 pf.). The Grosse Kirche contains the marble monument of Count Enno II. of E. Friesland. The Natural History Meseum possesses a fine collection of specimens of amber. The Museum of the Gesellschaft für Kunst und Alterthum contains a very creditable collection of pictures, coins, and antiquities, and also a library of works referring to E. Friesland.

Borkum (pp. 140, 141).

FROM EMDEN TO JEVER, 49 M., railway in 5-68/4 hrs. — Most of the stations are unimportant. From (11 M.) Georgsheil a branch-line diverges to (7 M.) Aurich (Deutsches Haus; *Piqueurhof), the principal town of E. Friesland, pleasantly situated, with 5390 inhabitants. The Landschaftssaal and the governor's house contain portraits of the former princes of the country. Handsome château. — 20 M. Norden (Dippel; Deutsches Haus), an industrial town of 6617 inhab., with a pretty church of 1445. To Norderney, see below. — 88 M. Esens, chief town of a marshy but fertile district called the Harlingerland. — 49 M. Jever, with 5806 inhab., was formerly fortified. It is united with the Jade by a canal. The Jeverland was independent down to 1573, and has belonged to Oldenburg since 1814. - Continuation of the railway to Wilhelmshaven and Oldenburg, see p. 143.

16. The East-Frisian Islands.

Morderney. Borkum.

Comp. Map, p. 187.

From Grestemunde (Bremerhaven) to Norderney a steamer in summer daily, except Sun., in 4-5 hrs. (fare 10 m., return-ticket 15 m.). - From Exdaily, except Sun., in 4-0 hrs. (fare 10 m., return-ticket 10 m.). — FROM EM-DEN to Norderway a steamer daily in summer in 4-5 hrs. (fare 8, return 12 m.; starting three times a week from Leer, p. 138; in 6-7 hrs.; same fares). — From Nordern by omnibus to the coast in ½ hr. (50 pf.), and thence by steamboat in ½ hr. to Norderney (1 m. 20 or 60 pf.; also a ferry-boat, 1 m. 60 pf.). — FROM EMDEN to Borkum a steamer in summer daily in 4-5 hrs. (fare 8, return 12 m.; ferry-boat 1½ and 2 m.). Return-tickets by all these steamers are available for the whole season.

FROM GEESTEMUNDS TO NORDERNEY. The steamboat-pier is on the Geeste, 1/2 M. from the railway-station (comp. Map, p. 137). The steamer passes the mouth of the Jade and steers through the Watt, a strait with numerous sand-banks, which separates the E. Frisian islands from the mainland, and is passable for carriages at low tide at the S.E. end. It then passes the islands of Wangeroog, Spiekeroog, Langeroog, and Baltrum, all frequented for sea-bathing. Wangeroog (Carstens; Brämer, D. 11/2 m.) is the most popular, being visited by about 1000 sea-bathers annually; it may also be reached from Jever (diligence to Carolinensiel in 31/2 hrs., and ferry thence in 11/2 hr.).

FROM EMDEN TO NORDERNEY (see above). The steamer describes a long curve towards the S., and then steers towards the N.W. through the Dollart, a bay of 120 sq. M. in area, formed by an inundation of the Ems in 1277, which occasioned the destruction of a town and numerous villages (comp. Map, p. 137).

FROM NORDEN TO NORDERNEY. Omnibus in 1/2 hr. from Norden (see above) to the Norddeich, whence a steamboat crosses once or twice daily to Norderney at high tide in 1/2 hr.

Norderney. - Arrival. Carriages are in waiting at the pier (96 yards long) to convey travellers to the Conversationshaus (40 pf. each person). The services of a commissionnaire may then be engaged to facilitate the search for apartments. Luggage is conveyed from the steamer to the luggage-sheds at the entrance of the village (for which 60 pf. per 55lbs. is charged), where it is afterwards claimed by its owners.

Hotels and Restaurants. *SCHUCHARDT; *BELLEVUE; KAISERHOF; DEUT-Hotels and Restaurants. "SCHUCHARDT; "BELLEVUE; KAISERHOF; DEUTSCHES HAUS; MEVER'S, small, with good restaurant; "SIMMREING, D. 11/2 m.; ENGERAUBEN'S FAMILY HOTEL, D. 13/4 m. Table d'hôte at these hotels at 1 or 2 o'clock, less expensive than at the Conversationshaus. — At the "Conversationshaus and the "STRANDHALLE, table d'hôte daily at 1 and 3, and at 2 and 31/2 o'clock respectively, at 21/4-4 m.; suppers à la carte. Apartments are not let at these establishments. — Oterendorp's Restaurant, good, but expensive; Borg's Old German Wine Rooms; Hogel, confectioner; Winkler, unpretending.

PRIVATE APARTMENTS. The best are those in the Grosse Logirhaus and in the new buildings of the Bremer Baugesellschaft. Room with seaview 40-50 m. per week, suite of rooms for a family 100 m.; table-d'hôte 21/4 m. Booms of modest pretension, but clean, may be hired in most of the streets. A bedroom with one or two beds from 12 m. a week upwards; a suite of 4-6 rooms, kitchen, and servants' accommodation, 80-150 m. per week. In most of these apartments breakfast and supper may be had at a moderate charge.

VISITORS' Tax 10 m., 2 pers. 15, 3-4 pers. 20 m., op payment of which tickets are obtainable at the bath-office, 9-12 a.m. and 3-6 p.m., admitting the holder to the reading-room, the concerts, and réunions.

ting the holder to the reading-room, the concerts, and reunions.

Bath Tickers (1 m. including towels) issued at the bath-office. The inexperienced bather who requires a bath-attendant ('Rothhosen') in the water pays 1-11/2 m. a week for his services. — Bathing hours from 6 a.m. to 2 p.m. (tide-tables at the bazaar, 40 pf.). — The various rules, formalities, and petty payments will probably seem irksome and ridiculous to the vigorous and practised bather, but it must be borne in mind that the visitors are numerous, the space limited, and most of the bathers inexperienced. — At the Warmbadehaus fresh-water, shower, and other baths may be had. Tickets at the bath-office.

Norderney, i. e. 'northern island', with (1880) 2114 inhab.. about 8 M. long, and 11/2 M. broad, is the largest and the most populous of the East Frisian islands, and like the rest of the group is sandy and almost entirely destitute of vegetation. The village, which is at present the most popular German sea-bathing place (9000 visitors yearly), lies at the S.W. angle of the island. It is also frequented as a winter-residence by persons with delicate chests, and a large institution has been built for scrofulous children.

At the S. end of the village is the Conversationshaus, surrounded by grounds, and containing dining, ball, billiard, and reading-rooms, and a theatre. Near it are the Bazaar with its shops, the old and new Warmbadehaus, and the Grosse Logirhaus. - From the Conversationshaus towards the E. runs the Marien-Strasse, commanding a view of the opposite coast and the roads. Along the downs towards the N.W. extends the new Victoria-Strasse, facing the sea. At the end of it is the Strand-Halle, similar to the Conversationshaus, but better fitted up. Farther on is the Kaiser-Strasse, which also looks towards the sea, and at the end of it are the buildings erected by the Bremer Baugesellschaft, or building company.

The Beach to the N. of the village is the principal rendezvous of the visitors. The S.W. part is the Damenstrand (from which gentlemen are excluded till 2 p.m.), near the Strandhalle, and separated from it by a slight eminence called the Marienhöhe (café); the E. part is the Herrenstrand ('Giftbude' restaurant), near which is the Georgshöhe, commanding a pleasant view.

The island is bounded on three sides by Dinsen, or sand-hills, 30-50 ft. in height, formed by the action of the wind, partly overgrown with the peculiar 'Helmi' grass, and presenting a barrier to the encroachments of the sea. The island, however, has frequently suffered seriously from storms, and bulwarks of masonry have therefore been constructed for its

At the S.E. end of the village, towards the mainland, is the Schanze, an intreachment thrown up by the French in 1811, now converted into pleasure-grounds, which are much frequented in hot weather. The 'Ruppertsburger Kamp', a small grove of alders, encircling an eminence, 3/4 M. farther to the E., may also be visited (1/2 M. farther a small inn). — About 2 M. farther on is the Lighthouse, 165 ft. high, erected in 1873 and commanding a fine panorama (adm. from 10 to 1/2 hr. before sunset; tickets at the bath-office 50 pf.). At the E. end of the island is the Weisse Düne, a hill of white sand, affording an extensive prospect.

Borkum, situated at the mouth of the Ems, 9 M. from the Dutch coast and between the channels called the Ooster Ems and Wester Ems, is the westernmost of the E. Frisian islands. It is 5 M. long and 21/2 M. broad, and consists of the Ostland and Westland. It possesses pleasant green pastures, which support an excellent breed of milch cattle. The island is visited by about 1500-2000 sea-bathers annually. Tolerable apartments may be procured for 6-18 m. per week, and there are three inns (Bakker Senior; Köhler, with the post-office; Bakker Junior). Excellent beach for bathing, 3/4 M. from the village, but suitable at high tide only. There is also an establishment with warm baths. In the village is an old lighthouse, 153 ft. in height, and near it a new one, 40 ft. higher. — The E. side of Borkum and the Dutch island of Rottum are the haunt of thousands of sea-fowl, which breed here.

From Bremen to Leer and Emden.

77 M. RAILWAY from Bremen to Leer in 28/4-8 hrs. (fares 6 m., 4 m. 50 pf., 3 m.); from Leer to Emden in 1/2-3/4 hr. (fares 2 m. 10, 1 m. 60, 1 m. 10 pf.). Bremen, see p. 131. The train crosses the Weser by the railway-bridge mentioned at p. 138, and halts at Bremen-Neustadt. 9 M. Delmenhorst, the first place in the duchy of Oldenburg; 16 M. Hude, with a picturesque ruined monastery, dating from 1236. Branch-line to Brake and Nordenhamm.

27.M. Oldenburg (*Hôtel de Russie, R. & A. 3¹/₂, B. 1, L. ¹/₂m.; *Erbgrossherzog; Neues Haus, beer; Butjadinger Hof; Kronprinz, near the station, unpretending; Thalen's Restaurant, Theaterwall), the capital of the grand-ducby of that name, is a quiet and pleasant town on the Hunte, with 18,416 inhab., surrounded by handsome avenues and modern dwelling-houses, which have superseded the old ramparts. In the market-place is the old Rathhaus, dating from 1635.

Near the centre of the town is the grand-ducal Residences, occupied by the crown-prince and erected in the 17th and 18th cent.; it contains some modern pictures (by Willers, Tischbein, Riedel, Kretzschmer, Lot, Rahl, Preller, Verboeckhoven, etc.), a few sculptures, a library of more than 50,000 vols. (open daily, 10-12.30), and a considerable collection of engravings and coins. Opposite the palace are the Ducal Stables. — To the E., between the Hunte and the Garten-Strasse, lies the Palace Garden. In the vicinity is a fine park named the Everstenkols.

Crossing the Hunte and pursuing a straight direction, we observe the Palais, the residence of the Grand Duke, on the left, which also contains a number of good modern pictures and a few sculptures. — A few hundred steps farther, to the S., we reach the Public Library, containing about 100,000 vols. and MSS. (adm. 10-1.30). On the ground-floor are the grand-ducal archives. Adjacent is the new Museum, a Renaissance edifice, containing extensive collections of Germanic and other antiquities, and also of objects of natural history (adm. 12-2; at other times on application, fee).

To the right of the palais, in the Elisabeth-Strasse, rises the *Augustrum, a handsome edifice in the late-Renaissance style, containing the valuable grand-ducal picture-gallery of old masters (adm. daily 11-2, Sun. 12-2). The nucleus of the gallery was formed by a collection of 85 pictures purchased from Tischbein the painter in 1804. It now consists of about 350 works. Good catalogue.

1804. It now consists of about 350 works. Good catalogue.

The staircase is adorned with frescoes by Griepenkeri, representing the development of art in antiquity, the middle ages, the Renaissance, and modern times.

Rastede, once a large Benedictine abbey, founded in 1121, was converted into a château in 1500, and is now a summer-residence of the Grand Duke of Oldenburg; fine park in the English style. 20 m. Varel (Hotel Ebot!; Müller), a cheerful little town; at the W. angle of the Jade-Busen, 3 m. to the N., is Dangast, a sea-bathing place with pleasant grounds (300 visitors annually). From (24/2 m.) Ellenser-Damm a pleasant drive may be taken to the 'Neuenburg Urwald' (diligence to Neuenburg, 7 m., daily, in 1½ hr.). 28 m. Sande, the junction of the railway to Jeser (p. 189) and Enden (p. 138).

32½ m. Wilhelmahaven (*Hôtel Denninghof, Roon-Str.; *Hempel, Kronprinzen-Str.; Kronprins, König-Str.; Burg Hohenzollern, near the station, unpretending; Döbbert's Restaurant, Roon-Str.), the second war-harbour of Germany and chief naval-station on the N. Sea, constructed by the Prus-

Germany and chief naval-station on the N. Sea, constructed by the Prusians in 1855-69, on the N.W. side of the Jade-Busen. This basin, formed in 1528 by an inundation, is upwards of 60 sq. M. in area, and is connected with the N. Sea by the Jade, a channel 3 M. wide. Wilhelmshaven, which in 1880 contained 12,592 inhab., is a pleasant-looking town, laid out on a large scale, with wide streets shaded by trees.

Near the station is a bronze statue of Admiral Prince Adalbert of Prussia (d. 1873), erected in 1882. The Entrance to the harbour, protected by piers 120 yds. long, is separated by a huge dock-gate from the Outer Harbour; a second gate and a canal then lead to the Inner Harbour (400 yds. by 240 yds.). Connected with the latter are three dry docks and two slips for the construction of iron-clads.

The dockyard, which is enclosed by a lofty wall, is not shown without a ticket of admission from the naval office (50 pf.). In this inner harbour lie all the vessels on the North Sea station which are not on service, chiefly large iron-clads. — Another entrance to the harbour from the 8., a torpedo harbour, a commercial harbour, and a canal connecting the Ems and the Jade, are in course of construction. Strong fortifications have been erected at different points for the protection of the whole establishment. — To the N.E. of the town, between two large barracks, is the Observatory, with a time-ball. A good panorama is obtained from the 'Wasserthurm' in the park (adm. by ticket obtained in the Park Restaurant, 25 pf.).

FROM OLDENBURG TO OSNABRÜCK, 691/2 M., in 3 hrs. (fares 8 m. 50, 5 m. 10, 3 m. 40 pf.). Unimportant stations. 39 M. Quakenbrück (Rothes Haus) is an industrious little town on the Haase, possessing an old abbey church. Osnabrück, see p. 107.

37 M. Zwischenahn (Curhaus; Röber), pleasantly situated on a lake and visited as a summer-resort. A small steamer plies on the lake. From (42 M.) Ocholt a branch-line runs to Westerstede. The line intersects the extensive Hochmoor (p. 138). Beyond Augustveen, with large iron-works, the train crosses the Prussian frontier. $-52^{1/2}$ M. Stickhausen. $-61^{1/2}$ M. 26½ M. Celle (Bockstöver's Hotel, R. & B. 3 m.; Hôtel de Hancover; Sasse), on the Aller, the chief town of the district, with 18,800 inhab., is the seat of the higher provincial tribunal of Hancover. The old Schloss, formerly the residence of the Dukes of Brunswick-Lüneburg, is partly late-Gothic in style, and was partly erected in the Renaissance style at the end of the 17th century, The altarpiece of the interesting Chapel is ascribed to Lucas Cranach. The old Parish Church contains the ducal burial-vaults, and that of the Danish queen Caroline Matilda (p. 198). In the 'French Garden', outside the town, rises a monument to Queen Caroline Matilda, and in the grounds of the 'Trift' is another to A. Thaer, the agriculturist, born at Celle in 1752 (d. 1828).

Stations Eschede, Uelzen (junction for the Stendal and Bremen line, p. 81), and Bevensen, beyond which the dreary Lüneburger

Haide is traversed.

81 M. Lüneburg (* Wellenkamp's Hotel; *Deutsches Haus), an old town with 19,034 inhab., on the navigable Ilmenau, possessing salt-works which have long been of some importance, was a prominent member of the Hansa in the middle ages. A number of public, and many handsome private buildings, in the late-Gothic and Renaissance styles, are memorials of the town's prosperity in the 14th-16th centuries. On quitting the station, which lies to the E. of the town, and crossing the Ilmenau, we may reach the market either by the Altenbrücker-Thor to the left, or by the Lüner-Thor to the right. By the former route we pass the church of *St. John, a Gothic edifice with double aisles, dating from the middle of the 14th cent., with subsequent additions (sacristan, Johanniskirchhof 25). If we choose the other way we pass the church of *St. Nicholas, with a lofty nave and double aisles, dating from 1409 and containing some good paintings and valuable old embroidered vestments. In the Market Place, which is adorned with a fountain of 1530 with a modern basin, rises the RATHHAUS, a pile of various buildings dating from the 13th down to the 18th century (custodian, Lichte, in the Marien-Platz). The most remarkable part is the so-called "Laube", of the 14th cent., with beautiful stainedglass windows, cabinets, and interesting mural decorations (about 1525, lately restored). Adjoining this is the 'Kör-Gemuch', for the election of the mayor, dating from the end of the 15th century. The Fürstensaal, dating from the 16th cent., contains electro-plate copies of the Lüneburg silver service now in Berlin (p. 50); the *Rathsstube, of 1566-83, contains admirable carved work by Albert von Soest, an elaborate gate by H. Ruge of 1576, and other interesting objects. The Town Library possesses 31,000 vols. and several MSS. with beautiful miniatures of the 15th cent. (Thurs., 11-1). The Gumnasium contains natural history and other collections (adm. 50 pf.). On the N.W. side of the town stands the church of St. Michael, with a crypt, erected in 1376-1418; it contains the burial-vault of the Guelph-Billung princes.

The Kalkberg, a little to the W. of the town, is a good point of view. The activery, a little to the viv. of the town, is agont point or vive.

About 1/2 M. to the N.E. of the Lüner-Thor is the Benedictine nunnery of Lüne, founded in 1172, a brick building dating from the end of the 14th cent., with many additions of the 18th. In the church is an early-Gothic Altar-Antependium, with paintings of the 18th century. Fine cloisters.

Beyond Lüneburg the train passes Bardewick, once the chief commercial town of N. Germany. It was destroyed by Henry the Lion in 1189, and fragments of the vast cathedral now alone remain, incorporated with a Gothic church (date about 1400). Pop. 1800.

105 M. Harburg (*Schwan; König von Schweden; *Stadt Lüneburg, second-class), an increasing town with 19,071 inhab., and a busy seaport, junction for the Bremen and Cuxhaven lines (pp. 138, 156). — As Hamburg is a free harbour, travellers in the reverse direction must undergo custom-house formalities on arrival here.

Beyond Harburg the line crosses the Süder-Elbe by an iron bridge, 680 yds. long, traverses the fertile island of Wilhelmsburg, (comp. Map, p. 156), crosses the Norder-Elbe by another bridge, 448 yds. long, and enters the handsome 'Pariser Bahnhof' (Pl. F, G, 6) at Hamburg.

Hamburg, with 289,859 inhab. (or, including the suburbs, and the adjacent Altona, Wandsbeck, etc., 410,000), is the largest of the three free Hanseatic towns of the German Empire, and next to London, Liverpool, and Glasgow, the most important commercial place in Europe. It is advantageously situated on the broad lower Elbe, in which the tide rises twice daily so as to admit of the entrance of vessels of considerable tonnage, and is also connected by railways with every part of Europe. The town consists of the Altstadt and Neustadt, formerly surrounded by fortifications, and the suburbs of St. George (N.E.) and St. Pauli (W.), together with a number of adjacent villages. Besides the Elbe, there are two small rivers at Hamburg called the Alster and the Bille. The former, flowing from the N., forms a large basin outside the town, and a smaller one within it, called the Aussen-Alster (p. 154) and Binnen-Alster (p. 151) respectively, and then intersects the town in two main branches. The Bille comes from the E. Both are finally discharged through locks into the canals (Fleete, see p. 149) and branches of the Elbe which flow through the lower part of the town.

Nothing certain is known of the origin of Hamburg, but as early as 811 (?) Charlemagne founded a castle here, to which he soon added a church, presided over by a bishop, whose mission was to propagate Christianity in these northern regions. The Counts of Holstein, within whose jurisdiction Hamburg was situated, and particularly Adolph III. and IV. (p. 158), became great benefactors of the town, and procured for it many privileges and immunities which formed the foundation of its subsequent independence. Hamburg joined the Hanseatic League (p. 175), at an early period, and played a prominent part in its contest with the Danish kings in the 18th and 14th centuries. The city was also honourably distinguished in the good work of sweeping the sea of pirates. The discovery of America and of the sea-route to India was not without effect in stimulating the trade of Hamburg, which, however, did not compete with that of England and Holland. In 1529 the citizens adopted the reformed faith, and at the same time established a free political constitution. Hamburg fortunately remained unaffected by the Thirty Years' War, chiefly owing to the powerful fortifications constructed at the beginning of that struggle, and now partly converted into promenades. Dissensions, however, which frequently arose between the Council and the citizens, proved very detrimental to the welfare of the city. Towards the middle of last century her prosperity began to return, chiefly owing to the establishment of that direct communication with America, which to this day forms the mainspring of her commercial importance; but at the beginning of the present century the citizens were doomed to an overwhelming reverse. In 1810 Hamburg was annexed to the French Empire, and the citizens having in 1813 attempted to rebel against the foreign yoke, Davoust wreaked his vengeance on them with unexampled barbarity (p. 104). During those years of disaster, from 1806 to 1814, the direct loss sustained by the city is estimated at 240-270 million marks, an enormous s

Down to the beginning of the present century Hamburg enjoyed no inconsiderable reputation in the literary world. In 1678 the first theatre in Germany for comic operas was founded here; in 1767 Lessing visited Hamburg with a view to assist in the foundation of a national theatre; and Klopstock resided in the König-Strasse here from 1774 to 1808.

Hamburg cannot boast of architectural monuments or scientific or other collections commensurate with its wealth and antiquity. The history of the city, together with the enterprising character of its inhabitants, and partly, likewise, the above-mentioned fire of 1842, sufficiently account for the almost entire disappearance of all relics of the past, and for its thoroughly modern aspect. In a few streets, however, such as the Reichen-Str. (Pl. D, E, 4), the Wandrahm (Pl. E, 5), and the Cremon (Pl. C, 5), there are still many handsome residences of Hamburg merchants of the 17th and 18th centuries.

The *Harbour, where numerous vessels from all quarters of the globe generally lie, presents a busy and picturesque scene. The quays, recently extended, now stretch along the right bank of the Norder-Elbe from Altona to the Billwarder Neuendeich (see Map. p. 152), a distance of 3 M., and accommodate upwards of 400 seagoing vessels and as many barges and river-craft. The W. end of the quay, opposite St. Pauli (see Plan, p. 154), is chiefly occupied by English colliers and the steamers of the Hamburg and American Co. (ticket of admittance to one of these steamers, 30 pf.). Adjacent is the Niederhafen (comp. the Plan), intended principally for the reception of sailing-vessels during the season of floating ice, and connected with the Elbe by several outlets ('Gatts'). The numerous Fleete, or canals, which intersect the town and fall into the Niederhafen, are navigated by the 'Schuten', or flat-bottomed boats used for conveying goods to the magazines and warehouses. Farther E. are the *Sandthor-Haffen, 1100 yds. in length, and 100-140 vds. in width, with the Sandthor-Quai and the Kaiser-Quai, and the GRASBROOK-HAPEN, with the Dalmann-Ougi and the Hübener-Ougi. both suited for the reception of vessels of heavy tonnage, the latter intended mainly for the Atlantic liners. Still farther E. are the OBERHAFEN and other harbours for river-craft, and finally, on the small Grasbrook on the other side of the Elbe, the large HOLZHÄFEN. or wood-harbours for the storage of timber. The visitor may explore these different harbours by boat (see p. 147).

Statistics. In 1881 the port of Hamburg was entered by 5975 vessels, of an aggregate burden of 2,806,605 tons, including 3328 steamers of 2,256,873 tons, and was quitted by 6022 vessels of 2,857,384 tons, of which 3415 were steamers of 2,300,854 tons. The total value of the imports amounted to 2018 million marks. The chief articles of commerce are coffee, sugar, spirits, dyes, wine, iron, grain, butter, hides, and fancy goods, the last five of which constitute the most important exports. The number of emigrants who embarked here in the same year was 128,181, two-thirds of whom were Germans. At the beginning of 1882 the Hamburgers were proprietors of 347 sailing-vessels of 141,164 tons burden, and 148 steamboats of 123,591 tons. The English trade with the north of Europe is chiefly carried on viå Hamburg.

Between the Brookthor-Hafen and the Oberhafen, to the S., is situated the large new Station (PI, F, G, 6) of the Bremen, Venlo, and Paris line (R. 15). Near it are extensive warehouses and custom-house premises. A little above the station is the handsome new Iron Railway Bridge, with a foot-way (p. 145).

The Steinwarder and Kleine Grasbrook, islands opposite the Niederhafen, to which steamboats cross frequently, are occupied by extensive wharves, the dry-docks of the Hamburg and American Steamship Co., and ship-building vards, and afford a good survey of the Hamburg quays; visitors apply at the counting-house.

The *Elbhöhe (Plan of St. Pauli; C, 5), locally called the Stintfana, above the landing-place of the Harburg ferry, commands one of the finest views near the harbour, embracing the Elbe (nearly 5 M. broad, including the islands), with its numerous islands, forest of masts, and gaily-coloured flags, and St. Pauli and Altona. On the height beyond the most rises the Seemannshaus, where unemployed mariners are accommodated at a cheap rate, and the aged and sick are received gratuitously. On the height in front stands the Meteorological Station of the German Admiralty. To the N., beyond the Millern-Thor, is the Observatory.

St. Pauli (see Plan; Restaurants, see p. 146), the suburb contiguous to Hamburg on the W., better known as Hamburger Berg, is principally frequented by sailors, for whose amusement booths and shows of every description abound. The scene witnessed here on a Sunday or Monday afternoon, especially at he Spielbuden-Platz. is a highly characteristic phase of Hamburg 10w life. Hawkers and itinerant vendors of every kind also thrive here. - Adjacent. in the large Heiligengeist-Feld, is a Panorama, painted by Simmler and Eckenbrecher, and representing the reception of the Mecca pilgrims at Cairo (adm. 2, Sun. 1 m.). - In the Neue Pferdemarkt No. 13, is Hagenbeck's extensive Animal Collection, including many from Africa (on sale); feeding time 4-5 p.m., admittance 50 pf.

We may now return by the Zeughausmarkt and the Neue and Alte Steinweg, forming the Jews' quarter, where brokers' shops abound. - A few paces to the S. rises the large *St. Michæliskirche, (Pl. A. 4, 5), erected in 1750-62. The boldly-constructed interior, which is destitute of pillars, can contain 6000 persons. The tower, 426 ft. in height, commands an admirable view of the city and the river, best by evening-light (adm., 1 pers. 1 m. 20, 2 pers. 1 m. 80, 3-8 pers. 2 m. 40 pf.; apply to the Castellan Faulwasser, Michæliskirchhof).

At the *Exchange, or Börse (Pl. D, 4), the great focus of business, four or five thousand brokers, merchants, and shipowners congregrate daily between 1 and 3 o'clock (admission gratis. except between 1.15 and 2.15, when a charge of 30 pf. is made). The building itself, completed shortly before the great fire (p. 148). escaped, while the surrounding houses were reduced to ashes. The groups surmounting the edifice on either side of the pediment are by Kiss. On the first floor is the Börsenhalle, a reading-room well supplied with newspapers (introd. by a member). The Commercial Library, containing more than 50,000 vols., occupies a wing of the Exchange added in 1873.

To the S. of the Adolphs-Platz, by the Trostbrücke (Pl. D, 4, 5) are the premises of the 'Patriotische Gesellschaft', or Patriotic Club, founded by Reimarus and others in 1765. The building, which occupies the side of the old Rathhaus, blown up in 1842, was erected in a Gothic style in 1845-47, and contains the meeting-rooms of various artistic and learned societies.

The Trostbrücke leads direct to the *Church of St. Nicholas (Pl. D. 5; admission daily from 12.30 to 2.30 p.m., gratis; at other times on application to the sacristan, Neueburg 28, second floor, opposite the N. transept), erected after the fire of 1842 by Sir Gilbert Scott in the rich Gothic style of the 13th century. Length 285 ft.; breadth of the transept 151 ft.; the W. tower, completed in 1874, 473 ft. in height, being the third highest building in Europe (Cologne Cathedral 512 ft., Notre Dame at Rouen 495 ft., Strassburg Cathedral 466 ft.). In the rich sculpture of the exterior and interior, it was intended to perpetuate the memory of every one who had in any way contributed towards the propagation of Christianity. Many of the statues are by F. Neuber. In the S. aisle of the choir are fine stained-glass windows. The beautiful intarsia work of the door of the sacristy, by Plambeck, also deserves notice.

In front of the W. facade of the church lies the Hopfenmarkt, the principal market-place at Hamburg, where fish of all kinds, meat, vegetables, and fruit are sold. - St. Catharine's Church (Pl. D, 5), to the S.E. of St. Nicholas, on the opposite side of the broad canal, escaped destruction in 1842. It contains some old German paintings. Renaissance tombstones, a marble pulpit of 1630, and a fine organ. — The Museum Godeffroy, Wandrahm 29 (Pl. F. 5), contains a good ethnographical and natural history collection (Sat. 10-2, Sun. 11-2; adm. 50 pf.).

Near the Exchange, to the N.E., rises *St. Peter's Church (Pl. E, 4), which was burned down in 1842, and has since been erected in the Gothic style of the 14th century. The chief objects of interest are the ring on the door of the tower, of 1342; the canopy over the pulpit, of the 14th cent.; the granite columns of the old cathedral, which was taken down in 1806; the new stained-glass windows by Kellner of Nuremberg, and to the left in the altar-niche a fine relief, representing the Entombment, by H. Schubert.

To the S.E., opposite the church, is the Johanneum (Pl. E, 4), erected in 1834, and containing the college of that name founded

The S. wing contains the City Library, consisting of about 300,000 vols. and 5000 M8S., and comprising many rare works, particularly in early theological literature. Among the most valuable contents are the collections of Bibles, hymns, mediæval theology, and oriental manuscripts.

— On the ground-floor is the Natural History Museum (Sun. 11-12, Mon., Tues., Wed., and Frid. 11-1, gratis; Thurs. 60 pf.), containing numerous skeletons and a valuable collection of conchylia. Here also is the Museum of Museum that the statement of of Hamburg Antiquities, where among other curiosities is preserved an old tembstone representing an ass blowing the bagpipe, with the quaint inscription, 'De Welt heft zik ummekert, darume zo hebbe ik arme ezer pipen ghelert'.

tasteful Renaissance edifice erected in 1842, with seats for 1800 spectators. — Near it is the Jacobikirche (Pl. F, 4), which with a number of the surrounding houses survived the fire of 1842.

The *Binnen-Alster, usually called the Alster-Bassin (Pl. D. E. 2, 3; comp. p. 147), and its environs, are unquestionably Hamburg's greatest attraction. This sheet of water, of an irregular quadrilateral form, and upwards of 1 M. in circumference, is bounded on three sides by quays planted with trees and flanked with palatial hotels and handsome private dwellings, named respectively the Alte and Neue Jungfernstieg, and the Alsterdamm, while the fourth side towards the Aussen-Alster is laid out in promenades connected by means of the Lombardsbrücke. The surface of the water is enlivened with diminutive screw-steamers (p. 147), rowing-boats, and groups of swans, and the banks are a favourite promenade. especially on fine summer-evenings, when they present a picturesque appearance by gas-light. The ALTE JUNGFERNSTIEG, where the Alster-Pavillon (p. 146), is situated is the scene of the busiest traffic. Adjoining the Alte Jungfernstieg on the S.E. are the Alster Arcades with attractive shops, which run parallel with the easternmost of the two arms of the Alster issuing from the 'Bassin', and extend from the Reesendammbrücke to the Schleusenbrücke.

The ramparts near the Lombardsbrücke command an admirable view of the expansive Aussen-Alster to the N., with its banks studded with villas, and the Binnen-Alster to the S. with the towers of the city in the background. On the E. rampart rises a bronze Statue of Schiller (Pl. F. 2) by Lippelt, erected in 1866.

On the Alsterhöhe, to the E. of these monuments, rises the *Kunsthalle (Pl. F, 2; open daily, except Mon., in summer 10-5, winter 11-4), erected in 1867-69 in the early-italian Renaissance style. The niches and medallions of the exterior contain statues and reliefs of eminent artists. The establishment owes its existence mainly to private contributions and legacies. Catalogue 50 pf.

The Ground Floor contains Sculptures by modern masters, casts of an electron and Renaissance works, and a valuable Collection of Engravings, the most important of which are exposed to view (Tues. and Frid. 11-1).

Schönleber, Lagoon at Venice; 540. Spangenberg, Walpurgis Night; 552, 553. H. Steinfurth, Portraits of the artists Kaufmann and Knaus; 560. Tidemand, Wolf-hunter; 562. Troyon, Cattle; 563. Vautier, Toasting the bride; Wratks, 375. The daughters of the Cid in the forest, 376. Niobe and her children. — The Permanente Kunstausstellung (Exhibition of Works of Art) is in the same building.

The *Anlagen, or public promenades, laid out on the old fortications, and extending round the interior of the city from the Elbhöhe (p. 150) to the Berlin Railway Station, also afford pleasant walks. Near the Kunsthalle, to the E., is an iron Monument (Pl. G, 3) to the memory of Adolph IV., Count of Holstein (1224-39), the founder of the liberties of the city (p. 148). — Another favourite walk is afforded by the new Pleasure Grounds (Pl. F, 2 to H, 1), which extend along the Aussen-Alster to the Uhlenhorst (p. 154).

To the N.E., in the St. George Quarter, between the Steinthor and the Klosterthor, are the Gewerbe-Schule and the Real-Schule, with the interesting *Industrial and Ethnological Museums (adm. daily except Mon., in summer 10-5, winter 10-4). The building also contains collections of Prehistoric Antiquities, Fruit, Seaweeds, and Fungi. — The Hansa Fountain, in the Hansa-Platz (Pl. H, 2, 3), 65 ft. in height, was erected in 1878 from a design by E. Peiffer. The extensive Hospital (Pl. J, 1) is an admirable institution; the chapel contains a good picture by Overbeck.

Near the Lombardsbrücke, which affords a fine view of the Alster, is an Obelisk, erected in memory of J. G. Büsch (d. 1800), the political economist. A little farther on, at the beginning of the Esplanade (Pl. D, 2), a handsome street with a double avenue of trees, rises a *Monument to the Hamburgers who fell in the war of 1870-71, designed by Professor Schilling of Dresden. — Near it, in the Dammthor-Str., is the Stadt-Theater (Pl. C, 2; p. 146), with seats for 2500 spectators. — In the Gänsemarkt, to the S., is a Statue of Lessing (Pl. C, 2), by Schaper, unveiled in 1881; on the pedestal are medallions of Ekhof and Reimarus.

On the left, immediately outside the Dammthor, lies the Botanical Garden (Pl. B, C, 1; open daily), with its Victoria Regia house. A little beyond it are a Panoroma (Pl. B, C, 1) of the Battle of Wörth, by Faber du Faur (adm. 2, Sun. 1 m.), and the *Zoological Garden (Pl. A, B, 1; admission 1 m., aquarium 40 pf.; *Restaurant), one of the most extensive and best organised in Germany. The arrangement of the animals was superintended by Brehm, and the grounds were laid out by the landscape-gardener Jürgens of Ottensen. The most interesting points are the elephant-house, the dens of the beasts of prey, the Eulenburg (view) with the bears' den, the cascade grotto, the *Aquarium, the terrarium, and the Ernst-Merck-Halle, containing a concert-room and winter-garden. with the bust of the founder of the gardens. - The large iron and glass structure, with a dome, in the adjacent Moorweide, is the exhibition-building of the Horticultural Society.

The Cemeteries, laid out as gardens, adjoin the Zoological Garden on the S.W. On the N. side, opposite the Petrikirchhof, is a sarcophagus commemorating the fate of 1138 citizens of Hamburg. 'who, having been banished by Marshal Dayoust, together with many thousands of their fellow-citizens during the severe winter of 1813-14, fell victims to grief, starvation, and disease'.

The finest part of the Promenades is that between the Dammthor and the Holstenthor (Pl. A, 2), laid out in 1881. Outside the Holstenthor is the new Palace of Justice, designed by Zimmermann, beyond which is the extensive Prison.

About $1\frac{1}{2}$ M. from the Deichthor (Pl. G, 5) are the extensive Waterworks, which supply the whole city. *View (no fee). Tramway to Rothenburgsort. - Opposite to Rothenburgsort is the end of a large cutting constructed by Dalmann in 1873-77, at an outlay of 4,000,000 m., to regulate the amount of water in the N. Elbe.

The *Environs of Hamburg (comp. Map), which are sprinkled with country-houses, gardens, and parks in almost every direction, especially near the Aussen-Alster and near the Elbe between Altona and Blankenese (p. 156), afford some pleasant excursions.

The banks of the "Aussen-Alster are most conveniently visited by one of the small screw-steamers (p. 147) which ply daily at frequent intervals between the Jungfernstieg and the N. end of the lake (small boat, see p. 147; tramway, see p. 147). The favourite points are the Uhlenhorst ("Restaurant Fährhaus, concerts several times a week), which is reached by steamer from the Jungfernstieg in 20 min. (passengers should alight at Babenstrasse and walk to the Fährhaus, 1/2 M.); Harvestehude, with a new "Church, and the lime-tree of the poet Hagedorn (d. 1754) on the Licentiature and Exemplars. tiatenberg; and Eppendorf.

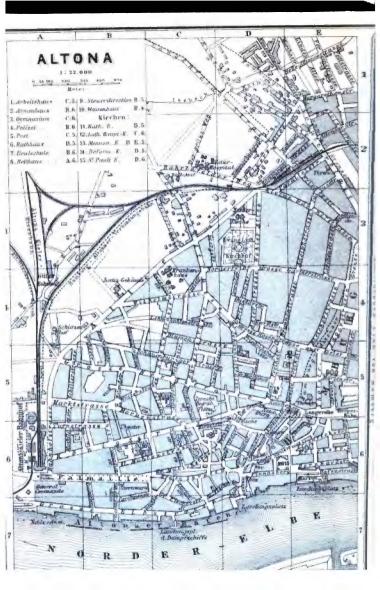

Persons interested in missionary-establishments should visit the Rauhe Haus at Horn, 3 M. to the E. of Hamburg, on the road to Bergedorf (tramway, see p. 147; cab 2 m. 40 pf.). — The annual Hamburg Horse Races take place on a common at Horn.

Wandsbeck (railway, p. 167; tramway p. 147; cab 2 m. 40 pf.; hotel, Altes Posthaus), a town in Holstein, with 16,138 inhab., about 3 M. to the N.E., was once the residence of the famous Matthias Claudius (d. 1815), the 'Wandsbecker Bote', who, with his wife, is buried in the churchyard here. A simple monument has been erected to his memory in the neighbouring Wandsbeck wood, consisting of a block of granite, bearing his name, his hat, wallet, and staff.

A double avenue leads from the Millern-Thor at Hamburg (Pl. of St. Pauli, C. 4) through the suburb of St. Pauli (p. 150) to the Nobisthor of Altona (with the inscription, 'Nobis bene, nemini male'); cab 11/2 m.; tramway, omnibus, and railway, see p. 147.

Altona. - Hotels. *Königlicher Hop, opposite the station, R. & A. 21/2. B. 1 m., L. 60 pf.; Sonne, Bahnhofs-Hôtel, at the station; *Holstein-SCHES HAUS, unpretending, R. & A. 3 m.; THIEDE; PETERSEN, König-Str. 188. — The hotels of Altona are cheaper than those of Hamburg and are convenient for travellers for Denmark and Schleswig-Holstein, who on arrival at Hamburg may send on their luggage, under lock and key, to Altona, and thus avoid a custom-house examination before starting.

Restaurants. Eckhardt, Hauer (wine), *Plessenburg, Fischborn, Thiede

Tramways to Hamburg every 10 min., from the Bahnhof-Str. Railway to Hamburg, see p. 147.

Steamboats to Hamburg and to Blankeness (p. 156) at frequent intervals.

Altona, situated on the N. bank of the Elbe, and environed with gardens and villas, is a rapidly-increasing commercial and manufacturing town with 91,000 inhab. (26,000 only in 1835), and the headquarters of the 9th Corps d'Armée. It shares the commercial privileges of Hamburg as a free port. The Harbour affords accommodation for large sea-going vessels, of which 560 entered the port in 1880. An interesting excursion may be made from the Altona harbour to the Hamburg harbour by steamer (p. 146) or by small boat (1-3 pers. 1 m. 20 pf.).

The most fashionable street in Altona is the PALMAILLE (Pl. A. B, 6), planted with lime-trees, and affording pleasant glimpses of the Elbe; it is adorned with a bronze statue of Count Blücher, who was civil governor of Altona in 1808-45. Near the station is a Monument erected to commemorate the part taken by the 9th army-corps in the war of 1870-71, by Luthmer. The Museum, Palmaille 112, contains an ethnographical and natural history collection and a library (adm. on Sun. 11-2, Wed. 11-1). - A fine view of the Elbe is obtained from a hill near the war-monument.

In the König-Strasse (Pl. A, B, C, 6), the chief business-street of the town, are the Theatre (Pl. B, 6) and the Realschule, the latter containing a Picture Gallery (Sun., 11-3; to strangers on application). - To the N., in the Markt-Str., is another War Monument, erected to the natives of Altona who fell in 1870-71.

Several of the churches of Altona are grouped together in the GROSSE and KLEINE FREIHBIT (Pl. D, E, 5). The Roman Catholic Church (Pl. 11), in the Renaissance style, contains an altarpiece ascribed to Murillo. The large church of St. Pauli (Pl. 15; D. 6) is conspicuous by its imposing copper-covered dome. The tasteful gothic Johanniskirche (Pl. D, 3), in the Allee, built in 1883, is one of the most successful modern brick structures in N. Germany.

At the W. end of Altona, near the station, begins Ottensen, a town with 15,375 inhab., in the churchyard of which Klopstock (born 1724, d. 1839) and his two wives are interred. Their grave is shaded by an old lime. a

Stations Bahrenfeld, Klein-Flottbeck, Blankenese. — As the scenery is pleasing, a drive to Blankenese in an open carriage is far preferable to the railway-journey. Cab from Altona to Klein-Flottbeck, 1-2 pers. 2 m. 40 pf., to Nienstedten 3 m., to Blankenese 4-6 m.; omnibus between Altona (starting from the Palmaille, near the theatre) and Blankenese several times daily, fare 50 pf. — Even pedestrians will be rewarded by a walk along the bank of the Elbe to (8 M.) Blankenese, passing numerous villas and gardens. — The pleasantest way of making this excursion is to go to Blankenese by the steamboat, which commands fine views of latter hair of sept., and once during the month of Oct.; average passage 7.8 hrs.; fare 16 m., landing in Heligoland included; return-tickets 28 m., available for a month. — From Gesstemunds (p. 136) to Heligoland, see the time-tables. — German money alone is current in Heligoland, see the Visitors to Heligoland may also proceed by Rallwar from Hamburg to (73 M.) Cuxhaves (3-31/2 hrs.; fares 9 m. 50, 7 m. 40, 4 m. 30 pf.) and proceed thence to Heligoland by steamer (3 hrs.; 10 m.); return-tickets from Hamburg to Heligoland by this route, available for a month, 20, 17, 14 m. The railway runs via Harburg (p. 145), Buxtehude, and Stade (see below).

Is to go to lainteness by the steamboat, which commands here views of the nake of the river, and return in a carriage, which may be hired at Sagebiel's in Blankenese, or at Jacob's in Nienstedten, 2 M. nearer Altona. At the end of the pleasant village of Neumühlen rises a castellated villa belonging to Hr. Donner of Altona. Booth's gardens at Flottbeck and the park of the Jenisch family with their extensive hot-houses merit a visit. Further on is Nienstedten (*Jacob's Restaurant). Then the garden of the Hamburg Senator G. Godeffroy, with a château in the Rhenish castellated style, situated on the abrupt bank of the Elbe. At Dockenhuden is the park of C. Godeffroy. The finest view of the Elbe is obtained from the "Stillberg (250 ft.; "Tavern at the top), one of the hills among which lies the fishing-village of Blankenese ("Sagebiel's Rectaurant at the Fährhaus), 1/2 M. from the railway-station. Baur's garden at Blankenese also affords beautiful views. All these grounds are open to the public.

FROM HAMBURG TO HELIGOLAND. A steamboat-trip on the Lower Elbe is one of the pleasantest river-excursions in N. Germany. Soon after starting, the vessel commands a fine retrospect of the imposing city with its forest of masts, and of Altona (see above). Numerous villas on the hills peep from the midst of parks and pleasuregrounds, which extend for a considerable distance below Blankenese (see above). Inland, to the left, is seen the town of Stade, connected with the Elbe by a canal; then, on the right bank, Glückstadt (p. 159). The banks now recede. On the left, about 41/2 M. from Cuxhaven, lies the small town of Altenbruch, with a church containing a beautifully-carved altar.

Cuxhaven (*Belvedere, with a pleasant pavilion facing the beach; Bellevue; Baben, Glocke, unpretending; Restaurant Seepavillon, well spoken of), a busy and increasing place belonging to Hamburg, and united with the neighbouring Ritsebüttel in 1872, is visited as a sea-bathing place. The château, a castellated building of the 14th cent., which is visible from the Elbe, is one of the oldest secular structures in N. Germany.

The steamer next passes the island of Neuwerk with its lighthouse, originally erected in 1290 as a castle for protection against pirates. - At the mouth of the Elbe, the banks of which have been fortified since 1870, three light-ships, and between them the Pilot-Ship are passed, beyond which the open sea is reached. The sea-passage occupies 21/2-3 hrs. only.

the light-ships are passed. Sea-passage 2-3 hrs. more.

Heligoland. -- Arrival. Passengers are landed in boats. Luggage is taken to the luggage-shed on the beach, where the traveller sends a porter for it; thence to the Unterland 20 pf., to the Oberland 40 pf. each package. — Comp. Map, p. 137.

Hotels. "STADT LONDON; "QUEEN OF ENGLAND, both in the Oberland,

Lodgings, where breakfast only is usually supplied, are also easily obtained. The best-situated are on the Falm (p. 158) in the Oberland, at 15-30 m. per week and upwards, such as the Schweitzerhaus, Jasper Payens, Rickmers, and Lassen. Those who object to climbing the steps to the Oberland should take rooms in the Unterland, where the Dünen-Strasse commands an unimpeded view of the sea (charges as in the Oberland): Deutsches Haus, *Mohr, Lührs, Block. Those in the back-streets without view are cheaper.

Restaurants. In the Unterland: *Conversationshaus, with dining and reading-rooms, etc., see above; 'Fremdenwillkomm; *Deutscher Hof; Princess Alexandra; Dünenpavillon, on the Badeinsel; Erholung, by the steps to the Oberland. In the Oberland: Janssen, by the church; Mayer, Leuchtthurm-Str.; Claasen. - The *Pavillon on the beach is much visited as a café in the afternoon.

Rain collected in cisterns is used for drinking-water; good springwater is obtained at the Brewery (40 pf. weekly).

The Bathing Place is on a small sandy island, 1 M. to the S.E.; ferry there and back (10-20 min.) 60 pf.; bathing-coach 60 pf.; towel 25, sheet 60 pf. graph Office in the Badehaus.

Physicians, Dr. Zimmermann and Dr. Schmidt.

Heligoland (i. e. 'holy land'), which formerly belonged to Schleswig, was taken by the English in 1807, and still continues under their supremacy. During the blockade of 1812 it was a great resort of smugglers. On three sides the island, which consists of hard red clay and marl, and is about 1/5 sq. M. only in area, rises nearly perpendicularly from the sea to a height of 200 ft., forming a long and narrow triangle called the Oberland. On the S.E. side only a low, flat bank of sand rises from the water, called the Unterland. The island contains 2000 inhab. of Frisian extraction, whose dialect, habits, and costume are in many respects peculiar. The bathing-season and the lobster-fishery are their chief sources of gain. The German language is used in the schools and church.

The visitor disembarks on the UNTERLAND, on which are situated a bath-house, a basin used by bathers when prevented by stormy weather from crossing to the 'Düne', the Conversationshaus, the chemist's shop, the theatre, and most of the restaurants. The principal streets, recently provided with English names, which however have not been adopted by the population, are the Dünen-Strasse, or Gesundheits-Allee, on the N.E. side of the group of houses, and the Bindfaden-Allee, which runs parallel to the cliffs from N.E. to S.W. At the end of the latter is the 'Rothe Meer'. a bathing-place so called from the colour with which the red clay tinges the waves.

From the Unterland an easy flight of 190 wooden steps ascends the rock to the OBERLAND, a plateau planted chiefly with potatoes, and intersected by the Kartoffel-Allee. The pastures support goats and about 300 sheep only. The principal street in the village, called the Falm, skirting the S.E. margin of the cliff, commands a fine view of the Unterland, the downs, and the sea. The best views of the cliffs are obtained at the Sathurn (South Horn) and Nathurn (North Horn), which last is a favourite point towards sunset. The Lighthouse merits a visit (fee 30 pf.).

Opposite the Unterland, and separated from it by a strait 1/2 M. in width and 12-16 ft. deep, is the Dune, or Sandinsel (ferry), on the N. (left) side of which is the gentlemen's, and on the S. (right) side the ladies' bathing-place. Between the two is situated the Dünen-Pavillon (p. 157).

Many of the rocks have received fanciful names, such as the Nun, Monk, and Pastor. The luminous appearance of the sea at night is more frequently observed at Heligoland than elsewhere, especially in sultry weather, with a 8. wind and a clouded sky. When the water is struck by the hand, each particle resembles a fire-fly or glow-worm. This phenomenon, as is well known, is occasioned by innumerable mollusca, almost invisible to the maked we which smit a phenomenon light when in motion. naked eye, which emit a phosphorescent light when in motion,

FROM NEUMENSTER TO OLDESLOE, 28 M., railway in 11/4-12/4 hr. (fares 3 m. 60, 2 m. 70, 1 m. 80 pf.). The most important station is Segeberg, situated between limestone hills and the lake of that name, with a Romanesque church of the 12th century. In the vicinity is Traventhal, once a country-seat of the Dukes of Holstein-Plön, now a royal stud-farm.

54 M. Bordesholm, once a richly-endowed monastery, is prettily situated on the lake of that name. The church contains monuments of Frederick I. of Denmark (d. 1533) and his Queen Anna, and one of Duke Christian Frederick of Holstein-Gottorp, ancestor of the present imperial family of Russia. The country becomes more attractive. Near Kiel the picturesque Eider Valley is traversed, beyond which the harbour and the distant Baltic become visible.

66 M. Kiel. — Hotels. *Germania, opposite the station, R. 2-21/2 m., L. 75, A. 60 pt., B. 1 m., D. 2½ m.; "ZUM KEONPRINZEN, Hafen-Str.; Hötel zur Börse; Stadt Hamburg, at the corner of the Schumacher-Str., opposite the church of St. Nicholas; Stadt Kopenhagen; Holse's Hotel, Schlossgarten; Murl's Gasthof, of moderate pretension. — For a stay of several days the "Hôtel Bellevue or "Folker's Hotel, in Düsternbrook, both sith self-week beth (con 164). both with salt-water baths (see p. 161), may be recommended. — Concerts are frequently given in summer at Wriedt's Establishment, to the S. of the station.

Cabs. Per drive in the town for 1 pers. 60-75 pf., each additional person 15 pf.; to the Bellevue, 1 pers. 1 m.; per hour 1½ m., each additional person 30 pf.; each trunk 30 pf. — From 10 to 11 p.m., and 6 to 7 a.m., a fare and a half; from 11 p.m. to 6 a.m. double fare.

Boat per hour, for 1-2 pers. 1 m. 20, each pers. additional 30 pf.; ferry to the Wilhelminenhöhe 10 pf. — Small Steamers also ply in all directions at very moderate fares: to Wilhelminenhöhe every 5 min., 10 pf.; Ellerbeck every ½ hr., 10 pf.; Neumühlen hourly, 20 pf.; to Laboe by Bellevue, Altheikendorf, Möltenort, and Friedrichsort, six or eight times daily, 20-30 pf.

Kiel, one of the oldest towns in Holstein, with 43,594 inhab., the Baltic headquarters of the German navy, with a naval academy, and a university founded in 1665, is picturesquely situated at the S. end of the Kieler Föhrde, one of the best havens in Europe and the chief war-harbour of Germany. Kiel is now a place of commercial importance, being a great depôt of the trade between the Danish islands and the continent. The 'Kieler Umschlag', a considerable fair, has been held here annually since the 14th century. Extensive harbour-fortifications, quays, and docks have been constructed within the last few years (p. 161).

In an open space opposite the station is the new Thaulow Mu-SEUM (open., Tues. and Frid. 11-2, Sun. 12-4; at other times on application), designed by Moldenschardt and adorned with sculptures by Andresen, containing a collection of Schleswig-Holstein wood-carvings, formed by Professor Thaulow (d. 1883) and presented to the province in 1875. This collection, which is unrivalled of its kind, affords conclusive proof that art was cultivated in this part of the country in the 16th and 17th centuries.

Skirting the harbour, or proceeding through the 'Vorstadt', we soon reach the town itself, which lies between the Kleine Kiel and the harbour. In the centre of it rises the Nicolaikirche, built in 1241. The Schloss-Strasse leads hence to the N.E. to the Schloss, formerly the residence of the Dukes of Holstein-Gottorp, restored after a fire in 1838. It is now the official residence of the admiral in command of the Baltic station, and is frequently occupied by Prince Henry of Prussia. At present it also contains the University Library and the Museum of Art (chiefly casts from the antique). The Museum of National Antiquities in the old university, in the Katten-Strasse, contains many objects of a pre-historic period, including a boat and a human body found in the Sundewitt Moor (adm. on Sun., Wed., and Sat. 11-1; at other times on application to the attendant). In the Neue Danische-Strasse, to the W. of the palace, is the hall of the Kunstverein, containing a small collection of modern pictures (open on Sun.: at other times on application). The University, contained in a new building at the N. end of the Schlossgarten, numbers 62 professors and 350 students. Adjacent are several institutes in connection with it. - The hall of the Gymnasium, in the Kleine Kiel, is adorned with frescoes by A. von Werner.

*Environs. The harbour is picturesque, and a trip by steamer or small boat as far as Laboe is recommended.

On the W. BANK the *Düsternbrooker Weg, a high-road flanked with pleasant country-houses, leads N. from the University through beautiful beech-woods, and past *Folker's Hotel and the old Imperial Wharf, to the new Sea Baths (*Restaurant) and the (11/2 M.) *Hôtel Bellevue (warm sea-baths). The latter (concerts in summer) stands on a hill, and commands a beautiful view over the Föhrde. A little inland is the forest-nursery of Düvelsbek. From the Bellevue the traveller may follow the coast by the village of Wik to (11/2 M.) Holtengu, at the mouth of the Schleswig-Holstein Canal, 20 M. in length, constructed in 1777-84 for the purpose of connecting the Baltic with the N. sea by means of the Eider, but navigable for vessels of small tonnage only. A beautiful walk hence is by the canal and the Holtenau Lock to the park of (3M.) Knoop (*Inn at the second lock). -Friedrichsort, a fortress 3 M. farther, with the works on the Brauneberg (now 'Fort Falkenstein') and the opposite batteries of Möltenort and Labor ('Fort Stosch') command the entrance to the harbour. Steamers, see p. 160.

The E. BANK of the harbour is also attractive. The * Wilhelminenhöhe (or Sandkrug; Hotel, with garden), opposite the station (steamers, see p. 160), commands an admirable view of the town and the wooded W. bank. Farther on, to the S., are some extensive private wharves; to the N. the large Wharves and Dockward of the German Navy (cards of admittance to be obtained in the naval office in the Schloss at Kiel after 10 a.m., 50 pf.). The village of Ellerbek (*Johannisberg Restaurant) is the headquarters of the 'Kieler Sprotte' fishery (flat fish). A pleasant footpath leads hence over the Koppeln to Neumühlen, at the mouth of the Schwentine, with the largest steam and water-mill on the continent, in which 4000 bushels of grain are ground daily, and an extensive ship-building yard. Farther distant is the Schrevenborn wood; then, between the villages of Alt-Heikendorf, Möltenort, and Laboe, the 'Gründe', affording charming wood-walks on the slopes of the coast. The fishing-village of Laboe (Stoltenberg's Inn, with garden, and beautiful view) is situated in the Probstei, the property of the nunnery of Preetz (p. 181), an extremely fertile district, 40 sq. M. in area, where the people are still somewhat primitive in their habits and costumes. Popular festivals take place in summer.

To the S. of Kiel is the large lunatic asylum of Hornheim. The neighbouring Viehburger Gehölz is noted for its fine beeches.

To Copenhagen, see p. 182. — To Sonderburg (p. 164), steamboat twice weekly in 41/2 hrs.; to Kappeln (p. 163) daily, except Sun., in 3 hrs.; to Stellin once weekly in 24 hrs., fare 12 m.

From Kiel to Flensburg, 49 M., railway in 31/4 hrs. (fares 4 m. 80, 3 m. 20 pf.). — The train crosses the Eider Canal. Unimportant stations. 16 M. Eckernfords (Götze), whence a diligence plies to (14 M.) Schleswig (in 28/4 hrs.; see below). The train crosses a corner of the Bay of Eckernforde, and the broad Schlei, and traverses the district of Angeln (p. 163). From (25 M.) Süderbrarup a branch-line runs to Schleswig (p. 162). 49 M. Flensburg, see p. 163.

22. From Hamburg (Altona) to Flensburg.

107 M. RAILWAY in 4-5 hrs. (fares 13 m. 80, 10 m. 40, 6 m. 90 pf.; express 15 m. 50, 12 m. 10, 8 m. 60 pf.).

From Altona to (46½ M.) Neumünster, see R. 21. 54 M. Nortorf. On the publication of Christian VIII.'s 'open letter' in 1846, large popular meetings were held at Neumünster and Nortorf, foreshadowing the events which ultimately separated the Duchies from Denmark.

68 M. Rendsburg (*Stadt Hamburg & Lübeck; Deutscher Kaiser; Railway Hotel), a fortified town with 12,776 inhab., was unsuccessfully besieged by the Swedish General Wrangel in 1645. The fortress formerly consisted of three works separated by the Eider, the Altstadt on an island, the Neuwerk to the S., and the Kronwerk to the N.

As Schleswig is approached a fine view is suddenly disclosed of the broad estuary of the Schlei and the town itself.

The Danewerk (or Dannewirks), an intrenchment which formerly defended the Danish frontier, dating from the 11th and 12th cent., and stretching across the level country, was stormed by the Prussians in 1848. The works were subsequently restored, and greatly extended and strengthened by the Danes, so that in 1864 they constituted a barrier from the mouth of the Schlei to Friedrichsstatl, a distance of 46 M., which might easily have been defended, had the Danish army been sufficiently numerous. Their forces were, however, totally unequal to the task, and the result was inevitable. The united troops of Austria and Prussia, notwithstanding the gallant resistance of their enemy, stormed the advanced positions in rapid succession, while a Prussian division proceeded to force the passage of the Schlei, in order to attack the Danes in the rear. The Danish General de Meza, seeing the impossibility of preventing this, at once abandoned his position and retreated rapidly in order to save his army from annihilation. The intrenchments have since been entirely levelled.

 $82^{1}/_{2}$ M. Schleswig. — Hotels. *Stadt Hamburg; *Raven's Hotel, in the Altstadt; Stehn's Hotel, near the station; Stadt Kiel, small.

Omnibus from the station to the town.

Schleswig, an ancient town with 15,446 inhab., charmingly situated, traces it origin to the reign of Charlemagne, and afterwards became the residence of the Dukes of Schleswig. It consists of a single street, 3½ M. in length, extending round the W. end of the arm of the sea named the Schlei, and is divided into the Friedrichsberg, Lollfuss, Holm, and Altstadt. The finest View is commanded by the Erdberrenberg, on the S.W. side, pear the station.

At Friedrichsberg, the quarter next to the station, is situated the old ducal Schloss Gottorp, now a barrack, the chapel of which contains an interesting carved priedieu of the 17th century. Behind the Schloss are beautiful oak and beech-woods. Adjacent are the new Government Offices. — To the N. of the Friedrichsberg is Magnussen's Wood-Carving School.

The Dom in the Altstadt, externally insignificant, erected in the Romanesque style about 1100, was restored in Gothic taste after a fire in 1440.

The Interior is open daily 11-12 (free), and at other times on application to the sacristan (opposite the Romanesque 8. portal, No. 68; fee Im.). - The ALTARPIECE, formerly in the monastery of Bordesholm (p. 159), a work executed in carved oak by Brüggemann in 1521, represents the history of the Passion in 20 sections, and is by far the finest work of art in the Duchies. In the choir, to the left, is a font of 1480; on the right the tombstone of King Frederick I. Adjacent is the chapel of the Dukes of Gottorp, and in the nave are those of several noble families.

On the N. side of the Altstadt, in the direction of St. Jürgen. stands a monument to the eminent painter J. A. Carstens (b. at St. Jürgen in 1734, d. at Rome in 1798), erected in 1865.

The Mövenberg (sea-gulls' hill), a small island near the town, is densely covered with sea-fowl.

STEAMBOAT twice daily, in 2%, hrs., to (21 M.) Kappeln (*Stadt Hamburg), on the picturesque banks of the Schlei, a charming excursion, which may also be made in a rowing-boat. At Missunde, the narrowest point of the Schlei, then commanded by seven Danish intrenchments, an engagement took place on 2nd Feb., 1884, between the Danes and the Prussians, after which the latter effected the passage of the bay at Arnis. The result of this was the abandonment of the Danewerk by the Danes (see above). The district of Angeln, a fertile peninsula between the Schlet and the Bay of Flensburg, presents a somewhat English appearance with its high hedges, which are not common on the continent. The finest survey of the district is obtained from the Schierzberg. — From Kappeln to Kiel, steamer in summer six times weekly, in 3 hrs. (fares 2 or 1 m.).

DILIGENCE daily in 3 hrs. from Schleswig to (15 M.) Eckernförde (p. 161). RAILWAY to (14 M.) Süderbrarup (p. 161) in 1½ hr.

90 M. Jübek, the junction for Husum (route to Wyk), Tönning, Heide, and Neumünster (see p. 165). Then (104 M.) Nordschleswigsche Weiche, whence a branch-line conveys the traveller to -

107 M. Flensburg. - Hotels. BAHNHOPS-HOTEL, *CENTRAL-HOTEL,

FRY'S HOTEL, all in the Rathhaus-Str., R. 21/2, B. 1, D. 2 m. Restaurants. Centralhalle; Gnomenkeller; at the Hotels. Tramway from one end of the town to the other.

Flensburg, a thriving town with 30,956 inhab., beautifully situated at the S. end of the Flensburg Fiord, one of those deeplyindented bays which form the excellent harbours of Schleswig-Holstein. The most important buildings are the Nicolaikirche, the Marienkirche (both with modern towers), the Post Office, and the Law Courts. Near the new barracks is the ruin of Duburg. Fine view from the Bellevue, a café on the hill to the W., near the windmills. The *Old Cemetery, prettily situated on the same height, contains a marble sphinx by Thorvaldsen and a number of German and Danish monuments to soldiers who fell in the wars of 1849-50 and 1864.

At Oeversee, 6 M. to the S. of Flensburg, on the road to Schleswig, a fierce conflict took place between the rear-guard of the retreating Danish army and the pursuing Austrians in 1864.

Further to the 8., and 41/2 M. to the N. of Schleswig, is the village Further to the S., and 41/2 m. to the N. or Schleswig, is an vinege of Idited!, where the Schleswig-Holstein army under General Willisen, was defeated by the Danes on 25th July, 1850. To commemorate the victory the Danes erected the 'Lion of Flensburg', now in Lichterfelde (p. 66). The "Flensburg Fjord is a fine sheet of water enclosed by gentle grassy and wooded slopes, enlivened by the red roofs of scattered farmhouses. Small steamers ply on the fjord.

The first stations (not touched at by all the steamboats) are Wassers-lessen, Collund, Süderhaff, and Randershof. Then, on the S. bank, Glücks-burg (*Strand Hôtel & Curhaus, near the pier, R. 21-28 m. per week, board 381/2 m., sea-bath 40 pf., per dos. 4 m.; *Bettesue, R. 15-21, board 30 m. per week), now frequented as a bathing-place by 1000-1500 visitors annually. The village (Sonne), *2/4 M. from the shore, and not visible thence, possesses a Schloss of the 16th cent., picturesquely situated on a small lake shaded with beeches, and containing the burial-vault of the older Glücksburg line, which became extinct in 1799.

Sandacker, on the N. bank, is the station for the village of Rinkenis. The narrow Eken-Sund forms the entrance to the bay called the Nübel-Noor. Here the steamboat touches at Gravenstein (Bade-Hôtel, charges as at Glücksburg), the Schloss of which was the headquarters of Prince Fred. Charles of Prussia during the Dano-Prussian war. The steamboat then returns through the strait. - The traveller is recommended to disembark at Ekensund or at the following station Brunsnis, and to proceed on foot to $(7^{1}/2 \text{ M.})$ Duppel. The route from Ekensund leads by Schottball and Schmöl; that from Brunsnis passes Möllmark and Broacker, the chief place in the peninsula, with two church-towers (fine view from the 'Schwedenschanse), and joins the Eckensund road at Schmöl. The road ascends gradually, passing a number of graves of fallen Danes and Prussians. The village of Düppel, or Dybbol, lies to the left of the road. On the hill rises a Gothic Obelisk, completed in 1871, commemorating the storming of the intrenchments of Düppel. View to the E. of the island of Alsen; to the S., beyond the Wenningbund, lies the peninsula of Broaker; to the W. the fertile hills of the Sundewitt; and finally to the N. the distant Baltic.

A little farther on, the road passes the Intrenchments of Düppel, a connected series of bastions forming a semicircle round the point of the Sundewitt opposite Sonderburg, and extending from the Alsen-Sund to the Wenningbund. They were taken by the Prussians in 1864 after a siege of two months, and have since been refortified. The road now descends to (1 M.) the narrow Alsen-Sund, which is crossed by a bridge-of-boats to—Sonderburg (*Holstein sches Haus; *Stadt Hamburg, unpretending; Alsund; Wilhelmsbad and Bellevue, bath and lodging-houses), the pleasant little capital (5860 inhab.) of Alsen, an island 122 sq. M. in area. old Schloss of the Duke of Augustenburg is now a barrack. Sonderburg is frequented as a bathing-place. A walk round the town and to the (1/4 M.) pretty 'Süderholz' is recommended.— At Arakiel on the Alsen-Sund, about 4 M. to the N. of Sonderburg, rises a Monument commemorating the passage of the Prussians at this spot in 1864.— Towards the E., ating the passage of the Frussians at this spot in 1864. — Towards the E., about 4½ M. from Sonderburg, lies the watering-place of Augustenburg (Curhaus, 'pens.' 42 m. per week; Franck's Hotel; private rooms 10½ m. per week), prettily situated on the deeply-indented Augustenburg Fjord. Near Adserballig, 4½ M. farther, rises the Hüge Berg (245 ft.), which commands a survey of the island, the sea, Fünen, Arroe, &c.

The traveller may now return by steamboat to Flensburg or to Kiel (on Tues., Thurs., and Sat. forenoons); or he may take the steamer from Sonderburg to Apenrade (see below; thrice daily, in 3 hrs.).

Steamer from Flensburg to Korthe (see p. 1851) thrice weekly (11 hrs.)

Steamer from Flensburg to Korsor (see p. 182) thrice weekly (11 hrs.). touching at Sonderburg.

Railway from Flensburg to Eckernförde and Kiel, see p. 161.

From stat. Nordschleswig'sche Weiche (p. 163) the main line runs due N.; country uninteresting. 119 M. Tingleff (branch-line to Tondern, for Sylt, see below); 128 M. Rothenkrug, whence a branch-line runs in 25 min. to Apenrade (4 M.; Bahnhofs-Hôtel; De Vos), a small trading town and sea-bathing place on the beautiful Apenrad Fjord. Steamer from Apenrade to Sonderburg, see above; to Flensburg (p. 163) twice daily. - From (141 M.) Woyens another branch-line runs in 35 min. to Hadersleben (71/2 M.; *Petersen's Hotel), another small trading-place on the fjord of that name. At (153 M.) Vamdrup the Danish frontier is reached (see p. 181).

To Wyk on the Island of Föhr: RAILWAY from (Hamburg) Altona, via Jübek (p. 163), to Husum, 106 M., express in 4½ hrs. (fares 15 m. 10, 11 m. 70, 8 m. 30 pf.); STRAMBOAT thence to Wyk in 3 hrs.—Through-tickets may be obtained at Hamburg, Altona, Berlin, Brunswick, Dresden, etc.

To Westerland in Syli: RAILWAY from (Hamburg) Altona, viā Tingleff (see above), to Tondern, 134 M., in 5½ hrs. (fares 19 m. 20, 14 m. 90, 10 m. 60 pf.); omnibus, carriage, or diligence (twice daily) to Hoyer (p. 166) in 1½ hr.; and thence by STRAMBOAT to Syli in 2 hrs. (daily, fare 2 m. 60 pf.; on July 30th, Sept. 1st, and Oct. 2nd salling-vessel instead of the steamer); carr. from the landing-place to Westerland in 1/2 hr. The departure of the steamers from Hoyer depends on the tide. Through-tickets, obtainable at Berlin, Hamburg, and Altona, ensure seats in the diligence, etc. From Hamburg to Jübek, 90 M., see R. 22. Near Husum begins the marshy district of Eiderstedt, with its excellent pastures, whence cattle are largely exported to London.

106 M. Husum (*Thomas's Hotel; *Stadt Hamburg), situated on the Husumer Au, which here empties itself into the German Ocean by means of the 'old' and the 'new' Hever, is a dull seaport (6267 inhab.), with an old château of the former dukes. The ducal Park now belongs to the town. About 1/2 M. from the town are extensive Ouster Parks.

From Husum the railway runs to the S. to - 61/2 M. Friedrichastadt (Holstein'sches Haus), a town with 2428 inhab., founded by Dutch emigrants in 1621-28, and still retaining its Dutch characteristics of broad streets, paved with brick, and intersected by canals.

14 M. Tönning (Hötel Victoria), on the North Sea, with 3400 inhab., lies at the mouth of the Eider, which forms a good harbour here.

A small steamer the Etaer, which forms a good narbour nere.

A small steamer plies from Tönning to Carolinenkoog, on the opposite bank of the Eider, whence a railway traverses the fertile fen-districts which extend to Glückstadt on the Eibe (p. 159). 16 M. Henne; 20½ M. Weddingstedt. — 24 M. Heide, one of the chief places in the district, and the junction for the line through the fens mentioned at p. 159. The cemetery contains a monument to the Reformer Heinrich van Zütphen, who was burnt here by the fanatical peasants in 1524. Branch-line from Heide to Weddinghusen, Tiebensee, and (9 M.) Wesselburen, from which last a diligence runs twice delly to (7 M.) Busine (Stadt Hamburg), a small bathing-place on the German Ocean. — The railway next passes stations Nord-hastedt, Albersdorf (with a large pagan altar), Hanerau, Gockels, Bering-stedt, Hohenwestedt (with an agricultural school), and Innien, and joins the main line at (62 M.) Neumünster (see p. 159).

The STEAMER threads its intricate passage between numerous islands and sandbanks. Some of the latter, called 'Hallige', although covered by spring tides, are inhabited, the buildings being erected on embankments of earth. On the left lies the large island of Nordstrand, on the right Nordstrandisch Moor; then Pelworm on the left. The steamer steers between numerous 'Hallige', and the large island of Föhr at length comes in view. Comp. the Map.

Wyk. - Hotels. *Conversationshaus, R. from 15 m. per week, D. 1 m. 50 to 2 m. 40 pf.; REDLEFSEN, with terrace towards the sea; *Thomas, cheaper; all three hotels are on the Sandwall. Lodgings on the Sandwall, etc., R. 10-15 m. per week. Tantau's Hôtel Garni; Bellevue; Villa Traumann. Pensions for ladies and small families, Frau Schröder and Michelsen.

The Bathing Arrangements are good. Tickets sold by the proprietor of the establishment. Excellent Warm Baths are to be had in the new bath-house, close to the Conversationshaus. Applications for apartments may be addressed to the 'Bade-Direction'. — Physicians, Dr. Gerber and Dr. Hitscher.

Wuk (1043 inhab.) is the principal place in the island of Föhr. which is about 28 sq. M. in area. The Sandwall, a road parallel to the beach, and shaded with a double avenue, where the Conversationshaus (music morning and evening), the hotels, the landing place, etc., are all situated, is the favourite promenade. The bathing beach is at the S. end. The sea is generally smooth, and the water unusually salt.

Besides Wyk, there are thirteen other villages in the island of Fohr, which contains altogether 4150 inhabitants. Boldicum and Nicolum are the places most frequented. A visit should be paid to one of the Vogel-kojen, in which about 80,000 wild-duck are caught annually.

From Wyk to Sylt steamer once a fortnight, at other times by sailing-boat, sometimes taking a whole day to the passage.

From Hamburg to Tingleff, 119 M., see R. 22. Branch-Line thence to Tondern (16 M.; *Bahnhofs-Hôtel, at the station: Stadt Hamburg, in the town), an old town with 3637 inhab., and the capital of the district. — The High-Road to Hoyer (8 M.; diligence and omnibus, see p. 165; carr. 71/2 m.) traverses extensive pastures on which a fine breed of cattle is reared. Mögeltondern, with a château and park of Count Schack, is about half-way. Hoyer (Stadt Tondern) lies 3/4 M. from the shore.

The STEAMBOAT starts from Hoyer, and steering for the N. end of the island of Sult, turns to the S. towards the lighthouse near Wenningstedt. The island of Rom, frequented for sea-bathing, is seen in the distance to the right. At the landing-place at Munkmarsch (tavern) carriages are in waiting to convey passengers to Westerland (in 1/2 hr., 1-2 pers. 3 m., 3 pers. 4 m., each addit. pers. 50 pf., each trunk 50 pf.; diligence 1 m.).

Westerland, a scattered village, frequented as a sea-bathing place since 1858, lies on the W. side of the island of Sylt, and is separated from the sea by a range of sand-hills, across which a wooden pathway leads to the beach. To the right (N.) is the gentlemen's, to the left (S.) the ladies' bathing-place. The Conversationshaus was opened in 1878. The sea is generally rougher than at the other bathing-places on this coast. Annual number of visitors about 1500.

The island of Sylt is the largest German island in the North Sea, being upwards of 39 sq. M. in area and 71/2 M. long, but very narrow.—
About 3/4 M. to the N. of Westerland lies Marientust, a small sea-bathing place (bath 50 pf.), and 21/4 M. farther is Wenningstedt (Hôtel Bleicken; Sächsischer Hof), which has also recently come into notice for sea-bathing. At the back of the village is a subterranean 'giants' tomb', consisting of huge granite blocks; key kept by the widow of the coast-guardsman Bonnes (50 pf.). About 11/2 M. further on we come to the handsome Lighthouse, 120 ft. high, commanding an extensive view (fee 1 m.; but no admittance after 3/4 hr. before sunset).— One of the chief excursions is a drive to List (carriage there in 3 hrs., 15 m.), a hamlet ("Tavern) at the N. end of the island, with a gateway of whale's bones. Beautiful view from the top of the highest sand-hill. The Königshafen, enclosed by the List-Land, once an excellent harbour, is now choked up with sand.— On the E. side of the island is Keitum ("Friesenhalle), where Frau Hansen has a small museum (adm. on Wed. and Sat. 3-7, 50-75 pf.).— Hörnum, at the S. end of the island, lies amid dreary dunes.— Boats to be had at Keitum (3 m. per hr. for 1-4 pers.).

In the architecture of St. Mary's (choir consecrated 1365) and of St. Nicholas (dating mainly from the 15th cent, with vaulting 130 ft. in height, richly ornamented the influence of the Marienkirche in Lübeck is distinctly traceable. St. George's is a cruciform edifice of elegant proportions, the nave dating from the 15th, the choir from the 14th century. The 'Alte Schule' by St. Mary's churchyard, dating from 1300, and several other private houses are interesting brick structures in the Gothic style. The Fürstenhof, formerly a ducal palace, and now the seat of the municipal authorities, is a good specimen of German Renaissance. The handsomer wing was built by Gabriel van Aken and Valentin von Lira; the decorations are alternately in sandstone and terracotta, the latter being remarkably rich. It has lately been restored. The Thormann'sch Haus contains handsome old furniture, oil-paintings, etc. (strangers admitted). Pleasant excursion by steamboat to Wendorf (restaurant): fine view of the harbour.

Kaiser-Wilhelm-Str.

Schwerin, an ancient settlement of Wends, and an episcopal see from 1170 to 1624, is now a well-built town with 30,000 inhab., and the capital of the Grand Duchy of Mecklenburg Schwerin, prettily situated on the Lake of Schwerin (14 M. long, 31/2 M. broad) and several smaller lakes.

Near the station is the handsome new Church of St. Paul (Pl. 7;

B, 2, 3), in a Gothic style.

From the station we cross the Louisen-Platz, with the temporary Hoftheater, and proceed through the Wilhelm-Str. to the Pfaffenteich (Pl. B, C, 1, 2, 3), among the buildings round which the most conspicuous is the Arsenal (Pl. D. 3).

Near the S. end of the Pfaffenteich, in the heart of the town, rises the *Cathedral (Pl. C, 3), a fine brick edifice in the Baltic style, begun in the middle of the 14th cent., on the site of an earlier building of which only the tower (1375) exists, completed in 1482, and judiciously restored in 1867-69. Adm. 9-10 a.m.; castellan opposite the S. side of the choir (1 m.).

The 'Chapel of the Holy Blood', at the back of the high-altar, contains tombs of the grand-ducal family. The stained-glass windows, representing the Ascension, with figures of apostles and evangelists, were executed from cartoons by Cornelius. The N. side of the choir contains a Monument of Duke Christopher (d. 1582). Attarptee, a Crucifixion, executed by Lenthe under the directions of Cornelius. By one of the 8. pillars is a bronze Epitaphium of the Duchess Helena (d. 1524), attributed to the celebrated Peter Vischer of Nuremberg. The four curious monumental Brasses, 10 ft. high, are of Flemish workmanship, and date from 1473. Admirable new organ.

From the cathedral we cross the market-place, and traverse the König-Str. and the Schloss-Str., at the end of which, on the right, is the new Regierungsgebäude (Pl. 15), built in 1865-67, containing government-offices. Beyond it is the Alte Garten (Pl. C, 4), an open space, with the Court Theatre (Pl. 21), which was burned down in 1882 and is now being rebuilt. The Alte Garten also contains a Monument to Grand Duke Paul Frederick (Pl. 2), designed by Rauch, and erected in 1849, and a Monument to the memory of the Mecklenburgers who fell in 1870-71, a lofty column of granite crowned with a bronze statue of Megalopolis (Mecklenburg).

In the same square, at the corner of the Anna-Str., stands the Museum (Pl. 10), designed by Willebrand, and completed in 1882. On the upper floor is the grand-ducal picture-gallery, and on the lower floor are the other grand-ducal art-collections.

The Picture Gallery is open to the public on Sun. 12-4 and on Tues., Thurs., and Sat. 11-2; at other times on application to the custodian (bell at the top of the staircase). Large catalogue 8 m., short catalogue 1 m. The gallery is particularly rich in works of the Dutch school of the 17th century. From the vestibule we enter (to the left) château on leaving Cab. 9,

The other collections of the Grand-Duke (Sun. 12-2, LOWER FLOOR.

Wed. and Frid. 11-2) are on the ground-floor.

The central saloon contains the Art Cabinet, a collection of small works of ancient art, among which the gold and silver goblets and the ivory carvings are particularly fine. Then, Cork models of Roman buildings, by C. May; portraits of Luther and Melancthon carved in wood, by Albert von Soest; antique vases, etc.

Four Rooms to the right contain the Collection of Casts, beyond which is the Cabinet of Engravings.

To the left is the Collection of Mecklenburg Antiquities, including the contents of several Roman tombs.

The Cellars contain a collection of mediæval ecclesiastical monuments. The Anna-Strasse (Pl. C, D, 4) leads from the Museum to the S.E., along the lake, to the Ducal Stables (Pl. D. 3, 4; open daily till 3 p.m.).

A bridge adorned with two colossal groups (Obotrites equipping their chargers) crosses to an island lying between the Schweriner See and the Burgsee, on which is situated the grand-ducal *Palace (Pl. C, D, 4, 5), begun in the early-Renaissance style from designs by Demmler in 1845, and completed by Stüler in 1857. It is an extensive structure, with irregular wings flanked with lofty towers, and encloses a pentagonal court-yard, the whole producing a very picturesque effect. As early as the beginning of the 12th cent, a palace of the princes of Mecklenburg occupied this site. It was rebuilt in the 15th and 16th cent., and parts of this mediæval edifice have been skilfully incorporated with the modern palace. Above the portal is an equestrian statue of Niclot, the Obotrite chief.

The "INTERIOR, decorated chiefly by Stiller and Strack, is open on Sundays and holidays at noon, on week-days at 10, 1, and 5.30 (from 1st Sept. to 31st March at 3) o'clock (tickets, 1m. each, to be obtained from the porter on the left side of the inner portal). On the ground-floor is the Waffenhalle, with stained-glass portraits of Mecklenburg princes, executed by Gillmeister from cartoons by Schumacher (comp. p. 169); on the first floor are the spacious Festsaal, the Thronsaal, and the tasteful Gothic Chappel,; built in 1660-63, and afterwards restored. Fine views from the windows. The *Burggarten adjoining the Schloss is also worthy of inspection.

The extensive *Schlossgarten (Pl. C, D, 5, 6) is reached hence by a bridge.

*Walk to (21/2 M.) Zippendorf (comp. Pl. D, 6; steamb. stat.), and along the bank of the lake to (2 M.) Rabensteinfeld, where the grand-duke has a villa. The Pinnower See, 1/2 M. thence, surrounded by wooded hills, lies 45 ft. lower than the Schweriner See. The Kaninchenwerder (Restaurant; steamb. stat.), or rabbits' island, is much visited. Schelfwerder, 11/2 M. to the N. of Schwerin, lies amid beautiful woods (Restaurant).

Beyond Kleinen (see p. 167) the railway skirts the Lake of Schwerin. 87 M. Blankenberg. 101 M. Bützow (Hotel de Prusse: Erbgrossherzog), a thriving little town, near which is the penitentiary of Dreibergen.

FROM BUTZOW TO ROSTOCK, 19 M., railway in 40-50 min. (fares 2 m. 80, 1 m. 90, 1 m. 40 pf.). The line runs first on the right, then on the left bank of the Warnow. The only intermediate station is Schwaan.

19 M. Rostock. — Hotels. Sonne (Pl. b; E, S), R., L., & A. 2 m. 80 pf.; Hôtel de Russie (Pl. a; D, 3), R. 21/4 m., both in the Neue Markt; *Sradt Hamsueg, Fischbank 17 (Pl. E, 2); Pohler's Hotel, Stein-Str. 7 (Pl. D, E, 3); Linow's Hotel, Kröpeliner-Str. (Pl. C, 2).

Rostock, with 36,967 inhab., once a prominent member of the Hanseatic League, the most important place in Mecklenburg, and the seat of the supreme law-courts for the two duchies, lies about 6 M. from the Baltic, on the Warnow, which is 550 yds. wide, and deep enough for vessels of moderate tonnage to enter the town. Rostock possesses more merchant vessels (upwards of 370) than any other seaport on the Baltic, and carries on a considerable trade in grain, herrings, petroleum, and coal. — The astronomer Kepler once taught at the University here (founded 1419; 240 stud.), having been appointed professor by Wallenstein during his brief supremacy in 1629. Like Lübeck, the town still retains a picturesque, mediæval appearance. Besides the handsome churches, the visitor will observe a number of tasteful Gothic dwelling-houses, some of which are adorned with coloured bricks.

Leaving the station we pass through the Steinthor to the Neue Markt, which contains the Rathhaus (Pl. 3), built in 1265 and provided with turrets in 1365-90: the old Gothic facade is concealed by a Renaissance addition. Farther on is the Marienkirche (Pl. D. 2), a large and fine edifice erected in the Baltic-Gothic style in 1398-1472, containing numerous tombstones, chiefly of the Meerheimb family. A stone in the church marks the spot where the learned Grotius, who died here in 1645 on his way as Swedish ambassador to the French Court, was buried; his body was afterwards removed to Delft in Holland. The lofty tower of St. Peter's Church (Pl. F. 2), 433 ft. high, dating from about 1400 (spire 1577), serves as a landmark to mariners. The Church of St. James (Pl. C. 2) dates from the 14th century. The Church of St. Nicholas (Pl. F. 3), which was begun in 1250 and restored in 1450 (tower of later date), has a handsome carved altar (1400) and beautifullycarved benches.

From the Neue Markt diverges the Blut-Str., continued by the long Hopfen-Markt and leading to the Blücher-Platz (Pl. C, D, 3), both containing a number of mediæval houses. In the middle of the square rises a bronze Statue of Blücher, who was born in 1742 in the Blücher-Str., in the house No. 22, marked by a tablet. The reliefs are in allusion to the marshal's defeat at Ligny and his victory at Waterloo.

Gebhard Lebrecht v. Blücher, first entered the Swedish, then the Prussian military service. When captain of cavalry in 1772, in consequence of a delay in his promotion, he applied for his discharge, which was granted in the characteristic words of Frederick the Great, 'Der Rittmeister v. Blücher soll sich zum Teufel scheeren', i.e. may betake himself to the devil! After Frederick's death he re-entered the service as major in 1787, distinguished himself against the French in 1783, and in 1806 became general of the advanced guard of the army. After the disastrous battle of Jena he retreated to Lübeck, where after a determined resistance he was at length compelled to capitulate. In 1813 he was appointed to the command of the Silesian army (40,000 Prussians and Russians), defeated the French at the Katzbach (p. 263), and paved the way for the victory of Leipsic by the battle of Möckern, on 16th and 18th Oct. On New Year's Day, 1814, he crossed the Rhine at Caub, defeated Napoleon on 1st Feb. at La Rothière, and on 3ist March took the Montantre at Paris by storm. At Paris Blücher was created marshal and Prince of Wahlstadt by the King of Prussia, and afterwards accompanied him to England, where among other marks of distinction the degree of D.C.L. was conferred on him by the University of Oxford. After Napoleon's return in 1815 Blücher commanded the Prussian army of 115,000 men, and was repulsed by the French at Ligny on 16th June. He succeeded, however, in rallying his army with wonderful rapidity, and on the memorable 18th, arriving on the field of Waterloo at 4.30 p. m., de-cided the victory. On the termination of the war Bkücher retired to his estates in Bilesia, where he died on 12th Sept. 1819.

On the left (S.) side of the square is the Grand Ducal Palace (Pl. 4: C. 3). Facing us is the new University Building (Pl. 14: C. 3), a handsome structure in the Renaissance style, built in 1867-70 from a design by Willebrand, and adorned with statues and medallion-portraits; it has a handsome vestibule and 'aula'. and contains a library of 140,000 volumes. — In the adjacent Schwaansche-Str. is the new District Court (Pl. 1). a brick building in the Renaissance style.

The old ramparts have been laid out as a Promenade, containing the new Post Office (Pl. D. 3) and a War Monument in commemoration of 1870-71. A pleasant walk of $\frac{3}{4}$ hr. may be taken through the promenade, passing the Hospital (Pl. B. 2) and the Anatomical and Physiological Institution (Pl. B, 2), and then along the bank of the Warnow. The Steamboat Wharves, on the high-road to Doberan, 3/4 M. from the Kröpeliner-Thor, are interesting.

Near the Steinthor, Stein-Str. 1, is the Town Museum (Pl. 7; open on Sun., 11-12); adjacent to which is the Theatre. burned down in 1880.

Small steamboats ply every ½ hr. in summer from the Schnickmanns-Thor (Pl. C, D, 1) to (5 min.) the Fähre, on the opposite bank of the Warnow; also every ½ hr. in the afternoon to Bramow, the Schnater-mann, and other villages and popular resorts, commanding a fine view of the town and the Warnow. Small boats 25 pf. per hr., sailing-boats 50 pf., with boatman 1 m.

STEAMBOAT from Rostock (in summer 10-30 times a day, in 1 hr., fare 50 pf.) to Warnemunde (*Stralendorf, Hötel Pavillon, *Hübner, all on the beach, D. 11/2-2, 'pension' from 6 m.; Berringer; Thormann's and Jungmann's Restaurants; lodgings 12-60 m. per week), a seaport on the Baltic, 8 M. to the N., which is entered and quitted by about 700 vessels annually. The sea-bathing attracts about 2000 visitors in July and August. Small steamer several times a day to the Rostocker Heide, with the bathing-place Müritz, 9 M. from Warnemunds (reached from Rostock by carr. in 2-21/2 hrs.).

FROM ROSTOCK TO DOBERAN, 11 M., railway in 1 hr. (fares 1 m. 20, 80 pf.). — Doberan (Logirhaus; Lindenhof), on the Baltic, a sea-bathing place with a chalybeate spring. The palace with its park, and the Gothing Church, completed in 1388, are the chief buildings. The bathing-place is at *Itelitgendamm, 31/2 M. distant, delightfully situated. Omnibus thitlers served the control of the challenge of the chief days. eral times a day. — The railway is to be prolonged to Wismar (p. 167). From Rostock to Copenhagen, see p. 182.

The MECKLENBURG LINE proceeds from the Bützow junction in an easterly direction to (109 M.) Güstrow (*Erbgrossherzog; *Hôtel de Russie), a town of 12,000 inhab., the centre of the Mecklenburg wool-trade, with an old ducal Schloss and Gothic cathedral. branch line diverges here to (27 M.) Plau. — 121 M. Lalendorf; 127 M. Teterow.

136 M. Malchin (Hôtel de Russie), a town with 6075 inhab. and a fine church of the 14th cent., situated in the plain of the Peene, between the Cummerower See and Malchiner See. The environs are pretty. - Branch-line from Malchin to (17 M.) Waren (Hôtel du Nord), picturesquely situated on the Mürits, the largest inland lake in Mecklenburg (50 sq. M.).

143 M. Stavenhagen, birthplace of Fritz Reuter (1810-74), the Platt-Deutsch poet; 155 M. Mölln. — 164 M. Neubrandenburg (Rail. Restaurant, D. 11/4 m.; Goldene Kugel; Fürstenhof), a busy town of 8400 inhab., situated on the Tollenser See. It possesses a church of the 14th cent., and four *Gothic gates, and carries on a considerable trade in wool. On the lake, 11/2 M, from the town, is the Belvedere, a château of the Grand Duke. - Neubrandenburg is the junction for the Berlin Nordbahn (to Stralsund), see p. 200.

The express train from Berlin to Kiel runs via Hamburg (RR. 28, 22).

From Berlin to (149 M.) Büchen, see R. 28. — 160 M. Mölln (Stadt Lüneburg; *Stadt Hamburg), a town of 4327 inhab., with numerous mediæval buildings, pleasantly situated on a lake. The popular German jester, Till Eulenspiegel, is said to have died here . in 1350, in proof of which his tombstone with an owl ('Eule') and mirror ('Spiegel') upon it, and various personal relics are shown to the curious. Attractive excursion hence to the (91/2 M.) Schall-See, with its prettily-wooded banks and islands.

166 M. Ratzeburg (Daniel's Hotel), a town with 3931 inhab., formerly a celebrated episcopal see, is charmingly situated on an island in the Ratzeburger See, the banks of which are clothed with fine beech-forests, but is only partly visible from the railway. It belongs half to Lauenburg and half to Mecklenburg-Strelitz. The handsome late-Romanesque *Cathedral, begun in 1164, is said to have been founded by Henry the Lion (Gothic additions). The visitor should make a trip by boat to Waldesruh, a pleasant spot amid the woods on the E. bank of the lake (refreshments). - A steamer sometimes plies between Lübeck and Ratzeburg (23/4 hrs.).

Lübeck, with 51,055 inhab., the smallest of the three independent Hanseatic towns of the German Empire, was once at the head of the League, and is still a busy commercial place. It lies 9 M. from the Baltic, on the Trave, the channel of which has been deepened, so as to afford access to vessels of considerable size. The town still contains reminiscences of its mediæval greatness in its lofty towers, its ancient gabled houses in the late-Gothic and Renaissance style, fortified gateways, Gothic churches, and its venerable Rathhaus.

Libeck was founded in 1148 by Count Adolph II. of Holstein, on the site of an earlier town of the Wends, and shortly afterwards ceded to Henry the Lion, under whom it prospered so well that it was declared a free town of the Empire in 1226 and invested with important municipal privileges. In 1227 Lübeck in alliance with the Holsteiners signally defeated the Danes at Bornhöved, thus releasing the surrounding country from their yoke, and in 1234 they gained the first German naval victory on record at Travemunde, which overthrew the naval supremacy of the Danes. Lübeck's enterprising spirit, coupled with the increasing activity of the neighbouring towns (Rostock, Wismar, Greifswald, Stralsund, Hamburg), gave rise to the foundation of the Hanseatic League (from 'Hansa', i.e. association), an alliance of the great commercial towns of N. Germany, which formed a peace-loving, but powerful bond of union between West-ern and Eastern Europe. The first alliances were indeed soon dissolved, ern and Eastern Europe. The first alliances were indeed soon dissolved, but in the 14th cent. they were eagerly renewed, in consequence of the Danes having by the conquest of the ancient colony of Wisby in the island of Gothland in 1361 threatened to monopolise the trade of the Baltic. The war resolved on by the first general Hanceatic Diet at Cologne in 1367 soon raised the League to the zenith of its power. They conquered S. Sweden and Denmark and permanently garrisoned several important places within these countries, and by the Peace of Stratuma in 1370 they even became entitled to ratify the election of the kings of Denmark. The League enjoyed marked prosperity for upwards of a century, and embraced eighty cities in all, from Reval to Amsterdam, and from Cologne to Breslau and Cracow, which according to their situation belonged to one of four sections, viz. the Wendish, the Prussian, the Westphalian, and the Gothlandish, and had their factories at Bergen, Novogorod, London, and Bruges. Lübeck at that period numbered 80-90,000 inhab, and held undisputed precedence over the other members of the League. Towards the close of the 15th cent. the increasing power of the Northern and the Russian empires proved detrimental to the League, and its decline was accelerated by the new commercial relations of Europe with America and India, which were chiefly carried on through the medium of England and Holland. Notwithstanding this, Lübeck again endeavoured to assert her ancient supremacy over the Baltic, and the enterprising burgomaster Jürgen Wullenwever conceived the bold project of establishing a democratic hegemony over the Scandinavian kingdoms (1531-35). But these schemes proved abortive, and a war against Sweden in 1568-70, although not unattended with glory, led to no practical result. Lübeck's power theneforth declined, but she preserved her position as a free city of the Empire, and continued to enjoy a considerable share of commercial prosperity, although her population gradually dwindled down to one-third of its ancient number.

In the history of MEDLEVAL ARCHITECTURE Lübeck is a place of great importance, owing to the care with which brick building was practised here. This style was probably introduced from Holland in the 12th cent., and was chiefly cultivated during the Gothic period. The Lübeck style of church-architecture, particularly that of the Marien-Kirche, has extended to Mecklenburg, Pomerania, Prussia, Brandenburg, and far to the W. beyond the frontiers of Holstein. The material was unsuitable for rich plastic decoration, and compelled the architects to simplify their forms. Thus the buildings are destitute of foliage; the capitals are trapezium-shaped instead of cubical, and there are no slender columns; but these peculiarities led to new structural and decorative beauties. Great attention was paid to the vaulting, spacious halls were constructed without difficulty, surfaces, otherwise blank, were enlivened by moulded stones, and coloured bricks were introduced for the same purpose. The external architecture of the churches appears plain and clumsy, owing to the sparing use of flying buttresses, but the interiors are generally imposing.

Leaving the station (Pl. B, 5) we enter the town by the inner Holstenthor, a fine specimen of a mediæval gateway, completed in 1477 and restored in 1871.

The Holsten-Strasse leads straight to the MARKET (Pl. C, 5), in which rises the Rathhaus (see below). This square is adorned by a Gothic Fountain, erected in 1873, with statues of Henry the Lion, Adolph II. of Holstein-Lauenburg, Emperor Barbarossa, and Frederick II. Here, too, are situated the old Pranger (see below) and the new Post Office.

The *Rathhaus (Pl. 20), occupying the N.E. corner of the market-place, a Gothic brick building with huge gables and quaint spires, consists of two buildings adjoining each other at right angles; the oldest part was completed in 1444. In 1570 the principal part of the building, adjoining the Market, was embellished with a handsome entrance-hall in the Renaissance style, and in 1594 a handsome staircase in the same style was constructed on the side next the Breite-Str. The Audience Chamber, with a door dating from 1573 and pictures by Tonelli (18th cent.), and the Kriegsstube ('War Chamber'), with beautiful carved-wood panelling and a marble mantel-piece (1595), are worthy of inspection. The ancient Hanseatic Hall, in which the diets were held, has been converted into public offices. A side-door leads to the gallery of the Börsensaal. The keeper lives on the ground-floor, beside the staircase in the Breite-Str. (fee 50 pf.).

Under the N. wing is the entrance to the Rathskeller (see p. 175), which was completed in 1443, and is remarkable for its fine well-preserved vaulting. The Chimney Piece in the apartment where bridal festivities were wont to be celebrated bears the quaint inscription. Menich Man lude synghet, wen me em de Brut bringet; weste he wat men em brochte, dat he wol wenen mochte' (many a man sings loudly when they bring him his bride; if he knew what they brought him, he might well weep). The Admiral's Table is said to be made of a plank of the last admiral's ship of Lübeck (1570).

The Pranger, or in Low German Kaak (Pl. 3), a Gothic structure of brick, has been converted into market-stalls. Opposite the Rathhaus is the new Post and Telegraph Office.

A few paces to the N. of the market rises the *Church of St. Mary (Pl. 15; C, 5), the finest edifice at Lübeck, and one of the most admirable examples of low-German brick architecture, which has served as a model for numerous churches in this part of the country. It was indebted for its origin in 1276-1304 to the ambition of the citizens to have their principal church larger than the cathedral of the bishop. The plan is similar to that of the French cathedrals, the aisles being lower than the nave, which is not the case with most of the brick churches. It is 335 ft. long; transept 162 ft. in height and 186 ft. in width; nave 127 ft. high; spires 413 ft. high.

Interior (open 10-1 o'clock; the sacristan, who lives in the neighbouring Meng-Str. 4, is generally in the church about noon). The S.W. Portal, by which the church is usually entered, leads into the "BRIEFCAPELLE" (chapel of letters), so named from letters of indulgence having once been sold there, with groined vaulting supported by two slender monoliths; altar in carred wood, of the 15th century. At the W. end of the nave is a Fort of 1337. — Beyond it is the CHAPEL OF THE BRIEGENFAHLEN with the "Mass of St. Gregory" (in distemper). "Altar with scenes from the life of the Virgin, 1518; altarpiece with Descent from the Cross and Saints, 1484. The DANCE OF DRATH, in a closed chapel on the left, dates from the 15th cent., but has been frequently retouched. — In the following chapel the "Taking leave of the body of the Saviour, painted by F. Overbeck in 1845. — The Sachieft contains some good carving from the old altar, nearly all gilded, representing scenes from the life of Christ (about 1425). — Farther on, against a pillar on the left, hangs an admirable old winged picture, the Nativity, Adoration of the Magi, and Flight into Egypt, painted in 1518, ascribed to Jan Mostaert. Adjacent is a tablet in memory of the war of 1870-71. — Opposite are stone-reliefs of Christ washing his Disciples's feet and the Last Supper; at the foot of the latter is a black mouse gnawing at the roots of an oak, the ancient emblem of the city. — The Clock at the back of the high-altar, dating from 1561-65, and repaired in 1880, from which at noon the Emperor and Electors step forth, move past the Saviour, and disappear on the other side, always attracts numerous spectators; below it is an astronomical dial, which gives ellipses of the sun and moon and various other data down to the year 1999. — The So-called Brichecapeller, to the E., at the back of the choir, contains Overbeck's Entry of Christ into Jerusalem, painted in 1824. The "Stained Glass in this chapel was executed by a Florentine in Lübeck in 1436. — HIGH ALTAR Of 1697, adjo

To the S.W., near the market, is the Church of St. Peter (Pl.17; sacristan, Petri-Kirchhof 307), a Gothic edifice with double aisles, on the site of a Romanesque church of 1170, erected about the year 1300. The monumental brass of the burgomaster Cling-henberch, which was executed in the Netherlands in 1356, merits inspection.

We now cross the KLINGEBEG (Pl. C, 6), where there is a handsome new Fountain, designed by F. Schmitz of Cologne, and erected as a monument of victory. In front of the Stadt Hamburg Hotel are two colossal lions in cast iron, designed by Rauch.

Farther on in the same direction is the *Cathedral (Pl. 12; sacristan, Hartengrube 743), founded by Henry the Lion in 1173, reerected in 1276, and completed in 1334; towers 394 ft. high. The church is generally entered by the E. portal of the N. aisle, consisting of a vestibule, with an inner and outer portal. The *Inner Portal, transept, choir, and nave are in the Romanesque, the rest of the edifice in the Gothic style. The whole edifice is under repair.

Interior. Fort of 1445 in the chapel behind the organ. — An elegant railing around the pulpit is attributed by a tradition to the workmanship of the devil; the pulpit itself dates from 1568. — Choir-screen of the 15th cent.; in front of it a large crucifix dating from 1477. In the Choir, the recumbent bronze *Figure of Bishop Bockholt (d. 1341), founder of the choir. Brazen lamp of the 15th century. — High-Altar of 1696; in front of it the tombetone of Gerold, the first Bishop of Lübeck (d. 1163). Farther on, Portrait of Canon van Korbrinck, by Kniller (1672). — The Architeriscopal Chapel to the left of the choir, contains sarcophagi of the last prince-bishops. — In the next Chapel the *Monument of the bishops von Serken and von Mull, Netherlands workmanship of the 14th cent.; Madonna of 1509 in coloured stucco. — The Greverader-Capelle contains an *Altarpiece of 1491, said to have been painted by Menting: on the external shutters is represented the Annunciation, in grissille, apparently almost entirely by the master's own hand; on the inner shutters are painted the life-size figures of 88. Blasius with the candle, John the Baptist, Jerome, and Ægidius with the doe. The inner pictures are scenes from the Passion, connected by a landscape in the background with the Crucifixion occupying the principal place in the centre. The handiwork of the master's assistants is most apparent here.

The Domhof, adjoining the Cathedral on the S., is an interesting old structure, now converted into a hospital; a new building prevents its being visible from the Dom-Platz.

The Ægidienkirshe (Pl. 9; D, 6) is a somewhat cumbrous structure of the 14th century. — The eminent painter Friedrich Overbeck (d. at Rome in 1869) was born in 1789 at No. 894 König-Strasse.

The now disused *Church of St. Catharine (Pl. 11; D, E, 4), an admirable structure in the early-Gothic style, possesses an elegant choir borne by columns. It now contains a Museum, consisting of prehistoric antiquities, ethnographical curiosities, plaster casts, weapons, objects of decorative art, ecclesiastical antiquities and Lübeck antiquities (open on Sun. 11-1; at other times on application). The buildings of the monastery are occupied by a Gymnasium and Library, containing several historical treasures.

Herr Harms, Breite-Str. 775, possesses an extensive collection of ancient (chiefly Netherlandish) and modern pictures, to which connoisseurs are admitted. — The Natural History Cabinet, Breite-Str. 805, includes a collection of gorillas, presented to the city by the African traveller H. Brehmer.

The Jacobikirehe (Pl. 13; sacristan Breite-Str. 770, a corner-house), a Gothic building of the 14th cent., contains a chapel (the Brömsencapelle) with a remarkable *Altar of the latter part of the 15th cent., representing the Crucifixion in relief in the centre, and the family of the donor, the Burgomaster Brömse, on the wings.

Opposite the W. Portal of the church is the handsome house of the Sahiffergesellschaft (Pl. 18), with interior little altered, an interesting example of an old guild-house. — The third house from it, that of the Kaufleute-Compagnie (Pl. 8), Breite-Str. 800, contains some admirable wood-carving, particularly in the old *Fredenhagen-Room, executed in 1585, and transferred hither (open Thurs.,

1-2; at other times by paying a fee).

The Hospital sum Heiligen Geist (Pl. 7; E, 4), on the Kuhberg, is an admirably-organised institution. A fine early-Gothic chapel, dating from the early part of the 14th cent., and now rarely used for divine service, serves as an entrance-hall. The chapel and its ancient mural-paintings were restored in 1866. — A short distance hence, in the Grosse Burg-Str., is the old Burgkloster (Pl. E, 3), a fine brick edifice of the 13th cent., recently restored, and containing an Industrial Exhibition.

The *Burgthor (Pl. E, 2), the N. gate of the town, is a lofty brick structure of 1444. In the vicinity, on 6th Nov. 1806, several severe engagements took place between Blücher, with the wreck of the Prussian army which had survived the battle of Jena and retreated to Lübeck, and the pursuing French marshals Bernadotte, Soult, and Murat. — The promenades outside the Burgthor command a pleasing view of the harbour and the Marien-Kirche.

The house No. 298 on the Trave contains a Weinstube, or taproom, curiously carved in wood in 1644.

The Wine Trade of Lübeck, particularly with Bordeaux, is very considerable. A visit to the cellars of one of the principal firms (Schultz, Pfilig, Behncke, Massmann & Nissen, Tesdorpf, or Lorenz Harms Schne) will be found interesting if an introduction can be obtained.

To the N. of the station is the 'Chimborasso' (Pl. 5; B, 3), an eminence commanding a fine *Survey. The harbour and the old ramparts on the S.W. side of the town also afford pleasant walks.

The Walk-Mühle (Restaurant), 2 M. from the Mühlen-Thor, is a favourite resort of the Lübeckers.

Traveminds (°Curhaus; numerous Lodging Houses), 10½ M. to the N.E. of Lübeck (train in ¾ hr.; fares 1 m., 70 pf.), a sea-bathing place, was the port of Lübeck before the deepening of the river. Pretty walks.

From Lübeck to Hamburg and Mecklenburg, see R. 24.

Beyond Lübeck the train follows the left bank of the Trave. 183 M. Schwartau (Hôtel Geertz), a favourite resort from Lübeck, with wooded environs. The train next traverses moorland and brushwood. 187 M. Pansdorf and (192 M.) Gleschendorf are the stations for several small seaside-resorts. 194 M. Ottendorf.

199 M. Eutin (*Stadt Hamburg, Victoria, Lübecker-Str., R. and A. 21/2, D. 3 m.; Köpke's Hotel, in the Markt; Railway Hotel; carriages for excursions 9-18 m. per day), pleasantly situated between the Grosse and Kleine Eutiner See, was the seat of a bishop from 1162 to 1535, and now belongs with its Schloss and pretty grounds to the Duke of Oldenburg (4462 inhab.). Weber (d. 1826), the great composer, was born here, in a house in the Lübecker-Str., denoted by an inscription. Count Stolberg, the friend of Goethe, and the poet Yoss also resided here last century, and their houses, in the Hinter-Str., are indicated by memorial tablets. The tasteful church was rebuilt in 1878. The market-place contains a column in memory of the war of 1870-71.

The *Environs of Eutin, as far as Plön and Preetz towards the W., and Lütjenburg towards the N.E., are the most picturesque part of Holstein. Good village inns. About 11/4 M. to the N. of Eutin is the picturesque Kellersee, on the bank of which rises *Bruhn's Koppel or the Sahlkamp (Inn), commanding a beautiful view. A path along the E. bank Sahikamp (Inn), commanding a beautiful view. A path along the E. bank of the lake leads, partly through pleasant beech-woods, to (3/4 hr.) Sietbek. The charming "Ukleisee, 7 min. to the E. of Sielbek, should next be visited; the walk round it occupies 1 hr. (inn unpretending). Footpaths lead from the Uklei inn towards the N.E. in 2 hrs. to the Bungsberg (570 ft.), the highest point in the district, the tower on which commands an extensive panorama of land and sea, extending to the Danish islands. Thence 12 M. (or direct from Eutin by the loftily-situated village of Kirchnüchel about 18 M.) to Lütjenburg (Stadt Hamburg), from which "Hassberg, a charmingly-situated sea-bathing place (not expensive), is 3 M. distant. From Lütjenburg in 2 hrs. by the Stöss farm to Panker, seat of the Landgrave of Hessen. Near it rises the "Pielsberg (446 ft.), with the towar of Hessenstein, which commands one of the most (446 ft.), with the tower of Hessenstein, which commands one of the most extensive prospects in N. Germany. Farther to the W. is Salzau, with the château and park of Count Blome; then the Probstei (p. 161). — A pleasant road leads from Lütjenburg on the S. bank of the Selenter See by (7 M.) sant road leads from Lutjenburg on the S. Dank of the Selenter See by (1 M.) Selent and the "Blomenburg, a shooting-box of Count Blome, to Rastorf (71/2 M. from Selent; see below), or to the S.W. to Preetz (see below). From Eurin to Oldenburg, 241/2 M., railway in 19/4 hrs. (fares 2 m. 40, 1 m. 60 pf.). From (5 M.) Bujendorf a visit may be paid to the Gömnitzer Berg, a good point of view. 91/2 M. Neustatt (Stadt Hamburg; Deutsches Haus), a seaport with 4119 inhab. (weekly steamers to Lübeck, Fehmarn, and Kiel). Unimportant stations. Then (241/2 M.) Oldenburg (Scheibner's Hotel; Stadt Hamburg), an ancient town with 2762 inhab., not one confounded with the capital of the duchy of Oldenburg (0.142). to be confounded with the capital of the duchy of Oldenburg (p. 142). -From Oldenburg a diligence plies twice daily to (11/2 hr.) Heiligenhafen, whence a steamer goes twice weekly to (3-4 hrs.) Kiel.

The scenery between Eutin, Plön, and Ascheberg is very pretty. 203 M. Gremsmühlen (*Hôtel Gremsmühlen), charmingly situated on the Dicksee, with an interesting piscicultural establishment.

A beautiful footpath leads hence along the Dieksee to (71/2 M.) Plön. At the W. end of the Keller-See (see above), 3/4 M. from Gremsmühlen, is the village of Malente, where Voss laid the scene of his poem 'Louise'.

208 M. Plön (Prinz; Stadt Hamburg), is very picturesquely situated between the Grosse and Kleine Ploner Sec. The Prussian military school was once a royal Danish château. A pleasant walk of $1^{1}/_{2}$ -2 hrs. may be taken as follows: from the station by the Eutin road to (1/4 M.) Müller's Baths ('Pension' 3 m. 60 pf., with garden-restaurant; steamb.-stat., boats), on the Grosse See, near which is the Rosenmühle, both commanding a fine view. Then to the Steinberg (view), and by the Lütjenburg road round the Schöhsee to the Parnass, a good point of view at the entrance to the wood;

lastly to Biberhöhe (Pension), 1/2 M. from the station.

The railway skirts the N. bank of the Grosse Plöner See. 212 M. Ascheberg (Rail. Hotel), near Count Brockdorf's estate of that name, junction for Neumünster (p. 159). The Kiel line turns to the N. and skirts the Lanker Sec. — 217½ M. Preets (Stadt Hamburg) possesses a convent for ladies of noble birth, founded as early as 1220. A busy manufacture of shoes is carried on here.

A walk of 1 hr. may be taken hence to Bastorf, with a beautiful park in the valley of the Schwentine, which forms the outlet of the Plöner See; then in 2 hrs. down the valley by the *Rastorf Paper-mill and Oppendorf to Neumühlen (p. 161).

24 M. Fredericia (Railway Restaurant) is an unimportant place, surrounded by a girdle of decaying fortifications. An interesting bronze *Statue of a soldier here commemorates the victory of the Danes over the Schleswig-Holstein besiegers in 1849.

Passengers cross the Little Belt by a steamboat to Fünen, Dan. Fyen, and land at Strib, near Middelfart (Behrendt's Hotel), a sea-bathing place. Several unimportant stations. 33 M. (from Strib) Odense (Larsen's Hotel), the capital of the island, with 20,800 inhab., the birthplace of Andersen (p. 194). The Cathedral of St. Knut, erected in 1086-1301, contains monuments of the kings John and Christian II. The Fünen railway terminates at (51½ M.) Nyborg.

The steamer (luncheon 1 cr.) departs ½ hr. after the arrival of the train, and crosses the Great Bett to Zealand in 1½ hr. The starting-point of the Zealand line is Korsör (*Hôtel Store Bett; Rail. Restaurant), with 4000 inhabitants. Then stations Slagelse, Sorö (on the lake of that name, surrounded by beech and pine-woods; Cistercian church of the 12th cent.), and Ringsted (with an ancient Benedictine church).

Restaurant), an old town on the deeply indented fjord of that name, the capital of the kingdom down to 1448 (comp. p. 187), and the residence of the bishop of Zealand down to the Reformation, once numbered 100,000 inhab., but now contains 5900 only. The only relic of its ancient glory is the fine

*Cathedral (sacristan, Danish 'Graver', nearly opposite the W. portal, 1-3 pers. 2 croner), consecrated in 1084, restored after a fire in 1282, and at subsequent periods, and finally in 1868. It contains the tombs of the Danish kings, most of whom, from Harold I. (d. 985) down to Frederick VII. (d. 1863) repose here, the earlier in vaults, the more recent in chapels added to the church in 1615-42 and 1772-1825. Some of their monuments are worthy of inspection. The small gate opposite the N. side of the church leads to grounds which command a pleasing view of the fjord. — The 8. Zealand Railway diverges here (see below).

(see above); fares 8 cr., 6 cr., 3 cr. 70 öre, Dan. currency. — STEAMER from Kiel to Copenhagen (direct), twice weekly (Tues. and Frid. at 6 p.m.) in 17 hrs.; fare 17 m. 70 or 12 m. 50 pf.

c. From Lübeck to Copenhagen.

STEAMER from 1st April to 30th Sept. daily in 16 hrs.; fare 18 m. or 15 m. 75 pf. — Another steamer runs once a week via Ny-kjöbing (see p. 183).

The steamer usually starts from Lübeck about 4 p.m. (Pl. D, 3). The descent of the Trave is uninteresting. In 1½ hr. Trave-münde (p. 179) is reached. The Trave-münder or Neustädter Bucht is then traversed. The chalk cliffs of the Danish island of Möen and the coast of Zealand come in sight about 4 a.m.; then the lighthouse of Falsterbö on the Swedish coast, opposite which, on the Danish side, is the Kjöge Bugt (p. 183).

The vessel steers round the fertile island of Amager, on which the village of Dragör is situated. To the right on the Swedish coast lies Malmö (p. 199). The island of Saltholm is next passed, and the towers of Copenhagen at length become visible. The Lynetten and Tre Kroner batteries, which proved so destructive to the English fleet on 2nd April, 1801, are passed, and about 6 a. m. the Harbour of Copenhagen, defended by the citadel of Frederikshavn, is reached. d. From Rostock to Copenhagen by Nykjöbing.

STHAMER to Nykjöbing in $4^1/2$ hrs., daily (except Sun.) in June, July, and Aug., and thrice weekly in April, May, and Sept. (fare $7^1/2$ or $4^1/2$ m.; return-ticket 12 or 7 m.). — From Nykjöbing to Copenhagen in $5-5^1/4$ hrs.; fares 9 cr. 50, 6 cr. 70 ö.

From Nykjöbing, a small seaport, the railway for Copenhagen crosses the W. side of the island of Falster and reaches the Great Belt at Orchoved. Steamer thence in 20 min. to Masnedsund, a small seaport in S. Zealand, and the terminus of the S. Zealand railway; the trains run hence to Copenhagen in 3-3½ hrs. — Stations Vordingborg (with a fine ruined castle), Lundby, Nästved (with beautiful beech-wood), and Kjöge (Hôt. Prindsen), an ancient town, prettily situated on the Kjöge Bugt, where the Danes under Nils Juel gained a great naval victory over the Swedes in 1677. At Roeskilde (p. 181) the S. and W. Zealand lines unite. Thence to Copenhagen, see p. 182.

e. From Stralsund to Copenhagen by Malmö.

STEAMER to Malmö thrice weekly (Mon., Wed., & Frid.) in summer in 8 hrs. (fares 18, 13½, 6 m.; return-tickets, available for 30 days, 30 or 22½ m.). As the steamer starts before daybreak, it is advisable to go on board the evening before. Malmö, see p. 199. Another steamer is here in waiting to convey passengers across the Sound to Copenhagen (in 1½ hr.; fares 1½, 1 cr.), where they are landed at the corner of the Havne Gade and Charlottenborg (Pl. G, 5).

f. From Stettin to Copenhagen.

STEAMBE in 14-15 hrs., twice a week in June, July, and Aug., once weekly in spring and the last four months of the year (fares 18, 101/2, 6 m.; return-tickets 30, 18, 9 m.). Towards evening the vessel passes Stubbenkammer on the island of Rügen, and on the following morning it steams through the Sound, leaving Dragör on the island of Amager to the left, and Saltholm to the right.

On a voyage of 4-5 hours it is usual to give the steward a fee of 50 pf. or 40 öre Danish, and double that sum for longer voyages; but more if unusual trouble has been given.

27. Copenhagen.

Language. English is spoken at all the principal hotels and shops. A brief notice of a few of the peculiarities of the Danish language may, however, prove useful.

The pronunciation is more like German than English: a is pronounced like ah, e like \bar{a} or eh, e like e, aa like a long e, aa like \bar{a} or eh, e like e long e, aa like e lik the fish, en Fisk, a fish; Skibet, the ship, et Skib, a ship. But if the substantive be qualified with an adjective, the article is den (m. and f.) and det (n.) in the singular, and de in the plural, e.g. den smukke Pige, the pretty girl. The plural of substantives is sometimes formed by adding e or er, and sometimes the singular remains unaltered. To be, være; I am, dc.: jeg (pron. yai-y) er; du er; han, hun, det, man er; vi, i, de er. To have, hafve; I have, &c.: jeg har; du har; han, hun, det, man har; vi, i, de har. The third pers. pl. De (pron. dee), the dative and accusative of which is Dem, is commonly used instead of the second pers. sing. or pl. (like the German Sie).

Cardinal numbers: een or eet, to, tre, fire, fem, sex, syv, otte, ni, ti, élleve, tolv, tretten, fjorten, femten, sexten (pron. sayisten), sytten, atten, nitten, tyve, een og (g mute) tyve, &c., tredive, and so on. The ordinals: den, det förste; den anden, or det andet; den, det tredte; den, det fjerde, femte, sjette, syvende, ottende, niende, tiende, &c.

Ja, yes; nei (pron. nay-1), no; ikke, not; Tak, thanks.

Har De ölf Have you beer? Gw mig (pron. may-1) et Glas Viin eller

Porter! Give me a glass of wine or porter. Bring mig Sup, Kjöd, og Grönt! Bring me soup, meat, and vegetables. Kartoffer, potatoes; Rödviin, red wine; Vand, water; Bröd, bread; Smör, butter; Ost, cheese; Middagsmad, dinner; Prokost, breakfast. Hvormeget er jeg Dem skyldig? How much do I owe you? Hvormeget koster det? What does this cost? Vär saa artig (vär saa god), hvilken Vei förer til Banegaarden? Pray, which is the way to the station? Ligefrem, straight on; paa venstre, to the left; paa höire, to the right; dag, back. Er det Toget H K. I is that the train to K.? Hvorledes kaldes denne Station (pron. stashoon)? What is this station called? Jernbane, railway; Dampakib, steamer; By, town; Gade, street; Tore, market; Nytore, new market; Gammeltore, old market; Haimtore, straw market; Port, gate; Bro, bridge; Höthro, high bridge; Holm, island; Have, garden; Havn, harbour; Kjöbenhavn, Copenhagen, i.e. merchants' harbour; Kong, king; Dronning, queen; stor, great; liden, lille, small; gammel, old; ny, new.

Money. In January, 1875, the monetary system of Norway, Sweden, and Denmark was assimilated: 1 crown = 100 ore, equal to 1 m. 18 ps. German money (1 s. 11/2 d. Engl.). 3 m. German are exactly = 2 cr. 65 ö.

Danish bank-notes realise the full exchange.

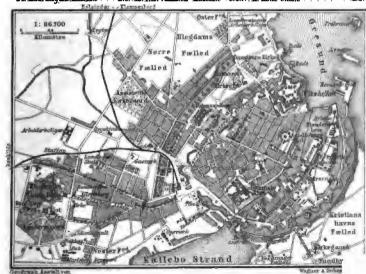

Arrival. Porter ('Drager') for carrying luggage under 1 cwt. from the steamboat to the custom-house and thence to a cab, 40 ore. Luggage booked through to Copenhagen is reclaimed at the custom-house; porterage thence to the cab, 30-40 ö. — Cab from the station or the harbour into the town 70 ö., trunk 15 ö., small articles free (1 cr. is usually given).

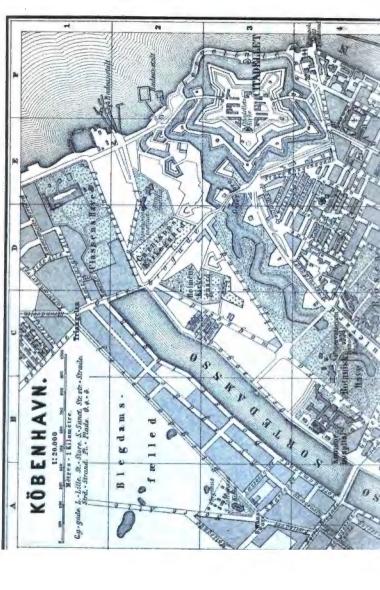

Hotels. *Hôtel D'Angletrerre (Pl. a; D, 6), Kongens Nytorv 34, in the centre of the town; *Phœnix (Pl. b; E, 5), Bredgade 37; *Kongen af Danmark (Pl. c; D, 6), at the corner of the Holmens-Canal and the Niels-Juels-Gade, all three with cafés; charges at all: R. 11/x-2 cr., D. 2-3, B. 1 cr.; *Hôtel de L'Europe (Pl. l; E, 6), Holbergsgade 2. — Hôtel Dagmar, Halmtory 12, near the station, new and beautifully fitted up, with a theaten extended. Copenhagen, Dan. Kjöbenhavn or Köbenhavn, the capital of the kingdom of Denmark and the residence of the king, with 234,850 inhab. (including the Frederiksberg suburb), lies on both sides of the Kallebostrom, a narrow and deep strait of the Sound which separates Zealand from the small island of Amager. The N. and broader part of the strait forms the excellent Harbour, to which the city was indebted for its early commercial prosperity.

Copenhagen was founded in the 12th cent. by Axel, Bishop of Roeskilde, on the site of a fishing-village (whence its original name Axethus), and increased so rapidly in consequence of its trade that King Christian III. made it his capital and residence in 1443. Christian IV. (1588-1648), the most popular of the Danish kings, renowned not only as a warrior, but also as a wise ruler and a zealous patron of industry and commerce, greatly extended the town, chiefly by the foundation of the Christianshavn quarter on the island of Amager. The interesting Palace of Rosenborg, built in this reign, is a good example of the severe Renaissance style known in Denmark as that of Christian IV. In the 17th and 18th cent. the city steadily increased, notwithstanding the numerous reverses it sustained in the wars with the Hanseatic League, Norway, Sweden, England, and Holland. Copenhagen suffered severely from two well-known events at the beginning of the present century, the naval battle of 2nd April, 180t, and the bombardment of the city and capture of the feet by the English, 2nd-5th Sept., 1807. The occasion of the former was the alliance concluded by Denmark with Sweden and Russia, of the latter the necessity of preventing the Danish fleet from falling into the hands of the French. The business of the place has long since recovered from these shocks and has increased considerably of late. It now possesses about 400 vessels. The port is entered annually by 9000 vessels, chiefly of small tonnage (in 1848 the number was 4800 only). The staple commodities are grain, leather, wool, train oil, butter, etc.

The commercial harbour, situated on the Zealand side, is separated from the war-harbour by a barrier across the Kallebostrom. The warehouses and magazines are in the Christianshavn quarter. The Orlogshavn, or war-harbour, adjoins the small islands of Nyholm, Frederiksholm, Arsenalö, and Christiansholm, on which the naval depôts are situated. The fortifications of the town on the land-side were removed in 1864, but those towards the sea, the citadel Frederikshovn, the advanced batteries of Trekroner and Lynetten, and the batteries Sextus and Quintus in Amager still exist.

Near the centre of the city, and forming the boundary between the business quarters on the S.W. and the fashionable quarters to the N.E., lies the KONGENS NYTORY (king's new market, Pl. D, E, 5, 6), a large circular space, from which thirteen streets radiate, the busiest being the Östergade (with handsome shops, and its continuation the Amagertory and Vimmelskaft), the Gothersgade, Store Kongensgade, Bredgade (p. 194), the Nyhavn, and the Tordenskjoldsgade. In the centre rises the Equestrian Statue of Christian V. (d. 1699), cast in lead. On the W. side is the palace of Charlottenborg (Academy of Art; Pl. 20), where exhibitions of paintings are held in April and May.

To the S. rises the new *National Theatre (Pl. 41; D, E, 6), a handsome Renaissance structure by Petersen and Dahlerup, with accommodation for 1700 auditors. To the right and left of the entrance are bronze statues of the Danish poets, Holberg (1684-1754), by Th. Stein, and Oehlenschläger (1779-1850), by Bissen.

Passing the theatre and following the tramway-line, we reach the new National Bank (Pl. 30; D, 6), and beyond it the Palace Bridge, opposite the façade of the palace of Christiansborg. Opposite the Students' Club is a Statue of Niels Juel (d. 1697; p. 183). The HOLMBINSKIRKE (Pl. 10; D, 7), to the left, on this side of the bridge, was built early in the 17th cent. and recently restored. It contains the tombs of Niels Juel and Peter Tordenskiold (d. 1720). two Danish naval heroes. High mass on Sunday forenoons. The castellan ('kirkebud') lives at Laxengade 16, corner of the Holmensgade. A little to the W. is a Statue of Tordenskjold.

The Christiansborg Palace (Pl. C, D, 7), situated on an island, which was fortified by Bishop Axel (p. 187) in 1168, the site of the ancient Axelhus (p. 187), occupies with its numerous dependencies a small quarter of its own. The present building, designed by Hansen, and completed in 1828, replaces one erected in 1740 and burned down in 1794. The handsome facade looks towards the Slots-Plads, which is embellished with an Equestrian Statue of Frederick VII., the founder of the constitution (1848-63). in bronze, designed by Bissen, and erected in 1873.

The façade is adorned with sculptures by Thorvaldsen. Above are four reliefs: Minerva and Prometheus, Hercules and Hebe, Jupiter and Nemesis, Æsculapius and Hygeia. The niches adjoining the portal contain four large allegorical figures in bronze, of Wisdom, Power, Justice, and Health, designed by Thorvaldsen and executed by Bissen.

cesigned by Thorvaldsen and executed by Bissen.

INTERIOR (adm., see p. 186). The finest apartments are the spacious Ball Room (154 ft. long), with reliefs by Bissen from Scandinavian and Greek mythology; the Ante-Chamber, which contains a copy of Thorvaldsen's Procession of Alexander (p. 192); and the Throne Room. The caryatides on each side of the throne are by Thorvaldsen; the walls are embellished with four scenes from Danish history by Eckersberg. The 'Queen's Staircase' is embellished with a marble group of Hercules and Hebe, by J. A. Jerichau, the figure of the hero being modelled on the famous torso in the Vaticar. famous torso in the Vatican.

The *Royal Ficture Gallery (Kongelige Maleri-Samling), on the upper floor of the palace, is reached by entering the chief portal in the Slotsplads, crossing the court to the colonnade, and ascending the staircase to the right. (Admission, see p. 186; catalogues 25 ö. and 1 cr.) — The collection now consists of about 750 works, two-thirds of which are by old masters. Most of these were collected by Frederick V. in the second half of the 18th cent., and extensive additions were made by Frederick VI. In more recent times the gallery has remained nearly stationary.

The Copenhagen Gallery ranks with the Brunswick Gallery and other German collections of the second class. Most of the pictures belong to the Netherlandish Schools, the Dutch masters of the 17th cent. being particularly well represented. The works of the ITALIAN SCHOOL, though less numerous, include some of the gems of the collection, such as Caravaggio's Gamblers (No. 60), the Meeting of 88. Joachim and Anna by Filippino Lippi (No. 192), Mantegna's Pietà (No. 213), and the portrait of Lorenzo Cybo by Fr. Mazzuola (Parmengianino: No. 218). — The only examples of the Early Netherlandish Masters deserving notice are a portrait by Memling (No. 446; injured), and a small picture by Stuerbout inserted in the middle of a larger one by Van Dyck (No. 93). — The GERMAN SCHOOL is best represented by two worthy and genuine examples of Cranach, the Judgment of Paris (72) and Venus and Cupid (71). — Among the few works of the Flexish School, two by Rubens are by far the best: viz. the JUdgment of Solomon (303) and the masterly portrait of Matthew Irselius (304). — The collection of Dutch Masters, though consisting of several hundred works, contains few historical and still fewer genre paintings. On the other hand there are few large galleries that can boast of so full a representation of the school of Rembrands. That master himself is illustrated to the contraction of the school of Rembrands. by the Disciples at Emmans (287) and two admirable portraits (288, 289); and G. Dou (89,90), Gov. Piènck (104, 105), De Wet (399), Sat. Koninck (183), Bot (48, 49, 50), Eeckhout (94), B. Pabritius (102), Victors (382-385), Ovens (270, 271), and A. de Gelder (109) are all seen here at their best. Nearly half of the Dutch works consist of landscapes. A few masters of the first rank, such as Jacob van Ruysdael (309-312) and A. van Everdingen (97-101), are well represented, both in number and quality, while no other gallery contains such abundant material for the study of the Dutch landscape-painters of the second class, who clustered round Ruysdael or drew their inspiration and training from Italy. In proof of this it is sufficient to call attention to the examples of Asselyn (7-10), Jon Both (61), Decker (79), Dubbets (91), Hackaert (118), Joris van der Hagen (190, 191), Looten (194, 195), Pynacker (274), Roghman (294), Swanevelt (354), and Verboom (376, 377).

The Danish Section of the gallery contains about 250 pictures, which afford a good survey of modern Danish art. The Danes distinguish an action of the survey of the su afford a good survey of modern Danish art. The Danes distinguish an earlier, classical tendency, of which N. A. Abidgaard (d. 1809) and J. A. Carstens (1754-98) are the chief representatives, and a modern school, headed by C. W. Eckersberg (1783-1859). Among the most noted modern painters are Marstrand and Bloch (gonre), Lundbye and Skovgaard (landscape), A. and W. Melbye, Soreusen, and Neumann (sea-pieces), Hunsen (architectural), Bache (animals), and Mác. Jerichau-Baumann, wife of the sculptor Jerichau. — Scattered throughout the rooms are the works of sculptor Jerichau. — Scattered taroughout the Yooms are the works of numerous Danish sculptors, all of whom follow closely in the footsteps of Thorvaldeen. The most important are Bissen (by whom there are here 135 busts), Evens, Freund, Holbech, Jerichau, Stein, and Vising.

The palace also contains the halls in which the Upper and Lower Chamber assemble, the Supreme Law Courts (Höieste Ret), the Court Chapel 150 (28), the Ch (Pl. 15; C, 6), the Court Theatre, and the Royal Library (entrance from the Töihusgade; adm., see p. 186), founded by Christian III. about the middle of the 16th cent., and containing 550,000 vols and upwards of 20,000 MSS. The Royal Stables and the Arsenal, the latter containing a historical collection of weapons (adm., see p. 186), may also be visited.

On the quay, on the E. side of the Christiansborg, is situated the Exchange (Pl. 3; D, 7), erected in 1619-40 in the Dutch Renaissance style, with a tower 150 ft. in height, the summit of which consists of four dragons with entwined tails. The hall, immediately opposite the entrance, contains a statue of Christian IV. in bronze, by Thorvaldsen. The lower part of the building is occupied by warehouses, the upper by offices. Business hour 1.30 to 2.30 p.m. daily (adm. after 2 p.m., 20 ö.). — To the N. of the Christiansborg rises the lofty Nicolai Tower, occupied by the fire-brigade, and bearing the date 1591 on its W. side.

The Knippelsbro at the back of the Exchange crosses the harbour to the Christianshavn quarter (p. 187; tramway), where the singular tower of Vor Freisers Kirke (Church of Our Redeemer, Pl. 7). erected in 1749, rises conspicuously (286 ft. in height). A winding staircase on the exterior ascends to the summit, which is crowned with a figure of the Redeemer. Extensive *View, including the coast of Sweden in the distance. The 'Graver', or sacristan, is to be found at St. Annæ-Gade 19; fee for 1-4 pers, 2 cr.

On the N.W. side of the palace stands the Thorvaldsen Museum (Pl. 43; C, 6, 7), a somewhat gloomy edifice erected in 1839-48 in the style of the Pompeian and Etruscan tombs. Over the pediment of the façade is a goddess of victory in a quadriga, in bronze, designed by Thorvaldsen and executed by Bissen. The other three sides of the building are adorned with a series of scenes in plaster, representing the reception of the illustrious master at Copenhagen on his return in 1838 after an absence of eighteen years. Visitors (adm. see p. 186) usually enter by the small door opposite the palace.

The Museum contains not only a very extensive collection of the works (originals in marble, plaster models, designs) of the greatest artist of the North, but also his grave, which occupies the inner quadrangle. The connection is suggestive, for never were the life and work of a creative genius more closely interwoven than in the case of Thorvaldsen. It is only when we have traced his personal development that we can understand how it was possible for him to devote himself so completely to the ancient style of art, without allowing himself to be diverted by modern culture; while his works, on the other hand, bear the unmistakable impress of his native simplicity and freedom from affectation. It is to these characteristics that his creations owe their greatest charm, and at the same time they enabled him to appropriate the motives of ancient art without allowing them to fossilise into academic rules.

Albert or Bertel Thorvaldsen was born on 19th November, 1770. His Albert or Bertet Thorvaidsen was born on 19th November, 1770. His father, who claimed direct descent from the ancient Kings of Iceland, settled at Copenhagen as a ship's carpenter and carver of figure-heads, so that the boy was from his earliest days familiar with some of the tools of his future profession, and was likely to acquire freedom of touch by first approaching his work on its practical side. He entered the Academy of Art at the age of eleven, and in 1793 gained the grand prize, which carried along with it the privilege of a residence in Italy for the purpose of study. He did not set sail however, till 1796 amplicit the purpose of study. He did not set sail, however, till 1796, employing the three intervening years in producing busts and reliefs. He arrived at Rome on 8th March, 1797, and entered upon a long period of obscure and patient labour, during which even his friends began to feel doubtful of his gifts. Rome, robbed of most of her treasures of art after the Peace of Tolentino, could scarcely be called the most fitting school for the study of sculpture; but Thorvaldsen persevered, studying the works of Carstens, copying antique busts, and lending an attentive ear to the advice of his distinguished Jason, prepared in clay as he could not afford to buy plaster of Paris, broke in pieces, and the second, though greatly admired, failed to find a prochaser. He was at last on the point of returning to Copenhagen, when he received from Thomas Hope, the wealthy English banker, an order for its reproduction in marble (1803). The tide had now turned, and thence-forward his career was happy and prosperous. He remained in Rome, and did not revisit his native country till 1819, when he had become the most famous sculptor in Europe. This latter part of Thorvaldsen's first residence in Rome, 1803-1819, was undoubtedly the most important period in his career. It was then that he thoroughly mastered the grounds on which antique sculpture may still serve as a model to the modern artist. He was no mere imitator of the antique, like so many of his predecessors: his very soul was imbued with its spirit. Like Winckelmann, he seemed to possess an intuitive knowledge of the laws of Greek art while still almost a stranger to its products. He gave back to statuary the dignified repose which the exaggerated unrest of rococo sculpture had destroyed, and at the same time skilfully avoided the risk of insipidity. He restored the degraded art of relief to its pristine purity, rejecting all elements of a pictorial character, with the result that what was lost in perspective and realism was more than compensated for by pure ideality. He distinguished with unerring penetration between those of the antique ideals that had merely a temporary value, or for the embodiment of which we now lack strength and insight, and those that possessed true immortality and were adapted to every age. Love-scenes, in particular, formed one of his favourite themes, and he strove to realise in sculpture the images of the Anacreontic muse. Plastic Genre, if the expression is allowable, was infinitely enriched by the quaint fancy of his works. His genius was characterised by a marvellous facility of production and by a power of utilising the most momentary observations for the purposes of his art. Numerous anecdotes are related of the speed of his modelling and of the tact with which he induced his living models to assume unconsciously the favourable attitudes that he desired. Master-piece followed master-piece in uninterrupted succession during the whole of this period. His finest statues were Bacchus, Ganymede (1805), Hebe, Psyche (1806), Cupid (1807), Adonts (1808), the Shepherd Boy (1817), Mercury (1818), and the Graces (1819). The Procession of Alexander the Great, executed by order of Napoleon for the decoration of the Quirinal in 1811, is the most important of the basreliefs, and in no other work has Thorvaldsen made a closer approximation to Greek art. The reliefs of Day, Night, and the Seasons are probably the most widely known of all modern sculptures. The sculptor's skill in depicting the youthful god of love did not desert him even in his old age. The Ages of Love (1824) so delighted the Pope, when visiting the sculptor's studio, and absorbed him in contemplation, that he forgot to bestow on the master the customary apostolic benediction. His visit to Copenhagen formed an important epoch in Thorvaldsen's career. Thenceforth he devoted himself chiefly to themes from the Christian sphere; but these works, beautiful and dignified as they are, lack the fire of his youthful productions. He was now recognised as the first of living sculptors, and was in request for almost every important monument that was erected in Europe; but his strength did not lie in portraiture, where the difficulties of modern costume proved almost insurmountable. His studio was thronged by pupils of almost every civilised nation. He produced in all about 500 works, but many of the latest are practically school-pieces and lack the direct impress of personal genius.

In 1820 he returned to Rome, where he remained nineteen years more. In 1838 he abandoned the active practice of his profession and returned to Denmark to spend the evening of his life, revisiting Rome, however, in herd-boy; 638-641. The four Ages.

The rooms on the Upper Floor are distinguished on the Plan by Arabic numerals. The CORRIDOR contains Alexander's entry into Babylon (No. 508), and models of the Bacchus and Hebe (Nos. 2, 7; 1805, 1808). This floor also contains Thorvaldsen's collection of pictures, antiquities. reminiscences of the great sculptor, etc.

On the Frederikholms-Canal, to the S.W. of the Christiansborg. beyond the bridges, is situated the Prindsens-Palais (Pl. 33; C, 7), once an occasional residence of the Danish crown-princes, and now containing several interesting collections.

1. The *Museum of Northern Antiquities ('Nordiske Oldsager'; adm., see p. 186) was founded in 1807 at the instigation of Prof. Nyerup, greatly extended between 1815 and 1865 under the care of C. J. Thomsen, and re-arranged in 1866-69 by the present director Worsage. It is one of the finest of its kind in existence. being rivalled only by the museum at Stockholm, and is invaluable to the historian of early civilisation, especially in Scandinavia. The objects it contains, 40,000 in number, consist of weapons, tools, implements, domestic utensils, hunting gear, wooden coffins, cinerary urns, musical instruments, trinkets, Runic inscriptions, ecclesiastical vessels, armour, tombstones, etc., all admirably arranged in chronological order. Illustrated catalogue in French or German, 75 ö.

There are five leading departments. 1st. The Flint Period (Rooms 1-3; down to B.C. 1500), consisting mainly of objects from the 'Kjökkenmöddown to B.C. 1900), consisting mainly of objects from the 'Kjokkenmod-dinger' or 'kitchen-middens', as the prehistoric mounds of bones, shells, table-refuse, etc., found on the Danish coast, are termed. — 2nd. The Bronse Period (Rooms 4 and 5, down to A.D. 250), principally weapons and ornaments, showing a well-developed art of casting, probably acquired from the South. — 3rd. The Iron Period (Rooms 6-9), consisting mainly of articles found in peat-moors. By the 3rd cent. of our era iron had completely superseded bronse as the material for weapons and cutting tools. The objects show a new and curious style of art, and are often inscribed with written characters (Runes). Silver, ivory, and glass, hitherto unknown, are now occasionally met with. Roman coins (down to A.D. 217), Roman vases, etc., indicate the increasing intercourse with southern nations. Rich golden ornaments occur. — 4th. Mediaeval Christian Period (Rooms 10-15; from about 1030 to 1536): weapons, ecclesiastical objects, etc. — 5th. Modern Period (Rooms 16-19; down to about 1660). The two last departments are on the first floor.

occupies 35 rooms. Danish catalogue, 50 ö.

The two chief departments are: ist. Ancient Times, comprising European antiquities (except those of the North), Asiatic, African, and American; 2nd. Modern Times, comprising objects from primitive or barbarous non-European nations, illustrative of their arts of war and peace (Greenland and E. India are particularly well represented).

3. The ROYAL COLLECTION OF ANTIQUITIES (admission p. 186) contains Egyptian, Assyrian, Phænician, Etruscan, Greek, and Roman antiquities, of no great value.

4. The ROYAL COLLECTION OF COINS AND MEDALS (admission, see p. 186) contains 30,000 specimens.

5. The Royal Collection of Engravings (admission, see

p. 186) consists of upwards of 80,000 plates, the most valuable of which are those by Dürer, presented to Christian II, by the artist himself in 1521. The old drawings are insignificant.

From the Prindsens-Palais the Raadhusstræde leads N.W. to the NYTORY OF GAMMELTORY ('new and old market': Pl. B. C. 6). To the left in the Nytorv is the Town Hall (Pl. 34), erected in 1815, with a portico: in the tympanum are the words with which the Jutland Code of 1240 begins: "Med Lov skal man Land bygge" ('with law one must establish the land'). The busy Nygade, and beyond it the Vimmelskaft and the Östergade, lead hence to the Kongens Nytory, and form one of the busiest arteries of traffic in the city.

Passing the fountain in the Gammeltory we soon reach the Protestant *Fruekirke ('Church of Our Lady'; Pl. 8; B, C, 6), the metropolitan church of the Danish dominions, a simple but impressive structure in the so-called Greek Renaissance style, replacing one which was destroyed by the bombardment in 1807.

Which was destroyed by the bombardment in 100%.

On the right and left of the entrance are statues of Moses and David, by Bissen and Jerichau. The tympanum contains a group of John the Baptist preaching in the wilderness, in marble; over the entrance-door, Christ's Entry into Jerusalem, a bas-relief, both by Thorvadissm.

"Interior (open daily, 9-11; fee 25 5.). The sole ornament of the interior consists of exquisite "Marble Statuary, designed and partly executed by Thorvadissm: a Risen Christ and the Twelve Apostles, over life-size; Wassiley Apral of striking healty with a shell as a font; relief of by Thorbudsen: a Risen Christ and the I welve Aposties, over life-size; a Kneeling Angel of striking beauty, with a shell as a font; relief of the Bearing of the Cross, over the altar; in the two chapels, reliefs of the Baptism and Last Supper; above the alms-basins the Guardian Angel and Charity. St. Paul, with the sword, entirely executed by the great master himself, is probably the finest of the aposties; SS. John, James, Matthew, and the pensive Thomas are the next in point of excellence.

The tower (25 o.; party of 12 pers. 1 cr.) commands a view similar to that from the Round Tower (see below).

In the FRUB-PLADS, to the N. of the church, are monuments to the naturalist Schouw (d. 1852), the organist Weyse (d. 1842), Bishop Mynster (d. 1854), and the theologian H. N. Clausen (d. 1877). .

The N. side of the square is bounded by the University (Pl. 45; B, C, 6), founded in 1479, burned down in 1807, and rebuilt in 1831-36. It is attended by 1000 students, more than half of whom study theology. In the vestibule, by the entrance, Apollo and Minerva in marble by Bissen; above, frescoes by Hansen. In the N.E. angle of the square is the University Library (Pl. 46), with 200,000 vols. and 4000 MSS., comprising many early Persian and Indian (reading-room open 11-3). On the W. side rises the Poly-TECHNIC INSTITUTION (Pl. 32). Behind the University is the extensive Zoological Museum (Pl. 47), containing a separate department for whales (entrance in the Krystalgade; adm., see p. 186). Adjacent is the MINERALOGICAL MUSEUM (Pl. 24; Frid. 12-2).

The Krystalgade leads hence to the N.E. to the Church of the Trinity (Pl. 16), with its *Round Tower (Det runde Taarn, Pl. 36; adm., see p. 186), 116 ft. in height, built as well as the church itself in the reign of Christian IV., and commanding an admirabl view of the city and environs. The tower is ascended by means of a broad and winding brick-causeway. To the S. of the church is a monument to the poets Ewald (d. 1781) and Wessel (d. 1785). — The busy Store Kjöbmagergade, with its numerous shops, leads hence S.E. to the Amagertory.

The Norrevolds Boulevard, to the W., separates the old town from the new quarters that have sprung up on the site of the former fortifications. On this boulevard is situated the entrance to the royal palace of —

*Rosenborg (Pl. 35; 0, 4), a simple but imposing Renaissance structure, begun by Christian IV. in 1604, and adorned with pediments and several towers, of which the loftiest is 328 ft. in height. It was the favourite residence of its founder, and from his death down to the middle of the 18th cent. was frequently occupied by the Danish monarchs, who fitted up suites of rooms in the styles of their different epochs and here deposited their jewels, state-weapons, coronation robes, uniforms, and valuable curiosities. More recently the collection was supplemented by similar articles from the other royal palaces, and arranged in chronological order down to 1863. It now affords an admirable historical survey of the advance of art and culture in Denmark. Adm., see p. 186. Illustrated catalogue in German 2 or., abridgment 60 5. — The garden adjoining the palace is adorned with a Statue of Christian IV., by Thorvaldsen.

On the E. side of the palace lies the Resemborg-Have (Pl. B, C, 4), a pleasant park, originally laid out in the French style but afterwards altered in accordance with English taste. It contains two cafés, a pavilion for the sale of mineral waters, etc., and is a great resort of nurses and children. Entrances in the Nörrevolds Boulevard and the Kronprindsessegade. On the N. side is a Statue of Hans Christian Andersen, the author (d. 1875).

On an eminence to the W. of the Nörrevolds Boulevard, formerly the Rosenborg Bastion, stands the Observatory (Pl. C, 4), in front of which rises a statue of the Danish astronomer Tycho Brahe (1546-1601).

The adjacent Botanic Garden (Pl. B, C, 4), laid out on the old fortifications, centains numerous pleasant walks. Entrance at the corner of the Boulevard and the Gothersgade (adm., see p. 186).

Farther to the W. rises the extensive Hospital. Several new streets have been formed in this neighbourhood. The Örsted Park, near the station, is embellished with a statue of Örsted, the naturalist (d. 1850; Pl. B, 5, 6).

The Aristocratic Quarter of Copenhagen lies to the N. E. of the Kongens Nytory, and consists of the Bredgade (Pl. E, 5, 4), the St. Annae-Plads, and the Amalie-Gade. At No. 2 Dronningens Twergade, corner of the Bredgade, is the "Picture Gallery of Gount Meltre (Pl. 26; adm., p. 186), consisting of about 150 works by Dutch painters of the 17th cent. and the other Netherlandish masters.

It includes several fine works by masters of the first rank, such as Rubens, Rombrandt, Hobboma, and Ruysdael.

begun in 1749, but only now approaching completion.

The Anthropological Museum (Pl. 1; E. 4), Bredgade 46, is open from May to September on Sat., 9-11. Adjacent is the Surgeone' Hall (Pl. 17), near which are the Roman Catholic Chapel (Pl. 11), the Frederiks-Hospital (Pl. 4; E. F. 4), and the new Greek Church, consecrated in 1883 and containing some good paintings by Russian artists. --- The N.W. corner of the town is formed by a series of parallel streets of one-storied houses, occupied chiefly by sea-faring men and their families, erected at the beginning of the 17th cent. under Christian IV., and extended by Christian VII, during last century, In the midst of them rises the Church of St. Paul (Pl. 12; E, 4).

The AMALIEGADE (Pl. E, 5, F, 4) is broken by the octagonal Frederiks-Plads, which is embellished with an equestrian *Monument of Frederick V. (d. 1766) in bronze, erected in 1771 by the Asiatic Trading Company, and designed by Saly, a French sculptor. The four uniform rococo buildings enclosing the Plads together form the Amalieborg (Pl. E, F, 5), which is now the residence of the reigning monarch Christian IX., the Crown Prince, and the minister of the exterior.

Walks. Besides the Rosenborg Garden (p. 194) may be mentioned the 'Gröningen' esplanade, between the citadel and the town. and its continuation on the side next the sea, called the *Lange Linie (Pl. F. 2, 3), affording a pleasant promenade, with a view of the sea. At the S. end of the Lange Linie are the Toldbod (Pl. 44: F, 4), or custom-house, the Meteorological Institute (Pl. 22; F, 4), and the Esplanade Pavilion, a café with a garden.

To the N. of the Lange Linie are several Sea-bathing Establishments, the shortest way to which is by the street leading through the citadel. A little to the E. of the baths is a large Blind Asylum (Pl. E, 2). The adjacent Garrison Cemetery (Pl. D, 2) and the Holmens Cemetery (Pl.C. D. 2.3) contain numerous military monuments.

The *Environs of Copenhagen, as well as the whole of the N.E. part of Zealand, are very attractive. The rich corn-fields, green pastures, and fine beech-forests, contrasting with the blue-green water of the Sound, are enlivened with numerous châteaux, country-houses, and villages.

To the W. of the city, but almost contiguous to the W. suburb, lies the town of Frederiksberg, with 26,500 inhab., and the palace of the same name (11/2 M. from the Vesterport, reached by tramway or omnibus). Outside the Vesterport, to the left, rises the new Exhibition Building for Northern Industry, with stalls for the sale of all kinds of commodities. Farther on, at the entrance to the Twoli (p. 185), rises the Friheds-Stötten, or Column of Liberty (Pl. A, 7), an obelisk of granite erected in 1778 to commemorate the abolition of serfdom. The road then leads through the Frederiksberg-Allee, with its numerous pleasure-gardens (p. 185).

At the entrance to the Frederikeberg-Have, or palace-garden, rises a Statue of Frederick VI. (d. 1839) by Bissen. The Frederiksberg Palace, erected in the Italian style under Frederick IV. (d. 1730), now a military school, lies conspicuously on an eminence. The chief attraction is the fine view from the shady terrace in front of the Palace. — Farther to the W. lies the Zoological Garden (adm. 40 ö.). To the S. of the road to Roeskilde, which passes this point, is the beautiful shady park of Söndermarken, containing the large reservoir of the Copenhagen waterworks. Comp. the Map. p. 184. — In the Nycarlsberg, to the S. of this point, is the Sculpture Gallery ('Glyptotheket') of Hr. C. Jacobsen, containing works of modern masters (adm. on Sun. 1-3, 25 ö.).

The Klampenborg Railway, a short branch of the N. Zealand line (p. 197), connects Copenhagen with the most frequented of the environs towards the N.

The Klampenborg Station (Pl. A, 6) lies a few paces to the N. of the principal station. Trains in summer at half-past every hour on weekdays, and every half-hour on Sundays (returning from Klampenborg at \(^1_4\) past each hour on weekdays, and at \(^1_4\) past and \(^1_4\) to each hour on Sundays). The journey occupies 25 min.; fares 60, 40, 25 \(\tilde{o}\),; stations Hellerup (p. 197), Charlottenlund, Klampenborg (see below). Carriage to Klampenborg 5, there and back 8 cr., more on Sundays.

About \(^{1}_2\) M. to the N. of Copenhagen, in the midst of a beau-

About 4½ M. to the N. of Copenhagen, in the midst of a beautiful park, is situated the royal château of Charlottenlund, generally occupied by the crown-prince in summer. It may be reached by the Klampenborg railway, or by the 'Strandvei' tramway to Vibenshus, 2½ M. from the entrance to the park, or to Slukefter (*Restaurant Constantia), 1 M. farther. On the shore are the Charlottenlund Baths. About ½ M. farther to the N. is the Hôtel Skovshoved, which is 1¼ M. from the Hôtel Bellevue at Klampenborg (see below). A fine avenue leads from Charlottenlund to the N.W. to (1½ M.) the château of Bernstorff, the autumn residence of the royal family, also situated in a park, and the hamlet of Jägersborg (Inn).

A very favourite excursion from Copenhagen is to the "Dyrehave (usually called Skoven, or the forest; comp. Plan, p. 184), or deerpark, a beautiful forest of oaks and beeches. At the entrance, 2 M. to the N. of Charlottenlund, is the Bellevue Hotel, the landing-place of the steamers (p. 185). In the vicinity (1/4 M.) is the water-cure and sea-bathing establishment of Klampenborg, which attracts numerous visitors in summer (Hotel and restaurant, fine view). The numerous villas on the beach are chiefly let as summer-quarters. On a height, a little inland from Torbæk (or Taarbæk), stands the Eremitage (Restaurant), a shooting-lodge built by Christian VI. in 1736, near which groups of stags and deer are frequently observed (especially in the evening). A pleasant path leads hence vià Raavad (Restaurant) and Godthaab and through the fine wood of Jä-gersborg to Skodsborg (*Bade-Hôtel; Öresund), another favourite bathing-place. — The Dyrehaves Bakken ('deer-park hill'), on the S. side of the park, is a favourite resort of the lower classes in summer. The costumes of the peasant women are often very becoming. Near the spring called the Kiesten-Piils Kilde are clusters of booths and popular shows of all kinds, which with the beautiful neighbouring woods afford a pleasant picture of humble life 'al fresco'. The forester's house of Fortunen, in the S.W. corner of the Dyrehave, with a garden-café, 2½ M. from the Klampenborg station, commands an admirable view.

E, 6); fares 1 cr. 50 0. and 1 cr.; pleasure-trips (Lysture) on Sundays at a reduced rate ('tur og retur', i.e. return-tickets).

If time permit, an excursion to Helsingör is best arranged thus (two days): railway to Klampenborg, see p. 196; open omnibus thence to (1/2 M.) Torbæk, see p. 196; (2½ M.) Skods'org, see above; (2 M.) Vedbæk, p. 196; (1¼ M.) Smidstrup; (1¼ M.) Rungsted; and thence by steamer to Helsingör. — Return-route: by railway to Fredensborg, carriage to Frederiksborg, train to Copenhagen.

The Railway describes a wide curve through the district of Frederiksborg. 4 M. Hellerup, junction for Klampenborg (p. 196); 6 M. Gjentofte (château of Bernstorff, see p. 196); 8 M. Lyngby, near which are the châteaux of Sorgenfri, the residence of the Queen Dowager, with a beautiful rose-garden, and Frederiksdal, the seat of Count Schulin, beautifully situated. 11 M. Holte, also with pleasant environs, comprising the Dronninggaard on the Fure-Sö; 14 M. Birkeröd: 17 M. Lilleröd.

22½ M. Hilleröd (*Hötel Leidersdorff, opposite the palace; Kjöbenhavn, in the town; omnibus from the station 25 ö., carr. to Fredensborg 6 cr. and fee), the principal town in the district of Frederiksborg, lies at the S. end of the Frederiksborg-8ö. On three small islands, near the W. bank of the lake, rises the handsome palace of *Frederiksborg, reached from the station in ¼ hr. by turning to the right and then, in the town, to the left. The imposing, four-storied building, in the Renaissance style (p. 187), with towers and pediments, was erected by Christian IV. in 1602-20 on the site of an earlier palace of Frederick II. The exterior and a small part of the interior were renewed after a fire in 1859. The palace-church, in which the Danish kings were once crowned, is worthy of a visit. The richly-adorned chapel contains fine modern pictures by Bloch (tickets issued by the intendant, in the picturesque inner court; open daily, Sun. from 11.30 a.m.; fee 25 ō.).

A carriage-road leads to the N.E. from Frederiksborg through beautiful oak and beech-woods to the (5 M.) Fredensborg, another favourite summer-seat of the royal family, near the picturesque Esrom-Sö, a fine view of which is enjoyed on the way. (Pedestrians, after inspecting the Frederiksberg Palace, should turn to the right in the middle court and quit the building by the gate to the right.) This château, erected in 1720 in commemoration of the peace ('Freden') which had just been concluded between Deamark and Sweden, now contains a few old pictures. The village of Fredenebosg (*Hansen's Restaurant) is also a railway-station (28 M. from Cepenhagen).

The next stations are (32 M.) Kvistgaard and (37 M.) Helsingör (see below). The railway-station is on the E. side of the town.

Carriage to the harbour 1 cr.

The *Steamboat Journey to Helsingör (in 2½ hrs.; p. 185) is preferable to the railway-route, as it affords a view of the picturesque coast of Zealand. The vessel touches at Bellevee (p. 196), Torbæk (p. 196), Skodsborg (p. 197), and Vedbæk, with the park of Count Danneskjold-Samsöe (open); then, leaving the Swedish island of Hven to the right, at Rungsted, on which rises a menument to the Danish poet Ewald (d. 1791), and at Humlebæk.

Helsingör, or Elsinore (Hôtel Öresund; Rail. Restaurant), a small and very ancient commercial town with 9000 inhab., lies on the narrowest part of the Sound, which separates Zealand from the Swedish province of Skaane. The Gothic Raadhus in the principal street is a modern building.

The *Kronborg, a picturesque fortress rising conspicuously on the N.E. side of the town, was constructed in 1577-85, and surrounded with ramparts and broad moats. After the fall of the Hanseatic League the Danish government assumed a right to levy toll here on all vessels passing through the Sound, but in 1857 agreed to a commutation of the obnoxious dues for a payment of $3^{1}/_{2}$ million pounds sterling by the commercial nations chiefly interested. The Danish batteries were moreover unable without cooperation from the Swedish side, effectually to prevent the passage of vessels, as was proved on two different occasions by the English fleet (p. 187). The Flag Battery, where the Dannebrog, or national banner, is planted (open to the public; turn to the left on entering the fortress by the W. gate), commands a beautiful view of the Sound, to inspect which a telescope may be borrowed of the guard.

This battery is said to be the 'platform of the castle of Elsinore' where the ghost appeared to Hamlet. The Kronborg is also the scene of other interesting legends connected with Denmark. Thus the tutelary genius of the country, Holger Danske, who is familiar to the reader of Andersen's fables, is said to repose beneath the castle, ready to arise when Denmark is in danger. — The pulpit and choir-stails in the castle chapel were carved by German masters, and restored in 1843. A room is shown in which Queen Caroline Matilda, wife of Christian VII., was once imprisoned. The rooms occupied by the royal family contain a number of pictures by Danish masters. The flat roof of the S.W. tower commands an extensive inland view (ascent of tower and pictures 90 &., chapel 20 &.).

Marielyst, a sea-bathing place, lies 3/4 M. to the N.W. of the Kronborg. The château of that name, situated on a hill, is now a Curhaus'. A small column near it, without inscription, is said to mark Hamlet's grave (reached through the Curhaus, fee 65 ö.). Nearer the beach is the Badehôtel. - Pleasant walk hence along the wooded coast to (41/2 M.) Helleberk, another sea-bathing place. On the opposite Swedish coast the red château of Sofiero and the coal mines of Höggmäs (see below) are conspicuous. The Odinshöi. 11/o M. farther, also commands a fine view.

Swedish Coast. Opposite the Kronborg lies the small town of Hel-singborg ("Hotel d'Angleterre; "Hotel de Moliberg), an old scaport with 11,500 inhab., at the foot of a hill which is crowned by a half-ruined watch-tower ("Kärnan", pronounced Charenan), the only remnant of a castle waten-tower ('Aarnan', pronounced Charenan), the only remnant of a castle that played a prominent part in the wars waged by the Hanseatic League against the Danes and Swedes (keys kept by the 'Váktmästare', Longvinkeigasta 46). — The baths of Ramilbachrunn, used as a remedy for gout and rheumatism, are situated 3 M. to the S. of Helsingborg.

The pleasantest excursion from Helsingborg is to the Kullen, a considerate excursion are the statement of the statement spicuous promontory about 14 M. to the N., with a lighthouse at its extremity (carr. to Kullagaard, 3 M. from the lighthouse, about 25 cr.). The road passes the coal-mines of Hoganas.

The traveller may now return to Copenhagen via Malmö on the Swedish coast. Railway in 2 hrs. by Billeberga (junction for the fortified seaport Landskrona) to Eslof, the junction of the Helsingborg, Stockholm, Ystadt, and Malmö lines. Thence to Malmö in 1 hour. Stat. Lund (*Stadshuset), with 12,000 inhab., an ancient episcopal see with a celebrated cathedral in the Romanesque style, possesses a university founded in 1666, where the poet Escias Tegnér (d. 1846) was a professor. A monument was crected to him in 1863.

Malmö (Kramer's Hotel; "Gustaf Adolf; "Svea Hotel) is a busy seaport with 38,000 inhabitants. The station and the beautiful "Town Hall are near the harbour. Steamboats to Copenhagen several times daily, see p. 183. Comp. Baedeker's Norway and Sweden.

Hamburg, p. 145. Custom-house formalities at the Hamburg station. 10 M. Bergedorf, where peasant-women wearing a peculiar and picturesque costume offer fruit and flowers for sale, belongs to Hamburg. Reinbeck and Friedrichsruh, in the Sachsenwald with its fine beeches, belonging to Prince Bismarck, are favourite resorts of the Hamburgers. At (221/2 M.) Schwarzenbeck the wood is quitted. 29 M. Büchen is the junction of the Lübeck-Lüneburg line (see p. 145). Several châteaux and parks with deer are passed. Stations Boitzenburg, Brahlstorf, Pritzier, (59 M.) Hagenow (junction for Schwerin and Rostock, R. 24), and Jasnitz.

711/2 M. Ludwigslust (*Hôtel de Weimar) is an occasional residence of the Duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, with a château and park. In front of the château is a bronze statue of Grand Duke Frederick Francis I. (d. 1837), by Albert Wolff.

FROM LUDWIGSLUST TO PARCHIM, 16 M., railway in 1 hr. (2 m. 20, 1 m. 50 pf.). Parchim (*Wall-Hotel; Hotel de Russie), a small town with 9068 inhab., on the navigable Etde, is the birthplace of the famous Prussian field-marshal Count Moltke (b. 1800), to whom a monument by Brunow has been erected here.

At Wöbbelin, 41/2 M. to the N. of Ludwigslust, is the grave of the poet Theo. Körner, who fell in battle in 1813 at Gadebusch, 19 M. from Schwerin.

76 M. Grabow; 811/2 M. Warnow.

99 M. Wittenberge (*Rail. Restaurant), on the Elbe, is the junction for Magdeburg (p. 87) viâ Stendal, for Bremen viâ Lüneburg, and of a branch to Perleberg. 107 M. Wilsnack possesses the most ancient church in this district. Stations Glöven, Zernitz (station for Kyritz and Wittstock), Neustadt (where the Dosse is crossed), Friesack. 146 M. Paulinenaue.

FROM PAULINENAUE TO NEU-RUPPIN, 17 M., railway in 1½ hr. (2 m. 40, 1 m. 80, 1 m. 20 pf.). The train crosses the Haveldanduche Luch and the Rhin-Luch, two extensive, partly-drained swamps. 10 M. Fehrelitis, where the Great Elector of Brandenburg with 5000 cavalry defeated 11,000 Swedes in 1675; a monument was erected on the field in 1879. — 17 M. Neu-Ruppin (Deutsches Haus), a town with 13,985 inhab., on the Ruppiner-See. After a destructive fire in 1787 the town was rebuilt, chiefly at the cost of Fred. William II., who is commemorated by a monument, designed by Schinkel. A bronze statue of Schinkel, who was a native of Neu-Ruppin, has also been erected. The Abbey Church, a Gothic brick structure of the 13th cent., was restored by Fred. William III. Pleasant walk along the lake on the Ramports, a remnant of the old fortifications. About 12½ M. to the N.E. of Neu-Ruppin lies Bheinsberg, a town of 2011 inthe with the château where Feederick the Great lived where warms.

About 12½ M. to the N.E. of Neu-Ruppin lies Bheinsberg, a town of 2241 inhab., with the château where Frederick the Great lived when crown-prince from 1736 to 1740. Various reminiscences of this period are to be seen in the château and park.

153 M. Nauen; 162 M. Seegefeld. — 171 M. Spandan, see p. 81. The train now crosses the Havel and the Spree. 176 M. Charlottenburg.

Borckenfriede, (101 M.) Ducherow.

Branch-Line in 50 min. to (24 M.) Swinemunde (p. 211), in the island of Usedom, on the right bank of the narrow Peene, the W. branch of the Oder. 110 M. Anclam (Traube; Hôtel du Nord), with 12,361 inhab., on the Peene, which is here navigable for small sea-vessels, and was formerly the frontier between Prussia and Sweden, contains several picturesque old houses. The tower of the Steinthor is particularly fine. The Hohe Stein, an ancient watch-tower 2 M. from the gate, was erected to protect the town against the Counts of Schwerin. Anclam is the seat of a military academy.

120 M. Züssow is the junction for Wolgast (11 M., reached in 40 min.; fares 1 m. 60, 1 m. 20, 80 pf.), a busy commercial town on the Peene, and the ancestral seat of the Dukes of Pomerania.

From Wolgast a diligence plies daily to (5 M.) Zinnewitz (Beleédère, 'pens.' from 41/2 m.; Kagemann), a rising watering-place in the island of Usedom. Attractive walk to (5 M.) Coserow and the Streckelberg (p. 211).

131 M. Greifswald (*Deutsches Haus, R. & A. 2 m.; *Hôtel de Prusse), a town with 20,000 inhab., possesses a university founded in 1456 (660 students), and several picturesque late-Gothic gabled houses, especially in the market. The Church of St. Nicholas was built in 1300-26; St. James's and St. Mary's are of earlier date; the last has a handsome carved altar. The Monument in the Rubenow-Platz. opposite the University, commemorates the 400th anniversary of the foundation of the latter. A little to the W, of the town are some Salt Springs, with a bath-house. - Steamboat to Rügen, see p. 203.

The small river Ryck connects Greifswald with the Greifswalder Bodden, a broad arm of the Baltic, 2 M. distant. At Eldena, near the mouth of the river, are the ruins of the Cistercian monastery of Hida, destroyed by the Swedes. Concerts in summer at the adjacent Elizenhain, with its fine beeches. Opposite Eldena is the fishing-village of Wieck. Steamers from Greifswald, 20 pf.

From (140 M.) Miltzow a diligence runs daily by Stahlbrode and the Glewitz Ferry to Garz and Putbus in the island of Rügen;

Post and Telegraph Office, Mühlen-Str. 42.

Steamboat to Malmö and Copenhagen, see p. 183; to Bügen, see p. 204.

Strateund, the capital of a district, with 29,481 inhab., lies on the Strelasund, a strait 2 M, wide, which separates Rügen from the mainland. The town is entirely surrounded by water, being connected with the mainland by three bridges only. The lofty gabled houses, the towers, and the Gothic churches of brick resemble those of Rostock and Lübeck. The fortifications are being removed.

Stralsund was founded in 1209, and soon attained to such prosperity that in the 14th cent. it was second in importance, among the Hanscatic towns on the Baltic, to Lübeck alone. The citizens adopted the reformed faith at an early period, and were therefore on the side of Sweden during the Thirty Years' War. In 1628, aided by Danish and Swedish vessels, they gallantly defended their town against Wallenstein, who had sworn to take it, 'though it had been attached by chains to heaven', but was compelled to abandon the siege after losing 12,000 men. By the Peace of Westphalia in 1648 the town, together with the province of Vor-Pommern and the island of Rügen, was ceded to Sweden, to which, notwithstanding its capture by the Great Elector in 1678, and by the Prussians, Danes, and Saxons in 1715, it continued to belong down to 1815, when it became Prussian.

On leaving the station, we pass through the Tribseer Thor and reach the Neue Markt in a straight direction. The Marienkirche, situated here (open daily in summer 11-12 a.m., and 3-4 p.m.), erected in 1416-73, is a vast brick structure with a transept, aisles, and a series of chapels between the flying buttresses. Two modern stained-glass windows were presented by Frederick William IV. The tower affords a fine survey of the peculiar, insulated position of Stralsund, and part of the island of Rügen. (Sacristan at the back of the church, Marien-Str. 10.)

Opposite the Marienkirche, to the N., a broad street leads to the left to the Alte Markt, a fine mediæval Platz. The handsome Rathhaus dates partly from the 13th century. The part next to the market, with its rich façade, built in the 15th and modernised in the 18th cent., is now being restored in the original style.

The large Council Chamber contains portraits of Swedish and Prussian kings, and one of the ante-chambers those of Stralsund Burgomasters.—
The Neu-Vordommersche Provinzial-Museum, in the upper floor, contains an important Collection of Northern Antiquities, mediæval ornaments (dating from the 10th or 11th cent.), weapons, coins and objects of historical interest connected with Stralsund and Rügen (open on Sat., 11-1; at other times on application to the castellan).— The Municipal Library was founded in 1709.

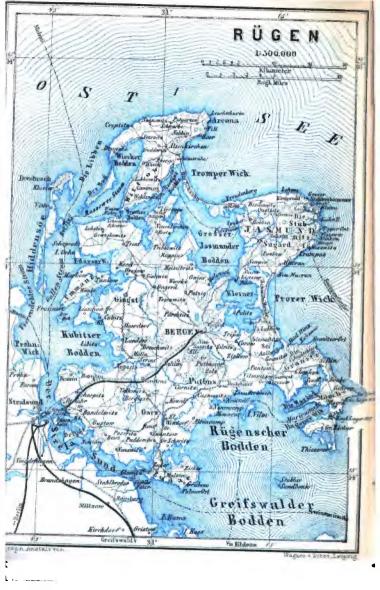

Beyond the Rathhaus rises the Nicolaikirche, a noble edifice, resembling the Marienkirche. The high-altar, carved in wood in the 15th cent. and restored in 1856, represents the Passion; fine bronze slab dating from 1357; carved altarpieces; brazen candelabra and sconces; remains of a Gothic ciborium of wood; benches of the 16th cent.; at the entrance to those of the Krämer, or merchants, is the polite intimation: 'Dat ken kramer ist de blief da buten, oder ick schla em up de schnuten' (literally, 'He that's no merchant stay without, else I shall strike him on the snout!'). The sacristan lives opposite the S.W. tower.

From the Alte Markt the Fährstrasse (see below) descends to the Fährthor, outside which is the steamboat-quay. A steamer plies hourly to Altefähr (p. 204; train to Bergen, see p. 207), whence an admirable *View of Stralsund is obtained.

A stone built into the wall, near the Frankenthor, bears a Swedish inscription recording that Charles XII. defended the town at the siege of 1715. The handsome new barracks here are occupied by artillery. In the Strelasund, to the S.E. of the Frankenthor, is the small fortified island of Dänholm. In the Frankenvorstadt is the large fish-breeding establishment of Andershof.

In 1809, when the war between France and Austria broke out, Major Ferdinand v. Schill, a distinguished Prussian officer of hussars, quitted Berlin with his regiment without the knowledge of the king, with a view to effect a patriotic rising against the French in N. Germany. His noble effort was, however, premature, and met with little response, and he and his corps were eventually driven back to Stralsund by the Westphalian and Dutch allies of the French. The town was taken by storm, and after a heroic defence Schill and most of his corps were killed in the streets. Eleven captured officers were afterwards shot at Wesel by order of Napoleon. The spot where Schill fell is indicated by an inscription in the pavement of the Fährstrasse (opposite the house No. 21). His head was preserved in spirit at Leyden till 1837, when it was finally interred at Brunswick (p. 125). His body reposes in the Knieper Cemetery, 34 M. from the gate of that name. The grave, in the N.E. angle, was originally marked by a simple iron slab without a name, bearing the inscription, partly from Virgii (Æn, ii. 567):—

Magna voluisse magnum.

Occubuit fato: jecet isgens bitore truncus,
Avolsumque caput: tamen haud sine nomine corpus.

30. The Island of Rügen.

Plan of Excursion. Steamboat in the afternoon to Lauterbach, walk or drive to Pstous, and spend the night there. Ist Day. Drive in 11/2, or walk in 21/2 hrs. to the Jagdschloss; walk in 1/2 hr. to Binz and Aalbeek, row or sail thence to Sassnitz in 21/2 hrs., and walk to Stubbenkammer in 3 hrs. — 2nd Day. Walk in 21/2, or drive in 11/2 hr. to Sagard, and return thence to Stratsmat, either by steamboat via Polchow, or by carriage to Bergen and thence by train. — If the traveller have three days at his disposal, he may drive on the second by the Schaabe to Arcona in 7 hrs. (or walk to Lehma and row or sail thence), and return to Stralbund on the third from Breege (by steamboat, at 9 a.m.), or by Vieregge and Bergen (see p. 207). Arcona, however, is inferior to Stubbenkammer, and should either be seen first (in which case, take steamboat to Breege, sleep at Arcona, and sail next morning, weather permitting, to Stubbenkammer), or entirely omitted.

The above mode of exploring the island is the pleasantest, and affords considerable variety, but a carriage may be hired for the whole excursion at Putbus, Bergen, Polchow, or Sagard. The deep-blue water of the bays and the magnificent green beeches are the attractive features of Rügen scenery, but a great part of the island is flat, sandy, and uninteresting.

scenery, but a great part of the island is flat, sandy, and uninteresting. Pubus and Sasmits are the pleasantest places for a prolonged stay. Garriages with two horses may be hired at Putbus, Bergen, Altefahr, and Sassnitz, and at Polchow and Stubbenkammer if ordered previously. Usual charges from Pubus: to the pier at Lauterbach, 1-2 pers. 1½ m., more than 2 pers. 2 m.; to Lauterbach and back 2½ m.; Friedrich-Wilhelmsbad 2½ m.; per hour 2 m.; to the Glewitz Ferry 7½ m.; Garz or Bergen and back 6½ m.; jagúschloss and back in ½ day 8 m.; to Altefahr 13½ m., to Stubbenkammer and back in one day 21 m., or by the Jagúschloss and Sassnitz and back by Bergen or the Schmale Heide in two days 27 m.; to Sassnitz 12 m.— One-horse carriage one-third less.

Sailing Boats. From Lauterbach to the island of Vilm, with stay, 2-3 m., to Mönchgut 8-9 m.; from Aalbeek to Sassnitz 10, to Stubbenkammer 14 m. (more in each case in the height of summer).

Diligence between Samtess, Gars, Putbus, and Bergen twice daily; between Miltzow (p. 201), Garz, and Putbus once daily; between Bergen and Putbus, and between Bergen and Sagard once daily. In summer a post-omnibus also runs between Putbus and several different places on the island:

Steamboat from Greifswald to Lauterbach (Putbus) in 2 hrs., in summer daily, except Sun., and from Sept. 15th to Oct. 15th twice weekly (Wed. and Sat.), in connection with the afternoon train from Berlin; fares 3 and 2 m.; return 4½ and 3 m.; omnibus from Lauterbach to Putbus 50 pf. From Lauterbach the steamer goes on to Mariendorf, in the peninsula of Mönchgut, where a conveyance may be obtained for Göhren (p. 205). — From Stratsund, from 7th June to 31st Aug. daily (except Sun.) at 3.30 p.m. (after the arrival of the Berlin express train) by Hiddenste, Wittoneer Fidner, Vieregge, Breege (arrival at 7 p.m.; to Arcona, see p. 207), and Polchow (arr. 9.3 p.m.) to Rollswick (arr. 9.3 p.m.) 3 M. from Bergen; returning from Ralswick at 5.45 a.m., arr. at Stralsund at 11 a.m. (thrice weekly from Straisund to Polchow and back only). Before 7th June and after Six Aug. the steamers depart from Straisund on Tues., Thurs., Sat.; from Raiswick on Mon., Wed., and Fridays. Single trip 31/4 or 2 m. — From Stettim (p. 209) to Sassnitz via Swinemande and Heringsdorf (p. 211), daily, except Sun., in 6 hrs., fare 9 m.

Railway from Stralsund to Bergen, see p. 207.

Ferries. Steamboat hourly between Stralsund and Altefähr in 10 min., fare 30 pf.; sailing-boat between Stahlbrode (41/2 M. to the N. of Miltzow.

p. 201) and Glewitz in 80-40 min., 50 pf.

Rügen, the largest island belonging to Germany (377 sq. M.; 371/2 M. long, and 25 M. wide), with 46,000 inhab., is separated from the mainland on the S.W. by the Strelasund (p. 201), which at the narrowest part is 11/2 M. in breadth. The deep bays by which the island is indented in every direction form a number of peninsulas, connected with it by narrow strips of land only. The most important of these are Wittow and Jasmund on the N. and Mönchaut on the S. side of the island. Rügen, which was originally inhabited by the Germanic Rugii, was afterwards occupied by a Slavonic race, who resisted the influences of Christianity and civilisation down to the middle of the 14th century. In 1478, after the native princes had become extinct, the island was annexed to W. Pomerania, the fortunes of which it thenceforward shared (comp. p. 201).

Putbus. - FÜRSTENHOP, in the Promenade, pleasantly situated, R., L., & A. 3 m., D. 2 m.; Bellevue, in the Circus; Adles, unpretending, B. 11/2 m.; Deutsches Haus, in the market; Dörschlag's Hotel, Louisen-Str.

— At Lauterbach, the "Victoria Hotel, and near it the "Badehaus, the latter for a prolonged stay. - Carriages, see above.

Putbus, the principal place in the island, and residence of the Prince of Putbus, whose estates are 129 sq. M. in area and contain 16,000 inhab., lies about 2 M. from the sea. The cheerful little town consists chiefly of the Promenade and the Circus: the latter is adorned with a monument to the founder.

The Palace, in the park, in the late-Renaissance style, completed in 1872, stands on the site of an older building, which was burned down in 1865. The facade is adorned with six lofty Ionic columns, and there is a handsome terrace at the back. The palace contains some valuable works of art, including marble statues by Rauch and Thorvaldsen, and several good pictures. In front of it rises a Statue of the late prince (d. 1854), by Drake, with reliefs on the pedestal. The park, which affords beautiful walks, contains the Mausoleum of the princely family.

The bathing-places are 11/2 M. distant, near Lauterbach (hotels, see above), which is charmingly situated on the Rügen'sche Bodden. Omnibus thither 5-6 times daily (30 pf.). Behind the bath-house is a fine beech-wood called the Goor. The beautiful island of Vilm boat, see p. 203) contains magnificent oaks and beeches.

Near Nevencamp, on a small peninsula, 3 M. to the S. of Putbus, is a Monument to the 'Great Elector', on the spot where he landed with his army in 1678 for the purpose of wresting the island from the Swedes.

To the Jagoschloss, $7^{1/2}$ M., a good and well-shaded road, on which lies $(1^{1/2}$ M.) Vibraits, with a church containing the burial-place of the Counts and Princes of Putbus. At Gross-Stresow, to the right near the coast, there is a monument to Fred. William I. of Prussia. The Granits, a beautiful deer-park in which the Jagdschloss (or 'hunting château') is situated, is entered by a gate (carr, 25 pf.).

The Jagdschloss, erected from designs by Schinkel in 1835-46, and situated on an eminence, contains several good modern pictures by Kolbe and Eibel, and a collection of Rügen antiquities. The platform, to which an iron staircase ascends, commands a fine View (fee 75 pf., for a party 2-3 m,). The forester keeps a small Inn at the foot of the hill. The Kieköver and other points in the park are worth visiting.

The rugged peninsula of Mönehgut may be visited from Putbus by boat (see p. 205); view from the *Grosse Peerd, the E. extremity of the peninsula, 7 M. from the Jagdschloss; also from the Bakenberg in Gross-Zicker, whence the indentations of Mönchgut are best observed, and from Thiessow on the S. extremity. Göhren and other places in Mönchgut are frequented for sea-bathing.

From the Jagdschloss a road descends to the N. (right) to the (1½M.) hamlet of Binz, which, like Aalbeek, a hamlet to the right, nearer the coast, is frequented as a bathing-place. The beach is the best in Rügen (Strand Hôtel). The road next passes the picturesque Schmachter See, bounded on the W. by wooded hills, traverses the isthmus called the Schmale Heide, and then unites with the road from Putbus to Sagard, not far from the (3 M.) forester's house of Prora.

A slight digression may be made to the Schanzenberg, near (1 hr.) Lubkow, an open eminence in the midst of the woods, commanding an extensive view. Immediately beyond the Schmachter See we follow the road to the left to Dollahn and Lubkow, turn to the right from the latter on the Putbus and Sagard road for ³/4 M., then ascend to the left by an oak, to (5 min.) the top of the hill.—Prora (see above) is ¹/2 M. beyond this point.

Neu-Mucran (poor inn), $4^1/2$ M. from the forester's house, is next reached. The road divides here. That to the left goes to $(3^1/2$ M.) Sagard (see p. 207). — That to the right leads to Mucran, to the N. of which lies the Dwarsted, an extensive wood on the steep sea-shore, with the country-seat of Herr von Hansemann (park open to strangers).

From Mucran the road leads by the estate of Lanken to the thriving little bathing-places of Crampas (Gasthaus zum Wallfisch, with a terrace), and Sassnits (*Hotel Fahrenberg, with a view of the sea; Küster; Böttger; Nicolai; all often crowded in summer; lodgings 10-15 m. per week), prettily situated at the mouth of a ravine, near the beautiful forest of Stubbenitz (see below). Best survey from the Fahrenberg, a wooded hill between Crampas and Sassnitz, on the slope of which Paulsdorff's Inn is situated. The bathing arrangements are primitive.

FROM SASSNITZ TO STUBBENKAMMER, about 7 M. We follow the upper margin of the chalk cliffs, the path leading through beech woods and commanding beautiful views of the sea, till we reach the *Wissover Klinken, a series of chalk cliffs resembling those of Stubbenkammer. Here we turn inland to the (4 min.) Restaurant Waldhalle, 1/2 hr. beyond which we cross the Kieler Bach, reaching Stubbenkammer in 11/2 hr. more. Another route is the carriage-road leading a little inland from Sassnitz. In this case we have to diverge from the road to visit the Wissower Klinken and may also visit the Hertha See (see below). Near Stubbenkammer the Victoria Sicht and Wilhelm I. Sicht (see below) are passed. In summer excursion-steamers frequently ply from Sassnitz to Stubbenkammer, and the excursion may also be made by beat (p. 203).

*Stubbenkammer (from the Slavonic stopien, steps, and kamien, a rock; *Königlicher Gasthof, with 100 beds, R. 21/2-4 m., B. 1 m., D. 2-21/2 m., often full; tolerable quarters at Eichstädt's at Nipmerow, 2 M. from Stubbenkammer, or at Lohme, see below), the finest point in Rügen, situated on the E. coast of the peninsula of Jasmund, is a furrowed chalk cliff, rising to a height of 420 ft. almost perpendicularly from the sea, the summit of which, called the *Königsstuhl, commands a beautiful view. To the left is a rugged precipice of chalk; in the distance the lighthouse of Arcona; to the right the Kleine Stubbenkammer. The latter, named the Wilhelm I. Sicht since the visit of the emperor in 1865, commands a fine survey of the Königsstuhl itself. A third point, called the Victoria Sicht, is a few minutes' walk farther. Between the Königsstuhl and the Kleine Stubbenkammer a winding path descends, passing the clear and cool Golcha- or Friedrich-Wilhelms-Quelle, to the (10 min.) foot of the cliffs, of which an imposing survey is obtained from below. An illumination of the cliff at night by means of red hot charcoal produces a striking effect (each pers. 50 pf.). - In 1864 an engagement between Prussian and Danish vessels took place off Jasmund.

The rugged E. side of the peninsula of Jasmund is clothed with beautiful beech-forest, called the Stubbenits, extending along the coast for 12 M., and said to have been regarded as sacred by the ancient Rugii. In this forest, about ½ hr. from Stubbenkammer (finger-post on the road to Sassnitz, to the right, 10 min. from the inn), lies the Hertha-See, a small lake about 200 yds. in diameter, on the W. bank of which rises the Herthaburg, a semicircular mound, 50 ft. in height. Several 'altars' found in the neighbourhood appear to mark this as the scene of ancient religious rites. One of these, near the foot of the Herthaburg, about a hundred paces to the right of the path from the road to the lake, is provided with runlets supposed to have been intended for the escape of the blood. Tacitus (Germ. 40) mentions the mysterious rites of the goddess Hertha, or Nerthus, but the tradition which points out this spot as the scene of her worship is probably unfounded.

FROM STUBBENKAMMER TO AROONA. A boat for this excursion should be hired at Lohme (Inn), a fishing village 11/2 M. to the N. of Stubbenkammer, and sometimes visited as a sea-hatking place, or at Glove, at the S. end of the Schaabe (see below). The voyage occupies 24 hrs. according to the wind. The fatiguing ROAD (20 M.) leads by the Schaabe. a narrow, sandy isthmus 5 M. in length, connecting the peninsulas of Jas-mund and Wittow. The usual route to Arcona now runs inland by Alten-Etrchen (Inn), where a figure built into the wall of the church is said to be that of the idol Swantewit, but the coast-road by Goor and Vitte is far preferable. At Vitte the pastor of Altenkirchen preaches on eight consecutive Sundays during the herring-fishery to the fishermen assembled on the beach by their boats.

The promontory of Arcona, the northernmost point of Rügen, 206 ft. above the sea, is crowned with a lighthouse (which is also a good inn), 75 ft. in height. The view embraces the coast of Jasmund, the island of Hiddensöe, and the Danish island of Möen in the distance. Here once stood an ancient stronghold of the Wends, consisting of a circular intrench-ment 20-40 ft. high, and containing the temple of their four-headed idol Swantevit. It was destroyed by the Danes under Waldemar I. in 1168.

The traveller is recommended to return from Arcona by Altenkirchen (see above) and (7½ M.) Breege, a large fishing-village and bathing-place on the N. shore of the Breeger Bodden (steamb., p. 204). From Breege as asiling-boat may be taken direct to Vieregge (in 1 hr.; 3 m.); or the traveller may cross by the ordinary ferry from Cammin (3 M. from Breege) to Vieregge in ½ hour. Between Vieregge and (1½ M.) Neuenkirchen (Inn) rise the Hochhilgerd hills, employed in ancient times as places for sacrifice and burial, whence a view of the N. part of the island is enjoyed. Bergen (see below) is 9 M. distant. The carriage-road from Arcona to Bergen by Altenkirchen (Inn), Wieck, the Wittow Ferry, and Trent is uninteresting.

To the W. is the island of Hiddensee (steamb., see p. 204), inhabited by fishermen. The Dorabusch and the Baffenberg, 220 ft. high, at the N. end of the island, afford fine views and may be reached by sailing-boat from the steamboat-station.

Most travellers prefer to return direct from Stubbenkammer to Stralsund. A tolerable road leads by Nipmerow (Inn), Poissow, and Volksitz to (71/2 M.) Sagard (Fürstenkrone; Stoll), whence a diligence runs daily to Bergen; or the traveller may proceed to Polchow, about 21/2 M. from Sagard, and return thence to Stralsund by steamboat (see p. 204). To the N. of Sagard and E. of Quoltitz is a socalled 'Opferstein', or altar, resembling those already mentioned (see above). To the S. of Sagard, immediately to the left of the Bergen road, is the Dubberworth, the largest tumulus, or 'giant's grave', in Rügen. The road from Sagard to (101/2 M.) Bergen crosses the narrow passage between the Grosse and Kleine Jasmunder Bodden by a bridge at the Lietzow Ferry.

Bergen (*Prinz von Preussen; *Rathskeller, R. 11/2 m.; Goldner Adler, unpretending), a town with 3662 inhab., is the official capital of Rügen and the neighbouring islands. The conspicuous church with its lofty tower is in the late-Romanesque style and dates from the 12th century. The Rathhaus contains a small collection of Rügen antiquities. To the N.E., 1/4 hr. from the town, rises the RUGARD (321 ft.), crowned by an intrenchment, the remains of a stronghold which was destroyed in 1316, and with a tower to the memory of Arndt, the poet (adm. 20 pf.). The *View is very extensive and picturesque, especially by evening-light.

Bergen is now connected with Stralsund by a RAILWAY, 18 M. long, opened in 1883 (2 hrs.; fares 1 m. 90, 1 m. 25 pf.). The intermediate stations are: 3 M. Teschenhagen; 7 M. Samtens (see below); 101/2 M. Rambin; 14 M. Altefähr (see p. 202); 16 M.

Stralsund Harbour. Stralsund, see p. 201. From Samtens (see above) a diligence runs twice daily in 13/4 hr. to rrom samens (see above) a diligence runs twice daily in 13/4 hr. to (81/2 M.) Putbus. On the road, 4 M. from Samtens, lies Gars (Hotel de Nord), the ancient Carenza, formerly the capital of the island, destroyed by the Danes in 1168. A well-preserved circular wall here is a relic of heathen times. Schoritz, 2 M. to the S., on the road leading to the Glewitz Ferry (p. 201), was the birthplace of the poet Arndt (b. 1769, d. 1860 at Bonn).

31. From Berlin to Dantsic by Stettin.

Railway to Stettin, 83 M., in 21/2-31/2 hrs. (express fares 13 m. 50 pf., 10 m.; ordinary 12, 9, 6 m.). To Dantsic, 312 M., in 12-171/4 hrs. (express fares 43 m. 80, 32 m. 70 pf.; ordinary 41 m. 90, 31 m. 40 pf., 21 m.).

Berlin, see p. 1. - 141/2 M. Bernau, a small town, was gallantly defended by its inhabitants against the Hussites in 1432. Armour, said to have been captured on that occasion, is shown at the Rathhaus. 201/2 M. Biesenthal, a small place with mineral baths.

28 M. Eberswalde (*Deutsches Haus; Pommersches Haus; *Rail. Restaurant), a busy town with 11,524 inhab, on the Finow Canal, has lately been frequented by the Berliners as a summer-resort. The large Foresters' Academy contains appropriate collections.

Branch Railway to Freignwalde (12 M.) in 35 min. (fares 1 m. 70, 1 m. 30, 80 pt.). — 8 M. Falkenberg. 12 M. Freignwalde (Schertz; Dreit Kronen; Poy; Kurhaus) is a small watering-place, with several weak chalybeate springs, in the prettiest part of the March of Brandenburg; pleasant excursions to the Baa-See (3 hrs.), the Alexandrinen-Bad, Königshöhe, Köthen, Schweizerhaus, Hammerthal, and Falkenberg. — To Wriezen, see below.

Beyond Eberswalde the Finow Canal is crossed. To the right, near (36 M.) Chorin, the picturesquely-situated old monastery of that name soon becomes visible. The fine early-Gothic abbey-church, the burial-place of the Markgraves of Brandenburg, is now in a ruinous condition. The line skirts the Paarsteiner Sec.

45 M. Angermunde (Wegner, R., L., & A. 2 m., D. 13/4 m.; Railway Restaurant), an ancient town with a lofty Gothic church of the 14th and 15th centuries. About 3 M. to the N. lies Count Redern's château of Goeresdorf, with a deer-park. - From Angermunde to Stralsund, see R. 29.

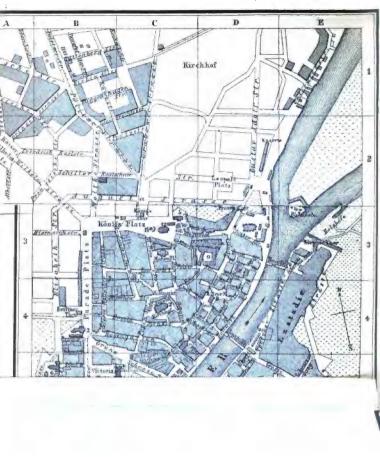

Branch-Line to Schwedt (Radloff) on the Oder (141/2 M., in 3/4 hr.; fares 2 m. 10, 1 m. 60 pf., 1 m.). The château here was once the seat of the Margraves of Brandenburg-Schwedt, descendants of the 'Great Elector',

DIRECT RAILWAY FROM ANGERMUNDE TO FRANKFORT ON THE ODER (60 M.) in 21/2 hrs. (fares 8 m. 70, 6 m. 50, 4 m. 30 pf.). - 7 M. Ludersdorf; 14 M. Oderborg-Brahlitz. 181/2 M. Freienwalds (see above), where the line unites with that from Eberswalde. 251/2 M. Wriezen (Goldener Löwe; Prinz von Preussen), a small town on the Alte Oder. At (42 M.) Werbig (p. 213) the line intersects the railway from Berlin to Dantsic via Dirschau (B. 32). 511/2 M. Schönstess. 60 M. Frankfort on the Oder, see p. 228.

The line traverses the valleys of the Randow and Welse, and the Pommerenzdorfer Wiesengrund. 55 M. Passow; 69 M. Tantow. Views of the large Damm'sche See are occasionally obtained to the right.

-83 M. Stettin. - Arrival. Stettin possesses two railway-stations, that of the Berlin-Stettin Railway (Pl. C, 5, 6), and that of the Breslau-Freiburg Railway (p. 211), 11/4 M. to the W., on an island in the Oder.

Hotels. "Hôtel de Prusse, Luisen-Str. R., L., L., & A. 2½, D. 3, B. ¾ m.;

United States Commercial Agency, Rosengarten 1.

Stettin, the capital of the Province of Pomerania, and the headquarters of the 2nd Corps d'Armée, with 91,756 inhab. and a garrison of 6000 soldiers, originally belonged to the Dukes of Pomerania, who became extinct in 1637, then to Sweden from 1648 to 1720, and has since been Prussian. It is a commercial and manufacturing town of great importance, situated on both banks of the Oder, the principal part being on the left bank, while on the right bank lie the quarters which were formerly the suburbs of Lastadie (i. e. 'wharf') and Silberwiese, connected with the left bank by three ordinary bridges and a handsome railway swing-bridge.

The Quay, extending from the station to the steamboat-pier, is the scene of brisk traffic, the water being sufficiently deep (16 ft.) for vessels of considerable size. Stettin possesses 126 sea-going craft, of which 45 are steamboats. The chief exports are corn and spirits; and the imports are petroleum, train-oil, French wines, and her-Stettin is also the most important manufacturing place in Pomerania, the staple industries being sugar-refining, ship-building, machine-making, and the manufacture of chemicals.

The town contains little to interest the traveller. It was considerably extended about a quarter of a century ago by the addition of the 'Neustadt' (Pl. B, 4, 5, 6), which possesses a number of handsome buildings. Among these are the Hauptwache (Pl. 2; B, 4), the Officers' Casino, the Residence of the Commandant, and the Berlin and Stettin Railway Offices. The Kirch-Platz (Pl. B, 5) commands a fine view of the town. The Stadt-Museum, Elisabeth-Str. 10, contains a few modern pictures (open Sun. and Wed. 10-2). Opposite the Post Office is the new Rathhaus (Pl. B, 5).

The Berliner Thor and the Königs-Thor (Pl. A, 4; B, 3) are handsome structures of the time of Fred. William I.; outside them a number of new buildings are rapidly springing up on the site of the old fortifications, the demolition of which was begun in 1874.

The Königs-Platz is adorned with a copy in bronze of a Statue of Frederick the Great (Pl. 10; C, 3) by Schadow, erected in 1793. The original, an admirable work in marble, is in the Landhaus, at the corner of the Luisen-Str. In front of the new Theatre (Pl. 12), also situated in this Platz, stands a marble Statue of Frederick William III. (Pl. 11), by Drake.

The conspicuous old Schloss (Pl. 9; D,3) was begun in 1503, the N. and W. wings were completed in 1577, and the building was altered in the 18th cent. and again recently. It was formerly the seat of the Dukes of Pomerania, and is now occupied by courts of justice and government-offices. It also possesses a collection of Pomeranian antiquities (open in summer on Sun., 11-1; at other times on application). The court is adorned with a bust of the Great Elector, in bronze, by Wiehmann. The church contains the burial-vault of the dukes. The grotesque face of the clock in the tower of the S. wing may also be noticed. The tower commands a fine view of the town and environs.

The Exchange (Pl. 1; D, 4) is situated in the Heumarkt.

Near the Parnitzthor (Pl. E, 5) is the conspicuous new Railway Station for the line to Breslau (p. 211).

The Church of St. James (Pl. 3) is an important-looking building on an eminence in the centre of the town. The oldest part dates from the 13th cent., and the whole was remodelled after the siege of 1677. — SS. Peter and Paul (Pl. 5), the most ancient church in Pomerania, was founded in 1124, and after various vicissitudes restored in 1816-17. The modern stained glass was presented by Frederick William IV. and Emperor William.

Environs. The forest and river scenery around Stettin is attractive particularly on the left bank of the Oder, below the town (see below). Near Damm, about 7 M. to the S.E., lies Hökendorf, a favourite resort, in the midst of wood. Railway to Finkenwalde; thence to Hökendorf a walk of 11/4 M. — Steamers ply every 1/2 hr. to Frauendorf. (tramway, p. 209) and Gottlow (see below).

FROM STETTIN TO SWINEMUNDE (railway viå Pasewalk in 3½ hrs., see p. 200) a steamer daily (Sundays and holidays excepted) in summer at noon, in 4 hrs. (fares 4 m., 3 m.). Immediately after starting, we obtain a fine view of the busy town. To the left lie the villages of Grabow and Bredow, the latter containing the extensive workshops of the Vulcan shipbuilding company and that of Möller & Holberg. Then Züllehow, with several large factories. Frauendorf, with the Elistenhöhe, is visible among the trees on the slope to the left. Gotslow, with the wood-clad Zulo, is a favourite popular resort. The boat next passes the Damm'sche See (to the left the small town of Pöllis), and enters the broader Papennasser, where the little town of Stepenitz is seen on the right. Two hours after starting the steamer reaches the Stettiner Haff, a fresh-water basin 62 M. in circumference, divided into the Grosse and Ricine Haff, from which the Oder empties itself into the Baltic by means of three channels, the Peene, the Swine, and the Dievenow, thus forming the two large islands of Usedom and Wolliss. The steamboat enters the Swine. To the right rise the wooded Lebbiner Sandberge; on the left, farther on, is the Friedrichsthaler Forst, which extends as far as Swinemunde.

Swinemunde (Hôtel de Prusse; Drei Kronen; "Hôtel du Nord, unpretending, R., L., & A. 2 m., all at the harbour, visitors tax 6 m.), the capital of the two islands, with $4.73 inhab., situated in Usedom, 11/2 M. above the mouth of the Swine, was founded in 1740, and is now the seaport for the heavier vessels trading with Stettin. At the mouth of the Svine, which is protected by fortifications, are two massive breakwaters, 3/4 M. in length, forming the entrance to the harbour. On the E. bank are new docks and a lighthouse 210 ft. in height, commanding an extensive view. Swinemunde is also a sea-bathing place. The beach, 1 M. to the N. of the town, is reached by a shady road through the Plantage.

The road to Heringsdorf, 5½ M. from Swinemunde (omnibus at the station; one-horse carr. 4½, two-horse 6 m.) passes the fishing-village of Ahlbeck (Inn), a small sea-bathing place.

Heringsdorf (Curhaus; *Lindemann's Hotel; both by the sea, D. 21/2 m.; Schmidt, cheaper; visitors' tax 6 m.; lodgings for June and July 120-600 m., afterwards cheaper; full in the season), charmingly situated in the midst of beech-woods, is a favourite sea-bathing place (3000 visitors annually). Fine view from the Kulm. The beach and the wooded heights near it afford pleasant walks. Extensive views from the Streckelberg (164 ft.), 10 M. to the N.W., and the Lange Berg, 3 M. to the W.N.W. -Vineta, the traditional fortress and prosperous capital of the Wend settlers on the coast of the Baltic, is said to have been situated at the base of the Streckelberg, until at a very remote period it was overwhelmed by the sea. The imaginative may still distinguish its vast towers and palaces far beneath the surface of the water. - Farther to the W. is Zinnowitz. вее р. 201.

FROM STETTIN TO MISDROY. Steamboat to Lastzig in 3 hrs., daily in summer except Sun., at 12.30 p.m. (fares 31/2 and 21/2 m.). — Steamboat-route as far as the entrance to the Swine, see above; our vessel then steers to the N. across the Vietziger See and stops at Lautsig, whence we proceed by road to (2 M.; omnibus 50 pf.) Missroy (*Deutsches Haus; *Herzberg's Hotel; lodgings often full), a well-organised bathing-place, very pleasantly situated between two wooded heights on the N.W. coast of the island of Wollin. Pretty walks near the conspicuous new church, on the beach, to the Kaffeberg (view), to the Jordansee (6 M.), &c. Steamer between Swinemunde and Misdroy daily (30 pf.).

From Strttin to Wollin and Cammin, steamboat in 3-41/2 hrs. daily, except Sundays, at 12. 30 p.m. — Wollin (Stadt Worms), the ancient capital of the island, is now an unimportant place. Steamer four times a day, in 1/2 hr., from Cammin to Dievenow (Frank's Hotel; Ziebel; Hôt. du Nord), another watering-place.

BAILWAY FROM STETTIN TO BRESLAU, viâ Reppen, Rothenburg, and Glogau, 218 M., express in 8½ hrs. (fares 30 m. 50, 23 m. 40, 16 m. 40 pf.), ordinary trains in 11 hrs. (fares 28 m. 10, 21 m. 10, 14 m. 10 pf.). The stations on this line, the most direct between Stettin and Breslau, are of little importance. 331/2 M. Königsberg in der Neumark. 611/2 M. Cüstrin, see p. 213. 81 M. Reppen. From Reppen to Breslau, see p. 229.

CONTINUATION OF RAILWAY FROM BERLIN TO DANTSIG. As the train quits Stettin we obtain a view of four railway-bridges adjoining each other. The line crosses the Oder, and then, near (89 M.)

Altdamm, the Reglitz, an arm of the Oder.

FROM ALTDAMM TO COLBERG, 76 M., railway in 6 hrs. (fares 7 m. 40 pf., 5 m.). Stations unimportant. From (40 M.) Plathe, with a ruined castle, a diligence plies to (6 M.) Regenwalde, on the Rega. 61 M. Treptow, with 7052 inhab., formerly a thriving commercial town, has lost its importance through the silting up of the Rega, which is no longer navigable. — 76 M. Colberg, see p. 212.

Beyond (97 M.) Carolinenhorst the train passes the Madu-See, the largest lake in Pomerania, and famous for its lampreys.

105 M. Stargard (*Prins von Preussen, R. 11/2-2 m.; Hôtel Daniels, in the Markt; Pirlich's Hotel, Bahnhof-Str.), on the navigable Ihng, the most important town in E. Pomerania, with 21,816 inhab., is surrounded by a well-preserved wall, with handsome towers and gateways (Johannis-Thor, Rothes Meer, Pyritzer Thor, Mühlen-Thor). The Marienkirche, of the 14th and 15th cent., is richly adorned externally, and of imposing dimensions in the interior. The Rathhaus of the 16th cent. and the Protzen'sche Haus adjoining the church deserve notice. In the market-place is a Monument in commemoration of the war of 1870-71. To the N. of the Bahnhof-Str. are the extensive new Law Courts, and near the station are three large Barracks.

FROM STARGARD TO POSEN VIÂ KREUZ, 107 M., railway in 44/4 hrs. The district traversed is monotonous; stations unimportant. At Kreuz (p. 213) the line intersects that from Berlin to Königsberg. Posen, see p. 229.

From Stargard to Custrin, see p. 213. 1151/2 M. Trampke; 122 M. Freienwalde; 133 M. Wangerin (route to Konitz, see p. 213); 154 M. Schivelbein; 174 M. Belgard (branch-line to Neu-Stettin, p. 213).

FROM BELGARD TO COLBERG, 221/2 M., railway viâ Corlin in 1 hr. (fares PROM BELGARD TO COLBERG, 22/2 M., railway via corum in 1 nr. (lares 2 m. 90, 2 m. 20, i m. 40 pf.). Colberg (Hôlei de Prusse; Hôlei de l'Europe), a town of 16,027 inhab., lies on the Baltic Sea, at the mouth of the Persante. It was formerly a fortress of great strength, and successfully resisted attack during the Seven Years' War and in that of 1806-7. The tasteful Rathhaus, in front of which stands a bronze statue of Fred. William III. by Drake, was built by Zwirner (d. 1861), the late architect of Cologne Cathedral. The Marienkirche contains an old candelabrum, figures of the Apostles of 1327, carved wood-work of 1523, and other interesting antiquities. The harbour is tolerably spacious. — The station lies to the N., between the town and its marine suburbs of Münde (Neues Gesellschaftshaus; Münde; Altes Gesellschaftshaus) and Strandstadt. Sea-bathing and salt-water baths on the beach, not far from the station.

1881/2 M. Coslin (Kronprinz; Deutsches Haus), a district-town with 16,834 inhab.; in the market-place a statue of Fred. William I. The adjacent Gollenberg, on which stands a monument in memory of the Pomeranians who fell in 1813-15, is a favourite point for excursions, - 196 M. Zanow; 213 M. Schlawe, on the Wipper.

Schlawe is the junction for the unimportant line from Rügenwalde viâ Zollbrück to Neu-Stettin (p. 213). Near stat. Hammermühle lies Varzin, an estate of Prince Bismarck, 15 M. to the S.E. of Schlawe.

230 M. Stolp (Hôtel de Prusse; Mundt's; Bismarck), once one of the Hanseatic towns, with 21,591 inhab., lies on the Stolpe, which reaches the sea 12 M. lower down. The Marienkirche dates from the 14th century. Branch-lines diverge here to Stolpmunde and to Zollbrück and Neu-Stettin (p. 213). — 262 M. Lauenburg (Hôtel de Prusse, R., L., & A. 21/4 m.), a small town on the Leba. The line runs between ranges of low hills, that to the S. being called the Schönberge. Several small stations. Near the Oxhöfter Spitze (p. 220) the train reaches the Bay of Dantsic. 304 M. Zoppot; 3061/2 M. Oliva; 309 M. Langfuhr, see p. 220.

312 M. Dantsic, see p. 215.

32. From Berlin to Dantsic by Dirschau.

RAILWAY to Dantsic direct, 284 M.; or via Bromberg, 305 M.; express in 11 hrs. (fares 41 m., 30 m. 50, 21 m. 30 pf.); ordinary trains in 13¹/₄-17¹/₂ hrs. (fares 36 m. 70, 27 m. 50, 18 m. 40 pf.). Steeping-Carriages are attached to the trains.

Berlin, see p. 1. 11 M. Neuenhagen. 14 M. Fredersdorf, whence a branch-line runs to Rüdersdorf, with large limestone quarries.

17 M. Strausberg; 281/2 M. Dahmsdorf-Müncheberg.

Diligence from Müncheberg once daily to (6 M.) Buckow (Hoffacker), a small town situated in a pretty district called the 'Mürkische Schweis'. 39 M. Gusow; 41½ M. Werbig, the junction of the line from Frankfort on the Oder to Angermunde (p. 208); 46 M. Golkow.

51 M. Güstrin (Krappe; Sparenberg; Muhme) is a strongly fortified town with 14,069 inhab., at the confluence of the Warthe and Oder. Frederick the Great, when crown-prince, was once imprisoned by his stern father in the castle here; and on the ramparts, in view of the room where he was confined, his friend Lieut. v. Katte, who was to have accompanied Frederick in his intended flight to England, was beheaded on 6th Nov. 1730. — Cüstrin is the junction for the line from Stettin to Breslau viâ Reppen (see p. 211). Branch-line to Frankfort on the Oder (18½ M.; p. 229). At Zorndorf, 4½ M. to the N., Frederick the Great and Seydlitz with

FROM CÜSTRIN TO STABGARD, 61 M., railway in 41/4-48/4 hrs. (fares 9 m. 90 pf., 8 m., 5 m.). The country is flat but pleasing. Numerous unimportant stations. 45 M. Pyrits, an ancient town of 3128 inhab., surrounded with walls and towers. The Ottobrusnes here was erected in honour of St. Otho, the apostle of Pomerania. The fertile district in which the town lies is called the Weizacker.—61 M. Stargard, see, 212.

The line crosses the Oder and the navigable Warthe. Stations Vietz, Döllens-Radung, and Düringshof (1/4 hr. from the Horst-berge, with a beautiful forest and point of view).

80 M. Landsberg (*Pasedag's Hotel, R. 2½, m.; *Goldnes Lamm, R. 1¾, m.; *Rail. Restaurant), with 23,612 inhab., and engine and other factories, is picturesquely situated on the Warthe. In the Parade-Platz is a monument in memory of 1870-71. The top of the plateau, near the old entrenchments, commands pleasant views. 97 M. Friedeberg; 108 M. Driesen.

At (116 M.) Kreus (Rail. Restaurant) the lines to Stettin and Posen diverge (see p. 212). 123 M. Filehne (Hôtel du Nord), on the Netze; 138 M. Schönlanke (Kiefer).

153 M. Schneidemühl (Goldener Löwe; Schäfer), a town with 11,600 inhab., the junction for branch-lines to Posen, Neu-Stettin, Stolp, Konitz (see below), and Belgard (p. 212), to Zollbrück and Rügenwalde (p. 212), and to Deutsch-Crone. The direct line to (266 M.) Dirschau (p. 214) also diverges here, passing several unimportant stations, of which Konitz (Priebe), junction for the Central Pomeranian Line from Wangerin (p. 212), need alone be mentioned.

The Bromberg line leads to (169 M.) Weissenhöhe, (177 M.) Netzthal, and (190 M.) Nakel (Hôtel du Nord), a busy town on the Netze, which communicates by means of a canal, constructed by Frederick the Great, with the Brahe, an affluent of the Vistula.

207 M. Bromberg (Hôtel Moritz; Rios; Schwarzer Adler; *Rail. Restaurant), on the Brahe, with 34,000 inhab., the seat of the government of this district, owes its commercial importance to the canal just mentioned, which connects the Vistula and the Oder, two of the greatest rivers in Europe. A monument to Frederick the Great adorns the market-place. The Wiesmannshöhe, to the S. of the town, is prettily laid out, and affords a fine view. There is another pleasant promenade near the looks on the canal. - From Bromberg to Posen, see p. 230.

From Bromberg to Insterburg, 218 M., railway in $8^{1}/_{4}$. $12^{1}/_{2}$ hrs. (fares 27 m. 80, 20 m. 90, 13 m. 90 pf.; express 81 m. 20, 23 m. 20, 16 m. 30 pf.).

 12¹/₂ M. Schulitz.
 31 M. Thorn (*Hôtel Sanssouci; Drei Kronen; Rathskeller Restaurant). with 20,617 inhab., is an old fortified town of some importance on the Vistula, which is crossed by a new iron bridge. It was founded by the Vistula, which is crossed by a new iron bridge. It was founded by the Knights of the Teutonic Order in 1231. The handsome Rathhaus of the 14th and 16th cent., the Schiefe Thurm (i. e. leaning tower), the old Schloss (erected in 1260, destroyed by the townspeople in 1420), and the Katzenschwans, a handsome watch-tower, are worthy of inspection. The Church of St. John contains a monument to Copernicus (d. 1545), who was born at Thorn in 1473; a statue, by Tieck, was erected to him near the Rathhaus in 1853. The Marienkirche contains good wood-caving of the 14th haus in 1855, a famous for its 'Pfeffarturcher', a kind of ringentrand century. Thorn is famous for its 'Pfefferkuchen', a kind of gingerbread.

— From Thorn to Warsaw, express in 71/4 hrs.; to Posen, see p. 230.

55 M. Briesen; 67 M. Zablonowo (junction for Laskowitz, see below);

79 M. Bischofswerder; 89 M. Deutich-Eylau, junction of the line from Marienburg to Warsaw (p. 222); 107 M. Osterode; 174 M. Korschen, junction of the line from Königsberg to Lyck and Brest (p. 228). 218 M. Insterburg, see p. 227.

FROM THORN TO MARIENBURG, 85 M., railway in 8-14 hrs. Several insignificant stations. From (23 M.) Kornatowo a branch-line diverges to significant stations. From (23 M.) Kornatovo a branch-line diverges to (101/2 M.) Oulm (Kohwarzer Adler), an ancient stronghold of the Teutonic Order (p. 221), on the lofty right bank of the Vistula. — 371/2 M. Graudens (Schwarzer Adler; Burchardi; Gold. Löve), with 17,321 inhab., a strong fortress, picturesquely situated on the right bank of the Vistula, which successfully resisted the French in 1807. The commandant, Von Courbière, when summoned to surrender, with the announcement that the kingdom of Prussia had ceased to exist, replied: 'Then I am king of Graudenz'. Branch-line to (14 M.) Laskowitz (see below) and (181/2 M.) Zablonovo. — 80 M Warianwarder, Watsur, Hintel, a town of 8298 inhab, and the seat 60 M. Marienwerder (Hetzner; Hintz), a town of 8238 inhab., and the seat of government for the district. It was founded by the Teutonic Order in 1233 and possesses many architectural monuments of the 13-14th cent., including a Cathedral, and a Schloss with two curious towers (Danzke).

— 85 M. Marienburg, see p. 221.

The line follows the course of the Vistula, at a distance of 4-6 M. from it. From (232 M.) Terespol a diligence plies to (41/2 M.) Schwetz, 239 M. Laskowitz, the junction of a line to Graudenz (see above); 249 M. Warlubien; 261 M. Czerwinsk.

274 M. Pelplin, the residence of the Bishop of Culm, has a fine cathedral. The train crosses the Ferse.

286 M. Dirschau (Deutsches Haus), a town of 11,000 inhab., where the passage of the Vistula in winter was formerly often attended with great difficulty, now possesses a handsome Railway Bridge, completed in 1857, nearly 1/2 M. in length. Railway to Königsberg, see R. 33. - 292 M. Hohenstein; 299 M. Praust.

305 M. Dantsic. - Arrival. There are two railway-stations at Dantsic, the Pressian E. Railway Station at the Legethor (Pl. B., 6) for the line to Dirschau (Berlin), Marienburg, and Königsberg (see above and R. 33), and the Berlin and Stettin Railway Station outside the Hohe Thor (Pl. Dantsic, or Dansig, Pol. Gdansk, with 108,550 inhab., including a garrison of 7000 men, the capital of the district of the same name, a strong fortress, one of the most important commercial towns in the North, and now a manufacturing place also, lies 3 M. from the Baltic, near the influx of the united Mottlau and Radaune into the Vistula. The Mottlau flows through the town in two branches, and separates the Altstadt, Rechtstadt, and Vorstadt, the older parts of the town on the left bank (enumerated from N. to S.), from the modern Niederstadt and Langgarten on the right bank; between the branches is the Speicherinsel. The Radaune enters the town by an artificial channel near the Hohe Thor, and then separates the Altstadt from the Rechtstadt.

Dantsic first appears in history in 997, and about the year 1200 became capital of the Duchy of Pommerellen. In 1310 it came into possession of the Teutonic Order, whose fostering care inspired the town with new life. The German Rechtstadt was then added to the still half Slavonic Altstadt and soon became the centre of the business of the city. About the year 1360 the citizens of Dantsic joined the Hanseatic League (p. 175) and took an active part in the wars of their allies against the Northern kingdoms and the pirates, in which they were aided by the Teutonic knights. Owing to its extensive trade, the wealth and population of the town increased rapidly, and it soon became not only the most notable place in the Teutonic dominions of Prussia, but one of the most important of mediæval commercial cities. As the power of the Teutonic order began to decline, and that of the towns to increase, the latter found the supremacy of the order irksome. They accordingly combined to form a league, and after a desperate struggle succeeded in throwing off the yoke. Dantsic, after having destroyed the castle of the Teutonic knights which adjoined the Altstadt, placed itself under the protection of the kings of Poland. In this anomalous position as an independent state, under Polish supremacy, the city enjoyed extensive privileges, and absorbed almost the entire trade of Poland. When the Hanseatic League took part in the English wars of the Roses, the ships of Dantsic frequently returned home laden with booty. The city embraced the Reformation at an early period, but continued its connection with Roman Catholic Poland. During the incessant wars in which the kingdom was involved in the 16th-18th cent. the town was frequently besieged, but never surrendered, except to the Russians in 1734. The second partition of Poland in 1793 at length restored Dantsic to German supremacy. In 1807 the Prussian Marshal Kalkreuth surrendered the town, after an obstinate resistance, to the French Marshal Lefebvre, who in consequence of this success was created 'Duke of Dantsic'. Although retaining the semblance of a free city, Dantsic then became an important French arsenal, especially during the Bussian campaign of 1812. In 1814 it was surrendered by the French Marshal Rapp to the Russian and Prussian armies under the Duke of Wurtemberg, and when peace was combined by the french framework it was compared to Prusing concluded shortly afterwards it was again awarded to Prussia.

Of all the larger towns in N. Germany, Dantsic, together with Lübeck, has best preserved its mediseval characteristics. The wealthier citizens began here earlier than elsewhere to erect dwelling-houses in a substantial style, at first in plain brick, and afterwards with enrichments in sandstone, in consequence of which destructive fires were of comparatively rare occurrence, and the general features of the city have long remained unaltered. From each period of its history, including the middle ages, the 17th cent., and the rococo era, numerous monuments of different kinds have been handed down to us, so that we are enabled to make a complete survey of the progress of architecture at Dantsic from the 14th cent. down to modern times. The appearance of the streets with their narrow, lofty, and richly-decorated gable-façades, is still very antiquated, although a peculiarity of Dantsic, the 'Beischläge' or raised landings, which were once sometimes shaded with trees, are gradually being removed, as interfering with modern traffic. They somewhat resemble the Florentine loggias, and like them were used for family meetings. In the interior also many of the houses still possess traces of their former splendour, such as spacelous corridors with carved staircases, celling-paintings.

handsome cabinets and antique furniture, pictures and utensils of various kinds, all of which however are fast disappearing before the march of modern improvement.

The town owes its importance as a Seaport to its situation at the mouth of the Vistula, which forms the great highway of the extensive Polish corn-trade. This river and the Mottlau, which has been dredged to a depth of 14 ft., admit vessels of considerable tonnage into the very heart of the town. The corn-trade of Dantsic is the most extensive in Europe, with the exception of that of Odessa. The vast magazines on the Speicherinsel (p. 216) are capable of containing 2½ million bushels. The timber-trade, the depôts of which are in the Langgarten quarter, to the E. of the Speicherinsel, is also very considerable. Amber is also a speciality of Dantsic. The Lange Brücke, a quay on the Mottlau, flanked with booths of every kind, is the principal resort of the bargemen, most of whom are Poles, wearing picturesque costumes.

Dantsic was the cradle of the infant navy of Germany, the headquarters of which were removed to Kiel and Wilhelmshaven in 1865.

The RECHTSTADT is the most interesting quarter. The *Lange-markt and *Langgasse (Pl. B, 4) form a single broad street intersecting the town from W. to E., flanked with handsome gabled edifices of the 16th-18th century, many of which, till within the last few years, were provided with 'Beischläge'.

The handsome *Rathhaus (Pl. 24; B, 4), situated at the corner where the Langgasse expands into the Langemarkt, dates from the 14th century. The slender tower (146 ft.) has a spire, which was added in 1559-61, containing a set of chimes of great repute. The figure at the top is said to be King Sigismund Augustus of Poland.

The Interior, recently admirably restored (custodian to the left in the passage, 50 pf.), is best visited in the morning, before office-hours. GROUND FLOOR. To the left the Sommer-Rathsstube (council-chamber), with richly-carved and inlaid panelling and ceiling-paintings of the 16th cent. which recall Venetian work of the same kind. Chimney-piece of 1693. Among the mural paintings is one representing a listener and a man enjoining secresy, in allusion to the use of the apartment. Adjacent is the Winter-Rathsstube, in a mixed Gothic and Renaissance style. To the right on the ground-floor is the Remier, the (modern) vaulting of which rests on a single octagonal column of granite. — An ingenious winding staircase of oak (16th cent.) ascends to the First Floors, containing the Empfangszimmer, or reception-room (which resembles the Sommer-Rathsstube in its decorations, but is of later date), the handsome Arbeitszimmer of the burgomaster (formerly the chapel), the Municipal Archives, &c.

The Neptune Fountain in the Langemarkt was cast in Holland in 1633.

Beyond the fountain a broad flight of steps ascends to the *Artushof, or Junkerhof (Pl. 1; B, 4), used as an Exchange since last century, the former name being said to be derived from the mediæval tradition of King Arthur, and the latter from the 'Junker', or wealthy merchants of Dantsic, who formerly assembled here. The present edifice was erected in 1480-81 on the site of an older building. On the lower part of the façade, added in 1552, are medallion-portraits of the Emp. Charles V. and his son Don John of Austria.

The *Hall (generally open in the forenoon, entrance by the adjoining house on the left; business hours 11-2), with fine vaulting borne by four slender pillars of granite, belongs architecturally to the building of 1480, but was afterwards very quaintly decorated with pictures, reliefs, and statues from subjects derived from Christian and pagan traditions. In the centre Augustus III. of Poland, in marble, by Meissner. To the right of the entrance a Last Judgment by Moller, 1602; Madonna by Stech; Actson, a strange combination of painting, relief, and antiers; Head of Christ, by Stech; Siege of the Marienburg in 1410 (p. 221); Departure of mediæval warriors, a small, but good picture; frieze representing the history of the 'Children of Haymon'; Orpheus playing to his spell-bound audience (with a cleverly-painted burning light), &c.

The Langemarkt is terminated on the E. by the Grüne Thor, (outside of which is the Lange Brücke, see above), which contains the West Prussian Provincial Museum (Sun. 11-2, Wed. 2-4). To the S. is the Winter-Platz (Pl. B, 5), with flower-beds and a monumental Fountain. The Langgasse ends on the W. at the Langgasser-Thor, erected in 1612. Opposite the latter is the lofty Stockthurm (1346 and 1508), now a military workshop, adjoining which is the Hohe Thor (Pl. A, 4), a handsome fortified gateway erected in 1558, in the 'baroque' style.

In the neighbouring Kohlenmarkt is the Old Arsenal (Pl. 30; B, 4), a curious-looking edifice erected in 1605, in the degraded style of the period, with pediments and towers. The Altstädische Rathhaus, on the opposite bank of the Radaune, now a court of justice, is a similar building, dating from 1587.

The *Church of St. Mary (Pl. 17; B, 4), a noble pile, founded in 1343, and gradually increased to its present size between that date and 1502, possesses aisles and a transept flanked with chapels between the flying buttresses. Massive W. tower, 248 ft. in height, and ten slender turrets on the gables. The beautiful and varied vaulting of the interior is borne by 28 pillars. The church contains several treasures of art (tickets of admission, 50 pf., 4-6 pers. 2m., obtained from the sacristan, Korkenmachergasse 4).

Gothic "High-Altar, executed by Michael in 1511-17, with four wings, on which are represented scenes from the life of the Virgin partly in wood-carving, and partly in painting. Fine candelabra of the same date. The architectural summit was afterwards removed, but was restored by Wendler in 1570. The whole altar is 65 ft. in height. Behind the altar and in the aisles are several STAINED-GLASS WINDOWS, presented by Frederick William IV. in 1844, the first works of the Berlin establishment which was then presided over by the afterwards celebrated general Vogel v. Falkenstein. Adjoining the altar is a CIBORIUM, formerly gilded. A chapel on the S. side of the choir contains a large "CRUCIFIX, admirably carved in wood.— The Dorotheen-Capelle in the N. aisle contains the "LAST JUDGMENT, the gem of the cathedral, a large altarpiece with wings, which is now generally admitted to be by Memiling of Bruges. The picture, painted before 1473, was purchased by the Portinari, agents of the House of Medici, and consigned to a shipper probably for transmission to Florence. In 1473, however, in the Hanseatic wars, the vessel was attacked by a Dantsic cruiser, under the command of P. Beneke, and was presented by the ship-owners to the church of St. Mary. The French carried it to Paris in 1807, but it was restored after the war. Large Font, cast in the Netherlands in 1554. Two well-executed Candelabra in brass, in the nave. The Reinholds-Capelle, to the N.W. of the font, contains a small altar with fine carving. In front of the Allerheiligen-Capelle is interred the poet Martin Opits, who died here of the plague in 1893. Tombstone renewed in 1873.

The church also contains a valuable *Collection of sacerdotal vestments and ecclesiastical vessels of the 12th-16th centuries.

The Tower commands a good survey of the town and the plain of the Vistula. The large bell weighs six tons.

Behind the choir of St. Mary's is the Frauengasse (Pl. B, C, 4), the quaint mediæval houses in which are the most characteristic in the town.

The other churches, all brick structures in the Gothic style, are inferior in interest to St. Mary's. St. Catharine's (Pl. 11), erected in 1326, and extended in the 15th cent., has a tower containing musical bells. St. John's (Pl. 15), completed in 1465, is of noble proportions, but disfigured by restoration. Trinity (Pl. 18), completed in 1514, has a curious, richly-decorated, triple W. gable.—Adjoining St. Catharine's is the Grosse Mühle, with the interesting Müllergewerkhaus.

Adjoining the Trinity Church is the handsome old Franciscan Monastery (Pl. 32; B, 5), a late-Gothic building of the 15th and 16th cent., recently almost entirely restored. The collections it contains are open to the public on Sun. and Wed., 11-2; on other days, except \hat{S} at., 10-3, \hat{a} dm. $1^{1}/_{2}$ m.

The Ground Floor, with its vaulted rooms, has been fitted up for a Museum of Dantsic Antiquities and for a collection of casts from the antique. Passing through the handsome cloisters, we reach a staircase on the left leading to the Upper Floor, where a series of well-lighted rooms contain the public Picture Gallery, which consists chiefly of modern works, about 150 in number: E. Hildebrandt, Winter-landscape, and Under the Equator; Richter, Portrait of Hildebrandt; E. Meyerheim, Genre-picture; P. Meyerheim, son of the former), A family of monkeys; Rosenfelder, Pancratius Klemme, released from the bishop's prison (history of Dantsic); Schrader, Pope Gregory VII. and Crescentius; Nordenberg, Norwegian game; Calame, Palermo; Meyer of Bremen, Enhaber, Stryowski, Genre pictures; Kalkreuth, Elsasser, Elchhorn, Gude, Landscapes, etc. — The exhibitions of the Dantsic Kunstverein also take place here.

The Kabrun Gallery, formerly at the Handels-Academie, but now placed here, consists of about 350 works, chiefly of the Netherlands schools, 2000 drawings and water-colours, and 10,000 engravings and wood-cuts.

The old Jacobskirche (Pl. B, 2), Schüsseldamm 62, the tower of which is now surmounted with the spire of the old Jacobsthor, contains the Municipal Library (open 2-5).

Dantsic was the first town on the continent to utilise its sewage for the fertilisation of the sterile moor-land. The pump-station on the Kämpe (Pl. C, 3) and the irrigation-fields on the dunes between Weichselmunde (p. 220) and Heubude are worthy of a visit.

A pleasant walk, with varying views of the town, is afforded by the Ramparts, which are open to the public, and have approaches near the different gates. *View of the picturesque town and its environs from the Bellevue inn, at the entrance to the fort on the Bischofsberg, an ascent of 1/4 hr. from the Hohe Thor (p. 218). To the left rises the fortified Hagelsberg.

The Environs of Dantsic surpass those of any other German seaport. The finest points are easily reached by railway or steamboat.

and some of them by tramway. Comp. the Map.

MOUTH OF THE VISTULA. By steamboat (p. 215) to Neufahrwasser, and back by railway (p. 215; 41/2 M., in 1/4 hr.; fares 60, 40, 80 pf.). The steamer proceeds through the thronged Mottlau, and passes the fortified island of Holm and the fortress of Weichselmunde, whence an excursion may be made to the irrigation-fields at Heubude (see above; Inn), 3 M. to the S. - Nearly opposite Weichselmunde lies Neufahrwasser, a suburb of Dantsic, with docks enlarged in 1871. Leaving the landing-place, and skirting the bank, we reach a ferry, which takes us across to Westerplatte, a capital bathing-place. The entrance to the harbour is now the only mouth of the Vistula, and presents a busy scene in summer. A long granite pier, with a small lighthouse, extends into the sea on the E. side. Near the station is the large lighthouse. To the W. is the small sea-bathing place Brösen. In 1840 the Vistula forced a new passage for itself into the sea at Newführ, 71/2 M. to the E. of Dantsic, but strong bulwarks have since been erected to prevent the recurrence of such an event.

*Excursion to Langfulfer, Oliva, and Zopfor by the Stettin Railway (p. 212), or by tramway, both starting near the Hohe Thor (Pl. A, 4). Also pleasant walk of 2½-3 hrs. to Oliva viā Schidlitz (view from Weinberg Inn), Mattern, and Freudenthal.

2½ M. Langfuhr, a suburb of Dantsic, with numerous villes, the first station on the railway, is connected by a double avenue of fine limes, planted in 1767-70, with the Oliva Gate. A road to the left, in the middle of it, ascends to the "Johannisberg (on the slope of which is the *Bellevie, or Zinglershöhe inn), the top of which (320 ft.) commands a noble and extensive prospect of the town and sea, with the lighthouse on the promontory of Hela to the left. We may descend for variety by the pretty Jäschkenthal (several inns).

At stat. Oliva (* Thierfeld; Karlshof), a village 21/2 M. to the N.W. of Langfuhr, there is a once celebrated Cistercian Abbey, suppressed in 1829, the Church of which, dating from the 17th cent., is now that of the parish. The choir contains figures of Polish kings and Dukes of Pommerellen, and good carving of 1619. The Refectory is adorned with portraits of all the abbots since the foundation of the abbey in 1170. The peace which closed the sixty-one years' Northern war was concluded here between Sweden and Poland on 3rd May, 1660. The Palace of the abbots, now the residence of a Princess of Hohenzollern-Hechingen, possesses a beautiful *Garden.

The "Carlsberg (350 ft.), immediately at the back of Oliva, is a favourite point of view. The survey of the environs is remarkably picturesque, in some respects surpassing that from the Johannisberg.

Stat. Zoppot (*Curhaus, on the beach; Scholz; Strand-Hôlel; Pommer-scher Hof, plain), 21/2 M. farther N., is a sea-bathing place, near which are the Thalmühle, Kaiserstehl, and Königs-Höhe, all good points of view. The *Adlershorst (200 ft.), a promontory 2½ M. to the N. (reached by boat, or by railway to Klein-Kais), commands a charming survey of the bay of Zoppot and of another bay farther N., formed by the Ozhöfter Spoisse.

The Ozrthaus, or old Carthusian monastery of Marien-Paradies, 21 M. to the S.W. of Dantsic, with the small town of that name, lies in a wooded and hilly lake-district (diligence twice daily). The Schönberg (1120 ft.), 9 M. farther S., is one of the highest hills between the Harz and Ural Mts.

33. From Dirschau (Berlin) to Königsberg.

101 M. RAILWAY in 31/4-71/2 hrs. (fares 13 m., 9 m. 70, 6 m. 50 pf.; express fares 14 m. 60, 10 m. 90, 7 m. 60 pf.).—From Berlin to Königsberg, 865 M., express in 121/s-129/4 hrs. (fares 53 m. 10, 39 m. 40, 27 m. 60 pf.).
From Dankeie to Königsberg, 120 M., express in 41/4 hrs. (fares 16 m. 20, 12 m. 10, 8 m. 10 pf.).

From Berlin to (264 M.) Dirschau, see R. 32. — After crossing the Vistula by the Railway Bridge mentioned at p. 215, the train traverses a fertile plain, called the Marienburger Werder, between the Vistula and its tributary the Nogat. This district lies below the highest level of these rivers, and is protected from inundation by embankments. Just before reaching Marienburg the train crosses the Nogat; the bridge is embellished with statues of Hermann of Salza and Duke Albert of Prussia. The station lies outside the town.

101/2 M. Marienburg (*König von Preussen; *Marienburg; Leipzig), an ancient town on the Nogat, with 9559 inhab., was long the seat of the powerful knights of the Teutonic Order. The market-place, flanked with 'Lauben' or arcades, contains the Gothic Rathhaus, built at the end of the 14th century. The handsome Marienthor is of the same period. At the N. end of the main street ries a small Gothic Obelisk to the Burgomaster Blume (see below).

The *Schloss, the grandest medizeval secular edifice in Germany, was at once the residence of the Grand Master and a fortress. The N. and W. façades (the latter best viewed from the bridge over the Nogat) are the finest. It consists of three parts, the Alte, or Hohe Schloss (Pl. A),, the Mittelschloss (Pl. B), and the Vorburg, to the N., of which last a part only is now extant. Principal entrance on the N. side (Pl. e). In front of the Mittelschloss rises a Statue of Frederick the Great, who annexed this province to Prussia, erected in 1877. The castellan, who shows the Mittelschloss, and also the Marienkirche, lives in the W. wing of the former building (Pl. f).

The Teutonic Order, founded in 1191, began in 1231 under the auspices of the Grand Master Hermann v. Salza to undertake the conquest and conversion of the heathen Prussians. Each conquered piece of land was protected by castles and provided with German colonists. In this manner Marienburg was founded in 1274, at first merely as the seat of a commander of the Order. In 1309, however, Siegfried v. Feuchisangen transferred the residence of the Hochmeister hither, and the castle was extended so as to render it worthy of its new dignity. In 1335 Dietrich v. Altenburg began to erect the Mittelschloss, which was magnificently completed under Winrich v. Kniprode (1351-82). This was the golden age of the Order, after which it rapidly declined. Its moral foundations were sapped by luxury and internal dissensions, and at the same time Poland became its litter and implacable enemy. Disputes with regard to the frontier caused the outbreak of hostilities in 1407, and in 1410 the Grand Master Ulrich v. Jungingen fell at the bloody battle of Tannenberg. The greater part of the Teutonic dominions now succumbed to the Polish yoke, and although the Marienburg under the gallant Heinrich v. Plauen (1410-18) with the remnant of his knights successfully resisted a siege, and the Peace of Thorn was concluded in 1411, the power of the Order was irretrievably gone. The incursions of barbarian hordes became more frequent, and numbers of the towns and noblesse went over to Poland (see p. 216). The mercenaries employed by the Order moreover rebelled when their pay was in arrear, and one castle after another was pledged to them. At length in 1457 the Marienburg itself thus fell into their hands and was sold to the Poles, who at the same time took possession of the whole of W. Prussia. The Grand Master escaped to Königsberg, and thenceforth retained E. Prussia only as a fief from the king of Poland. The town of Marienburg, however, under its faithful and undeaunted burgomaster Bartholomes Blume, continued to resist the attacks of the enemy, in consequence of the enthusiasm aroused by the wars of independence, the public interest in the venerable building was revived, and the Grand Master's residence in the Mittelschloss, the finest part of it, was restored. The Hochschloss (Pl. A), next to the town, encloses a quadrangle, formerly surrounded with cloisters, and contains the "Martenstriche (Pl. a), a pure Gothic structure, with handsome vaulting in the interior, recently restored. On the walls are paintings of the 14th century. The church is entered by the elegant 'Golden Gate' in the upper part of the cloisters. A niche on the exterior, on the E. side, contains an inlaid 'Statue of the Virgin, 26 ft. in height, dating from 1341. To the W. is the Chapter Room, where the knights assembled for councils and elections. The Chapel of St. Anna, under the church, contains the ancient burial vault of the Grand Masters, some of whose names are still legible on the monuments.

The "MITTELSCHLOSS (Pl. B), adjoining the Hochschloss and forming an irregular quadrangle, about 100 yds. in length and 90 yds. in width, contains the sumptuous apartments of the Grand Master and knights, with their three 'Remter' or halls. A long passage leads to the "Master's Great Hall (Pl. b), the bold vaulting of which is borne by a single granite pillar, 10 in. thick and 38 ft. in height. During the principal aim of the Polish cannon, a ball from which is still to be seen built into the wall. The stained glass illustrates the history of the Order. Over the door and on the E. wall are portraits of celebrated Grand Masters and generals. The vaulting of the Master's Small Hall (Pl. c), is also borne by a single column of granite. The Chapel contains among other curiosities a field-altar of the Grand Master, dating from 1388, discovered in the cathedral-treasury at Gnesen in 1823. One of the finest apartments in the Schloss is the *Convent Remier (Pl. d), or assembly-hall, with remarkably light and elegant groined vaulting, borne by three red granite pillars, 91/2 in. thick. Stained-glass windows with subjects relating to the Order. The Pinnacles of the Schloss afford a good survey of the environs. The vast Cellars are also worthy of inspection.

A new railway runs from Marienburg to Warsaw via Deutsch-Eylau (p. 214), Illowo, and Mlawa. From Marienburg to Thorn, see p. 214. — The Königsberg line traverses the fertile plain of Marienburg and Elbing. 17 M. Attfelde.

281/2 M. Elbing (*Hôtel de Berlin; *Königlicher Hof), a commercial town on the Elbing, with 35,842 inhab., somewhat resembling Dantsic in the older parts, contains nothing of special interest. Vogelsang, Panklau, and the old monastery of Cadienen (2 hrs.) are among the finest points in the beautiful environs. Pleasant excursion by steamboat to Kahlberg, a small watering-place.

From Elbing by steamboat in 21/2 hrs. to the small town of Frauenburg (Zum Copernicus), the seat of the Bishop of Ermeland, whose modern palace lies on the height. The conspicuous *Dom, fortified with towers and walls, externally a fine Gothic edifice of brick of the 14th cent., is decorated in the interior in the bad taste of the 17th and 18th centuries. The celebrated Copernicus (p. 214), who died here as a canon in 1543, is said to have erected the tower containing the machinery for supplying the cathedral and vicinity with water.

The train now describes a wide circuit, so as to avoid the hills to the E. of the Haff. From (361/2 M.) Güldenboden a branch-line diverges to Preussisch-Holland, Mohrungen, and Allenstein. 44 M. Schlobitten; 63 M. Braunsberg (*Rhein. Hof; Adler), with 11,500 inhab., on the Passarge; 70 M. Heiligenbeil; 83 M. Ludwigsort: 901/2 M. Kobbelbude.

Königsberg, the second capital of Prussia, the seat of the provincial government and headquarters of the 1st Corps d'Armée, with 140,909 inhab, and a garrison of 6680 men, lies on undulating ground on the Pregel, 41/2 M. from its influx into the Frische Haff. The city consists of three quarters, which were anciently independent of each other: the Altstadt (on the W. side, between the Schlossteich and Pregel), the Kneiphof (an island in the Pregel), and the Löbenicht (on the E. side, between the Schlossteich and the new Pregel). It is 91/2 M. in circumference, including, however, extensive gardens and the Schlossteich. Königsberg is now an important fortress; its extensive fortifications, including a girdle of twelve outlying forts, were commenced in 1843. The trade of the place is improving, and extensive goods-stations have been built to the W., on the Pregel. The shipping business is also increasing, but small vessels only can enter the Haff, the larger being obliged to unload at Pillau. The traffic with the corn-growing districts of the interior is carried on by means of numerous barges; the other important commodities are flax, hemp, and brandy.

Königsberg was originally a fortress of the knights of the Teutonic Order. and was named after their ally King Ottocar of Bohemia (1255). After the fall of the Marienburg (p. 221) the town became the residence of the Grand Master, and afterwards (1525-1618) that of the Dukes of Prussia. The Elector Frederick III. of Brandenburg assumed the title of King of Prussia here in 1701, and after the disasters of 1808 Frederick Wilkam III. and his court retired to Königsberg, where schemes for the salvation of the tottering kingdom where zealously canvassed by Baron Stein, W. v. Humboldt, York, and other illustrious men of the period. Königsberg is also celebrated as the scene of the labours of the philosopher Kant (1724-1804), Herder, Hamann, and other distinguished scholars.

The Palace (Pl. 19; F, 4), an extensive building, enclosing a large quadrangle, with a lofty Gothic tower, situated nearly in the centre of the city, was formerly the seat of the Teutonic Order. It was restored in 1532-54, and frequently altered in the 18th century. It now contains the apartments of the royal family and those of the president of the province, government-offices, the Archives (open daily 9-1), and a commercial school.

The W. wing contains the SCHLOSSKIECHE, where Frederick I. of Prussia was crowned in 1701, and William I. in 1861. The Province of Prussia is the cradle of the 'Landwehr', the names of numerous members of which, who fell in 1813, are recorded on the walls of the church. Above the church is the spacious Moscowiter-Saal, employed for festivals, exhibitions of art, etc. (custodian in the E. wing, opposite). It was built by the Russians, at the time of the Seven Years' War, during their occupation of the town in 1758-62, and is one of the largest halls in Germany. The Tower, the summit of which is 330 ft. above the Pregel, commands an extensive prospect (custodian in the S.W. corner of the court). — The Blutgericht, in the N. wing, formerly the torture-chamber of the Schloss, is now a wine-room (p. 223).

The Statue of Frederick I. (Pl. 4), in front of the E. portal of the palace, by Jacobi and Schlüter, was erected in 1801.

The *Monument of Kant (Pl. 6; F, 4), in bronze, by Bauch, near the N.W. corner of the palace, completed in 1864, represents the philosopher in his 30th year. For a description of Kant's grave, see p. 226.

The Post Office (Pl. 17) is situated near Kant's monument, and adjoining it is the modern Altstädtische Kirche (Pl. 13), originally designed by Schinkel, whose plans however were much reduced and modified.

In the vicinity is the Parade-Platz, or Königs-Gartsn (military music on Thurs. afternoons), bounded on the N.E. by the Theatre (Pl. 18; F, 3), and on the N.W. by the New University, and embellished with an equestrian *Statue of Frederick William III. (Pl. 5) by Kiss, erected in 1851.

Reliefs. 1. Domestic life of the king at Königsberg in 1807-9; 2. The gelivers to Hardenberg the new laws enacted during these years, Scharnhorst and Stein approving; 3. Foundation of the Landwehr in 1813; York between Counts Alexander and Lewis Dohna gives a musket to a student; Bardeleben leaning on his sword; to the right in the corner the burgomaster in the Landwehr uniform; to the left a soldier of the national cavalry regiment. The 4th and 5th scenes represent the blessings of peace.

The new *University (Pl. 22; F, 3), completed in 1862, is a fine Renaissance structure by Stiller. The façade is adorned with an equestrian figure in relief of Duke Albert of Prussia, the founder of the University in 1544. Below are niches containing statues of Luther and Melanchthon; above, medallion-portraits of celebrated Königsberg professors. In the winter of 1882-83 the university was attended by 856 students.

Interior. Handsome staircase, borne by marble columns. The SENATE HALL contains a portrait of the Crown Prince as rector, by Lauchert, and a bust of Kant in his 80th year, by Hagemann and Schadow. The adjacent *AULA is adorned with admirable frescoes, representing the different branches of art and science, and pleasing allegories in the arches above.

The carved chairs are also worthy of notice.

The Schlossteichgasse leads from the Königsgarten to the E. to the Schlossteich (Pl. G, 3), a sheet of water which intersects half the town from S. to N., and is a great ornament to the town, being surrounded by public and private gardens. The bridge across it, commanding a pretty view, is for foot-passengers only. Ferry 15 pf,; boat per 1/2 hr. for 1-2 pers. 25 pf., each additional pers. 10 pf.

Traversing the Weissgerbergasse and crossing the Rossgärt'sche Markt, the traveller enters the long Königs-Strasse, where a column rises to the memory of the Prussian minister v. Schön. No. 57, near the monument, is the Kunst-Academie, containing the -

*Stadt-Museum (Pl. 20; H, 3), a choice collection of 300 pictures, chiefly modern (Sun. 11-2, Wed. 11-1; at other times fee 1 m.; custodian Landhofmeister-Str. 2, left side, a street nearly opposite the museum). Catalogue 25 pf.

The Collection is on the upper floor; it contains 52 old Italian masters, including Fra Filippo Lippi, Dom. Ghirlandajo, Lorenzo di Credi, Innocenzo da Imola, Garofalo, Guido Reni, Giov. Bellini, Cima da Conegliano, and others, da Imola, Garofalo, Guido Reni, Gioc. Bellini, Cima da Conegicino, and others, but the genuineness of some of the works may be doubted. There are also early Netherlands masters: 57. Jan Steen, 59. Jan van Gogen, etc.; then a number of portraits of famous citizens of Königsberg, and more than 200 Paintines of Modern Masters, which form the most important part of the collection: 150. A. No. 65 in the same street is the University Library (Pl. 2), containing 220,000 vols. and MSS. of Luther, etc. (Tues., Thurs., and Frid. 11-4. Wed. 2-4). Farther on is the Königs-Thor (Pl. K. 3, 4), with the statues of Ottocar of Bohemia, Duke Albert of Prussia, and King Frederick I.

In the quarter called the Kneiphof, on an island in the Pregel, rises the Gothic Cathedral (Pl. 9; F, 4), begun in 1333, but not completed till the middle of the 16th cent. (sacristan Dom-Str.

15, S. of the church). One of the W. towers is unfinished.

The Choir, now disused, contains ancient monuments in the Renaissance style, the chief of which is that of Albert I., Duke of Prussia (d. 1568), the founder of the university, and a most important personage in the annals of the city. On the N. side the tomb of the Chancellor Kospoth. A number of Grand Masters of the Teutonic Order and Prussian princes are interred in the vaults.

The 'Stoa Kantiana' adjoining the cathedral, on the N. side of the choir, contains the grave of the illustrious thinker Immanuel Kant (d. 1804). Keeper in the Kneiphof Gymnasium (see below).

The bones of the 'Sage of Königsberg' rest under a stone with an apne nones of the "sage of monigapory ress under a stone with an appropriate inscription, above which, on a marble pedestal, is a repetition in Carrara marble of the bust mentioned at p. 225. On the wall behind is a copy of Raphael's School of Athens, painted in grisaille by Neide. On the opposite wall are the words 'Der bestirate Himmel über mir, das moralische Gesetz in mir ('The starry Heavens above me, the Moral Law within me'), from Kant's 'Kritik der praktischen Vernunft'.

The Old University (Pl. 23) and the Kneiphof Gymnasium adjoin

the cathedral.

On the left bank of the Pregel, between the bridges (Grüne and Köttel-Brücke) crossing from the Kneiphof, rises the Exchange (Pl. 3; E, 5), a handsome building designed by Müller of Bremen and completed in 1875. The principal façade is to the W.; the allegorical figures of the four quarters of the globe are by Hundrieser of Königsberg. Business hours 12-2; at other times the interior is shown by the custodian.

The Observatory (Pl. 21; C, 3), on an old bastion to the W. of the city, built in 1811-13, was fitted up by the talented astronomer Bessel (d. 1846). Near it are the Botanical Garden, Butterberg Nos. 2-3, the valuable Zoological Museum (Pl. 24), Sternwart-Str. 5-6, the Chemical Laboratory, and several institutions belonging to the medical faculty of the university. The hilly ground between the observatory and the fortress is occupied by the Volksgarten, with a Monument for 1870-71.

In the Mitteltragheim (Pl. G, 1, 2) is the Office of the Provincial Authorities, in the Italian Renaissance style, finished in 1882.

Outside the Steindammer Thor (Pl. D. E. 1), which is embellished with a Statue of Frederick William IV., lie the *Hufen (tramway), a pretty promenade with pleasure-grounds, villas, and several popular resorts, such as the Flora, with its palm-house, and the Summer Theatre. To the left, in the Luisenwahl, at the end of the Hufen, is a medallion of Queen Louise. To the right, opposite, in the middle of a garden, is the house occupied by the present emperor of Germany during the time of Napoleon's domination.

The train crosses the old outlet of the Frische Haff, now choked with sand, passes Neuhäuser (Hotel), a bathing-place surrounded by woods, and reaches Pillau, a fortress at the present mouth of the Frische Haff, with a harbour and lighthouse (3225 inhab.). — Steamboat from Königsberg to Elbing by Pillau daily in 8 hrs. (3 or 2 m.), a pleasant trip. Samland is a fertile and partly-wooded district, with several lakes, lying to the N. of Königsberg. The highest point is the Galtgarben (365 ft.), reached in 2 hrs. from stat. Powayen via Medenau, the top of which is crowned with a large iron cross in commemoration of the War of Independence. Most of the villages on the N. coast are frequented as bathing-places. Cranzkuren or Cranz, the chief of these, lies 20 M. to the N. of Königsberg (omnibus twice daily in 33/4 hrs.), at the S. end of the Kurische Nehrung, a sandy tongue of land running N. to Memel, a distance of 71 M. The sand-hills of the Nehrung, attaining a height of 200 ft., are sometimes visited. The steamboat is taken from Cranzbeck to Nidden (Leuchtthurm) and the excursion is continued thence on foot to (7 M.) Pilkoppen and (61/2 M.) Rossitten (Inn). A boat to meet the steamer at Nidden or Rossitten should be ordered by telegram from Königsberg or Cranz. Schwarzort, a bathing-place on the Nehrung, 14 M. from Memel, is chiefly remarkable for its amber-dredging. To the W. of Cranz lie Neukuren, Rauschen, Georgensvalde, and Warniken, the environs of the last of which vie in grandeur with Stubbenkammer (p. 206).

Amber of remarkable purity and solidity is found at Brüsterort, at the N.W. angle of Samland, where divers and dredging are employed in the search. The whole of the W. coast of Samland has for more than a thousand years been celebrated as the 'Amber Coast'. The yield is most abundant after storms. In 1862 about 4000 lbs., valued at 18001., were collected near Palmnicken and Nodems in a single morning. It is usually found among the seaweed, and also dug up on the coast, sometimes at a considerable distance from the sea. The most important amber-pits are at Palmnicken. Fragments 1/2 oz. in weight are valued at 1s. 6d. to 2s., those of 11b. at 15l. and upwards. The milky amber is most esteemed. Dantsic is now the principal depôt of this highly-prized antediluvian gum. It is exported to the East for pipe-mouthpieces, as well as to America, Africa, etc. The right to collect amber, formerly a privilege of the Teutonic Grand Master, and subsequently a royal monopoly, protected by severe laws, is now farmed to private individuals.

Frankfort on the Oder, the capital of the district of that name, with 51,147 inhab., and the largest town in the Province of Brandenburg after Berlin and Potsdam, was founded by the Wends, annexed to Brandenburg in 1250, and notwithstanding its repeated captures during the Hussite, the Thirty Years', and the Seven Years' wars was always an important station on the commercial route to The Reminiscere, Margaretha, and Martini fairs are still much frequented by Poles. The streets are broad and well built.

Leaving the station, we proceed straight to the Fürstenwalder-Strasse, turn to the right, and cross the Wilhelms-Platz (Pl. B. 3, 4). planted with trees, where the Theatre is situated. Farther on in the same direction (straight through the Regierungs-Str.) rises the Oberkirche (Pl. 5; C, 3), or Church of St. Mary, a spacious brick structure of the 14th cent., with double aisles added subsequently. Wood-carving over the altar, richly gilded, dating from 1717; old stained glass; candelabrum with seven branches, adorned with reliefs of the 14th century. — The handsome *Rathhaus (Pl. 10; C, 3) in the market-place, to the N. of the Oberkirche, was erected in 1607, and was recently restored. On the S. gable is seen the device of the Hanseatic League, an oblique iron rod, supported by a shorter one.

The PROMENADE on the W. side of the town is well laid out and affords a pleasant walk. To the N. of the Wilhelms-Platz it is embellished with a small War Monument (Pl. 9; B, 3), and to the S, it contains a larger War Monument, unveiled in 1882, and a monument to the poet Ewald von Kleist, who fell at the battle of Kunersdorf in 1759 (p. 229). Farther to the S. is the extensive 'Anger', on which stands the Gertraudkirche (Pl. 4), built in 1875-79, and with 24 Corinthian iron columns, and containing 30,000 vols. presented to the town by Count Raczynski. In front of the theatre is a Monument to the soldiers of the 5th Corps d'Armée, who fell at Nachod in 1866. In the S.W. corner of the square is the Police Office (Pl. 21). The Berliner-Strasse, which diverges from this point, contains the Polish Theatre. The District Court and Provincial Offices are in the Wilhelms-Str., the Upper Court in the Sapieha-Platz. At the corner of the Wilhelms-Str. and the Friedrich-Str. stands the new Post Office.

Among the older buildings the most noteworthy is the Rathhaus (Pl. 23; C, 3), the principal part of which dates from the 16th cent.; the projecting double vestibule was erected in 1550 by Giovan Battista de Quadro, an Italian architect. The tower is of 1730, in the style of the period. On the vaulting of the vestibule are the signs of the zodiac in painted reliefs.

The Dom, or Cathedral (Pl. 8; F, 1), on the right bank of the Warthe, re-erected in 1775, contains several treasures of art (sa-cristan to the right, at the corner of the chief facade).

On four pillars four "Brasses of the 15th cent., including that of the woywoda, or governor, Gurka (d. 1472); Monuments of bishops; sumptuous "Golden Chapel, erected in 1842 by a society of Polish nobles, in the Byzantine style, adorned with paintings and mosaics and fine gilded bronze statues of the two first Christian Polish Kings, by Rauch; in the chapel adjoining the latter on the right, a monument of the Powodowski family, 1585.

The collections of the Verein der Freunde der Wissenschaften. a Polish society, Mühlen-Str. 35, are obligingly shown to visitors: they include several paintings, a library, and prehistoric antiquities. Near the Martinskirche (Pl. 15) is a monument to the Polish poet Mickiewicz. - *Fort Winiary affords the best survey of the environs (tickets at the commandant's office, Wilhelms-Str. 14).

183 M. Liegnitz (Rautenkranz; Goldene Krone; Union, at the station), at the confluence of the Katzbach and Schwarzwasser. with 37,157 inhab., was formerly the capital of a principality of that name. The Schloss near the station, rebuilt since 1835, contains the government-offices; the principal portal, in the Renaissance style of 1533, was recently restored. The two huge towers date from the 15th cent.: the round Hedwigsthurm is said to contain relics of St. Hedwig (d. 1243); the square one is called the Petersthurm. There are also several dwelling-houses in the Renaissance style. The Roman Catholic Church of St. John contains monuments of the princes who formed the last branch of the ancient Polish Piast dynasty, which became extinct in 1675. The Protestant Church of SS. Peter and Paul dates from the 14th cent.; extensive view from the tower. In the Friedrichs-Platz is a Statue of Frederick the Great. The Lion Monument, on the Marienwiese, commemorates the wars of 1866 and 1870-71. The fortifications have been turned into promenades. - From Liegnitz to Glogau and Reppen, see p. 229; to Königszelt, see R. 44.

Breslau (391 ft.), the second city in Prussia, the capital of Silesia and seat of government for the province, the headquarters of the 6th Corps d'Armée, and the residence of a Roman Catholic prince-bishop, with 272,912 inhab. (98,000 Rom. Cath., 18,000 Jews, 8000 soldiers), lies in a fertile plain on both banks of the Oder, at the influx of the Ohlau. The islands formed here by the Oder are connected with the banks by numerous bridges. The city consists of the Altstadt, Neustadt, and five suburbs. The latter are continually increasing; the Schweidnitzer Vorstadt, to the S., is particularly well built, and contains a number of handsome dwelling-houses.

Breslau, Lat. Wratislavia, Pol. Wraclaw, a town and episcopal see as early as the year 1000, is of Slavonic origin, and with Silesia belonged to Poland down to 1163, after which it became the capital of the independent Duchy of Silesia. In 1261 Duke Heinrich III. introduced the then famous municipal law of Magdeburg. On the extinction of the dukes in 1335 it was annexed to Bohemia and became subject to the emperors of the Luxemburg family, who took the city under their special protection, so that, in spite of the storms of the Hussite wars and of the following centuries, an independent German element was strongly developed.

At this period also Breslau received its architectural character. latest style of Gothic architecture, and that of the earliest Renaissance, were zealously cultivated here. The finest Gothic church is the elegant Elisabethen-Kirche, and the handsomest secular building in that style is the Rathhaus. Here, as in all Slavonic and semi-Slavonic countries, the Renaissance gained ground at a remarkably early period, but whether it was introduced by Italians, or learnt by natives in Italy, is uncertain. The new style appears to have been applied to portals and to monuments, the finest of which are to be seen in the Elisabethen-Kirche (p. 235). Works of greater magnitude, however, were unfortunately never attempted, as in 1523 the citizens embraced the Reformation, and having fallen under the Austrian supremacy in 1527, they were compelled to defend their privileges and to abandon the cultivation of art. To the Jesuit style, however, the town is indebted for its imposing University.

In 1741 Frederick the Great marched into Silesia and took Breslau by surprise. In 1767 the town was again occupied by the Austrians, but was re-captured by Frederick after the battle of Leuthen (p. 232). In 1760 Tauenzien (p. 237) repelled an attack by Laudon. In 1806-7 the town was besieged by Vandamme, who took it and levelled the fortifications. In March, 1813, Breslau was the scene of an enthusiastic rising against the French, on which occasion Frederick William III. issued his famous appeal 'An mein Volk'. Since then the city has rapidly increased.

Breslau is now one of the most important commercial and industrial places in Germany. The principal manufactures are steam-engines, railway-carriages, liqueurs, and spirits. The staple commodities, chiefly the produce of Silesia and Poland, are wool, grain, metal, cloth, and timber. The great wool-markets take place in June and October.

*Promenades on the site of the fortifications, skirting the broad moat, which is enlivened with swans, now enclose the greater part of the inner city. The finest parts of these are the Zwingergarten (Pl. D, 6), at the end of the Schweidnitzer-Str., with a handsome club-house, and, farther to the E., the modern belvedere called the *Liebichshöhe (Pl. E, 6), on the old Taschenbastei, which is crowned with a Victory by Rauch, and commands an admirable survey of the town and its environs. At the foot of it is a monument to Schleiermacher (p. 48), who was born at Breslau in 1768. The Ziegibastion (Pl. F, 4), at the N.E. corner of the Promenades, affords a view of the Oder and the N. suburbs with their handsome churches; it contains a bust of Karl von Holtei (d. 1880), the poet. Adjacent is the Augusta-Platz, in which a monument has been erected to the soldiers who fell in 1870-71. On the opposite bank are the Gardens of the Episcopal Palace (Pl. F, 3, 4).

Near the centre of the town is the Grosse Ring (Pl. C, D, 4, 5), originally the market-place. On the N. side of it, called the Naschmarkt, is the Schwedenhalle (No. 47), with stucco-reliefs of 1633, representing scenes from the wars of Gustavus Adolphus. The W. side, which is named the Siebenkurfürstenseite ('Side of the Seven Electors'), contains the house (No. 8) once occupied by the Bohemian kings, built about 1500; the frescoes, representing the Emperor and the seven Electors, were restored in 1866. The S. side is named the Goldene Becherseite. On the fourth side, or Grüne Röhrseite, is the Old Rathhaus (No. 30), where the Kings of Poland and Saxony used to be lodged, with ornamented doorways.

Opposite the S. side rises the *Rathhaus (visitors apply at the custodian's room in the passage below), a noble monument of the prosperous age of Charles IV. and the other Luxemburg monarchs. The florid enrichments of the oriel windows and gables, and the rich decorations of the interior belong, however, to the late-Gothic period (end of 15th and beginning of 16th cent.). The finest apartment is the *Fürstenscal (once the chapel), with handsome vaulting, where from the 15th cent. downwards meetings of the Silesian princes and estates were generally held. The last of these was in 1741, when homage was done to Frederick the Great as conqueror of Silesia. The council-hall has been appropriately restored and adorned with portraits of princes. — Below the Rathhaus is the Schweidnitzer Bierkeller (see p. 232; entered from the S. side), with remarkably fine vaulting.

The Staupsaule (or pillory), erected in 1492, on the E. side of the Rathhaus, is a monument of the severe laws of ancient times, while the extensive range of buildings around the Rathhaus is a memorial of the Slavonic custom of erecting booths and stalls adjacent to public buildings.

In the W. part of the Grosse Ring rise the equestrian *Statue of Frederick the Great (Pl. D, 4), in bronze, erected in 1842, and the equestrian Statue of Frederick William III. (Pl. D, 5), erected in 1861, both by Kiss, a pupil of Bauch, and a Silesian by birth.

The Stadthaus (adm. daily 10-2), adjoining the Rathhaus, designed by Stüler, was completed in 1863, and occupies the site of the Linendrapers' Hall. On the ground-floor are the municipal offices. The handsome apartments of the first floor contain the Town Library, comprising 200,000 vols. and over 2500 MSS. (open 10-2), the Civic Archives, and a Cabinet of Coins. The Council Chamber is in the upper story.

The Ring forms the centre of traffic, the main arteries of which are the handsome Schweidnitzer-Strasse and the Ohlauer-Strasse.

The neighbouring Blücher-Platz is embellished with a *Statue of Blücher (Pl. C, 5), designed by Rauch. On the S. side of the Platz is the handsome Alte Börse, the property of a private club.

The Protestant *Church of St. Elizabeth (Pl. C, D, 4), to the N.W. of the Ring, erected in 1253-57, and restored in 1857-59, with a tower 335 ft. in height (1452-58), contains some interesting old tombstones (the finest those of the 'Rentmeister' Rybisch in the N. aisle, and the physician Crato von Craftheim in the S. aisle), a handsome late-Gothic tabernacle of 1455, late-Gothic carved altars and stalls, and modern stained glass, presented to the church by Frederick William IV. The sacristan is to be found at the new parsonage, to the N. of the church.

The Protestant Mary Magdalene Church (Pl. D, 5), to the E. of the Ring, with two towers connected by an arch, dates from the same early period. In the S. tower is a bell cast in 1368.

The INTERIOR is rich in works of art. The Gold-beaters' Chapel contains five altar-screens of the 15th cent., the Sacristy a small brasen lustre and an aquamanile of the 14th century. To the left of the high-altar is a portrait of John Hess, a Lutheran divine called hither from Nuremberg in 1523. The stained glass was the gift of Fred. William IV. - The late-Romanesque S. portal, now sadly dilapidated, dates from the end of the 12th cent. and is one of the most interesting monuments of art in the town.

Opposite the S.E. side of the church rises the Dompnig Column. with sculptures of 1491, erected to the burgomaster Heinz Dompnig, who was executed in 1490. — The adjacent Church of St. Christopher (Pl. E. 5) contains a pulpit dating from the end of the 16th cent., carved wood of the 16th cent., etc.

At the end of the Schweidnitzer-Strasse (Pl. D. C. 5, 6) are the Theatre (Pl. C. D. 6), re-erected after a fire in 1865, and again after another in 1871, and the Government Buildings (Pl. C, D, 6). The adjoining Exercier-Plats (Pl. C, 5, 6; parade at noon) is bounded on the N. by the Royal Palace (Pl. C, 5), the S. wing of which was built by Stüler in 1846, and on the W. by the Ständehaus (Pl. C, 5), or Hall of the Estates. To the N. of the latter is the Imperial Bank.

Beyond the Ständehaus, at the corner of the Graupen-Str. and the Promenade, rises the Neue Börse (Pl. C, 5), or New Exchange, an imposing modern Gothic edifice (1864-67). The façade opposite the Ständehaus is adorned with stone statues representing a merchant, a farmer, a sailor, and a shepherd. The spacious Hall is handsomely decorated (open daily, 10-1).

Beyond the Stadtgraben rises the large Synagogue (Pl. C, 6), a brick building in the Oriental style by Oppler. To the S. of it extends the Eichborn'sche Garten.

A little to the W. is the Museums-Str., leading to the Museums-Platz, which is surrounded with tasteful modern edifices. In the centre stands the Silesian Museum of Art (Pl. C, 6), a brick building with an Ionic portico and a lofty dome, begun in 1875 from a design by Rathey, and finished in 1879. Below the cornice is a frieze with medallions of Michael Angelo, Dürer, Raphael, and Holbein. The pediments are embellished with allegorical statues of Sculpture, Ceramic Art (to the S.), Painting, and Architecture (N.), the first two by Härtel, the others by Michaelis. Adm. daily, except Mon., 10-2, Sun. 11-1.

First Floor. To the left of the vestibule is the COLLECTION OF CASTS, to the right that of ENGRAVINGS, consisting of 30,000 plates. The ART INDUSTRIAL COLLECTION and the LIBRARY are also on this floor.

The handsome staircase, above which rises the dome, decorated by Schaller with scenes from the legend of Prometheus, ascends hence to the — Second Floor, which is devoted to the PICTURE GALLERY. The works Second Floor, which is devoted to the PICTURE GALLERY. The works of the old masters, most of them duplicates from the Berlin Museum, include paintings ascribed (but without critical authority) to Filippo Lippi, Titian, Paolo Veronese, Guido Reni, Rubens, Van Dyck, Tensiers, Snyders, Rembrandt, Poussis, and others. Among the modern pictures may be mentioned the following: A. v. Werner, Sketch for the mosaic-paintings on the Column of Victory at Berlin (p. 62); Ad. Mensel, The Silesian Estates vowing fealty on the sword of Frederick the Great; Camphausen, Silesian army crossing the Rhine at Caub in 1814; Scholts, Formation of the Lützov volunteers in 1818; Harrach, Luther's capture on his way home from Worms; Dressler, Silesian mountains; Kalkreuth, Sunset-glow in the Alps; Böcklin, Sanctuary of Hercules; O. Achenbach, Palace of Queen Johanna of Naples; Oesterley, Baftsund, in Norway; E. Begas, Betrayal of Christ; O. Begas, Frederick the Great in the palace-chapel of Charlottenburg. — LICHTENBERG'S EXHIBITION, see p. 233.

The E. wing of the Ground Floor, entered from the Museums-Str., contains a *Collection of Silksian Antiquities (Wed., Sat., & Sun. 11-1, in summer also Wed. 3-5, adm. 50 pf.; at other times, 1 m.). The entrance-hall contains old weapons and armour. In the rooms to the right are ecclesiastical antiquities and objects found in pagan graves. Among the former are a Pietà in terracotta and a travelling altar of the 15th cent., two altars to the Virgin of the 16th cent., and three Madonnas in alabaster of the 15th century. To the left of the entrance is the Collection of Civic Antiquities, arranged in three rooms (15th, 16th, and 17th cent.). The court contains architectural fragments and sculptures of the 18th-18th centuries; in the centre a large Romanesque gate.

The Freiburger-Strasse leads hence to the handsome stations of the Freiburg, the Niederschlesisch-Märkisch, and the Right Bank of the Oder Railways (Pl. B, A, 5).

The continuation of the Schweidnitzer-Str. to the S., beyond the most, leads to the Tauenzien-Platz (Pl. C, D, 6), which contains the Tauensien Monument, designed by Langhans, the medallion by Schadow, and erected to the general of that name (d. 1791), the gallant defender of Breslau in 1760 (p. 234). A short distance hence is the Central Railway Station (Pl. D. E. 7). Opposite the station is the Provincial Record Office.

The streets running to the N. of the Ring lead to the University (Pl. D. 3, 4), which contains valuable zoological and mineralogical collections. It was transferred from Frankfort on the Oder to Breslau in 1811, and united with a Jesuit school, the buildings of which it now occupies (1500 students). The large Aula, with room for 1200 people, and the small Aula, used for concerts and other entertainments, are lavishly adorned with stucco and gilding in the taste of last century. — The University Library, comprising 350,000 vols., 2900 vols. of MSS., specimens of the earliest typography, etc., is established in an old Augustine Abbey (Pl. E, 3) on the Sandinsel (adm. on week-days, 9-3). The same building contains the Archaeological Museum (adm. 11-1; in summer on Sun., Mon., Wed., and Frid., in winter on Sun., Mon., and Thurs.).

The adjoining Sandkirche (Pl. E, 3), or Church of our Lady on the Sand, erected in the middle of the 14th cent., is a well proportioned structure with polygonal apse and fine star-vaulting. Above the door of the sacristy is a relief of the 12th cent. (one of the oldest in the town), representing the foundation of the original church by Mary, wife of Duke Peter Wlast, and her son Swentoslaus. (Sacristan, Sand-Str. 6.)

The Kreuzkirche (Pl. F, 3; sacristan, Dom-Str. 21), on the right bank of the Oder, a handsome brick edifice consecrated in 1295, contains a large crypt, and the *Tomb of Duke Henry IV. of Breslau (d. 1290), in painted sandstone, in front of the high-altar.

The *Cathedral of St. John (Pl. F, 3; sacristan, Dom-Str. 9), begun in 1170 and completed in the 14th cent., is flanked with two series of chapels. The interior was tastefully restored in 1875.

INTERIOR. At the end of the S. aisle is the sumptuously-decorated chapel of Cardinal Frederick, Landgrave of Hessen, with the tomb of the chapel of Cardinal Frederick, Landgrave of Hessen, with the tomb of the founder and a statue of St. Elizabeth, executed by Floretti of Rome in the middle of the 17th century. The adjacent Chapel of the Virgin contains the Monument of Bishop John IV. (d. 1506), cast by P. Vischer of Nuremberg, the bishop in high relief, surrounded by the six patron saints of the country. Marble sarcophagus of Bishop Progetta (d. 1376). Monument of Duke Christian of Holstein, an imperial general who fell in a battle with the Turks at Salankemen in 1681 (reliefs of battles, Turks as caryatides). the Turks at Balankemen in 1691 (reliefs of battles, Turks as caryatiles), — The adjoining chapel of Count Palatine Frans Ludwig, Elector of Mayence, and Prince Bishop of Breelau, contains two good statues of Moses and Asron, 1727. Numerous other monuments of bishops and canons, and several paintings by the prolific Willmann (1629-1706). — The Chapel of St. John, in the N. aisle, the second from the choir, contains Cranach's celebrated 'Madonna among the pines'. — In the Chapel of St. Carlo Borromeo is a Madonna painted on parchment, with a gold ground. Opposite, on the wall of the choir, Christ with the disciples at Emmaus, ascribed to Titian.

The Botanical Garden (Pl. F. G. 3; open daily, except Sun., till 7 p.m.), to the N. of the cathedral, contains a valuable collection of medicinal plants, and a large relief-model, illustrating the formation of coal. The Zoological Garden (adm. 50 pf.; restaurant), tastefully laid out, lies beyond the barrier, 3/4 M. distant (steamer and tramway, see p. 233).

The Mohnhaupt-Strasse leads from the Botanical Garden to the N., past the Deaf and Dumb Asylum (Pl. F. 3), to the *Church of St. Michael (Pl. G, 2), an elegant Gothic brick edifice, consecrated in 1871, with lofty towers of different shapes.

The large bridge to the N. of the university leads to the new ODER SUBURB, where the Matthias-Platz (Pl. D, 2) promises to become one of the finest squares in the town.

Environs. Scheinig, on the right bank of the Oder, 11/2 M. above the Zoological Garden, with a park (restaurant) and numerous country-houses (tramway, see p. 283; cab 1-11/2 m.); Morgenau (restaurant), also on the Oder; Zedlitz, on the Ohlau; Popelwitz, to the W. of the Nicolaithor, with pleasant garden (beautiful oaks); Kleinburg, to the S. (tramway, p. 233), with the Friedeberg, etc.

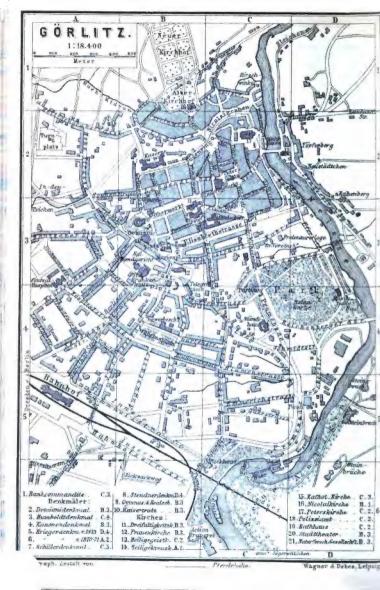

37. From Berlin to Görlitz (Zittau) and Reichenberg.

RAILWAY to (129 M.) Görlitz in 5-53/4 hrs. (16 m. 70, 12 m. 50, 8 m. 30 pf.). Thence to (37 M.) Reichenberg in 21/2-3 hrs., including detention at the frontier.

Berlin, see p. 1. Scenery at first uninteresting. To the left. near (9 M.) Grünau, is Schloss Köpenick (p. 228); the neighbouring Müggelsberge and Müggelseen are often visited from Berlin. 17 M. Königs-Wusterhausen, with a royal shooting-lodge, containing relics of Fred. William I. and other Prussian rulers. 31 M. Halbe. Beyond (37 M.) Brand begins the Spreewald, which the line skirts for 25 M.

48 M. Lübben (*Stern; *Stadt Berlin), at the confluence of the Berste and Spree, is the best starting-point for a visit to the Spreewald, 53 M. Lübbenau (Braunes Ross), with a château of Prince Lynar (branch-line to Kamenz and Dresden, viâ Kalau, p. 329, Senf-tenberg, and Hohenbocka, see p. 269); 60 M. Vetschau.

The Spreewald is a wooded and marshy district, about 28 M. in length and 1-5 M. in width, intersected by a network of upwards of two hundred branches of the Spree. Part of it has been drained, but the wilder parts are only accessible by boat in summer. The inhabitants are a Wendish race, who still retain their Slavonic dialect, costumes, and manners. Their villages consist of small groups of log-houses surrounded with water, an arm of the Spree generally serving as the street. The Lower Spreewald lies to the N.W. of Lubben, the Upper to the S.E. of Lobbensa. A visit to the latter may be carried out as follows: Drive or walk from Lübben to (6 M.) Alt-Zauche; row to the Kannow-Mühle and the (3 hrs.) Buschmühle (near Straupitz, 2 M. distant, is the Weinberg, a good point of view); walk to the *Inn zum Spreewald, near the village of (3 M.) Burg, and thence to (41/2 M.) Vetschau. Or we may return to Alt-Zauche and Lübben viä the Forsthaus Eiche; or proceed from the Eiche to Leipe and (6 M.) Lübbenau (see above).

72 M. Cottbus (*Ansorge's Hotel; Lossow's; Goldener Ring; Bär; Rail. Restaurant), a busy town on the Spree, with 25,584 inhab., the junction for Dresden (by Grossenhain; p. 269), Guben (see p. 327), and Sorau (p. 231), contains considerable cloth-factories. Monument in memory of the war of 1870-71 on the Wallgraben. The château of Branitz, a seat of Count Pückler, with a fine park and garden, is $2^{1/2}$ M. distant.

86 M. Spremberg (Drei Kronen; Sonne), pleasantly situated, partly on an island in the Spree; 97 M. Weisswasser.

Branch-line from Weisswasser in ½ hr. (fares 60, 40, 30 pf.) to Muskau (Grüner Baum; Stadt Berlin) on the Neisse, where Prince Frederick of the Netherlands possesses a beautiful Park, laid out by Prince Pückler (d. 1873), the former proprietor. Modern Schloss in the Renaissance style. The pine-cone and mineral baths of Hermannsbad are also situated here. The shooting-lodge of Hermannsruh is situated amidst magnificent woods, 6 M. from Muskau.

116 M. Uhsmannsdorf; 118 M. Horka (for Kohlfurt, p. 231, and Hohenbocka, p. 269).

129 M. Görlitz. - Hotels. Gabs. From the station into the town, for 1 pers. 50 pf., each additional pers. 25 pf. more. Drive in the town 40 pf. — Cab with two horses, for 1-2 pers., 25 pf. extra in each case.

Tramways. 1. From the Nicolaigraben (Pl. C, 1) to the Railway Station (Pl. A, 5) and the Schützenhaus. 2. From the Kaisertrutz (Pl. B, 3) are the Plackbare (Pl. C, 5) and the Station to the Blockhaus (Pl. C, 5, 6) and the Station.

Görlitz is a busy and rapidly-increasing town with 50,307 inhab. and many cloth-factories, situated on the Neisse, and on a very ancient commercial route to Poland. In 1346 it was at the head of the alliance between the six towns of Upper Lusatia (Görlitz, Bautzen, Löbau, Kamenz, Lauban, and Zittau), but was afterwards annexed to Bohemia, and was frequently involved in the religious wars of Bohemia and Germany in the 15th-17th centuries. In 1635 it became Saxon, and in 1815 Prussian. Fine Gothic churches, handsome gateways, the Rathhaus in the Altstadt, and a number of dwelling-houses in the Renaissance style, dating from the 16th cent. (e. g. in the Neisse- and Brüder-Str. and the Untermarkt), all testify to the ancient importance of the town, while the well-built modern quarters show that it is still a prosperous place.

Leaving the station we proceed straight to the Post-Platz (Pl. B, 3, 4), where the District Courts rise on the left and the Post Office on the right. A handsome fountain is to be erected in the middle. A little farther on, to the right, is the Frauenkirche (Pl. 12; B, 3), erected in 1449-73, and recently restored (fine portal). Platz (Pl. B, 3), with the Theatre (Pl. 20) and the *Kaisertrutz (Pl. 10), a massive bastion of 1490, now used as a guard-house and arsenal. Opposite is the Industrial Museum. Adjacent, in the pleasure-grounds, is a War Monument, consisting of a copy in terracotta of a frieze executed by Siemering for the triumphal entry of the troops into Berlin in 1871, and a pedestal bearing the first cannon captured from the French in 1870, which was taken at Weissenburg by soldiers of Görlitz.

To the E. of the Demiani-Platz is the small Marien-Platz, adorned with a Statue of the Burgomaster Demiani (d. 1846), to whom the town was mainly indebted for its rapid development. The neighbouring Frauenthurm, with the arms of the town, dates from the end of the 15th century. The wide Elisabeth-Strasse leads hence to the E. — In the Obbermark (Pl. B, 3) is situated the Trinity, or Abbey Church (Pl. 11), of 1245; the W. part was consecrated in 1385, and restored in 1868; it contains a handsome carved altar of 1383. Beyond the church is the modern Gothic Gymnasium (Pl. 9), occupying the site of the old abbey and containing the valuable Milich Library.

A short distance hence, in the Untermarkt, which is partly enclosed by arcades, rises the *Rathhaus(Pl. 19; C, 2) of the beginning of the 14th cent. (recently restored), at the corner of the Brüder-Str. The tower, with the armorial bearings of Matthew Corvinus, King of Hungary, under whose protection the town had placed itself, was erected in 1509-13. The flight of steps in the angle of the tower, with a statue of Justice on a richly-sculptured column, the portal, and the adjacent balcony of the year 1537 are fine specimens of the German Renaissance style, and were probably constructed under the influence of the famous Prague architects of that period. The Rathskeller (restaurant) is much frequented. — In the Neiss-Str., which leads N.E. from this point, are the premises of the Upper Lusatian Scientific Society, with an important library. To the N. is the —

*Church of St. Peter and St. Paul (Pl. 17; C, 2), erected in 1423-97, partly rebuilt after a fire in 1691-96, with earlier W. portal and crypt, one of the finest Gothic edifices in E. Germany. Interior, with double aisles, borne by 24 slender palm-like pillars. The towers are now being finished. The wooden bridge over the Neisse to the E. of the church commands a good survey of the choir.

The *Museum of Natural History (Pl. 21; B, 3) contains extensive ornithological, conchological, and mineralogical collections (adm. free on Thurs., 2-4; at other times en application).

To the S. lies the WILHELMS-PLATZ (Pl. B, 4), with pleasure-grounds and a fountain. On its N. side is the Industrial School.

At the Kreuzcapelle (Pl. 14; A, 2), to the N.W. of the town, is an imitation of the 'Holy Sepulchre', constructed in 1476 by Burgomaster Emmerich, after repeated pilgrimages to the Holy Land. The Cemetery, to the N.E., contains the grave of the mystic Jacob Böhme (1575-1624), a native of the district.

To the S.W. of this point is the modern Roman Catholic Church (Pl. 15; C, 3), in the Romanesque style, to the S. of which is the Ständehaus (Pl. C, 4), in the Renaissance style.

The well-kept *Town Park (Pl. C, D, 3, 4) occupies both banks of the Neisse, extending from below the railway-viaduct (see below) to the pretty Jägerwäldchen (Pl. C, 6; Restaurant) on the right bank, and to the Brewery (Pl. B, C, 6) and the outskirts of the town on the left bank. It contains monuments to Schiller, Humboldt, and others, several fountains, and the concert-hall of the Silesian Musical Society.

EXCURSIONS. The *Landskrone (1421 ft.), a basaltic hill 5 M. to the S.W., with a castellated inn and belvedere on the top occupying the site of an smoient robbers' stronghold, commands a fine view. — About 1 M. farther on are the Jauerniker Bergs. — To the Cistercian nunnery of St. Martenthal in the pretty valley of the Neisse, near Ostrits (see below), halfway to Zittau (p. 264), 2½ hrs. — At Moys, 2½ M. to the S.W. of Görlitz, General v. Winterfeldt, the favourite of Frederick the Great, fell in 1757 in a battle against the Austrians.

Görlitz is the junction for Kohlfurt (p. 231) and Dresden (p. 270), for the 'Silesian Mountain Railway', and for the lines to Zittau and Reichenberg. The last three lines cross the Neissethal by an imposing *Viaduct of 34 arches, 1/4 M. in length and 70 ft. in height. Just beyond the viaduct the Silesian Railway diverges to the left, leading by Niklausdorf and Lichtenau to Lauban (see p. 242). The Zittau and Reichenberg lines diverge from each other at Nikrisch, the former leading to (20 M.) Zittau (p. 254), viâ Ostritz (to Marienthal, see above), Rosenthal, and Hirschfelde.

The REIGHENBERG LINE reaches the Prussian frontier at (140 M.) Seidenberg, where a custom-house examination takes place. The first Austrian stations are (142 M.) Techernhausen and (1441/2 M.)

Weigsdorf.

150 M. Friedland (Adler, in the Markt; Hersog v. Friedland, by the Schloss), a Bohemian town, commanded by the imposing old Schloss, 200 ft. above it, begun in the 11th and 12th cent., and completed in 1551. The tower was erected as early as 1014; the basaltic rock on which it stands is exposed to view in the courtvard. After various vicissitudes, the castle was purchased in 1622 by Wallenstein, whose portrait here is said to be a faithful likeness. The family-portraits with which the walls are hung belong to the present proprietor, the Count of Clam-Gallas. Weapons used in the Thirty Years' War are also shown. Fine view (custodian 1 m.).

The line now traverses the spurs of the Iser Mts.

153 M. Raspenau, a village with several manufactories, is the station for Liebwerda (Helm; Adler; Curhaus), a small wateringplace to the E., charmingly situated in the narrow valley of the Wittig, at the foot of the Tafelfichte, with a château of Count Clam-Gallas. (Flinsberg, 10 M. from Liebwerda, see below.)

164 M. Habendorf. 166 M. Reichenberg, see p. 255. For the line from Zittau to Trautenau viâ Reichenberg and Turnau, see R. 40: from Turnau to Prague, see Baedeker's Southern Germanu.

38. From Kohlfurt to Glatz.

107 M. Bailway in $5^{1}/_{2}$ - $6^{1}/_{4}$ hrs. (fares 13 m. 80, 10 m. 40, 6 m. 90 pf.). This is the most direct route from Berlin to the Giant Mts.

Kohlfurt, see p. 231. — Beyond (6 M.) Heide-Gersdorf the train reaches the Oueis.

14 M. Lauban (Bär; Hirsch; Deutsches Haus), junction for the line to Görlitz (p. 241). Lauban, formerly one of the six allied towns of Lusatia (p. 239), has a modern Roman Catholic Church and a Rathhaus of 1560. Pop. 10,775. — 181/2 M. Langenöle.

221/2 M. Greiffenberg (Spohn's Hotel; Dietzel's), prettily situated 1/4 M. to the right of the railway: 1 M. to the S. rises the ruin of Greiffenstein (1400 ft.), on a wooded hill, a fine point of view.

Diligences run from Greiffenberg (once daily) and Babishau (see below; twice daily) to the S., passing the ruins of Greiffenstein and the small town of Friedeberg, on the Queis, to — 11 M. Flinsberg (1116 ft.; Neues Brunnenhaus; Grosser Gasthof; Deut-11 M. Finsberg (1116 ft.; Neues Brunnenhaus; Grosser Gasthof; Deutscher Kaiser; also lodgings), a long village in the Queisthal, with mineral baths and a bath-house built in 1839. The oldest spring, discovered in 1872, is called the 'Heilige Brunnen'. The Geierstein (2648 ft.), 1 hr. to the E., is a fine point of view. To the S. rises the Iserkamm, of which the highest points are the Heufuder (3543 ft.) and the Tafelfichte (3629 ft.), reached in 2½ and 3 hrs. respectively from Flinsberg. At the foot of the latter lies Bad Schwarzbach, 1 hr. from Flinsberg. The Hochstein (p. 248) may be reached hence in 4 hrs. by ascending the wooded Queisthal, with a guide. — A footpath leads from Flinsberg to the W. in 3½ hrs. to the small baths of Liebwerda (see above).

A view of the Giant Mts. to the right is gradually disclosed. 30 M. Rabishau (see above). From (39 M.) Reibnits an omnibus and diligence run several times daily in summer to Warmbrunn, 4 M. (see p. 246); 3 M. off are the baths of Berthelsdorf, pleasantly situated in the Kremnitz-Thal. The Bober is crossed twice, and a succession of views is enjoyed.

46 M. Hirschberg, see p. 245. Omnibuses several times daily to Warmbrunn (p. 246); railway to Schmiedeberg (p. 246).

The most picturesque part of the journey is between Hirschberg and Merzdorf, beyond which the views are concealed from the railway traveller (seats should be taken to the right). 49 M. Schildau, with a château of Prince Albert of Prussia; 51 M. Jannowitz (Kindler's Inn), a summer-resort (direct route to the Bolzenschloss, 11/2 hr., see p. 245). 58 M. Merzdorf.

From Merzdorf a diligence plies daily in 19/4 hr. to (8 M.) the interesting mountain-town of Bolgenhain, with its arcaded streets. Adjacent is the ruined Bolkoburg, built about 1292 and destroyed in the Thirty Years War. About 2 M. farther on is the ruin of *Schweinhaus, an interesting building of the early Renaissance.

Beyond Merzdorf the Bober is crossed several times. — 63 M. Ruhbank, the junction for the line to Liebau and Königgrätz (R. 41). Our line ascends the valley of the Lässig.

66 M. Wittgendorf; 71 M. Gottesberg (2130 ft.), the highest point of the railway. 72 M. Fellhammer; passengers for Salzbrunn or Schlesisch-Friedland (p. 260) change carriages here. — Tunnel.

75 M. Dittersbach (Burg), junction for the line to Waldenburg, Altwasser, and Sorgau (p. 257). Fine view from the station. Görbersdorf (p. 260), via Langwaltersdorf, a drive of 11/2 hr.

The train then passes the ruin of Neuhaus, penetrates the Ochsenkopf by a tunnel 1 M, long, and traverses the N, slope of the Schwarze Berg.

79 M. Charlottenbrunn (Curhaus; Deutsches Haus; Friedenshoffnung; visitors' tax 15 m., each additional pers. 5 m.), a watering-place situated in a depression of the Weistritzthal, with two weak alkaline springs. The Karlshain is a well-kept promenade. Excursion to Kynau and the Schlesierthal, see p. 264.

The train now passes through the Reimsbacher Tunnel, and reaches (811/2 M.) Wüste-Giersdorf (Sonne), a long village in the valley of the Weistritz.

A pleasant walk may be taken from Nieder-Wüste-Giersdorf to Ober-Tannhausen and Donnerau, and through the depression between the Langen-berg and the Hornberg to the (1½ hr.) *Hornschloss, a robbers' keep, de-stroyed in 1497, whence an extensive view is enjoyed.

82 M. Ober-Wüste-Giersdorf; 841/2 M. Königswalde. The train threads a tunnel, skirts the E. slope of the Spitzberg, and crosses the Hausdorfer and the Galgengrund Viaduct. 89 M. Ludwigsdorf.

93 M. Neurode (Deutsches Haus; Wildenhof), a small town with 6900 inhab., in the valley of the Walditz. Coal-mines in the vicinity. The St. Anna Capelle (2000 ft.; Restaurant), on a hill to the S. of the town, commands a beautiful view. At Scharfeneck, 4 M. farther on, the Walditz falls into the Steine.

The train follows the valley of the Walditz. 98 M. Mittelsteine, on the bank of the Steine. 102 M. Möhlten. The train now traverses the Steinethal, crosses the Glatzer Neisse, and reaches (107 M.) Glatz, see p. 261.

39. The Giant Mountains.

(Riesengebirge.)

Plan. The most interesting points among the Giant Mts. may be visited in five or six days. Hirschberg (see below) is the most convenient starting-point. 1st Day. Hirschberg and environs; Cavalierberg 3/4 hr., gorge of the Sattler 4 hrs.; train in the afternoon to Erdmannsdorf in 3/4, walk by the Heinrichsburg and Weihrichsberg to Warmbrunn, 3, in all 3/2, brs. — 2nd Day. Hermsdorf 3/4 hr., Kynast and back 11/2, Kochelfall 21/2, Josephinenhütte 2, in all 7 hrs. — 3rd Day. Mountain walk: Zackenfall 3/4 hr., Neue Schlesische Baude 1, Elbfall 2, Schneegrubenbaude 3/4, Petersbaude 1, Mittagsstein 11/2, Riesenbaude 11/2, Koppe 3/4, in all about 91/2 hrs. — 4th Day. Descend to the Hampelbaude 11/2, Kirche Wang 11/2, Kräbersteine 1, Arnsdorf 1/3, Schmiedeberg 1 hr. — 5th Day. Friesensteine 11/3, Fischbach 1, Falkenstein 1, Jannowitz 1 hr. — The Bohemian side may be included by the following arrangement: 1st Day. From the Josephinenhütte by the Elbfall and Spindelmühl to Hohenelbe. 2nd Day. On foot or by railway to Johannesbad. 3rd Day. From the Johannesbad through the Aupagrund or the Riesengrund to the Koppe. 4th and 5th Days, as above. — A visit to the Adersbach and Weckelsdorf rocks may be combined with the above tours as follows: from Schmiedeberg by the old road, with a digression to the Friesensteine, to Landeshut, 31/2 hrs., and thence to Adersbach 5 hrs.; next day to Weckelsdorf 3/4 hr. (railway-station, see p. 261), visit to the Felsenstadt 21/2 hours.

INUS generally good, except at the smaller villages. Those among the mountains, called 'Bauden', are constructed of wood. Charges at the best inns: R. 2-3 m. and more, B. 75 pf., A. 50 pf., D. 2-21/2 m. — At the inferior: R. 1-11/2 m., A. 40-50 pf., B. 50-75 pf.; in the height of summer, when crowded, charges are raised. Wine on the Austrian side generally good, on the Prussian inferior and dearer. — The Riesengebirgsverein, established in 1880, has provided the paths on the Prussian side with fingerposts and drawn up moderate tariffs for guides and vehicles at the principal resorts.

The Giant Mountains form part of the great mountain-chain called the Sudsten which extends from the sources of the Oder and the Carpathians towards the N.W. for a distance of 140 M. The Riesenkamm, or Giant Range, strictly so called, which rises somewhat abrupily on the Silesian, and gradually on the Bohemian side, stretching from the sources of the Bober on the E. to those of the Queis and Zacken on the W., is 23 M. in length, and attains an average height of 2000 ft. The principal heights are the Schneckoppe (1206 ft.), the Brussbery (5072 ft.), the Hoke Rad (14967 ft.), the Siberkamm (1898 ft.), the Grosse and Kleine Sturmhaube (14862 and 14646 ft.), the Krhonoch (14706 ft.), the Kesselkoppe (14706 ft.), and the Reifträger (1430 ft.). The geological formation of the Giant Mts. consists mainly of granite, but in the S. part of the range gneiss and slate enter largely into its composition. The lower slopes are clothed with silver firs, pines, larches, and beeches, but at a height of about 3500 ft. the forest zone of the Giant Mts. terminates, and the region of the dwarf pine (pinus pumilio) begins. This in its turn soon gives place to gentians, hawkweed (hieraclium), Icelandic moss, 'devil's beard' (anemone alpina), violetmoss (hyssus jolithus), and other Alpine plants. Alpine rosses and Edelweiss have been planted on the Schneekoppe, and promise to flourish in their new habitat. None of the other mountainous regions in Germany are so Alpine in character as the Riesengebirge. — Several places in the Riesengebirge are much frequented as summer-resorts, such as Micheach, Hermsdorf, St. Peter, Sulzbrunn, Wärnbrunn, Schmiedeberq, etc.

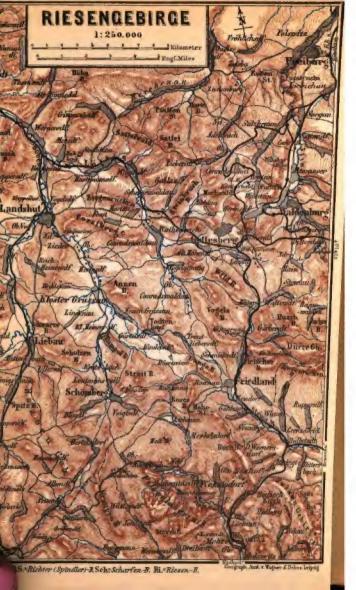

a. Hirschberg, Schmiedeberg, and Warmbrunn.

Distances. From Hirschberg to Schmiedeberg 9 M., Hirschberg to Warmbrunn 4 M., Warmbrunn to Hermsdorf 21/4 M., ascent of the Kynast 1 hr., Hermsdorf to the Josephinenhütte 12 M., Hermsdorf to Schmiedeberg 9 M., Warmbrunn to Schmiedeberg 9 M.

wrigge with one horse per half-day 5 m., whole day 10 m.; with two per half-day 8, whole day 15 m. irschberg (1122 ft.; *Preussischer Hof, Thamm's Hotel, both Anlagen; Drei Berge, in the Haupt-Str., R., L., & A. 21/4 m.; Bees Ross and Deutsches Haus, in the market-place; Heerde's, he Anlagen; *Deutscher Hof, at the station; Bellevue, between t station and town; Mohaupt's Concert Garden), a station on the Alesische Gebirgs-Bahn' (p. 241), picturesquely situated at the fluence of the Bober and Zacken, is an old town with 14,388 hab., still partly surrounded by walls, and the principal commerplace in the Silesian Mts. Near the station is the Prot. Church, pered with a large dome, one of the six churches for which harles XII. of Sweden stipulated from Emp. Joseph I. at the Alt-Instadt Convention in 1707. The Rom. Cath. Church dates from 14th century. The Ring, or market, is enclosed by arcades. to the S. of the town are pretty Anlagen, or promenades, extendng to the *Cavalierberg (Restaurant).

To the N.W. of the town, at the confluence of the Bober and the lacken, rises the "Hausberg (Restaurant), a fine point of view. At the bot of it is the Railway Viaduct over the Bober. To the N. of the Hausberg rises the "Heitkon (view), crowned with a small Doric temple.— The Rreusberg, 11/2 M. to the S.E., with the country-seat and "Park of Hr. R. Kramsta of Freiburg, affords an extensive view.

A walk up the wild Boberthal, or Sattler Ravine, on the left bank, will repay the traveller. In the first part of the valley are a number of new factories. After 1½ M. a path ascends to the left to the Helikon. The 'Mirakelbrunnen' is next passed. The finest point, about 3 M. from Hirschberg, is styled Der Welt Ende, where the path is compelled to quit the stream and ascend to the left. On the opposite bank are the Ravishloss and the Thurmstein, a huge mass of rock. We may now return by the Mirakelbrunnen and the Helikon (see above).

FROM HIRSCHBERG TO SCHMIEDEBERG, 9 M., railway in 1 hr. (fares 1 m. 20, 90, 60 pf.). The first station is (4 M.) Lomnitz, on the road to Schildau (p. 243). Immediately to the S. lies Erdmannsdorf (1263 ft.; *Zum Schweizerhaus; Schmidt), a village with a royal château and park, formerly belonging to General Gneisenau. In the park is the Russian Pavilion from the Vienna Exhibition, brought hither in 1875. Church designed by Schinkel.

The direct route from Erdmannsdorf to Schmiedeberg leads to the S.E. via Buchwald (see below). A detour may, however, be made by the long village of (3 M.) Fischbach ("Zur Forelle, B. 1 m., with the post-office; Hübner), with a fine old château, founded in the 14th cent., completed in the 16th, and subsequently restored and embellished by Prince William of Prussia. The interior contains some objects of art, and several family pictures (fee 1 m.). Hence to Schmiedeberg 1½ hr.

To the N. of Fischbach rise the Falkenberge, the highest of which is the Falkenstein (2166 ft.), an excellent point of view, reached in ³/₄ hr.
from Fischbach. To the S.E. of Fischbach rises the (1½ hr.) Karlanmenfels, a huge group of rocks on the summit of the Fischbacher Gebirge, commanding a fine panorama. On the S. side of the rocks is a gigantic lion in iron, after Rauch.

From Fischbach a road leads via Niederrohrbach and New-Jannowitz (or direct from the Mariannenfels) to the *Bolzenschloss (Inn at the forester's); the imposing ruins of the old castle, destroyed by the Swedes in 1643, command an admirable view of the Katzbach Mts., Jannowitz (p. 243), and the little town of Kupferberg, picturesquely perched on the top of a hill.

A fine view of the mountains is now enjoyed. 6 M. Mittel-Zillerthal (*Teichmann's Inn), a colony founded in 1837 by Tyrolese Protestant emigrants from the Zillerthal, with a large flax-spinning and weaving factory.

9 M. Schmiedeberg (1470 ft.; *Preussischer Hof, R., L., & A. from 1½ m.; *Goldner Stern; Schwarzes Ross), an old town with 4347 inhab., stretching for a considerable distance up the steep valley of the Eglits. Down to the 16th cent. it was an important mining place, and was afterwards the centre of the Silesian linen manufacture. Mining for magnetic iron-ore has recently been again carried on, and there is a manufactory of 'Smyrna' carpets. Picturesque environs, with a number of villas and châteaux.

At Buchwald (Brewery), 2 M. to the N., on the road from Schmiedeberg, or from Erdmannsdorf, to Fischbach, there is a château with a beautiful park; the 'Warte' commands a fine view of the Kesselburg.

Admirable prospects are also obtained from the "Friesensteine (2920 ft.), 41/2 M. to the N.E. of Schmiedeberg, and from the 'Buche', 3 M. farther on and 11/2 M. from the highest point of the old road to Landeshut. At the top of the highest accessible rock is a circular hollow, once perhaps used for pagan sacrificial rites. The new road skirts the base of the mountains.

FROM HIRSCHBERG TO WARMBRUNN, 4 M.; omnibus, starting from the station and the market-place, almost hourly in summer. The road on the right bank of the Zacken ascends the industrious Hirschberg Valley, inhabited chiefly by weavers, and passes through Kunersdorf and Herischdorf.

Warmbrunn. — Hotels. "Hôtel de Prusse; "Schwarzer Adler; Schwarzer; Breslaure Hoff; Schwarzer Ross; Rossngarten; Victo-Bil; Stadt London; "Preussische Krons, moderate. Also numerous Hötels Garnis ("Langes Haus; R. 9-24 m. per week). — Private Lodgings 6-30 m. per week and upwards. — Table d'hôte at the two first-named hotels, also at the Gallerie; 2-21/m.; at the Cursaal and Rosengarten 19/4 m.

Oarriages: To Agnetendorf, with one horse 5, with two 6 m.; to Buchwald, 6 or 9 m.; Erdmannsdorf, 4 or 6 m.; Fischbach, 6 or 9 m.; Hermsdorf 2¹/₂-2³/₂ m.; Hirschberg Rail. Stat., 8 or 5 m.; Josephinen-Hütte, 6 or 9 m., Krumhübel 6 or 9, Stonsdorf 3 or 5, Seidorf 4 or 6, Schreiberhau 4¹/₂ or 6, Schmiedeberg 6 or 9 m.; somewhat more if any stay is made.

Warmbrunn (1128 ft.), a pleasant watering-place, visited by 2000 patients annually, lies in a fertile district on both banks of the Zacken, near the N. slopes of the Giant Mts. The thermal springs (95-103° Fahr.), used both for drinking and bathing, and beneficial in cases of gout and skin disease, have been known since the end of the 12th century. Since 1401 the place has been the property of the Counts Schaffgotsch, whose handsome Schloss was erected in 1784-89. The Probstei contains their library of 60,000 vols. and a fine collection of coins, weapons, and minerals (open daily, except Sun., 9-11 and 3-5). The Schloss-Park is open on Tues. and Frid. 2-7 o'clock. The beautiful Promenades extend as far as Herischdorf, 1/3 M. distant, and are flanked with the Theatre, the Cursaal, the 'Gallerie', and numerous shops, in which cut glass and polished stones are the most attractive wares. The Weihrichsberg (1161 ft.), 1/4 hr. to the S.W., and the *Scholzenberg (1356 ft.), 1/4 hr. to the E., are two of the finest points of view (Restaurants and summer-quarters).

To Reibnitz (p. 242) post-omnibus twice daily in 3/4 hr.

From Warmbrunn the omnibus usually goes on to (2 M.) - Hermsdorf. - Hotels. *Tietze's Hotel, R. 2m.; *Verein, whence the omnibuses start, R. 1½ m.; DEUTSCHE KRONE; WRISSER LÖWE; ZUM KYNAST; "GOLDENER STERN, unpretending; SCHNABEL'S; PESCHKE'S; all generally crowded in the height of summer. Private apartments also to be had.

Guide to the Kynast 11/2 m., to the Bismarckshöhe 21/2 m.; for a chair, each porter 2 m. and 3 m.

Hermsdorf (1312 ft.), 2 M. to the S.W. of Warmbrunn, a beautifully-situated village with a château of Count Schaffgotsch, is an admirable starting-point for excursions. On a wooded height above it rises the well-preserved ruin of *Kynast (1932 ft.), founded in 1292, and destroyed by lightning in 1675. A legend attaching to the castle forms the subject of a ballad of Körner. The beautiful but heartless Kunigunde vowed to marry none but the knight who should first ride round the parapet of the castle. Many made the attempt, but were precipitated into the abyss below. At length one in whom she felt a real interest succeeded, but instead of claiming his prize, he administered a stern reproof and departed. Beautiful view of the Hirschberg valley from the tower. As the carriage-road (1 hr.) is destitute of shade, the ascent to the castle is best made by the path which leads to the left from the upper part of the village and mounts on the N. side of the hill (8/4 hr.; guide unnecessary). We descend to the Höllengrund, which separates the Kynast from the Heerdberg (2126 ft.) towards the S. The latter is ascended from Kynast in 3/4, from Hermsdorf in 11/2 hr. A pleasant path leads through the woods from the Heerdberg to Agnetendorf (see below) in 3/4 hr.

Near Wernersdorf (Zum freundlichen Hain), 33/4 M. to the W. of Warmbrunn, and 3 M. from Hermsdorf, are the Bibersteine, an imposing group of rocks. Fine view from the Grosse Biberstein (125 ft.; evening-light best). Guide from Petersdorf (see below) to the Bibersteine 1½ m.

From Agnetendorf (*Deutscher Kaiser; Beyer), situated in a pleasant valley, 21/4 M. to the S. of Hermsdorf, the *Bismarckshöhe (2176 ft.; Inn), an excellent point of view, may be reached in 2/4 hr., or from Hermsdorf direct in 11/4 hr. — Near it is the Säbrich, another fine point. — The Schneegruben, Thurmstein, Petersbaude, etc., see pp. 249, 250. — From the Bismarckshöhe a picturesque forest-path leads in 2 hrs. to Schreiberhau (see below), the last bit of it affording a charming view of the village.

to the (3/4 hr.) Moltkefelsen (restaurant), which command a heautiful view in the direction of Hermsdorf.

From Hermsdorf the post-road (diligence twice daily) ascends the picturesque valley of the Zacken to (21/2 M.) Petersdorf (Deutscher Kaiser, with the post-office; Kronprinz; Sonne; *Zum Kochelfall, at the end of the village), with glass-polishing and glassstaining works. At the 'Trinkhalle', above the Kochelfall Inn, a path to the left leads through a pretty, wooded valley to the (10 min.) Kochelfall, a cascade 39 ft. in height (a walk of 21/2 hrs. from Hermsdorf). The road then leads through the straggling village of Schreiberhau, the 3600 inhab, of which maintain themselves by linen-weaving and glass-polishing. Numerous inns and lodginghouses on the road-side: among them the Gasthof Zum Zackenfall (2050 ft.), with post-office; beyond it, *König's Gasthof and the Marienthal Inn. In the wood above König's Gasthof is the Gasthof sum Waldschlösschen, with a pretty view, on the way to (1 hr.) the Hochstein (see below). The Gasthaus sur Josephinenhütte (2247 ft.), on the road, 1/0 M. beyond König's Gasthof and about 12 M. from Hermsdorf, is the headquarters of guides and porters for the Koppe. The Josephinenhütte, the largest of the glass-houses of Schreiberhau, belongs to Count Schaffgotsch (products for sale). Near it rises the Rabenstein, a lofty rock.

The *Zackenfall, a fall of the Zackerle, 80 ft. in height, framed in beautiful forest scenery, 3/4 M. to the S. of the Josephinenhutte, is reached by a good road. It is apt to disappoint in dry seasons, but may be artificially improved by the opening of a sluice (Restaurant). Route to the Neue Schlesische Baude, see p. 249.

To the N.W. of the Josephinenhütte rises the Hochstein (3740 ft.), ascended in 1 hr., an excellent point of view (rustic inn). Guide 2 m.; chair, for each porter 3/2 m. — Ascent from Hermsdorf direct, 4 hrs.

The road beyond the Josephinenhütte ascends to a height of 2460 ft., crosses the Austrian frontier, and leads by Neuvelt, or Neuvald (6 M. from Warmbrunn), and (10½ M.) Tannwald to (14 M.) Reichenberg (p. 255). — A pleasant walk through wood leads from Neuvelt to the (3½-4 hrs.) Blb-fallbaude (p. 249) via the Mummel and Pantsche Falls (p. 249).

Stonsdorf (1227 ft.), 21/4 M. to the S.E. of Warmbrunn, a village with a château and brewery of Prince Reuss, lies at the base of the granite Prudelberg (1535 ft.), which may be ascended in 20 minutes. On the Stangenberg (1590 ft.), a pine-clad hill, 3/4 hr. to the S.W. of Stonsdorf, rises the *Heinrichsburg, a tower commanding an admirable view. At the foot of the Stangenberg on the W. lies the hamlet of Merzdorf, 3 M. from Warmbrunn.

Near Merzdorf, to the S.W., lies Giersdorf (Zum hohlen Stein, in the upper part of the village; *Rüffer's Gasthaus, Brewery, in the lower), 2 M. from Warmbrunn; and almost adjoining it is the straggling village of Hain. The picturesque *Hainfall in the valley of the Mittelwasser is 11/2 M. above Hain. Near it a fine point of view and a restaurant. Higher up are some remarkable rock-formations, called the Semmeljunge (view), the Thumpsakütte, etc.

Seidorf (1197 ft.; *Zur Schneekoppe; Brewery), where the roads from Warmbrunn and Hermsdorf unite, 38/4 M. from each of these places, and 51/4 M. from Schmiedeberg, lies to the S. of Merzdorf, and is one of the starting-points for the Koppe (p. 251; guide to the Anna-Capelle 11/2 m., to the church Wang 3 m.). From Seidorf we reach the Anna-Capelle (2083 ft.), built in 1486, in 1/2 hr.; near it is a forester's house affording refreshments. Just beyond is a narrow forest-path, leading to the (1/2 hr.) *Kräbersteine, on the N.W. slope of the Kräberberg; the last stone, the top of which is made accessible by steps, commands a picturesque view.

From Seidorf the road leads to the E. to Arnsdorf (Restaurant), with a ruined castle and a château of the 17th cent., prettily situated on the Lomnitz; then to Steinseiffen and to Schmiedeberg,

b. The Hochgebirge.

Distances. From the Josephinenhütte to the Schneegrubenbande 3 hrs., Riesenbaude $1/2, Koppe 2/4 hr.; from Agneteadorf to the Schneegruben-baude $ hrs.; from Seidorf to the Riesenbaude 6 hrs.; from Schmiedeberg to Krumhübel 1½ hr., thence to the Riesenbaude 2½ hrs.; from Schmiedeberg direct to the Koppe 4 hrs.; from Johannesbad to the Koppe 5 hrs.; from Hohemelbe to the Koppe 7½ 8 hrs.; from the Josephinenhütte to Hohenelbe 61/2-7 hrs.

Guides (to be found at all the principal starting-places, 5 m. per day, and 21/2 m. per half day, not exceeding six hours, for which fees they are bound to provide their own food), although seldom absolutely necessary, are often useful in the stormy or foggy weather which is frequently encountered among the Giant Mts.

Chair Porters 51/2 m. each per day.

FROM THE JOSEPHINENHUTTE to the Koppe 9-10 hours. The path ascends by the (8/4 hr.) Zackenfall (p. 248), crosses a bridge (2336 ft.), and ascends the new and excellent path to the (1 hr.) Neue Schlesische Baude (3904 ft.; a small inn), whence a view is obtained. Leaving the Reiftrager (4430 ft.) to the left, the path then ascends past some curious groups of rock, the (1/2 hr.) Sausteine, and (1/4 hr.) Kässteine, or Quarksteine, crosses (1/4 hr.) the path from the Alte Schlesische Baude to Ober-Rochlitz (at the kilomètre-stone 112), and then skirts the S. side of the Spitzberg. After 1/4 hr. more we may quit the straight path leading direct via the Veilchensteine to the (1/2 hr.) Schneegrubenbaude (see below) and diverge by the second path to the right (stone 113) to the (1/4 hr.) Elbbrunnen, one of the sources of the Elbe, and thence towards the S. to the (1/4 hr.) *Elbfall, 145 ft. in height (rustic inn). About 10 min. farther is the Pantschefall, which descends in several leaps from a height of 800 ft., and 2 hrs. beyond it Spindelmühl, see p. 252. From the Elbbrunnen we may proceed direct, with a guide, to the Pantachafall, and thence to the Elbfall. By this route we come suddenly upon a striking view of the 'Sieben Gründe' (p. 252), which by the other route are disclosed gradually.

From the Elbfall we ascend the left bank of the brook to the (3/4 hr.) *Schneegrubenbaude (4773 ft.; table d'hôte), lying on the brink of the Grosse and Kleine Schneegrube, two rocky gullies upwards of 1000 ft. in depth. View of the Hirschberg Valley, beyond the abyss, from Rübesahl's Kanzel ('Number Nip's Pulpit'), a lofty rock sheltering the Baude from the W. wind.

From the Schneegrubenbaude we proceed to the left, passing the Grosse Schneegrube, to the (20 min.) Hohe Rad (4967 ft.), commanding a fine *View. Steep descent on the E. side, over blocks of granite and by steps, 20 min. (ascent $\frac{1}{2}$ hr.). The path then follows the crest of the mountains, leaving the Grosse Sturmhaube (4862 ft.) on the left, and passing the Mannstein, the Mädelsteine, and the Vogelsteine, and in 13/4 hr. reaches the *Petersbaude (4100 ft.; telegraph-office), a mountain-inn, commanding an extensive view towards Bohemia. (Descent from the Petersbaude to the left to Agnetendorf, or to the right to Spindelmühl, 11/2 hr.) It then descends to the left into the Mädelwiese, a marshy hollow, and reaches the (40 min.) *Spindlerbaude (3937 ft.), an inn on the W. slope of the Kleine Sturmhaube (4646 ft.). The path on the N. side of the latter leads to the (1 hr.) Mittagstein, a granite rock about 40 ft. in height, on the N. slope of the Lahnberg, or Silberkamm (4898 ft.), commanding a fine view towards Silesia. We next pass the deeply imbedded Grosse Teich, destitute of fish, and the Kleine Teich, in which trout abound (leaving the Wiesenbaude to the right), and traverse the Koppenplan, clothed with the dwarf pine, to the (11/4 hr.) Riesenbaude (4510 ft.), a small inn at the foot of the barren summit of the Koppe, with a meteorological station. A new path, protected by walls, at the beginning of which a magnificent view is obtained of the Melzergrund to the left and the Riesengrund (p. 252) to the right, ascends hence in numerous windings to the summit (3/4 hr., descent 20 min.).

FROM AGNETHADORF (p. 247) to the Koppe, 5-6 hours. We may either follow the telegraph-wires to (2½ hrs.) the Petersbaude and take the path ascending thence (see above); or, at a point ½ hr. beyond Agnetendorf, where the just-named path ascends to the right, we keep straight on through the woods to (2 hrs.) Hoise (p. 248), take a guide thence to the Brothoude, and then ascend by Kirche Wang and Schlingelbauds, skirting the right side of the Grosse Teich (2½ hrs.). — Another picturesque, but longer and more fatiguing route (8-9 hrs.) ascends the Tiefe Graben, the wooded valley of a brook rising in the Agnetendorfer Schneegrube, passes the Thurnstein (2165 ft.), and then the (2 hrs.) Korallensteine (2766 ft.), a wild group of rocks on the N. slope of the Kleine Sturmhaube. The Agnetendorfer, or Schwarze Schneegrube is next passed, and in 1½ hr. the above-described path to the Riesenkamm is reached. Thence to the Koppe, see above.

FROM SRIDORF (p. 248) to the Koppe, 6 hours. To the Anna-Capelle and the Kräbersteine (p. 249), $^3/_4$ hr. From the latter we return to the finger-post, and then skirt the hill-side till we reach the main path, which ascends direct from the chapel. In $^3/_4$ hr. more we reach the Brotbaude (refreshments), at the junction of the paths from Arnsdorf and from Schmiedeberg by Krumhübel. The path then leads to the right to the (10 min.) *Church of Wang (2493 ft.), the parish-church of the straggling village of Brückenberg (*Zum Deutschen Kaiser, near the parsonage), a good example of the curious Norwegian 'Stavekirken', or timber-churches, purchased by Frederick William IV. in 1844, and transferred hither from its original site in Thelemarken in Norway (sacristan 50 pf.). Tower, school, and parsonage new. The churchyard, the inn, and the Katzenstein, 1/4 M. above Wang, afford fine views.

By the entrance to the parsonage the path ascends in 40 min., past Rübezahl's Kegelbahn ('Number Nip's Skittle Alley'), where it joins the direct path from Seidorf, to the Schlingelbaude (3478 ft.). another small inn. A little to the right are the Drei Steine, rocky pinnacles on the top of the mountain. Then (10 min.) two bridges over the outlets of the Grosse and Kleine Teich, whence the (1/2 hr.) Hampelbaude (4110 ft.) is visible on its green plateau.

From the Hampelbaude we ascend for 25 min. on the Stirndl to the Koppenplan, on which, 25 min. farther, is the Riesenbaude.

at the base of the Koppe (see p. 252).

FROM SCHMIEDEBERG (p. 246) to the Koppe by Krumhübel, 5 hours. A broad road leads from Schmiedeberg to the S.W. by Steinseiffen in 11/2 hr. to Krumhübel (Zur Schneekoppe, opposite the post-office), a favourite summer-resort, formerly the principal seat of the 'Laboranten', or herb and medicine vendors of the Giant Mts., who trace their descent from two fugitive medical students from Prague. ('Pudel' is an aromatic liqueur manufactured here.) In a ravine below the village is the *Alexandrinen-Bad. Excursions may be made from Krumhübel to the romantic Melzergrund (there and back 4 hrs.), the Anna-Capelle and the Kräbersteine $(2^{1}/_{2}-3)$ hrs.), Kirche Wang (2 hrs.), and the Eulengrund (21/2-3 hrs.). — The Koppe may be ascended from Krumhübel in 3-31/2 hrs., by the Gehänge (somewhat steep) and the Hampelbaude (see above); or by the Eulengrund and the Schwarze Koppe (31/2 hrs.); or by the Forstbauden and the *Tabaksweg (4 hrs.); or, lastly, we may drive to the *Waldhaus Inn at Brückenberg and ascend thence by Wang and the Schlingelbaude (see above), in 31/2 hrs. (guide not absolutely necessary).

From Schmiedeberg direct to the Koppe by the Schmiedeberger Kamm, with guide, 4 hours. The path ascends to Ober-Schmiedeberg and Arnsberg, passes the Anna-Capelle (p. 249) on a hill to the right, then turns to the right, and ascends the Mordhöhe and the slopes of the Forstkamm, chiefly through wood, to (2 hrs.) the Grenzbauden (*Hübner; *Göder), 2 hrs. below the summit (good Hungarian wine). The vegetation becomes scantier as the summit is approached. The steep part of the ascent begins on the Schwarze Koppe (4495 ft.), 3/4 hr. from the summit.

FROM JOHANNESBAD (p. 256) to the summit we have a choice of two routes. By the first (6-7 hrs.) we ascend the N. slope of the valley, past the finger-post, to the Waldhaus (p. 256), and then follow the valley of the Aupa to (4 M.) Marschendorf (Zum Platzkretscham; Schremmer's Restaurant), the first houses of which almost adjoin Freiheit (p. 256). Count Aichelburg possesses a château here; fine view from the Rehbornberg. Post-conveyance from Freiheit to Marschendorf daily. The valley contracts, and at the entrance to the village of (1½ M.) Dunkelthal (Brauhof) forks, the right branch leading to Albendorf and the Grensbauden. Our road leads to the left, passing a large glass-house, and enters a more sombre part of the valley (to the S. a small tower, built in 1861). At (1½ M.) Kreusschenke the valley of the Kleine Aupa diverges to the right, leading to Klein-Aspa and the Grenzbauden. The road to the left is continued to Gross-Aupa (*Post), a village consisting of huts scattered over the hill-side. In ½ hr. more we reach Petzer, the highest part of Gross-Aupa, where the road terminates. Refreshments and chair-porters at the Petzerkretscham. (A little above diverges the road leading across the Geiergucke to Spindelmühl; see below.) Then a steep ascent to the right through the grand "Riesengrund, or Aupagrund (Zum Goldnen Riesen), which descends abruptly from the Schneekoppe to a depth of 2000 ft., to the (2 hrs.) Riesenbaude (4390 ft.); thence to the Konne, see p. 251.

thence to the Koppe, see p. 251.

The second route (Thrs.) ascends the (2½ hrs.) "Schwarze Berg (4130 ft.) with the Schwarzehlapbaude, commanding fine views of the mountains and the Bohemian plain. We then descend to the Bohemwiesbaude, pass the Topferbaude and the Fuchsbaude, and follow the long ridge of the "Fuchsberg, which affords an admirable view of the Biesengrund and the precipitous S.W. side of the Koppe. Thence by the "Geieryucke descent through the Lange Grund to Spindelmidt, see p. 259) and the Brunnenberg to the Wiesenbaude and the Riesenbaude (Ahrs.); thence to the top, see p. 251.

The *Schneekoppe, or Riesenkoppe (5266 ft.), the highest mountain in N. or Central Germany, is a blunted cone of granite, covered with fragments of gneiss and mica-slate. The chapel on the summit, erected at the end of the 17th cent., stands on the frontier of Bohemia and Silesia. Divine service performed here once a year (10th Aug.). Close to the chapel is the *Koppen Inn, with post and telegraph office; a second Inn, built on the Bohemian side of the Koppe, belongs to the same landlord.

View extensive and picturesque: to the N. the entire Hirschberg Valley; E. Schweidnitz, Zobten, Breslau, Eule, Silberberg, Schneeberg, Heuscheuer; S.W. the Weisse Berg near Prague; W. the Milleschauer near Teplitz; N.W. the Landskrone near Görlitz. An unclouded horizon is, however, rare. To the S.W. we obtain a most imposing view of the Aupagrund or Riesengrund, descending 2000 ft. almost perpendicularly; to the N. the Melzergrund. Fields of snow are often seen on the mountain in spring.

FROM THE JOSEPHINENHÜTTE EY SPINDELMÜHL TO THE WIESENBAUDE 6 PARS, and to HOHENELBE 7 hrs. (from Spindelmühl to Hohenelbe route practicable for carriages). — To the Elbfall 3 hrs., see p. 249. A good new path leads to the right from the Baude along the slope of the Krkonosch (4760 ft.) into the "Elbgrund; on the right rises the Krssteller (4708 ft.). It then turns to the left, skirting the Riesenkamm, which is rent and fissured by the Sieben Gründe, and follows the course of the Elbselfen. Near the configure of this stream with the Weissquaser, a brook descending from the Sieben Gründe, the path unites with that coming from the Petersbaude (n. 250 and turns towards the S.W.

from the Petersbande (p. 250) and turns towards the S.W.

Spindelmühl (2446 ft.; *Neus Mariencarte, near the church; Villa Marienwarte, with garden, below; Ellerbach's Ins.; Deutscher Raiser, Harrachscher Gasihof, both on the right bank of the Elbe), a favourite summer-resort, lies 1½ M. farther to the S. At the S. end of the village the Elbe is joined by the St. Peterseiffen, on which, */4 M. farther up, lies the village of St. Peter. The route now ascends the S. slope of the Ziegenrücken, to the right of the Heuschober, and affords a picturesque view of the W. valleys of the Brunnberg (5072 ft.). After 2½ hrs. we reach the Wiesenbaude (4510 ft.; Inn), whence we follow the stakes to the (¹/4 hr.) path on the mountain crest leading in ¹/4 hr. more to the Riesenbaude (see p. 252). — Another route from Spindelmühl ascends by the Elbe to the point where the united waters of the Sieben Gründe force their way through the ridge, crosses the bridge to the right, and follows the right bank of the Weisswasser. After 1/2 hr. we ascend steeply to the left to the Tsufelswiese, above which we obtain the finest view of the surrounding mountains, and proceed thence via the Scharfenbaude to the Riesenbaude (4 hrs.).

Those who wish to go direct from Spindelmühl to the Aupa-Thal (5 hrs.) follow the road that diverges above Richter's Inn and leads to St. Peter. Beyond this village the route gently ascends the wild and romantic Lange Grund to the (2 hrs.) crest of the N. spur of the Brunnberg (see above), which forms the watershed between the Aupa and the tributaries of the Which forms the watershed between the Aupa and the broughtes of the Elbe. The Geisepucke, at the top, commands a charming view of the Aupa-Thal. The Zehgrund now remains on the right, while the path follows the slopes on the left to the Richterbauden, the $(1^1/2 \text{ hr.})$ Petzerkretscham, and $(1^1/2 \text{ hr.})$ the Post Inn at Gross-Aupa (p. 252).

By following the course of the Elbe to the 8. from Spindelmühl we reach Hackelsdorf, Oberhohenelbe, and (3 hrs.) Hohenelbe (p. 256).

c. Rocks of Adersbach and Weckelsdorf.

From Liebau to Schömberg 41/2 M., diligence twice daily; from Schömberg to Adersbach 6 M. — From Friedland to Adersbach or Weckelsdorf 6 M.; carriages at the station, to either of them and back, one-horse 9, twohorse 12 m. - From Adersbach to Weckelsdorf 21/4 M. - From Weckelsdorf to the station of that name (p. 261) 3 M.

FROM LIBBAU (p. 257) a road leads to (41/2 M.) Schömberg (Deutscher Kaiser; Brewery in the market-place), which is also reached by a road from Landeshut via Grüssau (p. 257). The road, at first ascending as far as the Bohemian frontier, now leads by (21/4 M.) Liebenau and (2 M.) Merkelsdorf to (2 M.) Nieder-Adersbach. Pedestrians save 1/2 hr. by taking the path to the right by the tavern at the entrance to Liebenau.

FRIBDLAND, see p. 260. A short way beyond the town the Bohemian frontier is crossed (wine-house next to the custom-house), where the traveller is assailed by swarms of beggars. The large village of Merkelsdorf (see above) is next reached, from which a road in a straight direction and then to the right leads to (21/4 M.) Adersbach, and another to the left goes by Buchwaldsdorf to (21/4 M.) Weckelsdorf.

*Adersbach Rocks. - NEUES GASTHAUS, to the left of the customhouse; "Zur Felsenstadt, at the entrance to the rocks. — Guide, without whom no one is permitted to enter, 50 kr. for each person. Several small fees are expected at various points among the rocks, so that the traveller should be provided with 10 and 20 pf. pieces. — The temperature among the rocks is much lower than outside.

The Adersbach Rocks, resembling those in Saxon Switzerland, are very curious. They once formed a solid mountain of green sandstone, the softer parts and clefts of which have been worn away and widened by the action of water, leaving the more indestructible portions standing. These rocks, thousands in number, several of them 180 ft. high, often assume grotesque shapes, and many of them have been named in accordance with some fanciful resemblance (sugarloaf, burgomaster, drummer, etc.). The path is often so narrow that visitors must walk in single file. A silvery brook traverses this labyrinth, forming at one point a waterfall 40 ft, high. Part of the exploration is carried out by boat. The visit occupies 1-2 hrs. At the egress an echo is awakened by triumpet-blasts and pistol-shots, Near Radowens, 7 M. to the S.W. of Adersbach, is a Fossil Forest. discovered by Prof. Göppert of Breslau.

The *Weckelsdorf Rocks (Zum Eisenhammer; Zur Felsenstadt), adjoining those of Adersbach on the E. (21/4 M. from the Adersbach inn), are still more imposing. Fees for admission, etc., the same as at the Adersbach Rocks. Here, too, various parts of the chaotic scene have their specific names (cathedral, burial-vault, etc.). The finest point is the grand 'Münster', resembling a Gothic structure. Visitors generally return through the Neue Felsenstadt, with the 'Amphitheatre' and the 'Valley of Jehoshaphat'. A visit to these rocks occupies 2-21/2 hrs. — Weckelsdorf has a station (restaurant) on the Chotzen, Nachod, and Braunau railway (p. 261), 21/2 M. distant (omn.).

The Heuscheuer, see p. 260; carriage from Weckelsdorf to the foot of the Maria Stern in 2-21/2 hrs., fare 8-10 m.

40. From Zittau to Trautenau by Reichenberg.

97 M. RAILWAY. To Reichenberg in 55 min. (fares 2 m. 70, 2 m., 1 m. 30 pf.); from Reichenberg to Alt-Paka in 33/4 hrs. (fares 3 fl. 61, 2 fl. 71, 1 fl. 80 kr.); thence to Trautenau-Parschnits in 21/4 hrs. (fares 2 fl. 17, 1 fl. 82, 1 fl. 9 kr., Austrian currency).

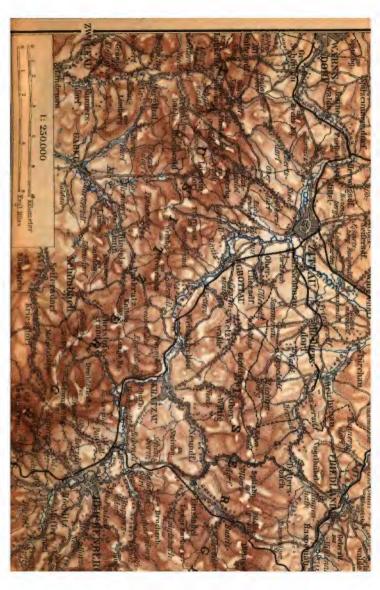

Zittau. - Hotels. *Sonne; *Engel, both in the market-place; *Sach-SISCHER HOF; HUTTER'S HOTEL, near the station; WEINTRAUBE, Bahnhof-Str. Restaurants. Rathskeller, in the Rathhaus; Brauhaus, Bahnhof-Str.,

Oab from the station to the town (10 min.), for 1 pers. 50 pf., 2 pers. 75 pf., 3-4 pers. 1 m.; box 20 pf. — One-horse carr. to the Oybin 5½ m. for ½ day; 8 m. for a whole day; two-horse carr. 9 or 12 m.; to Oybin, Jonsdorf, and the Lausche 9 m. or 131/2 m.

Zittau (800 ft.), a manufacturing town with 22,473 inhab., one of the principal cotton-spinning places in Saxony, is situated in a fertile district on the bank of the Mandau, near its confluence with the Neisse. In 1757, after the battle of Kollin, the town was occupied by the Prussians, and was almost entirely reduced to ashes in consequence of the bombardment by the Austrians under Prince Charles of Lorraine. The large reservoir of the town water-works is conspicuous as we quit the station. Handsome Rathhaus, erected in 1844. Town Library. The Church of St., John was re-erected in 1834-37; view from the tower. Part of the church of 88, Peter and Paul, restored in 1882, is fitted up as a Museum of Antiquities (adm. Wed. & Sat., 2-4). The Joanneum, with a good fresco by Dietrich, contains the gymnasium and the commercial school (adm. 30 pf., 2-5 pers. 50 pf., 6-10 pers. 1 m.). In the suburbs is the Stadtbad. The Cemetery, to the S.E. of the town, affords a good survey of the Neisse Viaduct (see below).

About 6 M. to the S. of Zittau rises the Oybin (comp. Map, p. 299), the road to which traverses the long village of Obersdorf, passing the Wittichschenke, a clean inn at its upper end. Beyond this point we may quit the road and follow a footpath to the right, which leads through the wood, passing the Hungerbrunnen and crossing the Pferdeberg, to the Oybin. Fine view of the hill as we approach. The "Oybin (1680 ft.) is a wooded sandstone rock, in shape resembling a beehive, and crowned with the highly-picturesque ruins of a monastery and a castle, curiously combined. The castle, a robbers' stronghold, was destroyed by Emp. Charles IV., who founded the monastery on its site in 1369. The latter was deserted in 1545 by the Celestine monks who occupied it, and was destroyed by fire in 1577 and 1681. The church of 1384 with its lofty Gothic arches, some of which show remains of beautiful tracery, is the best preserved part. The tower affords a picturesque view. Ancient tombstones in the churchyard. "Inn adjacent. At the base of the hill is the scattered village of Oybin (Kretscham; Dürrling), with a number of villas of Zittau manufacturers. Small museum of Oybin antiquities (25 pf.).

direct route to it from Zittau diverges from the road to the left, \(1/2 \) hr. before the Oybin is reached.

The "Lausche (2595ft), 2 hrs. to the W. of the Oybin, 3 hrs. from Zittau (guide advisable, 1-i1/2 m.), is the highest point of the range of hills which separates Upper Lusatia from Bohemia. It commands an extensive and magnificent prospect, embracing the whole of Lusatia and the Saxon Switzerland, the Teplitz and Bohemian Mts. (as far as Prague), the Iserkamm, the Tafelfichte, and the Giant Mts. The "Inn at the top stands half in Saxony, half in Bohemia.

The Hochwald (2455ft), 1 hr. S. of the Oybin, a height easily ascended, is another good point of view ("inn at the top; guide 1-11/2 m.). A picturesque path leads from the Hochwald through the Nonnenklunzen (refreshments), a labrinth of rocks, to the Lusache.

ments), a labyrinth of rocks, to the Lausche.

Böhmisch-Friedland, 14 M. to the E. of Zittau (diligence daily), see p. 241. Passengers' luggage is examined by Austrian custom-house officers at Zittau. The train now crosses the great *Neisse Viaduct, 1/2 M. in length, supported by 34 arches, 72 ft. above the stream. The pleasant valley of the Neisse is then ascended. 4 M. Grottau: 10 M. Kratzau: to the right a view of the Jeschken (3173 ft.).

17 M. Reichenberg (Rail. Restaurant; *Goldener Löwe; Union), the largest town in Bohemia after Prague, is a cloth-making place, with 28,090 inhabitants. The Kreuzkirche contains an old altarpiece, Mary and the Child (Dürer?). Schloss and Rathhaus of the 16th century. New Prot. Church. A new German Theatre was opened here in October, 1883. *Excursion to the Jeschken (see above) and back, half-a-day. — Railway to Görlitz, see R. 37.

The line ascends in windings, and at stat. Langenbruck reaches the watershed between the Neisse and Iser. It then turns to the W. and descends to (27 M.) Reichenau (p. 256) and (31 M.) Liebenau, two glass-making places. It next descends the Mohelka Thal and crosses it, affording picturesque glimpses of *Schloss Sichrow, the seat of Prince Rohan, built in the English Gothic style, and surrounded by extensive grounds. Beyond stat. Sichrow a tunnel 690 yds. long.

40 M. Turnau (Rail. Restaurant; Sparcassa; Krone), a town with 4900 inhab., lies on an eminence on the left bank of the Iser, 1/2 M. from the railway. The modern Marienkirche is a fine Gothic edifice. The hydropathic establishment of Wartenberg lies 11/2 M. to the S.; about 3 M. to the S.E. of which are situated the ruin of Waldstein, the ancestral seat of the celebrated Wallenstein, and the mediæval château of Gross-Skal, with a park (view from the tower). Farther distant is the ruin of Trosky, on two conspicuous rocks. - From Turnau to Prague, 4 hrs., see Baedeker's Southern Germany.

The scenery between Turnau and Eisenbrod is the finest on the line. The train intersects beautiful rock and forest landscapes. at the foot of which flows the impetuous Iser. From stat. Klein-Skal, which is grandly situated, an interesting route leads past the castle of that name (among the ruins of which there is a 'Rock Pantheon', with reminiscences of Austrian celebrities), by the ruin of Friedstein, and the Kopainberg (2161 ft.; *View), direct to (2 hrs.) Reichenau (see p. 255). To the left is the château of Dalimeric. with its double tower.

The train continues to follow the picturesque valley of the Iser. 49 M. Eisenbrod, beyond which four tunnels are traversed; 53 M. Semil, with an old château of Prince Rohan, now occupied by the district-authorities. - 64 M. Alt-Paka (Rail. Restaurant), a junction, where passengers for Trautenau change carriages. The line to the S.W. leads to Josefstadt (p. 258).

76 M. Starkenbach, a small manufacturing town with an old Schloss. The church contains a font of 1545. 801/2 M. Pelsdorf.

Branch Railwar from Pelsdorf in 14 min. to 1045. 501/2 m. retailory.

Branch Railwar from Pelsdorf in 14 min. to Hohenelbe (1477 ft. Hotel Bosener: Schwan: Mohr), a small town pleasantly situated on both banks of the Elbe, on the spurs of the Giant Mts. The small houses with their lofty gables are fianked with arcades borne by wooden columns. The Schloss is surrounded by a fine park. Linen is the staple commodity here.
The Heidelberg (3120 ft.), which rises above the town, commands a fine view. From Hohenelbe to the Schneekoppe, see pp. 252, 253.

87 M. Arnau: 89 M. Kottwitz: 92 M. Pilnikau.

97 M. Trautenau (Union, at the station; Weisses Ross; Hôtel Stark), a town with 9536 inhab., on the Aupa, almost entirely rebuilt after the great fire of 1861, is the centre of the Bohemian linen manufacture. In the Realschule is preserved an interesting collection of the Flora of the Giant Mts. The handsome church, founded in 1283, was rebuilt in the middle of last century. The Prussians gained a victory over the Austrians in the vicinity in 1866. Several monuments to the slain have been erected on the Johannisberg, or Capellenberg, to the S. of the town, where the battle raged most flercely; fine view towards the Giant Mts. The Gablenzhohe, 1/2 M. distant, is crowned with an iron obelisk.

FROM TRAUTRAU TO JOHANNESBAD. Railway to Fretheit (10 M.; fares 63, 53, 32 kr.), ascending the populous and industrious valley of the Aupa. Diligence thence to (1½ M.) the pleasant little Johannesbad (2065 ft.; *Ourhaus: Deutsches Haus; Breslau; Stern; Kronprins Rudolf; Freussischer Hof; Johannesbad, R., L., & A. 2 fl., with good restaurant; numerous lodging-houses), which is visited by about 2000 guests annually. The alkaline chalybeate spring is beneficial in cases of rheumatism and nervous complete. plaints. The Ladig, the Schubertsmühle, the wild ravine of the Klause, the Waldhaus, and the Blaustein are the prettiest points in the pleasant environs, all within an hour's walk.

From Trautenau to Parschnitz (p. 257), 3 M., railway in 10 min.

41. From Breslau to Liebau and Königgrätz.

The most convenient route is viå Altwasser (123 M.). RAILWAY to Altwasser in 2-2½ hrs. (fares 5 m. 60, 4 m. 20, 2 m. 80); from Altwasser to Liebau in 1½ hrs. (fares 3 m. 70, 2 m. 80, 1 m. 80 pf.); from Liebau to Königgrätz in 3½-4 hrs. (fares 4 fl. 9, 3 fl. 6, 2 fl. 4 kr.). — Route viå Salzbrunn, 121 M., see R. 42.

From Breslau to (30 M.) Königszelt and (41 M.) Sorgau, see R. 42. 43½ M. Altwasser (1190 ft.; Villa Nova; Seifert's), with 8087 inhab., possesses extensive brown-coal mines, porcelain manufactories, and engine-works. The chalybeate springs, which once made it a popular resort, have been almost entirely exhausted by the mining operations. — Route by Wilhelmshöhe to Salzbrunn, 1½-2 hrs., see p. 260. — The train now passes above the scattered village of Hermsdorf by means of a viaduct, and reaches — 46¹/₂M. Waldenburg (1385 ft.; *Schwarzes Ross; Gelber Löwe), a manufacturing town with 12,063 inhab., situated on the Polsnitz, the centre of a coal-mining district in the principality of Schweidnitz. Near the station is a large porcelain-manufactory; there are also considerable flax-mills and linen-factories in the vicinity. Excursion to Salzbrunn (p. 259) vià the Wetterthurm, 1 hr. — The line now ascends in a wide curve.

At (49 M.) Dittersbach (p. 243) our line joins the Kohlfurt and Glatz railway (R. 38), with which it coincides as far as (62 M.) Ruhbank (p. 243). It then turns to the S. and ascends the valley of the Bober, which it repeatedly crosses.

68 M. Landeshut (*Rabe; Drei Berge), with 6700 inhab., who are occupied in flax-spinning and weaving, lies on the Bober. The Protestant church is one of the six 'Gnadenkirchen' (p. 245). In the Ring rises a statue of Count Stolberg (d. 1872), once Governor of Silesia, by Pfuhl. In 1760 a body of 10,000 Prussians under Fouqué were defeated here by 31,000 Austrians under Laudon.

Schmiedsberg (p. 246) is 91/2 M. from Landeshut. — At Grissau, 3 M. to the S.E., are the extensive buildings of a Cistercian abbey, founded in 1290, suppressed in 1810, and now used as a manufactory.

72 M. Liebau (Schmidt's Hotel; Kyffhäuser; Göhler; *Rail. Restaurant), with the Austrian custom-house, is a town of 4911 inhab., engaged in weaving and spinning. — From Liebau to Adersbach, see p. 253.

The line follows a defile through which the Prussian army invaded the Austrian dominions in 1866, and soon enters Bohemia. It ascends slightly, crossing the watershed between the Oder and the Elbe, and then descends. 741/2 M. Königshain.

 $82^{1}/2$ M. Parschnitz (*Rail. Restaurant), on the Aupa, the junction for Trautenau, Reichenberg, and Zittau (R. 40). High-road from Parschnitz to Petersdorf, Qualisch, Feldkretscham, and $(9^{1}/2$ M.) Adersbach (p. 253). — The train passes through a long tunnel. 90 M. Schwadowitz. 101 M. Starkotsch (station for Nachod; branchline to Wenzelsberg, 2 M. distant, on the Chotzen-Braunau line, p. 261). In 1866 the Austrians under Ramming and Archduke Leopold were defeated in several engagements near Nachod by the Prussians under Steinmetz. The line traverses the battle-field. where numerous monuments have been erected to the fallen. The contest was terminated by the capture of (105 M.) Skalitz, the station of which was bravely defended by Austrian riflemen.

113 M. Josefstadt (Wessely's Hotel), a town and fortress on the Elbe, erected in 1781-87, 3/4 M. from the station.

123 M. Königgrätz (Lamm, Ross), a fortress on the Elbe, rendered famous by the battle of 3rd July, 1866, which was fought to the W. of the town (see Baedeker's S. Germany and Austria).

42. From Breslau to Braunau and Chotzen by Salzbrunn.

118 M. RAILWAY. To Halbstadt in 3-4 hrs. (fares 8 m., 6 m., 4 m.; express 8 m. 70, 6 m. 70, 4 m. 70 pf.); from Halbstadt to Brassas in 40 min. (fares 43, 32, 21 kr.); from Halbstadt to Chotten in 4 hrs. (fares 4 fl. 63, 3 fl. 51, 2 fl. 34 kr.). As far as Friedland the finest views are generally to the left, beyond it to the right.

Breslau, see p. 232. - 121/2 M. Canth. At Kryblowits, 3 M. to the S.E., there is a monument to Prince Blücher, who died here in 1819 at the age of 77.

181/2 M. Metthou, the station for the Zobten, which has for some time been visible on the left. To the right the château of Borganie, seat of Count Pinto.

From Mettkau diligence twice daily in 2 hrs. to (8 M.) Zobten am Berge (Hirsch), at the base of the Zobten (branch-line from Rothsürben to Zoblen in progress). Near it are Gorkau (Inn), prettily situated, with granite quarries, and the small *Rosalienthal (Inn). A road destitute of shade, and a pleasant, shady, but somewhat steep path lead from Zobten to the (11/2 hr.) summit of the "Zobten (2215 ft.), the finest point of view in Silesia. Small inn, and a few fragments of an old castle, destroyed in 1471. Down to 1810 the hill belonged to an Augustine monastery founded here in 1108, of which the chapel still remains. Best view from an open space about 300 paces from the chapel.

Stations Ingramsdorf and Saarau, the latter with foundries and chemical works.

30 M. Königsselt (Rail. Restaurant), the junction for the Liegnitz-Frankenstein railway (R. 44), derives its name (king's tent) from the fact that Frederick the Great occupied a fortified camp near it, at Bunzelwitz, in 1761, during the Seven Years' War.

35 M. Freiburg (906 ft.; Schwarzer Adler; *Burg; Schwarzer Bür). a small town (8348 inhab.) with several weaving factories, is prettily situated on the hill-side. On the opposite bank of the Polsnitz lies the straggling village of Polsnitz. Comp. the Map, p. 244.

Pleasant *Excursion to Schloss Fürstenstein. We follow the road through Polimits and past the (2 M.) Conradmühle, and ½ M. farther on, at the cross-roads, ascend to the left to the (20 min.) Schloss. Another route leads by the above-mentioned village of Polsnitz and its prolongations Hellaback and Salzabach to the (8 M.) Inn zur Neuen Schweizerei, a few hundred paces beyond which is the "Schweizerei Restaurant, both close to the Schloss. - (From Sorgau to Fürstenstein, see below.)

*Schloss Fürstenstein, the residence of Count Hochberg, Prince of Pless, charmingly situated on the E. side of the valley of the Hellabach or Polsnitz, and surrounded by extensive grounds, is one of the most attractive spots in Silesia. The château, erected in the Renaissance style in the 17th cent., has been entirely altered and sumptuously fitted up by the present proprietor. The tower commands a fine view.

A *Walk through the valley and a visit to the two castles may be accomplished in 2-3 hrs. as follows (or in the reverse direction, starting from the Schweizerei). Beyond the above-named cross-roads we turn to the left (8.), before reaching the Schloss, and then take the first footpath to the right, which leads to the Schützensitz (view of Salzbrunn), whence to the right, which leads to the Schützensitz (view of Salzbrunn), whence a digression may be made to the right to the (6 min.) Riesengrab (*View). We then return to the road and follow a track indicated by stone way-posts, which leads to the "Luisenplatz, where a beautiful view of the château, the Alte Burg, and the wooded Fürstensteiner Grund is enjoyed. Descend hence into the valley, 300 ft. in depth, cross the brook, and ascend to the Alte Burg, a small imitation of a medieval castle. A kind of tournament was held here in 1800 in honour of Frederick William III on which occasion the prizes were distributed to Ouene William III., on which occasion the prizes were distributed by Queen Louise (castellan 1-11/2 m.). Return by the same route into the beautiful valley, and descend the left bank of the stream. If time be limited, cross a wooden bridge which is soon reached, and ascend to the Schloss; but it is preferable to follow the brook as far as the Schweizerei, or farm, and to ascend thence to the right to the Schloss.

mentioned; farther on the route to the left following the brook should be chosen. Bad Salzbrunn lies above the villages of that name.

The line ascends in a wide circuit. 41 M. Sorgau. where passengers for Altwasser (R. 41) change carriages.

The route from Sorgau to Schloss Fürstenstein is slightly shorter than that from Freiburg. The Waldenburg road is followed to (11/2 M.) the Fürstensteiner Grund, and then the route above described is traversed in the reverse direction. - Halfway between Sorgau and the Fürstensteiner Grand opens the Balzgrand, a parallel valley.

The Schneekoppe is visible to the right in clear weather. The train is carried over Nieder-Salzbrunn by a viaduet; Ober-Salzbrunn lies to the left. Fine view.

431/2 M. Bad Salzbrunn. — Hotels. PREUSSISCHE KRONE; ELISENHOF; Sonne; Curhaus; Adler; all with restaurants. Numerous Lodging Houses.
Baths 60 pf. - 1 m. — Visitors' Tax 21 m., members of a family cheaper.

— The station is 1 M. from the Bad (omn. 30 pf.).

Salsbrunn (1270 ft.) lies in the valley of the Salsbach. Its salinealkaline waters were famed as early as 1316 for their efficacy in pulmonary and bowel complaints, but fell into disuse during the wars of the following centuries. Their virtues were again brought into notice about sixty years ago, and Salzbrunn is now the most fashionable watering-place in Silesia (3000 patients annually). The principal drinking-spring is the Oberbrunnen, which is enclosed by the Elisenhalle, in the pretty promenades of Ober-Salzbrunn (250,000 bottles exported annually). A few paces lower down rises the Mühlbrunnen, another drinking-spring, while the Baths are supplied by the Heilbrunnen and Wiesenbrunnen. The Annenthurm and the *Richthofenhöhe, both in the promenades, afford pleasant The (1 M.) Schweizerei (Restaurant), the views of the environs. (11/2 M.) Friedrichsruhe (Café), and the (21/2 M.) Antonscapelle are fine points in the vicinity.

At the upper end of Salzbrunn, near the entrance to the village of Hartau. the road to Altwasser diverges to the left (E.). Pedestrians are recommended to take the route by the *Wilhelmshöhe (1690 ft.), to which an avenue ascends from the promenades in 1/2 hour. Inn at the top commanding a fine view. — Descent on the E. side to Altwasser (p. 257) in 1/2 hr.

The Zeiskenschloss, or Czeschhaus, 11/2 hr. N.W. of Salzbrunn, destroyed in the Thirty Years' War, lies picturesquely in the valley of the Zeis. The road to it leads through the estate and village of Adelsbach. - The summit of the Sattalwald (2896 ft.), commanding an admirable view of the Silesian Mts., may be reached in 3 hrs.

The continuation of the line affords numerous beautiful views. Beyond (47 M.) Conradsthal it describes a curve which brings it back to the vicinity of Ober-Salzbrunn.

52 M. Fellhammer is the junction for the railway from Kohlfurt to Glatz (R. 38), the first station on which, Gottesberg (p. 243), is visible on the right. - Farther on, the line commands a succession of splendid views.

58 M. Schlesisch-Friedland (Weisses Ross), a well-built little town on the Steine, with weaving factories. To Adersback, see p. 253.

Diligence hence twice daily to Görbersderf (1740 ft.), situated in a sheltered valley, and frequented by consumptive patients (Dr. Brehmer's Establishment, 'pension' from 36 m. per week; Dr. Römpler's, 34-49 m. per week).

The Austrian frontier is now crossed. At (62 M.) Halbstadt (*Rail. Restaurant) baggage is examined by the custom-house officers.

Branch Railway from Halbstadt to Braunau in 1/2 hr. (fares 43, 32, 21 kr.) - 31/2 M. Hermsdorf-Ochlberg. 51/2 M. Braunau (*Oesterreichischer Adler; *Traube), a small town in an open valley. with a handsome Benedictine abbey.

About 1/2 M. to the W. are the Weekersdorf Rocks, a 'Felsenstadt' resembling those of Adersbach and Weckelsdorf, and much visited from Bad Charlottenbrunn (p. 243), 12 M. to the N. A visit (with gaide) to this labyrinth occupies nearly 2 hrs.; fine view from the Elisabethhöhe, the highest of the hills. In 1/2 hr. more we reach the Marien-Capelle on the Stern, another fine point of view with a chapel and an *Inn.

Six miles to the S. of Braunau lie the small town of Wünschelburg (Adler; *Nitzsche), connected with Cudowa (p. 263) by a good road, and Albendorf, a resort of pilgrims. Diligence from Wünschelburg twice daily to (6 M.) Mittel-Steine (p. 243).

The Heuscheuer is often visited from Weckersdorf, the route leading from the Stern via Klein-Ladney (20 min.), Dosengrund (1/4 hr.), Bilay (3/4 hr.); from the Stern viä Klein-Ladney (20 min.). Dösengrund (1/4 hr.), Bilay (7/4 hr.), Kleig (7/4 hr.), Pausenei (1/2 hr.), Pausenei (1/2 hr.), and the Schweiserhaus (see below; 1/2 hr.), in all 3 hrs.; or better from Nausenei to (1 hr.) Carisbery (Stiebler; Hauck) on the S. side of the Grosse Heuscheuer, and thence to the top in 1/2 hr. — The most interesting route is from Wünschelburg (see above), the easiest from Cudowa (p. 263). — A charge of 40 pf. (children 25 pf.) is made in support of a fund to keep the paths in order; chaise-k-porteurs to the top 51/4, up and down 5 m.

The "Houscheuer (*Schweiserhaus; comp. Map, p. 262) rises about 500 ft. above the lofty plain of the Leierberg. The grotesque rock-formations here have various whimsical names (walk through them, with guide, 1/2-1 hr.). The highest point is the Grosseatersiuhi (2820 ft.), a seat hollowed out in a small rocking stone, which commands a fine view of the neighbouring rocks.

The first station beyond Halbstadt on the railway to Chotzen is (67½ M.) Weckelsdorf (*Rail. Restaurant), 2½ M. from the little town of that name (omn.; see p. 254). 73 M. Politz (Schwan); route hence vià Machau, Melden, and Nausenei to (3 hrs.) Carlsberg, see p. 263. 77 M. Hronow.

81 M. Nachod (Lamm), with a château of the Wallenstein family, commanding a fine view. From Nachod to Lewin, 6 M., diligence once daily; also daily to (4½ M.) Cudowa, (9 M.) Reinerz (see p. 263), and Skalitz (p. 258).

85 M. Wenzelsberg; the Wenzelcapelle near the station contains an Austrian military monument (branch-line to Starkotsch, see p. 257). 88 M. Neustadt an der Mettau; 94 M. Opotschno, with a château of Count Colloredo-Mansfeld; fine view of the Schneekoppe. 104 M. Tynist, where several railways intersect.

118 M. Chotzen (Rail. Restaurant), see Baedeker's Southern Germany.

43. From Breslau to Glatz and Mittelwalde.

RAILWAY to Glate, 58 M., in 2% hrs. (fares 7 m. 60, 5 m. 70, 3 m. 80 pf.); to Mittelwalde, 81 M., in 3% hrs. (10 m. 40, 7 m. 80, 5 m. 20 pf.).

Breslau, see p. 232. Country at first fertile, but uninteresting. On the right rises the Zobten (p. 258). 9 M. Rothsürben (branch to Zobten, see p. 258); 16 M. Wäldchen; 23 M. Strehlen, with 7261 inhab., on the Ohle. The train then ascends by this stream to (32 M.) Heinrichau and (35 M) Münsterberg.

45 M. Camens (Adler), on the Neisse, the junction for the line to Königszelt and Neisse (R. 44). Camenz once possessed a Cistercian abbey, founded in 1249, and suppressed in 1810. An inscription in the choir of the church records that Frederick the Great escaped being captured by the hostile Croatians here in 1745 by assuming the garb of a monk.

On the neighbouring Hartaberg rises the imposing modern Gothic château of Prince Albert of Prussia; in the park behind it fountains play on Sun. and Thurs. from 3 to 8 p.m. — A picturesque road leads from Camenz to (7 M.) Reichenstein, with its arsenic mines, and (12 M.) Landeck (see below). Pedestrians should choose the route through the Schlacken-that and past the Rosenkrans Chapel (Tavern), a walk of 5 hrs.

51 M. Wartha (Löwe), a small town. A steep path ascends to the Chapel of St. Anna on the Warthabery (1838 ft.), which attracts 40,000 pilgrims annually (*View). Other good points of view are the Königshainer Spitzberg, the Bergsturz, and the Grafensitz. Near the town the Neisse forces its passage through a rocky pass, formed by the spurs of the Schneeberg and Eulen-Gebirge. Tunnel.

58 M. Glatz (Stadt Rom; Neu-Breslau; Weisses Lamm; Weisses Ross; Teuscher's Restaurant), a strongly-fortified town on the Neisse, with 13,307 inhab., is commanded by the conspicuous keep of the old castle, 300 ft. above it (tickets of admission from the commandant), opposite to which is the modern fortress. Pleasant walks to the Königshainer Spitzberg (p. 261), the Rothe Berg, and the Sophienfels. — From Glatz to Kohlfurt, see R. 38; excursion in the Glatzer Gebirge, see below.

63 M. Rengersdorf. Good points of view in the neighbourhood are the Bittnerkoppe, the Hutstein, and the Pils.

70 M. Habelschwerdt (*Drei Karpfen; Deutsches Haus, with restaurant), a district-town with 5550 inhab., pleasantly situated on the Neisse. The Chapel of St. Florian, $^{3}l_{\Phi}M$. distant, affords a fine *View; another admirable point of view is the *Doblenberg, 4 M. to the W., beyond the Weistrits and the $(2^{1}l_{\Phi}M)$. Wüstung (Inn).

A good road runs from Habelschwerdt to (181/2 M.) Ressers (p. 265) via All-Lomnitz and Wallisfurth. Walkers should follow the pleasanter route by the Brande. Kronstadt (Inn), and the Seefelder, a high-lying moor (2470 ft.), the streams draining which descend to the Bibe and the Oder.

74 M. Langenau, station for the pleasant little Bad Langenau (Curhaus; Annahof), with chalybeate and mud baths.

Next stat. Ebersdorf. Then (81 M.) Mittelwalde (1312 ft.; Stern; Sterngarten Restaurant), the Prussian frontier-station, picturesquely situated. The Austrian N.W. Railway runs hence to (66 M.) Königgrätz, etc. Pleasant excursions may be taken to Burg Littitz, Pottenstein, Grulich, the Schwedenschanze, etc.

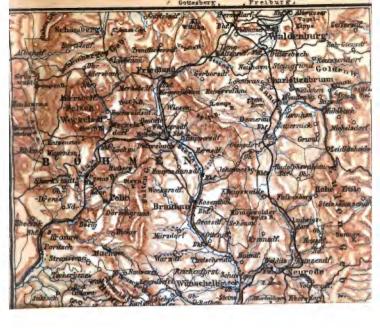

*Glatzer Gebirge. From Glatz by carriage or diligence (twice daily) to Ullersdorf, Kunzendorf (both with fine parks), and (171/2 M.) Landeck (1442 ft.; Blauer Hirsch; Deutscher Kaiser), a smell town on the Biele. About 3/4 M. to the E. lie the — Baths of Landeck (Schlössel; Düppler Hof; Merkur; Weisser Löwe; Luisenhof; Krone), with warm sulphureous springs (70-90°), known as early as the 13th cent., and used both internally and externally. Beautiful shady grounds. — About ½ M. to the N. of the town of Landeck is the hydropathic establishment of Thalheim.

Among the walks may be mentioned the Waldtempel (10 min.), amidst beautiful pines; 1/2 hr. to the S. the Schollenstein; farther off, the Hohen-coller (1 hr.), with fine view; still more extensive from the Dreiecker (11/4 hr.), stretching to the Lusatian Mts.; the ruin of Karpenstein, not far distant; view of Landeck from the Galgenberg (1/4 hr.), and still finer from the Ueberschaar, a basaltic rock, 1 hr. to the N.E. A pleasant drive from Landeck by Scilenberg and the Puhu on the Schwarzenberg to the Wölfelsgrund (see below) in 4 hrs. (carr. with two horses 15 m.), with fine view from the pass.

The road then ascends the pretty Biele Valley to (3 M.) Seitenberg (Nassauer Hof; Brauhaus), with a fish-breeding establishment (visitors admitted). We walk thence in 1/2 hr. to the marble-quarries on the Kreuzberg, descend in 1/2 hr. into the Klessengrund, traverse the poor, straggling village of that name, and ascend in 11/2 hr. through magnificent pine-forests to a finger-post, 1/4 hr. beyond which we reach the chalet (*Inn) on the — view; we must therefore walk round the margin of the bleak tableland, in order to survey successively the basin of Glatz, the Silesian plain, the Altvater-Gebirge (to the E.), and the wild valleys of the March and its affluents which rise here towards the S.

The rugged paths descending to the S. and S.W. to the sources of the March and the Neisse, present no attractions.

From the above-mentioned finger-post we descend in 1/2 hr. to the W. to the upper Wölfelsgrund; 1/2 hr. farther down, the valley is joined by another valley lying more to the N.; 11/4 hr. the picturesque * Wölfelsfall (*Inn zur guten Laune, with steps descending to the fall; Seiffert's, opposite the fall), which is precipitated from a height of 80 ft. into a narrow rocky basin, whence it escapes through a deep gorge into the plain.

We may now drive in 11/2 hr. by Wölfelsdorf to Habelschwerdt (p. 262); pedestrians, however, should make a short circuit to the N., in order to visit the conspicuous pilgrimage-chapel of *Maria Schnee (2460 ft.; Inn), situated on a sharp ridge, and commanding a magnificent prospect. Extensive panorama from the 'Belvedere' above the chapel (key kept at the chapel). From the chapel to Habelschwerdt 21/2 hrs., to Langenau (p. 262) 3 hrs.

From Glatz the old Prague road leads (diligence thrice daily in summer, omnibus twice) to the W. via Schwedeldorf and the baths of All-

Haide to -

15 M. Reinerz (1725 ft.; Schwarzer Bär; Deutsches Haus), a small town of 3326 inhabitants. The Roman Catholic church contains a curious pulpit, representing the whale that swallowed Jonah. Reinerz is connected by an avenue with (1 M.) Bad Reinerz (Germania; Victoria; visitors' tax 12 m., for a family 25 m.), a favourite watering-place (3000 visitors), with alkaline springs, which are efficacious in nervous disorders, poverty of blood, and the like. Charming environs. The Hohe Mense (2868 ft.), 21/2 hrs. to the S., commands an extensive view towards Bohemia.

Farther on is (5 M.) Lewin (1381 ft.; Deutscher Adler; Deutscher Haus), the Prussian frontier-town. To the N. of the road, 11/2 M. from Lewin, lies the small bath of Oudowa (Cur-Hötel; Stern; New Welt), with Lewin, hes the small bath of Oudowa (Cur-Hötel; Stern; Newe Well), with pleasant grounds. A good road leads hence to Carliberg, at the foot of the Heuscheuer (drive of 3 hrs., back in 2 hrs.). Another excursion may be made to Tscherbenei, Nausenei, Straussenei, and Bukowina (Inn), all Bohemian-speaking villages in Prussian territory. Bukowina lies at the foot of the Wilde Loch, a mass of rock hollowed out by the action of the water, forming a labyrinth not to be explored without a guide.

6 M. Nachod, see p. 261.

44. From Liegnitz to Königszelt, Neisse, and Cosel.

136 M. RAILWAY in 7-12 hrs. (fares 17 m. 60, 12 m. 80, 8 m. 80 pf.). Liegnitz, see p. 231. The line crosses the Katzbach, and between Neudorf and Brechelshof intersects the field of the Battle of the Katzbach, in which, on 26th Aug., 1813, Blücher signally defeated the French under Macdonald and took 100 pieces of cannon and 18,000 prisoners. A monument in memory of the victory has been erected 21/2 M. to the N.W. of Brechelshof. Near this spot Duke Henry of Liegnitz defeated the heathen Mongolians in 1241, but fell in the battle. His mother St. Hedwig erected a chapel here, on which the monastery of Wahlstatt, now a military school, was afterwards founded. 14 M. Jauer, noted for its sausages, 25 M. Striegau, famous for the victory gained by Frederick the Great over the united armies of the Austrians and Saxons, commanded by Prince Charles of Lorraine, in 1745; the battle, however, is better known as that of Hohenfriedberg, where the Austrians were stationed. A tower to commemorate the victory has been erected on the 'Siegeshöhe', whence an extensive view is obtained.

29 M. Königszelt, see p. 258. The train skirts the village of Bunzelwitz (p. 258) and crosses a long viaduct.

35 M. Bchweidnitz (Krone; Goldnes Scepter; *Deutsches Haus, 2nd class), formerly the capital of a principality of the name, with 22.200 inhab., is prettily situated on the left bank of the Weistritz. Rathhaus in the market-place, with tower 170 ft. high. The lofty tower (338 ft.) of the Roman Catholic Church commands an admirable prospect. The old fortifications were removed in 1862 and converted into handsome promenades. The beer of the place is famous, especially the 'Schwarze Schöps' (in autumn only), which was largely exported in the 16th century.

A pleasant excursion may be taken from Schweidnitz to Jacobsdorf (see below), and then by the high-road to Weistritz and (81/2 M.) Breitenhain. Pedestrians should now quit the road, which leads on to (11/2 M.) Kynau, cross the bridge to the left, and follow the pleasant wooded valley of the Weistritz, here called the *Schlesierthai. At the Thalmuhle, about 1 M. from the bridge, the Mahlbachthai, another picturesque dale, opens to the left, while the 'Karetenweg' ascends to the right to the extensive and well-preserved ruin of Kynaburg, near Kynau. From Kynau to Charlottenhaum (n. 243) 5 M. binh. sed.

brunn (p. 243), 5 M., high-road.

37 M. Jacobsdorf. To the left rise the hills of the Peile. The red chapel among the foliage is the last resting-place of the wife of Field-Marshal Moltke, who owns the château of Kreisau beyond it (6 M. from Schweidnitz). 42 M. Faulbrück.

47 M. Reichenbach (Schwarzer Adler; Krone), a town (pop. 7255) with old fortifications and a Schloss, is historically interesting as the scene of a victory gained by Frederick the Great over Laudon in 1762. The Convention of Reichenbach in 1790, guaranteeing the subsistence of the Turkish Empire, and a treaty between the Allies and Austria, which was ratified at Prague in 1813, were also concluded here.

The Eulengebirge, a picturesque mountain-district, may be visited from Reichenbach as follows: by diligence to (3 M.) Petersualdau, with a château of Count Stolberg; walk to (2 M.) Steinkunzendorf (Inn), and the forester's house in the Tränkeprund. Thence to Neurode (p. 243) in 11/4 hr.

The train next passes (55 M.) Gnadenfrei, a Moravian colony. 61 M. Frankenstein (Umlauf; Goldener Löwe), a small town with 7861 inhab., situated in the most fertile district in Silesia, was rebuilt after a fire in 1858. The Schlossberg, which is crowned with an extensive ruin, commands a beautiful view of the Eulengebirge and Silberberg.

Bilberberg (Schwarzer Adler), a small town fortified by Frederick the Great, is reached by diligence once daily in 13/4 hour. The works are partly hewn in the solid rock. Fine view from the keep.

66 M. Camenz, the junction for the Breslau and Glatz railway (R. 43). - The train follows the course of the Neisse, and crosses it near (73 M.) Patschkau. 79 M. Ottmachau; 84 M. Giessmannsdorf.

89 M. Neisse (Liebig's Hotel; Kaiserhof; Schwarzer Adler; Stern), a pleasant town and fortress on the Neisse with 20,507 inhab.. in a pretty district. In the Ring, or market-place, rise the Gothic Rathhaus, with a tower 240 ft, in height, and the new Stadthaus. The Roman Catholic Parish Church, completed in 1430, was restored after a fire in 1542. The Kreuzkirche, distinguished by its two towers and ornamented with frescoes, dates from 1715. The poet Joseph von Eichendorff died here in 1857 (house in the Eichendorff-Platz, with a tablet), and is buried in the Jerusalemer Kirchhof. Pleasant promenades, particularly the Neissedamm, with the Military Academy, and the Rochus-Allee, where there are several public gardens. On the Capellenberg is a Monument in memory of the events of 1813, and on the road to Ottmachau is another, commemorating the wars of 1866 and 1870-71. Near the latter, 11/9 M. to the W. of the town, is the *Sellerie, affording a picturesque view of the Mährische Gesenke (see below). - Branch-line to Brieg (29 M., in $1^{1}/_{4}$ hr.), see R. 45.

97 M. Deutsch-Wette, where a branch-line diverges to Ziegenhals (for Jägerndorf, Troppau, and Olmütz; see Baedeker's Southern Germany).

1031/2 M. Schnellewalde. 107 M. Neustadt, a manufacturing town with 14,292 inhab., destroyed by the Austrians in 1779 and rebuilt by Frederick the Great. — 116 M. Deutsch-Rasselwitz.

FROM DEUTSCH-RASSELWITE TO LEOSSCHOTZ, 91/2 M., railway in 40 min. (1 m. 30, 1 m., 70 pf.). The only intermediate station is Steubendorf.—Leobschütz (Deutsches Haus: Post: Weisses Ross), an industrial town with 12,018 inhab., was originally a Slavonic settlement and was colonised by the Germans in the 18th century. It passed from Bohemia to Prussia in 1741. The Gothic parish-church dates from the 18th century. — From Leobschütz to Ratibor, see p. 267; to Jägerndorf, see Baedeker's Southern Germany.

The train crosses the Hotzenplotz near (121 M.) Ober-Glogau (Grüner Kranz), a town of 5138 inhab., with the château of Count Oppersdorff, built in the 13th cent. and containing interesting works of art and antiquities. — 1261/2 M. Twardawa.

133 M. Cosel (Kronprinz), a town with 5030 inhab, on the left bank of the Oder, formerly the capital of a duchy and fortified down to 1874. Monument in memory of the defence of the town against the French in 1807. Government stud. Promenades on the site of the old fortifications.

We now cross the Oder. — 136 M. Cosel-Kandrzin, the junction of the Breslau and Oderberg railway (see p. 266).

On Austrian teritory, 19 M. to the S. of Neisse, in the Mahrische Gesenke, a district of the Sudetengebirge, is situated Grafenberg, with a celebrated hydropathic establishment founded by Priessnitz (d. 1851), the inventor of the system. Excursions may also be made to Ziegenkals (see below) with the Holzberg, to Zuckmantel, a resort of pilgrims, and the Bischofskoppe, and to the small baths of Karlsbrunn at the foot of the Altvater, all situated in the same district.

The line goes on to Ziegenhals, where it joins the Troppau-Olmütz line (see Baedeker's Southern Germany and Austria).

45. From Breslau to Oderberg (Vienna).

112 M. RAILWAY. Express to Oderberg in 39/4 hrs. (fares 16 m. 50, 12 m. 30, 8 m. 60 pf.). To Vienna in 10 hrs. (fares 45 m., 33 m. 60 pf.).

Breslau, p. 232. The first part of the journey is uninteresting. 16 M. Ohlau (Adler), a small town on the Oder, with extensive to-bacco fields. To the right, near Brieg, rises the church of Mollwits, where the Austrians were defeated by Frederick the Great in 1741.

251/2 M. Brieg (Lamm; Kreuz; Deutsches Haus), the capital of a district, on the Oder, with 17,508 inhabitants. The old Schloss of the princes of Brieg was begun under Duke Frederick II. in 1547, and completed by Italian workmen in the most tasteful Renaissance style. The finest part of the building is the portal, constructed in sandstone and covered with figures and rich ornamentation. The carriage-approach and the court-yard are highly interesting in point of architecture, in spite of their sad dilapidation. The plain yet picturesque Rathhaus and the Gymnasium also date from the 16th century. The most noteworthy churches are the Prot. Nicolaikirche, and the Roman Catholic Hedwigskirche. Monument in memory of the battle of Mollwitz.— Branch-line to Nicolaiks (p. 265).

35 M. Löwen; 43 M. Dambrau. The Oder is crossed at (51 M.) Oppeln (Form's Hotel; Schwarzer Adler), the seat of government for Upper Silesia, with 14,447 inhabitants. The only relic of the old Château of the Dukes of Silesia is a tower incorporated with the gymnasium. The New Château, on an island in the Oder, was founded in the 14th cent., and is now a magazine. The Adalbert-capelle is said to have been founded by Adalbert, Bishop of Prague. We are now in Polish-speaking territory. — Branch-line to Vos-

The main line next skirts the Annaberg (with a celebrated pilgrimage-church), and reaches (76 M.) Cosel-Kandrzin (*Restaurant), the junction of the Cosel and Liegnitz line (R. 44).

From Cosel-Kandrein to Cracow, 100 M., railway in 5.81/2 hrs. — 23 M. Gleiwitz (Deutsches Haus), an old town with 15,077 inhab, and a fine church. A busy mining and manufacturing district is now traversed. 32 M. Morgen-roth is the junction for Tarnovitz, and Kattovitz (Well's Hotel) the junction for Nendsa. Beyond Myslovitz the train enters a district which was formerly the free state of Cracow (comp. Baedeker's S. Germany and Austria).

The Vienna train continues its route towards the S. — 87 M. Ratiborer-Hammer stands at the head of the navigable portion of the Oder. Alluvial deposits have here raised the bed of the river so considerably that inundations are of very frequent occurrence. — 90½ M. Nendza; railway to Kattowitz, see above. — The train crosses to the left bank of the Oder.

96 M. Ratibor (* Wedekindt's Hotel, R., L., & A. 3 m.; Prinz von Preussen; Deutsches Haus), with 18,373 inhab., possesses a handsome court-house by Schinkel. a beautifully-situated château. and a modern Gothic church. Pleasant walk to the (4 M.) Stadtwald (view). Branch-line to Leobschütz (p. 265).

From (109 M.) Annaberg a diligence runs in 2 hrs. to (10 M.) Königsdorff-Jastrzemb (Curhaus, D. 11/2 m.; Königsdorff; Sanssouci), a watering-place with baths containing iodine and bromine.

The train again crosses the Oder, which here forms the boundary between Prussia and Austria, and stops at (112 M.) Oderberg, the seat of the Austrian custom-house authorities. - From Oderberg to Vienna, see Baedeker's S. Germany and Austria.

to Vienna, see Baceleker's S. Germany and Austria.

From Breslau to Bruthen, 116 M., by the Rechte-Oderuferbahn, or Railway of the Right Bank of the Oder, in 44/4-53/4 hrs. (fares 10 m. 40, 7 m. 80, 5 m. 20 pf.). 81/2 M. Sibyllenort with a fine château and park of the Duke of Brunswick. 17 M. Oels (Goldener Adler), a pleasant town (pop. 10,457), once the capital of a principality, on the Oelsa; on a height a Schloss of 1558, with an extensive park. Branch-line to Gnesen (p. 230). — 331/2 M. Namslau, near which is Minkowsky, where General Scidlitz died in 1773. From (66 M.) Kreusburg branch-railways diverge to (124 M.) Posen (p. 229) and (121/2 M.) Rosenberg. 79 M. Vossowska, the junction for Oppeln (see p. 266). 107 M. Tarnowitz, the headquarters of the important Silesian mining-district. 116 M. Beuthen (Prinz von Preussen; Sanssouci), the capital of a district, with 22,811 inhabitants. The line runs on to Cracow and Vienna. cow and Vienna.

46. From Breslan to Dresden.

164 M. RAILWAY. Express in 6 hrs. (fares 23 m. 50, 17 m. 70 pf.). From Breslau to (84 M.) Kohlfurt, see R. 45. The next stations are (93 M.) Pensig and (100 M.) Moys (p. 241). Then (102 M.) Görlitz, see p. 239. To the left rises the Landskrone (p. 241).

108 M. Reichenbach is the last Prussian town.

114 M. Löbau (860 ft.; Wettiner Hof; Stadt Leipzig; Goldnes Schiff; Rail. Restaurant), the oldest of the six allied towns of Upper Lusatia (see p. 239), which entered into a league here in 1346, is a busy place with 7372 German inhabitants. The neighbouring country is peopled with Wends, a Slavonic race differing from their German neighbours in language, customs, and dress, and numbering about 130,000 in Upper Lusatia. The town lies at the foot of the Löbauer Berg (1420 ft.; inn and view at the top, 658 ft. above the town, and 1/2 hr. from the station).

FROM LÖBAU TO ZITTAU, 21 M., railway in 1 hr. (fares 2 m. 80, 2 m. 10, 1 m. 40 pf.). 6 M. Ober-Cunnersdorf; the Cottmar (1780 ft.), 1/2 hr. to the S., commands a view. 10 M. Herrnhut ("Gemeinde-Logis), a pleasant village with 1119 inhab., was founded in 1722 by several families from Moravia who belonged to the Moravian brotherhood ('Herrnhüter'), and had ravia who belonged to the morevian protection of thermatter j, and had quitted their country on account of their religion. The site was presented to the exiles by Count Zinzendorf (d. 1760), the proprietor. The Morevian meeting-house contains an ethnographical museum. — 17½ M. Schetbe, junction for Warnsdorf (p. 298). 21 M. Zittau, see p. 254.

Another branch-line runs from Löbau to Ebersbach, Seiflennersdorf, and the Schember of the Schember and Sohland, all manufacturing places. - From Ebersbach the Bohemian

N. Railway leads to Rumburg, Schönkinde, and (12 M.) Kreibitz, which is connected with Tetschen by a line mentioned at p. 298. The Kaltenberg near Kreibitz affords a fine view.

About $^{3}/_{4}$ M. to the S. of (122 M.) Pommritz lies the village of Hockkirch, memorable as the scene of one of the bloodiest and most disastrous battles fought by Frederick the Great (14th Oct. 1758).

Marshal Keith, Frederick's well-known general, fell in this battle. He was the son of Lord Keith, and an adherent of the Pretender. After the battle of Sheriffmulr he was branded as a Jacobite, and obliged to quit the country. He afterwards entered the Russian service, in which he greatly distinguished himself, and attained the rank of field-marshal. Having resigned his appointment he repaired to Berlin, where Frederick the Great nominated him a Prussian marshal and governor of Berlin. In 1776 Sir Robert Keith, British ambassador at Vienna, erected a monument in the church at Hochkirch to the memory of his kinsman, whose remains had been transferred to the garrison church at Berlin in 1759.

A favourite point of view is the "Ozernebeh (i. e. devil's mountain; 1764 ft.), a summit in the range which stretches to the S. of Hochkirch, 41/2 M. to the S.W. of Pommritz (carr. to Wwischke, then on foot in %, hr.). At the top are a tower and inn. At the foot of the tower lies a huge block of granite, said to be an altar of the ancient heathen Wends. The prospect is very fine, embracing the vast and fertile plain of Upper Lusatia; E. the Landskrone, near Görlitz, and the Giant Mts.; S. the Bohemian Mts.; S.W. those of Saxon Switzerland, among which the Lilien-stein and Königstein are most conspicuous.

125 M. Kubschütz.

129 M. Bautzen (Goldne Weintraube; *Goldne Krone: Weisses Ross; Stern; Lamm; Münchener Hof; Restaurant Thiermann, by the Lauenthurm, fine view), the handsome and busy capital of Saxon Upper Lusatia (17,509 inhab.), formerly one of the six allied towns, and still surrounded by picturesque walls and watch-towers, is situated on a height above the Spree. The Church of St. Peter in the Fleischmarkt, founded in 1213, has been used since 1635 by the Roman Catholics and Protestants in common. In front of the church is a monument to Elector John George I. Schloss Ortenburg (1635). situated on an eminence on the Spree at the W. end of the town, now contains government-offices. On the tower is a life-sized figure of Matthew Corvinus of Hungary, commemorating the restoration of the castle by that monarch in 1483. The chamber of the District Court is embellished with a fine stucco ceiling, with scenes from Lusatian history. On the slope of the Schlossberg are the ruins of an old fortified church. The Rathhaus, containing portraits of the burgomasters of the last 400 years, the Gymnasium, the Barracks, and the Landhaus, or Hall of the Estates, may also be noticed. In the Innere Lauen-Strasse is an extensive Antiquarian Museum (Wed. 2-4, 20 pf.; at other times on application at Weller's, the bookseller). The stone head on the Nicolaipforte is said to be a portrait of a town-clerk who tried to betray the town to the Hussites in 1429 and was condemned to be drawn and quartered. By the Reichenthurm is the Monument of Emp. Rudolf II., erected in 1611. On the left bank of the Spree lies the Protechenberg, a good point of view. On 20th and 21st May, 1813, the Russians and Prussians under Blücher were repulsed by Napoleon in this neighbourhood. — From Bautzen to Schandau, see p. 301.

The valley of the Spree is now crossed by a long viaduct. which affords a fine retrospect of Bantzen. 142 M. Bischofswerda.

Rammenau, the birthplace of J. G. Fichte (in 1762), with a monument to his memory, lies 3 M. to the N.

From Bischoffwerda To Zittau, 40 M., railway in 2½ hrs. (fares 5 m. 20, 3 m. 90, 2 m. 60 pf.). — 5½ M. Niederneukirch, 8 M. Oberneukirch, 12 M. Willien, all on the Schandau and Bauten railway (p. 301). — 24 M. Ebersbach; 26 M. Gersdorf; 28½ M. Eibau, stations on the Löbau and Zittau line (p. 267). — 36½ M. Schelbe (p. 267). 40 M. Zittau, see p. 254.

From (151 M.) Arnsdorf a branch-line runs to Pirna (p. 296). 154 M. Radeberg, a small town with an old château, and iron and glass-works, 11/2 M. to the N. of which, in the midst of fragrant pine-woods, lies the small Augustusbad, with a chalybeate spring.

From Radeberg to Kamenz, 181/2 M., railway in 1 hr. (fares 2 m. 30, FROM HADEBERG TO KAMEEZ, 18½ M., railway in 1 hr. (fares 2 m. 30, m. 70, 1 m. 20 pf.). Stations Armsdorf (see above), Grossrobradorf, and Pulsnitz, birthplace of Rietschel, the sculptor. 18½ M. Kamenz (Goldner Hirsch), with 6812 inhab., was the birthplace of Lessing (in 1729), to whom a colossal bust was erected near the Wend church in 1863. The house of his parents is denoted by an inscription. View from the tower on the Huthberg, ½ M. from the town. About 6 M. to the 8.E. of Kamenz is the Clostercian monastery of Marienstern, founded in 1264, with late-Gothic cloisters and old stained glass. — From Kamenz the train runs on to Hohenbocka, Senftenberg, Kalau, and Lübbenau (p. 239).

Berlin, see p. 1. Departure from the Anhalt Station. — At (51/2 M.) Lichterfelde, the extensive red buildings of the Cadet School (p. 66) are conspicuous to the right. 11 M. Gross-Beeren, where, on 23rd Aug. 1813, the Prussians under Bülow defeated a French corps, consisting principally of Saxons, under Oudinot. A small church and an iron monument mark the battle-field.

21 M. Trebbin: 31 M. Luckenwalde, with 14.706 inhabitants. 39 M. Jüterbog (Simon; Stolle), a district-town with 6955 inhabitants. The Church of St. Nicholas dates from the end of the 14th cent., the pretty New Sacristy from 1417, and the towers. which are connected near the top, were finished in the 16th century. In the interior is still shown one of the indulgences of Tetzel. who was carrying on his infamous trade here, when Luther denounced him at Wittenberg. The Old Sacristy is adorned with ceilingpaintings. The Rathhaus, completed in 1506. contains a room with handsome star-vaulting. The Abbot's House, which formerly belonged to the abbey of Zinna, the Tetzel Chapel, now a Roman Catholic oratory, and the three old gates of the town also merit inspection. The line to Halle and Leipsic diverges here (p. 322).

The Cistercian abbey of Zinna, 3 M. to the N.W. of Jüterbog (carr. with two horses 3, with one horse 2 m.), was founded in 1170 and secularised in 1547. The church, a handsome granite edifice dating from about 1216, contains brick vaulting of the 15th cent, a beautiful tabernacle in sandstone of the end of the 14th, stained glass of the end of the 15th, and the remains of choir-stalls of the beginning of the 15th century. The circular apses of the choir and the four chapels at the E. end of the transept are polygonal on the exterior. The secular buildings of the abbey are also interesting; the larger dates from the 15th, the smaller from the are also interesting; the larger dates from the 10th, the smaller from the 14th century. The town of Zinna, containing about 2000 inhab., was founded in 1764-77 by Frederick the Great, whose statue adorns the market-place. Dennewitz, 2 M. to the S.W. of Jüterbog, was the scene of a great victory gained by the Prussians under Bülow, on 6th Sept. 1813, over Ney and Oudinot, who lost 15,000 men and 80 cannon. Berlin itself was thus saved from imminent danger. Monument in memory of the victory.

Beyond (54 M.) Holzdorf the train crosses the Schwarze Elster. 63 M. Herzberg; 691/2 M. Falkenberg, the junction of the Halle, Cottbus, and Guben line (p. 327). 78 M. Burzdorf.

88 M. Röderau, the junction of this line with the Leipsic and Dresden Railway (p. 313). The train stops at (116 M.) Neustadt-Dresden, 1 M. from the hotels of the Altstadt; see below.

Principal Attractions. Picture Gallery, Green Vault, Museum Johan-Walk along the Brühl Terrace, cross the old bridge, traverse the Neustadt, and return by the Marienbrücke; then past the Zwinger and through the Altstadt to the Grosse Garten (Rietschel Museum). Excursion to the Bastei (p. 299) recommended.

Rapid changes of temperature are not unfrequent at Dresden and in the environs, especially in summer, when the evenings are often very cool. This remark also applies to Schandau and other places in the valley of the Elbe.

Dresden (370 ft.), the capital of the Kingdom of Saxony, mentioned in history for the first time in 1206, and the residence of the sovereigns since 1485, was greatly extended and embellished by the splendour-loving Augustus II., the Strong (1694 - 1733), and has rapidly increased during the present century. Population 220,818. The city lies on both banks of the Elbe, which separates the Altstadt and Friedrichstadt (S. side) with their suburbs from the Neustadt and Antonstadt, which were re-erected after a fire in 1686, with their suburbs. The beautiful environs and the magnificent picture-gallery attract numerous visitors, and a considerable English community resides here.

Dresden will probably long retain the designation of the Cradle of Rocco Art, although the expression 'roccoo' is now used in a somewhat marrower sense than it formerly was, and no longer applies to the whole of the art of the 18th cent., which embraces both the 'baroque' and the degraded styles. During the reign of Augustus true Strang Dresden began to occupy a prominent position as a cradle of art, the foundation of the Zwinger and the Invention of Porcelain (by Böttger, a chemist, in 1707; see p. 315) being the two most important events in its art career. As Augustus the Strong bore some personal resemblance to Louis XIV., so the erection of the Zwinger recalls the palatial edifices built about that period as monuments befitting the glorious reign of the Grand Monarque of France. The era of Louis XIV. loved to be compared with the golden period of Roman culture; and so, too, the Zwinger, of which, however, a very small portion only (the anterior court) was completed, was intended to embrace all the handsomest and most useful features of Roman baths and palaces. The leading object of the roccoc art, which to some extent finds an exponent in the style of the Zwinger, appears to have been to invest even the domestic life of monarchs with pomp and splendour, and to unveil to the eyes of the public the privacy of the princely boudoir and cabinet. Thus, in harmony with this tendency, the Zwinger would have afforded an admirable scene for the 'Merceries', or fairs, in the comedies and festivities of which the court would have acted a prominent part in transparent incognito. The porcelain manufacture was particularly well adapted for giving expression to the spirit of the style, as the material was equally suitable for being moulded into elegant, doll-like figures, or into flourishing and fantastic decorations. To this day, indeed, the roccoo style may be regarded as the classical style for porcelain moulding. A characteristic of the style, however, was superficiality, and its reign at Dreeden was accordingly but br

At length, about the beginning of the present century, Dresden began to regain a share of its former reputation in the province of art, when the city became the headquarters of the 'Romanticists', who were more given to poetry of conception than technical excellence of execution. The result of their labours has been a series of respectable, but stiff works in somewhat questionable taste. The chief masters of this period were Runge, Friedrich, Gerhard von Kügelgen, and Matthät. An attempt was made to stimulate the progress of native art by the invitation of eminent artists (Bendemann, Hübner, and Schnorr) from Düsseldorf and Munich; but the experiment was only partially successful, and Dresden continued to be inferior to the other chief cradles of art in the sphere of painting. During the last few decades, on the other hand, Dresden has made immense strides in the practice of the plastic art. Of this school Rietschel (1804-61) was the founder, and he was worthily succeeded by Johannes Schilling (b. 1828), Donndorf (now at Stuttgard), and Kiets. Entit Hachnel. b. 1811) is looked upon as the second head of the Dresden school; his best pupils are Haertel, Henze, and Brossmann. In the history of architecture Dresden has gradually attained a high reputation from having long been the headquarters of Semper (1804-1879), one of the greatest German architects of the present century.

The Altstadt and Neustadt are connected by means of three stone bridges. The Old or Augustus Bridge (Pl. E, 3, 4), constructed in the 13th cent., restored in 1727-31, and partly blown up by Marshal Davoust on 19th March, 1813, is ½ M. in length, and rests of 6 arches. (Pedestrians as well as carriages are expected to keep to the right side of the bridge.) About ½ M. below it is the Marienbrücke (Pl. D, 2), 250 yds. in length, and borne by 12 arches, completed in 1852, and serving both for railway and ordinary traffic. The Albertsbrücke (Pl. H, 3), connecting the suburb of Pirna with the Neustadt, was opened for traffic in 1877. The turreted building near it, on the left bank, is the Rifle Barracks (Pl. H, 3). All the bridges command a pleasant view.

Several of the chief attractions of Dresden are situated close to the old bridge, on the left bank of the river. On our left as we approach from the Neustadt lies the Brühl Terrace, and opposite to us are the Royal Palace and the Rom. Cath. Court Church; to the right are the Museum with the Zwinger, and the new Hoftheater.

The *Brühl Terrace, originally laid out as a garden in 1738 by Count Brühl, the minister of Augustus III., rising above the Elbe, and fully \(^1/2\) M. in length, is a favourite promenade, but has latterly lost much of its interest owing to the embankment now interposed between it and the river. It is approached from the Schloss-Platz by a broad flight of steps adorned with gilded *Groups of Night, Morning, Noon, and Evening, in sandstone, by Schilling. The terrace is planted with trees, and the side next the town is bounded by the Academy of Art and the Exhibition Buildings (Pl. F, 4), where exhibitions of pictures are held (Kunstverein, etc.). To the left rises the Bistschel Monument, designed by Schilling. Farther on are the Cafts mentioned at p. 271. — Opposite the terrace to the E., on the other side of a depression which descends to the Elbe, is the Synagogue (Pl. F, G, 4), a Romanesque edifice erected by Semper in 1840.

Descending from the Terrace, and following the Zeughaus-Str. in a straight direction, we perceive to the right at the corner of the Botanical Gardon (Pl. F, 4, 5), the Maurice Monument, to the memory of the Elector of that name, who fell in a battle with the Margrave of Brandenburg at Sievershausen in 1553 (p. 81), after having resigned his dignity to his brother Augustus, as the relief indicates.— In the Pillnitzer-Str., which runs E. from this point, stand the new Law Courts, with sculptures, and the Church of St. John (Pl. H, 5), a Gothic edifice with rich plastic orna-

The Roman Catholic Court Church (Pl. E, 4), opposite the old bridge, erected in the 'baroque' style in 1737-56 from designs by Chiaveri, and adorned with 64 statues of saints on the parapets and at the entrances, by Mattielli, contains an altarpiece by Raphael Mengs, representing the Ascension, formerly much overrated.

The tower is 280 ft. high. Beneath the sacristy are the royal burial-vaults. Church-music on festivals at 11 a.m.

The Palace (Pl. E, 4), founded in 1534, and frequently enlarged, chiefly by Augustus the Strong at the beginning of the 18th cent., is an extensive edifice of irregular form enclosing two quadrangles. The Georgenthor, 1534-37, which is much frequented as a thoroughfare to the Schloss-Strasse, and has a Gothic vaulting, is adorned on the outside with elegant Renaissance columns. Above the 'Grüne Thor', in the façade towards the Court Church, rises a tower 331 ft. in height, the loftlest in Dresden. The Green Gate leads into the Great Court, with interesting, richly-decorated staircase, towers at the four corners, and a gallery over the gate, dating, according to the inscription, from 1549 and 1550. In the corner to the right is the Green Vault (see below).

The 'Interior of the palace (admission, see p. 273) is embellished with beautiful frescoes by Bendemann, completed in 1845. In the Ball. Room are scenes from Greek mythology: procession of Bacchus and allegorical figures of poetry, music, dancing, architecture, sculpture, and painting; Marriage of Alexander and Roxana, Nuptials of Thetis, Apollo in the chariot drawn by swans, the three Greek tribes, and Homer. — In the Throne Room, or Banquet Hall, the Four Estates are represented in scenes from the history of Emp. Henry I., who was of Saxon descent (d. 936): Battle of Merseburg (knights), Conversion of the Danish king (ecclesiastics), Foundation of cities (burghers), and Solicitude for the rural population (peasantry). On the frieze, the Occupations and Labours of Life. At the other end of the hall: Lawgivers; in the middle Saxonia; on the left Moses, David, Solomon, Zoroaster, Solon, Alexander, Numa; on the right Constantine, Gregory the Great, Charlemagne, the emperors Henry I., Otho I., Conrad III., Frederick Barbarossa, Rudolph I., and Maximilian I. Above: Justice, Wisdom, Bravery, Moderation. — The Palace Chapel contains a number of good pictures by Guido Reni, Annibale Carracci, Raphael Megs, and others.

The *Green Vault (Grüne Gewölbe; entrance see above; admission, see p. 273), on the ground-floor of the palace, contains one of the most valuable existing collections of curiosities, jewels, trinkets, and small works of art, dating chiefly from the late - Renaissance and rococo eras, but also including numerous fine examples of an earlier period. The German goldsmith's work of the 16th and 17th cent., the enamels of Limoges, and the arts of ivory-carving and crystal-cutting are particularly well represented. Catalogue 1 m.

I. Boom. Bronzes. Crucifix, Giov. da Bologna; Dog scratching itself, P. Vischer; models of equestrian statues of Charles II. of England, Louis XIV., and Augustus the Strong; the last, by Wiedemann, 1734, being the original model of the monument in the market-place (p. 292). The tortoise-shell pedestals inlaid with brass are the work of Charles André Boule or Bult, the court-cabinet-maker of Louis XIV. (1642-1782), who has bequeathed his name to this kind of work. — II. Boom. Ivory. Two horses' heads attributed to Michael Angelo; Musicians fighting, attributed to Dürer; Crucifix with Madonna, Peruzzi; Dutch frigate, Jac. Zeller; Fall of the angels in 92 figures, carved out of a single mass of ivory about 16 inches in height; Contests of the Centaurs and Lapithæ; numerous goblets. — III. Room. Enamels, Mosaica, Ostrich-eggs, Nautilus (*No. 189), Mother-of-pearl, Amber, Coral. Magnificent chimney-piece by Neuber, 1782. — IV. Boom, the 'Green Vault', properly so called, owing to the colour of its walls: Vessels of Gold, Silver, and Crystal: two large silver wine-flagons with coolers; communion chalice and cup, Italian work of the 16th cent.; jewel-casket by Jammitter (1506-1585), the greatest of the earlier goldsmiths. — V. Room. Vessels in Stone and Crystal: various objects in chalcedony, agate, lapis-lazuli, oriental jaspar, and onyx; cups with cameos; clock ('perpetuum mobile') representing the Tower of Babel, by Schlottheim of Augeburg; Mary Magdalene after Carlo Dolci by Ding-linger (beginning of 18th cent., the Benvenuto Cellini of Saxony), a large work in enamel. Objects in rock-crystal, including a mirror with frame in the style of Benvenuto Cellini; Saxon and Chinese vases in serpentine; Articles and Trinkets of gold, precious stones, and pearls (from the middle of the 17th to the beginning of the 18th cent.). — VII. Room. Articles in Wood, Wax, Cherry-stones, etc., and the Polish regalia. — VIII. BOOM.

in weight, set as a hat-clasp; valuable chains of different orders, clasps, in weight, set as a hat-clasp; valuable chains of different orders, clasps, buckles, studs; ladies' trinkets, including a bow with 662 diamonds; rings (two of Luther and one of Melanchthon); weapons arranged according to the precious stones with which they are decorated; the largest ony in existence, 7 inches high; enamel master-pieces of Dinglinger, including the Court of the Grand Mogul Aureng Zeb at Delhi, with 132 movable figures.

The Cabinet of Coins, entered by a door to the left in the passage, was begun by George II. (d. 1680) and considerably extended under Frederick Augustus (d. 1827). Admission, see p. 273.

The Silberkammer, containing the king's plate, is also on the ground-floor of the palace and may be seen on application daily (Sat and Sat.

floor of the palace, and may be seen on application daily (Sat. and Sat. excepted) 9-1 and 4-6, fee 11/2-3 m. Historical catalogue sold by the custodian.

The outside of the old 'Stallaebaude' in the Augustus-Str., adjoining the palace on the E., was embellished by Walther in 1874 with scenes from Saxon history in 'sgraffito'.

In the THEATER-PLATZ with its promenades, extending to the N.W. of the Palace, are situated the New Theatre (see below), the Court Church (p. 275), the Hauptwache, or Guard House (Pl. É, 4), erected from designs by Schinkel in 1831, with a vestibule borne by six Ionic columns, and the Museum (see below).

The new Hoftheater (Pl. E, 3, 4), a magnificent Renaissance structure by Gottfried Semper, the architect of the old theatre that was burned down in 1869, was opened in 1878 and is one of the finest theatres in Europe. It covers an area of 5550 sq. yds. The front of the building, containing the ante-rooms and auditorium, projects in a semicircular form and faces the Roman Catholic church, while the part containing the stage rises at the back to the lofty height demanded by the scenic requirements of the modern opera. The principal entrance is in the 'Exedra', a castellated portico in front of the rotunda, surmounted by a quadriga in bronze by Schilling, representing Dionysus and Ariadne. The recess below the quadriga is decorated with ornamental paintings by Kiessling, including three large medallions of the Graces, Apollo, and Marsvas. The entrance is flanked with statues of Goethe and Schiller. The balustrades that crown the façade on both sides of the exedra bear statues, arranged in pairs, emblematical of the various conflicts represented in the drama (Jupiter and Prometheus, Creon and Antigone, etc.; at the end, Faust and Mephistopheles, Don Juan and the Statue, Oberon and Titania). The interior can contain 2000 spectators: the dull green ground of the decorations and the dark drop-scene by Keller render the effect almost sombre. The ceiling-paintings, by Marschall, are too far from the eye to be thoroughly effective. The *Upper Vestibule and *Upper Foyer are gorgeously decorated with coloured columns of imitation-marble and with wall and ceiling-paintings by eminent artists.

Between the theatre and the museum rises the bronze Statue of Weber (d. 1826; Pl. E. 4), designed by Rietschel, and erected in 1860.

The Museum (Pl. E, 4), a handsome edifice in the Renaissance style, designed by Semper, begun in 1847, and completed in 1854, is considered one of the finest examples of modern architecture. On a substructure of blocks of free-stone rises the vast oblong building, consisting of two principal stories and a third of smaller dimensions, with a lofty carriage-approach in the centre, surmounted by a cupola (the latter being an addition to Semper's design). The sculptures on the exterior by Ristschel and Hähnel indicate the object of the building (mythical, religious, and historical subjects: those on the N. side from the ancient world, those on the S. from the age of Christianity and romance). In niches on the right and left sides of the principal portal towards the court are statues of Raphael and Michael Angelo, by Hähnel. The cornice is adorned with statues of Giotto, Holbein, Dürer, and Goethe by Rietschel. Dante and Cornelius by Hähnel, and others.

The Museum forms the N.E. wing of the *Zwinger (Pl. D. E. 4). a building erected by Pöppelmann, the architect of Augustus II.. in 1711-22, but left unfinished for more than a century. It consists of six pavilions, connected by a gallery of one story, enclosing an oblong court 128 yds, long and 117 yds, wide. According to the still existing plans of the master, the present site of the museum was to have been occupied by a huge portal, which was to lead to an elevated plateau, flanked by two long palaces. These edifices were to have been connected by galleries, whence flights of steps would have descended to the Elbe. In some of its features the style of the Zwinger is 'rococo', but in the main it is a 'baroque' edifice, and is one of the most pleasing examples of that style. The enclosed space is now laid out as a pleasure-ground, embellished in summer with orange-trees. In the centre rises the Statue of Frederick Augustus (d. 1827) in bronze, by Rietschel, with figures of Piety, Wisdom, Justice, and Clemency. Best survey of the building from the terrace on the side next the river. To the N.W. of the Zwinger is a fountain, which plays on Sun. and Wed., 11-1.

The Museum and the Zwinger (and the Museum Johanneum, p. 290) contain the most important of the Dresden collections. In the Museum are the picture-gallery, engravings, drawings, and one room with casts. In the Zwinger are the casts, the Zoological and Mineralogical Museum, and the collection of mathematical and hvsical instruments.

The Pieture Gallery occupies the first and second floors of the Museum (admission, see p. 273). The entrance is in the thoroughfare, on the right when approached from the theatre. Director, Prof. Wormann. Catalogue 21/2 m.

The Dresden picture-gallery, which now ranks with the Louvre, Pitti, and Uffizi as one of the finest collections in the world, is chiefly indebted for its origin to Augustus III. (1733-63). Previously to his time a collection of pictures had already existed at Dresden, but it did not attain to a high place among the European galleries until 1745, when 100 valuable pictures, purchased from Duke Francis of Este (Modena gallery), were added to it. Numerous master-pieces were also purchased for it at various times about this period (Holbein's Madonna, from Venice, 1743; the Sistine Madonna from Piacenza, 1755; numerous Dutch and Flemish cabinet-pieces, etc.), so that at the time of the death of Augustus III. it had well-nigh attained to its present high rank.

In accordance with the taste prevalent at the time of its foundation, the gallery is somewhat sparingly provided with early works of the various schools. This is notably the case with the ITALIAN SCHOOLS of the 14th and 15th centuries, where the following works are alone remarkable: a Madonna by Mantegna (No. 226), St. Sebastian by Antonello da Messina (No. 227), a Holy Family by Piero di Cosimo (No. 24; erroneously given by the catalogue to Signorelli), a characteristic example of Lorenso di Credi (No. 39, aseribed to Leonardo da Vinci), several works by Cima, and three small pictures by Jacopo de Barbari or Jacob Walch (Nos. 1875-77), who is interesting as a German member of the Venetian school and also on account of his influence on Dürer.

The great masters of the Golden Period of Italian art are, on the other hand, admirably represented. The radiant magnificence of Raphael's Sistine Madonna, in which the most tender beauty is coupled with the charm of the mysterious vision, will forcibly strike every susceptible beholder, and the longer he gazes, the more enthusiastic will be his delight. Raphael's Florentine contemporaries are represented by Andrea del Sarto's large and brilliantly-coloured 'Sacrifice of Abraham' (No. 56) and by two companion-pieces of rare merit by Francia Bigio and Ubertini (53, 54). The gallery, however, possesses no example of Fra Bartolommeo. The most noteworthy of the later Florentine works is the portrait of the Duchess Eleanor by Bronsino (64).

Among the N. Italian schools that of Lombardy is almost unrepresented, the only important work being the Herodias (No. 40), a good example of the School of Leonardo da Vinci. — The PARMESH SCHOOL, on the contrary, in the works of its great master Correggio, is even more richly illustrated here than at Parma itself. The Madonna enthroned (No. 168) is of the master's earlier period, and reveals in its strict composition and luminous colouring the influence of the earlier Ferrarese school. In the Madonna with St. Sebastian (169) and his Holy Night (171) the master of chiaroscuro is seen at his best, while the Madonna and St. George (172) charms by the beauty of its flower-like tinting. The famous little picture of the Magdalene (170) must, however, be pronounced nothing more than a masterly copy, while the so-called Physician of Correggio (173) is probably by a Venetian artist.—The School of Freezara is represented by numerous works of Dosso Dossi, Benvenusto Garofalo, Ortolano, and others.

The pictures by the great VENETIAN MASTERS rank among the principal treasures of the gallery. Those ascribed to Giorgione are certainly unworthy of that artist, but Titian is studied here to great advantage. The Tribute Money (No. 248), a grand work of his early period, is one of the most nobly-conceived and admirably-executed paintings ever produced. The portrait of his daughter Lavinia (the 'Lady with the fan', No. 255) and that of an unknown personage. formerly supposed to be Arctino (No. 254), are good examples of his later style. Palma Vecchio's Venus and the Three Graces (Nos. 269, 268) are among the finest works of this masterly delineator of ripe Venetian beauty. No other gallery possesses so extensive a collection of the gorgeous master-pieces of Paolo Veronese. The close of the great epoch of Venetian art is illustrated by numerous good works by Tintoretto and the different members of the Bassano family, while the landscapes of Canale and his nephew Bellotto still reflect a favourable light on Venice at a time when Italian art generally had fallen into sad decadence (18th cent.). - The school of the ACADEMICIANS and mannerists is represented only too fully for the general character of the collection. The NATURALISTS are represented by the Card-sharpers of Caravaggio (No. 193) and by a series of good works by Ribera, among which the St. Mary of Egypt (No. 678) boasts a charm very unusual in this master.

The only works of the SPANISH SCHOOL that demand notice are the fine portrait of an elderly man by Velasques (No. 694), and the charming genre-like Madonna and Child of Murillo (No. 704), deservedly a popular favourite. — The Franch School of the 17th and 18th cent. is represented by a few good works of its leading masters, including two fine landscapes by Claude Lorrain (Nos. 725, 726), of magical atmospheric effect, two large pastoral scenes by Watteau (Nos. 759, 760), examples of Nicolas Poussin and Gaspard Dughet, and numerous characteristic portraits.

NETHBELANDISH SCHOOLS. The masters of the 15th cent. are almost entirely unrepresented, but the gallery possesses one priceless gem of this period in the small altarpiece of Jan van Eyck (No. 1836). The masters of the 16th cent. are also represented either unfavourably or not at all. The culmination of art in the Netherlands during the 17th cent. is, on the other hand, illustrated by numerous attractive works. Peter Paul Rubens, the great master of the Flemish School, may be studied here to great advantage. Some of the most popular of the works catalogued under his name. such as the Portraits of his Sons (No. 924), the Herodias (No. 910), and the Garden of Love (No. 918), are, indeed, merely admirable school-pieces, but there is no lack of authentic productions from his own hand. Thus the gallery possesses several paintings of his Italian period, including a fine St. Jerome (No. 909): and a series of admirable portraits which seem to be connected with each other. The Boar Hunt (No. 916) is a powerful, broadly-handled work of his early Netherlandish period, while his latest style is illustrated in the brilliantly-coloured Bathsheba and in the large 'Ouos Ego' (No. 903), an improvisation of imposing dramatic effect, produced for the entry of the Infant Ferdinand into Antwerp in 1635. Rubens's famous pupil. Anthony van Duck, is represented by a series of admirable portraits, chiefly of his later English period, and by a St. Jerome (No. 1067), which surpasses, at least in picturesque treatment, that of his master. The well-known Danaë (No. 1066), however, is certainly by another hand, and the Children of Charles I. (No. 1072) is a school-replica. Jacob Jordaens, the most Flemish of all Flemish painters, can be studied here better than in any other collection. Snuders contributes numerous pieces of stilllife. David Teniers the Elder and his more famous son are represented by several genuine though not striking works, which, however, yield in interest to the sketchy but powerful little works of A. Brouwer. The gallery also boasts of numerous works by the contemporary landscape-painters Paul Bril, Momper, Van Uden, and Jan Brueghel, with his followers Pieter Gusels and Pieter Bout.

DUTCH SCHOOL. The early masters are represented by a few moderate works only. Frans Hals, one of the great leaders of the school, also contributes only two or three insignificant portraits, but those by Ravesteun and Mierevelt are more important. Honthorst. too, is represented, but not so well as the cognate master Caesar van Everdingen (No. 1505). The landscapes of Van Goyen, Vlieger, and Molyn also belong to this period. - Rembrandt van Ryn, the great master of chiaroscuro, is represented by several of his finest creations, such as the portrait of his wife Saskia of 1641 (No. 1315), the portrait of himself with his wife on his knee (No. 1321; an earlier work), Samson's Riddle (1313), Manoah's Sacrifice (1316), and the admirable portrait of an old man, dating from 1654 (No. 1319). Rembrandt's school is nowhere better illustrated. His earliest scholar G. Dou contributes sixteen pictures of the most varied styles and dates, and Vermeer or Van der Meer of Delft appears in a group of life-size half-figures of rare beauty of colouring (No. 1540) and in the charming Love-letter (No. 1541). Scarcely a single one of the masters of low-life pieces is absent: the most prominent is Adrian van Ostade, whose Studio and Village Tavern

(Nos. 1384, 1383) are unsurpassed of their kind. The conversationpieces of Terburg and Gabriel Metsu are numerous and good, while Frans van Mieris the Elder contributes no fewer than fifteen works. several of which rank among his master-pieces. Jacob van Ruusdael. one of the greatest of Dutch landscape-painters, is particularly well and fully represented. The Hunt, the Monastery, and the Jewish Cemetery (Nos. 1546, 1553, 1547) are among the most famous works in the whole gallery, but his delicate management of light and space are perhaps seen to still greater advantage in the less pretentious Château Bentheim, the Heath, and the Forest Path (Nos. 1557, 1554, 1549). Allart van Everdingen's Norwegian Lake (No. 1506) is almost as poetical as the finest of Ruysdael's works, and surpasses them in vigour of colouring. Jan Both, Cuup, and Van der Neer, the great renderers of sunny atmosphere, are neither so happily nor so numerously illustrated, but their followers H. Sachtleven, Griffier, and J. Moucheron are represented to excess. The Dutch animal-painters may also be well studied at Dresden. Paul Potter contributes two works (Nos. 1529, 1530), Adrian van de Velde several master-pieces, and Berchem thirteen works, one of which (No. 1523) is a little gem. The gallery also contains nearly seventy examples of Philip Wouverman, the masterly delineator of cavaliers and battles, many of which are of the highest excellence. The masters of still-life and painters of poultry are almost all represented, as are also the somewhat affected and over-refined masters of the beginning of the 18th cent., such as the Van der Werffs and W. Mieris, who inaugurate the decline of the Dutch school into insipidity and conventionalism.

The German School is not so well illustrated in the Dresden Gallery as those of Italy and the Netherlands. The famous Madonna of Burgomaster Meyer (No. 1885), long ascribed to Holbein, has been shown by modern criticism to be only an admirable Netherlandish copy of the original at Darmstadt. On the other hand Holbein's Portrait of Morett, the English Goldsmith (No. 1886). is unquestionably genuine, and of such masterly execution that it long passed as a portrait of the Milanese duke Lodovico Moro by Leonardo da Vinci. Dürer's priceless Crucifixion (No. 1857), a small picture, is purely German in conception, but shows the beneficial influence of the Venetian school in its execution. The winged altarpiece (No. 1860) shows Dürer under the spell of Mantegna, while the portrait of Bernhard von Ressen (No. 1859) was painted in 1521 during his tour in the Netherlands. The examples of the two Cranachs are numerous, but indifferent in quality. Two altarpieces assigned to Mabuse are in reality admirable works by Jan Joest of Calcar, a master whose merits have only of late been appreciated as they deserve, but who perhaps should be classed among the Netherlandish painters rather than among the Germans. -- The masters of the 17th cent. are happily represented by three small master-pieces of Adam Elsheimer and a vigorous group of familyportraits by Knupfer. - The portraits in chalks and the views of Dresden on the ground-floor possess little artistic merit, but they afford an instructive insight into the life and manners of last century.

The Entrance Hall (containing the closk-room and the ticketoffice) is adorned with a frieze of stucco, illustrative of the history of painting, on the right that of Italy by Knauer, on the left that of Germany and the Netherlands by Schilling. In a straight direction is the entrance to the Collection of Drawings and Engravings (p. 289), to the right that to the Crayon Drawings, Dietrich's Paintings, and the Miniatures (p. 289).

Ascending the staircase to the First Floor (Plan. see below). we traverse an ANTE-ROOM hung with family-portraits (where on Mon., Wed., and Sat. tickets are given up, and where check-tickets are issued to those desirous of quitting the gallery and returning at a later hour), a corridor with a number of Netherlands masters of the 17th and 18th cent. (1122, Fyt, Boy and dog; 1370. A. Cuyp, Horse and hounds), the Cupola Saloon G, and the adjacent rooms, and proceed, with fresh and unimpaired energy, to inspect and admire the Sistine Madonna in Room A.

ROOMS A-F contain the Large Italian Paintings.

HALL A. 80. Raphael, Madonna di San Sisto, an altarpiece, 8 ft. high and 6 ft. wide (so called from the church of the Black Friars at Piacenza for whom the picture was painted), the Virgin and Child in clouds, with St. Sixtus on the right, St. Barbara on the left, and two cherubs beneath, indisputably a work of the great master's own hand throughout, painted probably about 1515 (purchased in 1753 for 90001.). — The compainted probably about 1915 (purchased in 1753 for 90001.). — The composition most resembles that of the Madonna di Foligno. A curtain has just been drawn back and the Virgin issues as it were from the depth of Heaven, awe-inspiring, solemn, and serene, her large eyes embracing the world in their gaze. The idea of the sudden revelation of a hitherto concealed mystery could not be more effectively expressed. The attention is usually concentrated upon the Madonna and the two cherubs below, pictures of naive innocence. The saints, however, should not be overlooked. Contrasted in age and sex, expression and movement, they supplement each other with admirable effect. Both must be thought of in connection with the whole community of Christians; the reverent and pious Sixtus commends himself to the Virgin's mercy, the beaming face of St. Barbara represents the joyful enthusiasm of the redeemed 'Raffael und Barbara represents the joyful enthusiasm of the redeemed (Raffael und Michelangelo', by Prof. Anton Springer). — In the same room is a marble bust of Raphael, by Hähnel.

3rd Cab. To the right: 523. Ann. Carracci, Portrait of Giov. Gabrielle, the comedian. — End Wall: °565. Franc. Albani, Landscape with Venus, Vulcan, and Cupids. — To the left: 542, 543, °547. Guido Reni, Ecce Homo; °64. Angelo Bronsino, Wife of Cosimo I., Grand Duke of Tuscany; °226.

Andrea Mantegna, Holy Family.

4th Cab. To the right: 268. Palma Vecchio, The 'Graces', an early work. 'These three young women are grouped with pleasing variety and artifice in front of a very pretty landscape. There is hardly a single peculiarity in the master remaining unrepresented; his melting shapes, his fair, almost waxen, complexions, his fine chiselled features, small hands, brocades and slashes, his draperies without depth, flow, or winding contour (Crows and Cavalcaselle). — *270. Palma Vecchio, Madonna and Child with John the Baptist and St. Catherine, also an early work. 'There is so much loveliness in the serene rapture of St. Catherine, such sprightliness in the Child, nestling at its mother's throat, so much tender inquiry in the Virgin's eye, and a meaning so earnest in the glance of the Baptist, that we dwell with pleasurable sensation on each figure of the group and wonder at the harmony which it creates' (C. & C.). - *271. Bonifacio the Elder. Madonna and saints in a landscape; ascribed by the catalogue to Palma. - 248. Titian, The tribute-money, painted about 1514. 'Simple as the subject is, the thought which it embodies is very subtle . . . The contrast is sublime between the majestic calm and elevation, and what Quandt calls the 'Godlike beauty' of Christ, and the low cunning and coarse air of the Pharisee The form of Christ was never conceived by any of the Venetians of such ideal beauty as this. Nor has Titian ever done better Nothing can exceed the brightness and sheen or the transparent delicacy of the colours . . . The most perfect easel-picture of which Venice ever witnessed the production, this is also the most polished work of Titian' (C. & C.).

5th Cab. Late Venetian pictures, by Sebastian Ricci, Nogari, etc.

The next Cabinet contains works of the French School.

Halls N, M, L, K, and J contain the Larger Netherlandish and also a few German Paintings.

HALL N. *1885. Old Netherlandish copy (about 1600) of the picture at Darmstadt by Holbein the Younger, representing the Virgin and Child, with Jacob Meyer, the burgomaster of Basel, and his family at their feet (regarded as genuine down to the Holbein Exhibition in 1871).

'The Virgin here appears, not in a vision as in the Sistine Madonna. but in bodily form and in her capacity as a mother, not only of the Holy Child, but of all who kneel at her feet. And therefore it is that she seems so near akin to us in spite of the golden crown shining on her long fair hair. The Child presses himself closely and affectionately to his mother. who on her part caresses him with a warmth and absorption that makes her quite forgetful of self. The donor and his family kneel below, fully conscious of the grace that has been vouchsafed them' ('Holbein', by Prof. Woltmann).

The *Collection of Engravings, which is also on the ground-floor of the New Museum (entrance, see p. 283; adm., see p. 273), founded by Augustus II. and afterwards gradually extended, now comprises 350,000 plates, from the earliest masters (15th cent.) down to the present day. About 700 of the finest are exhibited under glass. The others are kept in portfolios, which the attendants open if desired. — The smaller room adjacent contains *Drawings, of which about 300 are exposed to view. Those of the old masters, chiefly of the German School, occupy 50 portfolios.

The *Museum of Casts contains two departments, the ancient and the modern. The nucleus of the Ancient Department was formed by Raphael Mengs, by whom it was sold to the Saxon Government 1782. The entrance (adm., see p. 273) is on the E. side of the Zwinger, opposite the Prinzen-Palais. The Mediaeval and Modern Department, most of which is of recent origin, occupies the N.W. part of the Zwinger (entrance in the N. angle of the inner court).

The Zoological and Ethnographical Museum (entrance on the S.W. side of the Zwinger, opposite the Sophienkirche; adm., see p. 273; catalogue 1 m.) contains good collections of insects, shells, and stuffed birds with their nests, eggs, and young. The Japanese and Polynesian articles in the ethnological section (in the upper floor) are also interesting. — The Mineralogical Museum (entrance in the W. passage, opposite the Museum; adm., see p. 273) is unimportant, but contains some interesting fossils from Eichstädt. The Physical-Mathematical Saloon, in the upper story of the N.W. pavilion of the Zwinger (adm., see p. 273), contains a collection of scientific instruments of every description.

Opposite the Zwinger, towards the \hat{E} ., rises the Prinzen-Palais (Pl. E, 4), erected in 1715 and belonging to the palace. The Sophienkirche (Pl. E, 4), or Protestant court-church, dating from the 13th and 14th cent., was handsomely restored in the Gothic style in 1864-68 (interior in 1875).

In the Posr-Platz, a little to the S., is situated the Imperial Post Office (Pl. D, 4, 5; p. 272); in front of it rises a Gothic Fountain Column designed by Semper, with statuettes emblematical of the healthful properties of water. — In the Antons-Platz, at the back of the Post Office (No. 1), is the Saxon Industrial Museum (Pl. D, E, 5; adm., see p. 273), formerly the Polytechnic School. The contents include furniture, bronzes, pottery, etc., chiefly in the style of the German Renaissance; the textile section is the most complete. An Industrial School, a Collection of Models, and a Library are connected with the museum.

The Annen-Strasse leads from the Post-Platz to the Annenkirche (Pl. C, D, 5), a church of the 16th cent., subsequently restored, near which is the Anna Fountain, erected in 1869 to the wife (d. 1585) of Augustus I., from a design by Hense. In the Annen-Str. is the Ober-Post- und-Telegraphen-Direction, or administrative department of the post-office.

The Berlin Station (Pl. A, 3) lies to the N.W. in the FRIEDRICHS-STADT. Close by, in the garden of the Town Hospital (Pl. B, 2, 3), is a handsome fountain in sandstone, representing Neptune and Amphitrite, by Mattielli; the water plays in summer on Sun. 11-1 and Thurs. 3-5 p.m.; adm. gratis.

In the Neumarkt (Pl. E, F, 4) rises the Frauenkirche, or Church of our Lady, erected in 1726-34, with a lofty dome. The 'Lantern' is 310 ft. in height. — A cross in the pavement on the N.W. side of the Platz marks the spot where Crell, the Calvinistic chancellor, was executed in 1601.

In the N.W. angle of the square is situated the *Museum Johanneum (Pl. E, 4), formerly the old Picture Gallery, but altered in 1855-75, and now containing the Historical Museum (on the first floor) and the Collection of Porcelain (on the second floor). The figure of Cellini on the Augustus-Str. facade is by Geissler (sgraffitos, see p. 277). Adm., see p. 273; the entrance is in the Augustus-Str., through the quaint-looking court.

The *Historical Museum, on the 1st floor, contains weapons, armour, domestic chattels, costumes, and other objects of historical or artistic value. This collection, the most valuable of the kind in Germany, comprises many precious works of the German and Italian Remaissance. The objects are furnished with labels. Schnorr's cartoons of his frescoes at Munich from the history of Charlemagne, Frederick Barbarossa, and Ru-dolph of Hapsburg are also preserved here. — 1. Saloon (to the right of the entrance-room). Chairs, cabinets (including one presented to Luther by Frederick the Wise), tables of the 16th and 17th cent.; clocks, drinking-cups, drinking-horns; in a cabinet on the entrance-wall, Luther's goblet and sword. Portraits of Saxon princes by Lucas Oranach. — 2.

Tournament Hall. Tournament weapons of Saxon and other princes; to the right of the entrance, a gala suit of Duke Charles Emmanuel of Savoy (d. 1630), manufactured at Milan; at the farther end of the room on the right and left two Italian suits in silver, executed for Elector Christian II. of Saxony (d. 1611) and his friend Prince Christian of Anhalt (d. 1630). - 3. Room of the Chase. Hunting gear, cross-bows, spears, knives, etc., of the 16th and 17th cent.; also the hunting-horn of Henry IV. of France. — 4. *Parade Saloon. Gala suits of Saxon princes, viz. Henry the Pious (d. 1541); Elector Maurice (d. 1553); Christian I. (d. 1591); the rious (d. 1941); three suits of Christian II. (d. 1811), one of them by Collmann, a celebrated armourer of Augsburg; another, the most magnificent and valuable of the collection, purchased at Nuremberg in 1805; the third of Italian workmanship. Farther on, Duke John William of Weimar (d. 1873); Christian II.; John George I. (d. 1856); three gilded suits of Christian I. and Prince Christian of Anhalt. In the cabinets swords, shields and helmets of different workmanship, several of them most artistically decorated with reliefs. — 5. Pistol Chamber. Fire-arms of the 16th and decorated with reliefs.— b. Pistol Unamber. Fire-arms of the 16th and 17th cent., most of them of Saxon princes; pistols of Charles XII. of Sweden, Louis XIV. of France, etc. — 6. Battle Saloon. The armour and weapons which were used in battle by Saxon princes and celebrated generals, arranged chronologically; three suits of armour of Elector Maurice, the blood-stained scarf worn by him at the battle of Sievershausen (1533; see p. 81), and the bullet by which he was killed. By the second window: Tilly's baton and sword, Pappenheim's baton. Armour of King Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden; Hussite battle-clubs. By the last window: Standards of Pappenheim's cuirassiers. - 7. Saloon. Modern weapons from the Thirty Years' War down to the present time; Saxon and Polish weapons and standards; French weapons captured in 1870-71. — 8. Turkish Tent of the Grand-Vizier Kara Mustapha, captured at the raising of the siege of Vienna in 1883 by the German and Polish army under King John Sobieski, whose cost of mail, with the Maltese cross on the collar, is also preserved here; suit of armour of Elector John George of Saxony; Turkish and Oriental weapons. — 9. Saddle Chamber. Sumptuous caparisons, embroidered trappings, etc., used on festive occasions, chiefly of the reign of Augustus II. (1894-1733). — 10. Costume Chamber. Court and gala costumes of the 16th-16th cent.; coat of Napoleon I.; the boots he wore at the battle of Dresden, and velvet shoes worn at his coronation; hat and sword of Peter the Great; sword of Charles XII. of antlers, etc.

The Collection of Porcelain, on the second floor, consists of about 15,000 specimens of Chinese, Japanese, E. Indian, French, Dresden, and Italian workmanship, arranged chronologically, and is the finest collection of the kind in existence. The Dresden china, from the first attempts of Böttger (d. 1719) down to the present day, and the modern European products of Sevres, Berlin, etc., form the most interesting feature in the collection.

Next door to it is a handsome gate in the Renaissance style, with sculptural ornamentation and a carved wooden door of 1555. Adjacent, Galerie-Str. 18, is the house of Carl Maria von Weber, the composer.

In the opposite corner of the Neumarkt rises a Statue of Frederick Augustus II. (d. 1854), in bronze, by Hähnel, surrounded by figures emblematical of Piety, Wisdom, Justice, and Strength.

The ALTMARKT (Pl. E, 5) is embellished with a *Monument in memory of the war of 1870-71, modelled by Henze and executed in Carrara marble by Cellai. On the pedestal are allegorical figures of Peace, National Defence, Science, and Enthusiam. Near it rises the Kreurkirche (Pl. E, 5), re-erected in 1760 after the Prussian bombardment, with a tower 312 ft. in height, which commands a good survey of the town (open in summer 9-12 and 2-5, in winter 2-4; custodian 25 pf.).

In the GEORGS-PLATZ is situated the modern Gothic Kreuzschule (Pl. F, 6), a grammar-school with a handsome hall (frescoes by Dietrich, shown on Sun. 11-1, and Wed. and Sat. 2-4, fee 50 pf.). In front of the edifice is a bronze Statue of Theodore Körner, author of the 'Lyre and Sword', designed by Hähnel, cast by Lenz at Nuremberg, and erected in 1871.

In the adjoining BURGERWIESE, a large open space with promenades, and farther on, in the whole of the S. part of the town (Beust-Str., Goethe-Str., etc.), a number of handsome modern dwelling-houses have recently sprung up, nearly all built in the Renaissance style; the finest of these is Oppenheim's House on the Bürgerwiese, designed by Semper, now belonging to Baron Kaskel.— The Moltre-Platz (Pl. E, 6) is embellished with the Nymph Fountain by Brossmann (1865), and the adjacent Ferdinands Platz (Pl. D, 5), with the tasteful Goose-Stealer Fountain by Diez, erected in 1880.— Near this, in the Wiener-Strasse, is the handsome English Church (Pl. E, 7), consecrated in 1869, and embellished with stained-glass windows. At the S. end of the Prager-Str. (Pl. E, 7) is a Panorama, painted by Braun of Munich and representing the attack of the Saxons at St. Privat (adm. 1 m.). Farther to the W. are the extensive premises of the Bohemian Station (Pl. D, 7).

In the large BISMARCK-PLATZ (Pl. D, E, 7, 8) is the new Polytechnic School, built in 1872-75 by Professor Heyn. — A little farther off, in the Reichs-Str., is the elegant Russian Chapel, with six towers, designed and built by Bosse of St. Petersburg. To the W., Liebig-Str. 21, is the Private Observatory of Herr von Engel-hardt. - The Grosse Garten, see p. 294.

In the NBUSTADT, on the right bank of the Elbe, in the marketplace adjoining the old bridge, rises an equestrian Statue of Augustus II. (Pl. 12; D, 3), 'the Strong', over life-size, in gilded copper, by Wiedemann of Augsburg, 1736 (model in the Green Vault, p. 276).

Turning to the left, we soon reach the Japanese Palace (Pl. 20; D, 3), erected by Count Flemming in 1715, afterwards purchased by Augustus II., and at present containing the Cabinet of Antinuities and Library.

The Cellection of Antiquities, to the left on the ground-floor (adm., see p. 273; catalogue 2 m.), contains little above mediocrity, most of the works dating from the period of the Roman Empire, and some of them freely restored.— 1st Saloon: Modern works, chiefly busts of Saxon princes; reproductions of the Hildesheim Silver Treasure (p. 42).— 2nd: Antique vases, both of the earlier and later style (black figures upon a red ground, and red figures upon a black ground), chiefly from the collection of Prince Emil of Sayn-Wittgenstein, purchased in 1873; terracottas from Tanagra (comp. p. 42), and bronzes.— 3rd: By the windows: Bronze statuettes of Venus and Serapis; large archaic bronze vase. The cases contain small bronzes. Mosaic Pavement with Bacchus and masks. 15. Head of Niobe; 17. Silenus.— 4th: Torso of Cupid, found at Rome in 1875; 42. Torso of Minerva Promache; 43. Cast of the last (restored); 54. Tomb-relief; 66. Amazon; 68. Girl playing with astragali.— 5th: 283. Diadumenos; 87. Nymph of a fountain; "106. Trilateral candelabrum-pedestal of marble, on which are represented the theft of the sacred tripod by Hercules, its re-consecration, and the consecration of a torch in the archaic style; Young attalete; Young Hermes; Young satyr; 102. Cupid and Psyche; 100. Venus, Cupid, and Psyche; 101. Cupid playing with a lion; 114, 115. Satyrs; 116. Athlete; 117. Doryphoros.— 6th: Busts of emperors; 149. Sarcophagus with Bacchanalian procession; "162; 164. Girls from Herculaneum; "163. Woman from Herculaneum; the last three are admirable draped statues, found in 1715, and in almost perfect preservation; 161. Dancing satyr.— 7th: 208. Fragment of a recumbent figure; 209, 210. Satyr and nymph, Faun and hermaphrodite; 211. Child of Niobe; 181. Pugilist, in polished grey marble; 8. Vestal virgin.— 8th: 219. Sarcophagus with hunting-scenes; 231. Caracalla; 241. Muse; 258, 259. Gladiators.— 9th: 268. Antoninus Plus; 40. Artemis; 291. Athlete; 292. Antinous (or Bacchus); 293. Ariadne; 290. Venus; 374. Sarcophagus with Ba

The 'Reyal Library (adm., see p. 273) on the two upper floors, founded by Blector Augustus (d. 1586), now comprises 275,000 vols., 2000 incunabula or specimens of early typography, 4000 MSS., and 30,000 maps. Historical works and modern literature form the most valuable part of the collection. The First Room contains a cast of Gellert's features after death. In the Great Hall are busts of Goethe and Tieck, executed by David d'Angers. The following curiosities among others are preserved in Glass Cases: The Atlas Royal, a collection in 19 follo vols. of portraits of princes and princesses of the 17th cent., with maps, plans, etc. (three copies only of the work were made at Amsterdam in 1707; one is now at the Hague, another at Copenhagen); Mexican hieroglyphic codex, 12 ft. long, written on both sides; fragment of the Zend-Avesta of Zoroaster, a MS. of the 15th cent.; octagonal Koran, of the size of a crown-piece; Koran of Sultan Bajaset II.; Persian Ful Nameh (treasure-casket) with numerous drawings; Runic calendars on boxwood of the 12th and 13th cent.; Valturius 'de re militari', a parchment MS. of the 15th cent., with illustrations; tournament-books with plates, among them that of King Rend of Anjou of the 15th cent., once the property of Charles the Bold; Petrarch 'de remediis utriusque fortunae', MS. of the 15th cent. with drawings; breviaries with miniatures; an illustrated MS. of the 'Sachsenspiegel', 1886; MSS. of Luther and Melanchthon; 'Dürer's Treaties on the proportions of the body, with original drawings; Seb. Brant's 'Narrenschiff' with 117 miniatures, printed at Paris in 1497; German edition of the same work, with 114 miniatures, printed in 1494; Volume with 56 miniatures of the miniatures of the eminent men of the 15-18th cent., probably by Cranach the Younger.

The Japanese Garden, or Palaisgarten, behind the palace, which is open to the public, affords a pleasant view.

Marble tablets and medallions on No. 4 Körner-Str. (Pl. E, 3) mark the house once occupied by Councillor Körner, where Schiller resided in 1784-86, and where Theodore Körner was born in 1791. It contains the Körner Museum, founded by Dr. Peschel, with many memorials of the poet of the 'Lyre and Sword' and of the wars of liberation at the beginning of the century (adm., see p. 273).

From the Marktplatz (p. 292) the broad HAUPT-STRASSE, which is embellished with rows of trees, leads towards the N.E. On the left rises the Dreikönigskirche (Pl. F, 2), with its lofty tower adorned with seven statues by Hähnel. Farther on, to the right, is the Roman Catholic Pfarrkirche (Pl. F, 2), built in 1853 by Bothen, with an elaborately-decorated interior. Above the portal is a figure of Christ by Hähnel.

The Haupt-Strasse ends at the Albert-Platz (Pl. F, G, 2), with its two handsome fountains. The Albert Theatre (p. 272) here is adorned with sculptures by Menzel and Henze and sgrafitto paintings by Dietrich.

The large buildings on the N.E. side of the town are barracks, arsenals, and other military establishments.

The Grosse Garten (Pl. G, H, J, 7, 8; cafés and restaurant), outside the Pirna Gate, to the S.E. of the town, a royal park laid out at the end of the 17th cent. and subsequently improved, covers an area of about 300 acres. In 1813 it was the scene of several sharp engagements between the French and Prussians. The park is intersected by two broad avenues at right angles to each other, converging towards the Lustschloss (Pl. J, 7, 8; 1½ M. from the old bridge), a château built in the centre of the park in 1680, where the royal Museum of Antiquities and the Rietschel Museum are now established. (Entrance from the side next the pond.)

The Museum of Antiquities (adm., see p. 273) on the ground-floor consists chiefly of ecclesiastical objects of medieval origin, removed from the churches of Saxony in consequence of the Reformation, and collected here in 1841. It contains about 9000 objects in all.

The Rietschel Museum (adm., see p. 278), on the first floor of the château, contains an almost complete collection of casts and models of the works of the talented sculptor of that name (d. 1881).

The Zoological Garden (Pl. G, H, 7, 8; adm., see p. 273) contains a number of fine specimens of animals. Good restaurant.

Cemeteries. In the Old Neustadter Kirchhof, 3/4 M. to the N. of the Silesian Station, rises an obeliek to the memory of soldiers who fell during the revolution of 1849. The wall of the cemetery is adorned with a Dance of Death, consisting of 27 figures in relief, executed in 1634. — In the New Neustadter Kirchhof, 1 M. farther, are buried numerous soldiers who died in the hospitals in 1886 and 1870-71. — Weber (d. 1826), the composer, and Friedrich Schlegel (d. 1828) are interred in the Roman Catholic Cemetery (Pl. B, 2), and Existabel (d. 1861), the sculptor, in the Trinitatis Kirchhof on the Blasewitz road.

The Environs of Dresden afford many pleasant excursions (comp. Map, p. 298, and RR. 50, 51).

The Bergstrasse (Pl. D, 8) leads to the village of Racknitz, 11/2 M. to he S. of the town, just beyond which is situated Moreau's Monument, surounded by three oaks, erected on the spot where the general was more tally wounded, 27th Aug. 1813. An extensive prospect is enjoyed from the Goldene Höhe (1140 ft.), 11/2 hr. farther S.

A pleasant drive may be taken along the slopes of the vine-clad hills on the right bank of the Elbe, passing numerous villas and the Schiller-schlösschen and (11/2 M.) Waldschlösschen beer-gardens (tramway, see p. 272). - Above the Waldschlösschen are the Dresden water-works with their turreted building.

The Albrechtsberg, 3/4 M. from the Waldschlösschen, with two handsome modern châteaux (accessible daily in summer, Sun. excepted, 1-3 o'clock), the property of the Counts v. Hohenau, sons of Prince Albrecht of Prussia (d. 1873), is the finest point of view. A little farther down the river is the Villa Stockhausen, and a little higher up is the villa of Herr Souchay, in the English style, with three towers. Pleasant wood-walks hence to the Wolfshügel.

Farther on lies Loschwitz (Hôtel Demnitz: Restaurant Victoria-Höhe). near which there is a small summer-house in a vineyard where Schiller wrote his Don Carlos in 1785-87.

Pilinitz (374 ft.; Restaurant), on the right bank of the Elbe, 7 M. above Dresden and 21/4 M. from the railway-station of Niedersedlits (see below), is a château of the king, with pleasant grounds and a well-stocked botanical garden. The chapel and the dining-room are adorned with good frescoes garden. The chapet and the uning-room are accurate that burned down, an alliance between Emp. leopold II. and King Frederick William II. of Prussia was entered into in 1791 with a view to oppose the advance of the French revolution. An artificial ruin at the back of the village of Pillnitz, on the route to the Porsberg, commands a pleasing view, which is finer and much more extensive from the "Porsberg (1184 ft.) itself, 1 hr. to the E. of Pillnitz. At the top is a small "Inn. — From Pillnitz we may now proceed to (41/2 M.) Lohmen direct or through the pretty Liebethaler Grund; from Lohmen a picturesque route leads by Uttewald and through the Uttewalder Grund to the Bastei (2½ hrs.); comp. p. 298, and Map.

The royal hunting-lodge of Moritzburg, 7 M. to the N. of Dresden, situated on a rocky islet in a large pond, was begun by Elector Maurice (d. 1552) in 1542, and completed by Augustus the Strong (interior interesting). Adjacent are the village of Eisenberg (Adam's Inn), a deer-park, and a horse-breeding establishment.

49. From Dresden to Bodenbach (for Prague) and Tetschen (for Vienna).

39 M. Bailway. To Bodenbach in 11/4-2 hrs. (fares 5 m., 3 m. 80, 2 m. 50 pf.; express 6 m. 20, 4 m. 70, 3 m. 10 pf.); express from Dresden to Prague in 51/2 hrs. (fares 18 m. 70, 14 m. 10, 9 m. 40 pf.). Fares to Tetschen, 5 m. 10, 3 m. 80, 2 m. 50 pf.; express from Dresden to Vienna in 12 hrs. (fares 64 m. 70, 44 m. 20 pf.). — Nearly all the trains start from the Neustadt station, cross the Elbe, and stop again in the Altstadt.

5 M. Niedersedlitz.

On the right bank of the Elbe, 21/4 M. to the W. of Niedersedlitz, lies Pillnitz (see above). - A pleasant excursion may be taken through the Lockwitzer Grund to (4½ M.) Kreyscha. Then to the S.E. by (3 M.) Maxen, and the romantic Müglitzthal, to the royal château of (3 M.) Weeserstein, and down the valley to the N. to the ancient little town of Dohna, and (3 M.) stat. Mügeln, whence Dresden is reached by train in ½ hour. The construction of Weesenstein is very curious, the château being partly hewn out of the rock on which it is situated. The stables are on the 3rd, the ice-cellar and chapel on the 5th floor. — From Weesenstein we may extend the excursion up the valley viâ (6 M.) Glasshütte, a watch-making village, (4½ M.) Bärenstein, and (1½ M.) Lauenstein to the (4½ M.) Mückenberg (p. 307).

7 M. Mügeln. About 1 M. to the S. of $(9^1/2 \text{ M.})$ Heidenau is the royal château of Gross-Sedlitz, with a park laid out in the style of that at Versailles. The train reaches the river here, and then follows its windings through the Saxon Switzerland (p. 298). Finest views to the left.

101/2 M. Pirna (385 ft.; Schwarzer Adler; Weisser Schwan; Sächsischer Hof, at the station; Rail. Restaurant), a town with 11,680 inhab., on the left bank of the Elbe, is commanded by the Sonnenstein, an old fortress converted into a lunatic asylum. The town was taken in 1639 by the Swedes, and in 1758 by the Prussians, who levelled the fortifications. Above the town, on both banks of the Elbe, are quarries which yield excellent sandstone for building purposes, but do not add to the beauty of the landscape.

FROM PIERA TO ARNSDOEF, 13 M., railway in 1 hr. (fares 1 m. 70, 1 m. 30, 90 pf.). The stations are Lohmen (p. 295), Dürrröhrsdorf (where a branch diverges to Neustati, p. 301), and Ditterbach. Arnsdorf, see p. 269. FROM PIERA TO BERGGIEBRÜBEL, 9/2 M., railway in 1 hr. (90, 60 pf.). The train calls at Firma and ascends the picturesque and narrow valley of

From Pirma to Berggirshüber, 9½ M., railway in 1 hr. (90, 60 pf.). The train calls at Pirma and ascends the picturesque and narrow valley of the Gottleuba. 4 M. Rottwerndorf, with a château built by Elector Christian II. (1591-1611). 9½ M. Berggiesshübel (Sächsisches Haus; Stern: Raü. Restaurant) is a small town with mineral baths, mines, and foundries.—A pleasant walk (omn.) may be taken hence via the Poetengang and Giesenstein to (2½ M.) Gottleuba, prettly situated in a deep valley. The Mückenberg (p. 307) may be ascended from Gottleuba in 4-4½ hrs., with guide (2 m. and food).

lofty rocks of the Bastei. 18 M. Rathen, see p. 299.

22 M. Königstein (Staat London; Blauer Stern; Kronprinz; Rail. Restaurant) is a small town (3788 inhab.) commanded by the imposing *Fortress of that name (1178 ft. above the sea-level, 816 ft. above the Elbe), originally a castle of the Counts of Dohna (down to 1401), afterwards a monastery, and again fortified in 1540. Ascent ³/₄ hr.; permission must be obtained at the gate of the fortress (4 m. for 1-8 pers.). The ramparts command charming views. In time of war the treasures and archives of Saxony have usually been deposited here, and the fortress is now used as a state-prison. The fortresswell is 620 ft. deep and contains 65 ft. of water. Refreshments in the fortress and at the New Schenke, near the gate. The excursion (2½ hrs. to the top and back) amply repays the fatigue.

On the opposite bank of the river rises the Lilienstein (1325 ft.). In 1756, at the beginning of the Seven Years' War, the Saxon army of 14,000 men was surrounded at the foot of this hill by the Prussians under Frederick the Great and compelled by hunger to surrender. The view from the summit is more extensive than that from the Königstein, and is very picturesque, especially looking up the river. The traveller crosses the Elbe to the village of Halbestadi, opposite the Königstein station, and proceeds thence through the E. end of the village of Ebenheit direct to the foot of the Lilienstein. Ascent, partly by steps, somewhat steep, 1 hr. Restaurant at the top. — The Pabistein (p. 300) and the Bärensteine (ascended in 1 hr. from Pötzscha, see above) are other points of view near Königstein.

About 11/2 M. to the S. of Königstein is situated the water-cure establishment of Königsbrunn, on the Bielabach, at the entrance to the Bielagrund, an interesting ravine with the most fantastic rock-formations. Pleasant walk up this valley to the (2 hrs.) Schweizermühle (1150 ft.), where there is another water-cure (*Restaurant); then, 20 min. beyond it, we turn to the left by a finger-post, and walk in 1½ hr. more to the summit of the Schneeberg (2255 ft.), where a tower commanding a fine view and a small Inn.(R. 1 ft., B. 40 kr.) are situated. At the foot of the mountain lies the village of Schneeberg (Werner's Inn). From Schneeberg to Boden-bach 6 M. (see below).

About 3 M. to the W. of Schneeberg (guide necessary) are situated the Tissaer Wande, a curious labyrinth of chasms and grotesque rock-formations. Fine view from the plateau.

25 M. Schandau (*Rail. Restaurant); the town lies on the right bank, and is reached in summer by a small steamboat (10 pf.). The branch-line from Schandau to Bautzen (p. 300) crosses the river by a bridge.

251/2 M. Krippen, opposite Schandau.

30 M. Schöna (Railway Hotel), the station for Herrnskretschen (p. 301) on the opposite bank (ferry 8 pf.). — The line now crosses the Austrian frontier, passes (32 M.) Niedergrund (branch-line to Tetschen, see below), penetrates the Schäferwand (690 ft.) by two tunnels, and reaches --- 38 M. Bodenbach (442 ft.; *Post; 12 min. from the station is the *Bad-Hôtel, recommended for a prolonged stay; Rail. Restaurant, dear), a village with 2000 inhab., with the Austrian customhouse. A suspension-bridge here crosses the river to Tetschen (*Ullrich, prettily situated 1 M. from the stations, R., L., & A. 3 m.; *Silberner Stern; Stadt Prag; Krone; *Dampfschiff-Hôtel, at the pier, R. & A. 2 m. 60 pf.), perhaps the pleasantest point in the valley of the Elbe, commanded by the handsome château of Count Thun, the beautiful garden, library, and armoury of which are open to the public daily 12-4 and 6-8, on Sun. and holidays the whole day.

FROM BODENBACH TO THE SCHNEEBERG (21/2 hrs.). The traveller diverges from the Teplitz road to the right, either after 3/4 M. at the inn Zum Rothen Kreus (path indicated by white marks on the trees, and easily traced, but generally destitute of shade), or after 11/2 M. at the inn Zur Grünen Wiese. After 7 min. the latter route crosses the valley to the left and leads to the village of Schneeberg. A more direct route to the summit diverges from the latter path at a clearing in the wood, but is not easily found without a guide. Those who prefer driving the greater part of the way follow the Schneeberg road, which leads to the left below the suspensionbridge, or take the Bodenbach and Dux railway as far as Eulau (see below).

FROM BODENBACH TO DUX, railway in 2½ hrs., through the Bodenbachthal, see Baedeker's S. Germany and Austria.
FROM BODENBACH TO WARNSDORF, 38 M., railway in 3-35/4 hrs. (fares 2 fl. 96, 2 fl. 22, 1 fl. 48 kr.). 2½ M. Tetschen, see above; 7½ M. Bensen, with a château of the 16th cent.; 101/2 M. Ebersdorf-Markersdorf; 13 M. with a chateau of the 10th cent.; 10-/2 m. Decreasory: markersory; 10 m. Rabstein; 151/2 m. Böhmisch-Kammits-Steinschönau (to Dittersbach, see p. 302); 20 m. Tannenberg; 25 m. Schönfeld; 31 m. Kreibitz, the junction for the line to Löbau (p. 267); 36 m. Niedergrund (Zabel). 38 m. Warnsdorf (Stadt Wien; Endler). At Warnsdorf (Stadt Wien; Endler). At Warnsdorf the line joins the Saxon railway to Zitlau (p. 254), which is reached in 1/2 hr. (fares 1 m. 20, 2000). 90, 60 pf.), viå Gross-Schönau (a damask and silk-manufacturing town). Hainewalde, and Scheibe.

From Bodenbach to Prague and from Tetschen to Vienna, see Baedeker's Southern Germany and Austria.

50. Saxon Switzerland.

Plan. Two days at least are requisite for a visit to this interesting district. Ist. Railway to Pötzscha (p. 296) in 3/4 hr., ferry to Wehlen; walk or ride through the Wehler Grund and Zscherregrund to the Bastei in 11/2 hr.; through the Amselgrund to the Hockstein 2 hrs.; by the Brand to Schandau 3 hrs. — 2nd. Drive in 3/4 hr. to the Lichtenhain Fall, walk or ride to the Kuhstall 1/2 hr., Grosse Winterberg 11/2 hr., Prebischthor 1 hr., Herrnskretschen 11/2 hr., steamboat in 1 hr. or railway in 1/2 hr. to Königstein (p. 296), visit the fortress, 21/2 hrs.; return to Dresden by railway. — The Schneeberg and Bielagrund, see p. 297.

Guides (4-5 m. per day, 2 m. per half-day) are to be found at the most fre-

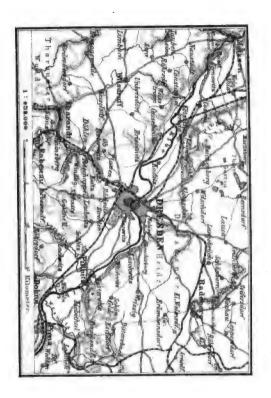

Guides (4-0 m. per day, 2 m. per nair-day) are to be found at the most requented places, and though seldom necessary, are sometimes desirable. As they are generally in league with the innkeepers, their recommendations of inns are seldom trustworthy. — Horse generally 2 m. per hour (comp. p. 300). — Chair-porters from Wehlen to the Bastei 6 m., or by the Uttewalder Grund 7½ m.; from Rathen to the Bastei 4 m. — Steamboats on the Elbe, see p. 272. — During Easter week the Saxon Switzerland is apt to be over-crowded with holiday-makers. — The hotel-charges at the most frequented places are as high as in towns.

The Meissener Hochland, a very picturesque district, remarkable for its singular rock-formations, known for the last century as the *Saxon Switzerland, extends from Liebethal to the Bohemian frontier, a distance of 23 M., and from the Falkenberg to the Schneeberg, about the same distance. It is intersected by the Elbe, the most picturesque part of the river being between Leitmeritz and Pirns. The sandstone of which the mountains consist often assumes the most grotesque shapes. Some of the rocky columns formed by the disintegration of the softer strata are so lofty and slender that their upright position appears extremely precarious. At stat. Pötzscha (p. 296) we quit the railway and cross the Elbe to the village of Wehlen (Sächs. Schweiz; Freyer; Elb-Terrasse; Deutsches Reich, on the Elbe; Stadt Wehlen, station of the guides), with a handsome new church, from which we ascend on the left bank of the brook, leaving the path along the Elbe to our right. After a few minutes' walk the paved track ascending to the right is to be avoided, and the path to the left in the Wehler Grund followed. The valley, which is enclosed by rocky and wooded heights, gradually contracts, and 1 M. from Wehlen divides. After 7 min. more a finger-post to the left indicates the route to the Uttewalder Grund, and to the right to the Zscherre-Grund.

The "Uttewalder Grund is one of the finest rocky gorges in Saxon Switzerland. The sides are so lofty and close together that some parts of the ravine are never reached by the sun's rays. About 10 min. from the above-mentioned finger-post is a restaurant; the path passes the Teufelskuche (devil's kitchen), a grotto resembling an open fire-place. At the narrowest part, called the Felsenthor, 5 min. above the restaurant, the path is carried over the brook by means of a wooden scaffolding. At the

ceed as far as the Felsenthor only.

The route hence to the Bastei can hardly be mistaken. The broad path ascends through the *Zscherre-Grund, a wild and narrow wooded ravine $1^1/2$ M. in length, bounded by lofty and grotesque rocks which are partly clothed with moss and fern. A pine-wood is next traversed. At the top of the hill the high-road (finger-post) is crossed, the Steinerne Tisch (Refreshments; direction-post) passed, and the Bastei reached in 25 min. more. A rocky plateau, 50 paces to the left of the path, immediately before the Bastei is attained, commands a fine survey of the rocks of the Wehler Grund.

The Bastei (875 ft. above the sea-level, and about 605 ft. above the Elbe; Inn on the summit; admission to the tower 20 pf.), a rock with several peaks, rising precipitously from the Elbe, is the finest point in Saxon Switzerland. The view is magnificent and extensive, affording an admirable survey of the wooded gorges and of the abrupt peaks resembling gigantic castles that surround us on all sides: to the N. Rathewalde and Hohnstein; E. the Brand, Rosenberg (in Bohemia), Kleine and Grosse Winterberg, Zirkelsteine, and Kaiserkrone; S. the Pabststein and Gorischstein, in the foreground Lilienstein and Königstein; S.W. the Rauhstein and Bärenstein; far below the Elbe, visible from Wehlen to above Rathen.

From the inn the traveller descends in 5 min. to the *Bastei-brücke, a stone bridge of seven arches constructed in 1851, connecting the rocky pinnacles that here rise from the valley. (To the left before the bridge is reached a path diverges to the Ferdinandstein, which affords a good survey of the environs and of the bridge itself.) A projecting platform affords a magnificent *View of the profound rocky and pine-clad gorge. About 14 min. from the bridge the path emerges from the wood and divides. That to the left, skirting the wood, leads to the Amselgrund (see below); that in a straight direction leads to (5 min.) Rathen (Erbgericht, on the river; Böhme's Restaurant, well spoken of), a village on the Elbe with a ruined castle, and a steamboat and railway-station (the latter on the opposite bank; see p. 296). The ascent of the Bastei from Rathen occupies about 1 hr.; that of the Lillienstein (p. 296) 2 hrs.

The above-mentioned path to the left, 20 min. below the Bastei, ascends the Amselgrund, passes a small waterfall, and leads in 1½ hr. to Rathevalde (Erbgericht; Mittag). The traveller should here enquire the way to the Hockstein, a rock 360 ft. in height (1040 ft. above the sea), rising abruptly from the green Polenzgrund. It affords a fine view of the little town of Hohnstein (Hirsch; Sächs. Schweiz), on the opposite side of the valley, commanded by an old castle now used as a house of correction. We then descend through the Wolfsschlucht to the cool *Polenzthal (restaurant), and follow the course of the brook for about 3½ hr., until the first house, the Waltersdorfer Mühle (Pension, with baths), becomes visible.

Crossing a bridge, we now ascend the hill to the right. Where the path divides, we follow that to the right until it joins the carriageroad on the hill, which leads to the right in 5 min, more to the *Brand (905 ft.; small Inn), commanding a magnificent view. From right to left (S. W. to S. E.): Bastei, Bärensteine, Königstein, Lilienstein, Pfaffenstein, Gohrischstein, Pabststein, etc., and to the extreme left the Grosse Winterberg.

About 100 paces from the finger-post on the carriage-road a footpath diverges from the broad path to the left to a singular group of rocks somewhat resembling corn-sacks, 100 paces distant. The main path then descends rapidly through the Tiefe Grund, passing under a curious overhanging rock, to the (1/2 hr.) Hohnstein and Schandau road, which leads to the (21/4 M.) Elbe at Wendisch-Fähre, a station on the railway from Schandau to Bautzen (see p. 301). The line crosses the Elbe here. Above the bridge is the Hôtel Wilhelmshöhe. The town of Schandau lies on the right bank, 1 M. farther on.

The small town of Schandau (413 ft.) is prettily situated on the right bank of the Elbe, at the mouth of the Kirnitzschbach. In the valley of the latter, 1/2 M. above the town, is a small Chalybeate Bath (Curhaus, see above), with pleasant grounds and walks. Schandau is the central point of Saxon Switzerland, and is much frequented in summer.

WALES. In the Kirnitzschthal, see above; to the Ostrau-Scheibe, to the Schlossberg, the Friedensplatz, the Schillerhöhe, the Schützenhaus; farther distant to the Hohe Liebe 1 hr.; to the Schrammsteine 11/2 hr.; to the Hochbuschkuppe 3 hrs.

A very pleasant excursion may be made from the railway-station through the Rietschgrund to (11/4 hr.) the top of the *Pabststein (1476 ft.; small *Inn the Rietschgrund to (1½ hr.) the top of the *Pabststein (1476 ft.; small *Inn at the top, bed 1½ m.). The view embraces the entire district of Saxon Switzerland. The most conspicuous points are N.W. the Lilienstein and Königstein, E. the Grosse Winterberg and the Kleis rising like a tower, S.E. the basaltic Rosenberg (1770 ft.), the highest peak in the district. A mere speck only of the Elbe is visible at Schandau. — From the Pabststein a good path leads to the N.W. by Gohrisch (Anna's Hof, with baths, B. & board 33 m. per week) to Königstein in 1 hr. (in the reverse direction 1½ hr.). Small boat from Königstein to Rathen (see p. 299) in 40 min., 3½ m. From Schandau to Bautzen, 40 M., railway in 2½-2¾ hrs. (fares 5 m. 20, 3 m. 90, 2 m. 60 pf.). This line facilitates a visit to the E. part of the Baxon Switzerland, known as the 'Hinters Schweig'. Stat Schonden see Saxon Switzerland, known as the 'Hintere Schweiz'. Stat. Schandau, see p. 237. The train crosses the Elbe to Wendisch-Fähre (comp. p. 300), passes through a tunnel, and ascends the Sebnitzhal. Beyond (3 M.) Kohlmühle the train quits the sandstone and enters a granite district. Two tunnels. 6 M. Ulbersdorf. The Sebnitz is crossed several times. Four tunnels. — 9 M. Sebnitz (1020 ft.; Stadt Dresden; "Sächsischer Hof), a manufacturing town with 6576 inhabitants. An excursion for one day (fatiguing) may be made hence by proceeding through Hertigsvalde and Thomasdorf to the Wacheberg (Restaurant), and then descending to Saupsdorf (Schweizerkrone) and through the Kirnitzschthal to Schandau. — Beyond Sebnitz the line reaches its highest point. 14 M. Krumhermsdorf. The castle of Stolpen is seen on the left. 171/2 M. Neustadt (branch-line to Dürrröhrsdorf, p. 296); 21 M. Ottendorf; 25 M. Niederneukirch; 28 M. Oberneukirch; 31 M. Wilthen (branch to Ebersbach, p. 267). Beautiful view to the right. 35 M. Grossposinitz. Then Singuitz and Eauten (p. 267).

The Kirnitzsch Valley is ascended by a good road from Schandau, passing the baths above mentioned, the (2M.) Ostrauer Mühle, and the (2M.) Haidemühle (Restaurant), to the Lichtenhain Waterfall and the Great Waterfall (*Inn, R. and L. 1¹/4 M.), which may be improved by opening a sluice. The footpath quits the road here and ascends in 1/2 hr. to the -

*Kuhstall (1246 ft.; Inn), an archway of rock, 20 ft. in height, commanding in one direction a view of the Habichtsgrund, a profound wooded ravine, enclosed by sandstone rocks. It was probably once employed by the peasantry as a refuge for their cattle in time of war, and has thence derived its name ('cow-stable'). The summit is attained by 83 steps through a narrow cleft in the rocks.

The path descends through a deep gorge to the Habichtsgrund. It next ascends gradually to the base of the basaltic Kleine Winterberg (1424 ft.), and then rapidly to a plateau, where a small hut with inscriptions marks the spot where Elector Augustus I. by a fortunate shot saved himself from an infuriated stag in 1568.

The summit of the *Grosse Winterberg (1824 ft.; Inn, R. and L. $2^{1}/_{2}$ m.), easily reached from the Kuhstall in 2 hrs., is a basaltic ridge, $1/_{2}$ M. long. The tower commands a picture que and extensive view, embracing the Saxon, Bohemian, and even the Silesian Mts.

The Path to the Prebischthor (1 hr. to the S. E.) leads from the inn on the Winterberg to the left through the wood, then, at the first bifurcation, to the left again, and afterwards skirts the Bohemian frontier, which is indicated by stones. The *Prebischthor (1226 ft.; Hotel, Austrian wines), a rocky arch of far more imposing dimensions than the Kuhstall (66-100 ft. wide; roof 48 ft. long, 10 ft. thick), is in Bohemian territory. The *View of the wild environs is very striking. — Descent to Herrnskretschen 1½ hr.; a good path descends between huge walls of rock to the Bielathal, which is traversed by the Herrnskretschen and Dittersbach road. Several saw-mills are passed. The Biela flows into the Kamnitz, which joins the Elbe at Herrnskretschen.

Herrnskretschen (*Herrnhaus; Kuschelka; Grüner Baum; Hungarian wine at Schlögel's), a village on the Elbe. On the opposite bank is stat. Schöna (*Rail. Restaurant), see p. 297. — Steam-

(in $1^{1}/_{4}$ hr.) 6 m.

The road from Herrnskretschen to Dittersbach (9 M.; carr. 5 fl.) leads through the Kammitzthal for 1/2 M. and then ascends the Bielathal. About 21/4 M. from Herrnskretschen a finger-post is passed on the left, indicating the way to the Prebischthor (see above), which, however, may also be reached from Herrnskretschen by a direct path with steps. 21/4 M. Dresden, see p. 270. Departure from the Altstadt. At (21/2 M.) Plauen (tramway, see p. 272), where there are extensive breweries, begins the Plauensche Grund, a rocky part of the valley of the Weisseritz, 11/2 M. in length, now disfigured by factories. The train crosses the stream several times. On the height to the right rises the château of Begerburg (*Restaurant, 1/4 hr. from stat. Plauen), commanding a pleasing prospect.

At (41/2 M.) Potschappel the valley expands, and is studded with manufactories and well-built dwelling-houses, to which the productive coal-mines in the vicinity have given rise. On the Windberg, to the S., rises a monument to 276 miners who perished by an explosion in 1869. 51/2 M. Deuben. From (7 M.) Hainsberg a branchline diverges to Schmiedeberg (see p. 306).

81/9 M. Tharandt (685 ft.; Bad; Deutsches Haus; Albert-Salon). with 2500 inhab., romantically situated at the junction of three valleys. On a rocky eminence rise the ruins of an ancient castle (843 ft.). The Forst-Academie, founded in 1816, an institution for the education of foresters, enjoys a high reputation. Pleasant walks and beautiful woods in the environs. - 11 M. Edle Krone, with a silver-mine. Tunnel.

The line now quits the valley of the Weisseritz, and ascends the picturesquely-wooded Secrenbachthal as far as (16 M.) Klingenberg. 19 M. Nieder-Bobritzsch. To the right, below (221/2 M.) Muldenhütten, is seen the Muldener Hütte, an extensive governmentfoundry. The Freiberger Mulde is then crossed. On the right and left are numerous mines and foundries.

25 M. Freiberg (1345 ft.; *Hôtel de Saxe; *Rother Hirsch; Stern). a mining town, founded in 1171, on the discovery of the silver mines, is the centre of the Saxon mining district. Pop. 27,598. A well-kept promenade, with remains of the old walls and towers, and the extensive Law Courts, surrounds the town.

The Annaberger-Strasse leads to the left from the station to the old Petersthor, where a Gothic Monument erected in 1844 commemorates the brave defence of the town by the townspeople and miners against the Swedes in 1642-43. The Peters-Str. leads hence to the Obermarkt, with the handsome Rathhaus on the E. side, a late-Gothic building of 1410, with additions in the Renaissance style, and the Kaufhaus on the N. The former contains a number of portraits of Saxon princes, and the latter a Museum of Antiquities. The spot where Kunz von Kauffungen (p. 331) was executed in 1455, opposite the Rathhaus, is marked by a stone with a cross; the stone head above the oriel of the Rathhaus is said to be a portrait of the bold robber.

The Weingasse, at the corner of the market diagonally opposite the Peters-Str., and then the second side-street to the left, lead to the *CATHEBRAL, a late-Gothic edifice erected on the site of a Romanesque church which was burned down in 1484. A beautiful relic of the earlier church, dating from the 12th cent., is the S. Portal, or *Goldene Pforte, remarkable for its rich sculptures, probably dating from the beginning of the 13th century. These plastic decorations, which were perhaps originally gilded, rank amongst the best works of the mediæval period, those in Italy not excepted.

The sculptures represent the Kingdom of God revealed to man by Christ. Below are eight statues of representatives of the Old Testament and antetypes of Christ: to the left Daniel, the Queen of Sheba, Solomon, and St. John the Baptist; to the right Asron, a woman with a crown (the church?), David, and Nahum the prophet. The nine lunettes above contain reliefs from the New Testament: in the central field are the Virgin and Child, to the left the Adoration of Magi, to the right the angel Gabriel and St. Joseph; in the middle arch, God the Father and four angels, with Christ, an angel, and seven saints above; on the third arch, the Holy Ghost (represented by a dove) with eight apostles; on the highest arch, the Angel of Judgment and the Resurrection of the dead.

INTERIOR (sacristan, Untermarkt 392; 1 m.). Behind the high-altar is the Kurfürstengruft, in which repose forty-one Protestant princes of Saxony, from Duke Henry the Pious (d. 1539) to Elector George IV. (d. 1694). The finest monument is that of the Elector Maurice (d. 1553 at the battle of Sievershausen) in the Renaissance style of the 16th cent., a sarcophagus of several rare kinds of marble, with a kneeling statue of the prince, and richly sculptured, executed by Anthony van Seron at Antwerp in 1563. High up in a corner of the choir is the suit of armour worn by the Elector at the time of his death. The late-Gothic Pulpit of 1506, in the form of the stalk and calyx of a flower, with steps borne by the figures of the master and his assistants, is also worthy of inspection. The powerful Organ was built in 1714, by Silbermann, a native of Freiberg.

Near the Kreuzthor, at the N.W. corner of the town, is Schloss Freudenstein, erected in the 15th cent., and now a magazine.

The Mining Academy (160 students), founded in 1765, which gained a high reputation owing to the efforts of the great mineralogist Werner (d. 1817), possesses valuable collections. Werner's grave, near the Goldene Pforte, is denoted by a Monument.

About 3/4 M. to the E. of Freiberg is situated the Himmelfahrt mine, the most valuable in the district. We follow the road leading from the Donatsthurm, the only one of the old gate-towers now standing, and turn to the left past the cemetery. Admission for 1 pers. 1 m. and fee.

From Freiberg to Nossen (and Leipsic), by a branch-line, see p. 315; to Bienenmühle, see p. 307.

United States Consul. Mr. J. J. Flinn.

Chemnitz (1000 ft.; pronounced Kemnitz), the third largest town in Saxony and one of the most important manufacturing places in Germany, with 95,123 inhab., lies in a fertile plain at the base of the Erzgebirge. It was originally a settlement of the ancient Wends, and became celebrated at an early period for its linen manufactories and bleaching-grounds. The staple products are stockings, gloves, woven goods, and machinery, which are manufactured on a large scale both in the town itself and in the neighbourhood.

The late-Gothic Rathhaus (Pl. 15) in the Hauptmarkt (Pl. E, 4) is flanked with arcades and possesses a lofty tower. Near it is the Jacobikirche (Pl. 8) of the 14th cent., skilfully altered in the 18th, and again in a Gothic style in 1879-80; the sacristy contains a picture by Cranach the Elder. Among the other prominent buildings are the Cattle Market, the Law Courts (Pl. D. 4), and the Technical Schools (Pl. F, 3) of the Saxon government. Interesting visits may be paid to the Foundry for Artistic Purposes in the Annaberg-Str. (Sun. 10-3, Wed. 10-12 and 1-3), and to the Industrial Museum (Sun. 10-12). - The Schloss (Pl. D, 2), to the N.W. of the town, once a Benedictine abbey, is now a restaurant with pretty grounds and a good view. The adjoining Abbey Church, erected in the late-Gothic style in 1514-25, with a fine S. portal, contains paintings of the old Franconian School. The fountain in the Schlossteich, below the Schloss, plays on Sun, from 5 to 7 p.m. - Around the town extend the well-built and increasing suburbs.

the town extend the well-built and increasing suburbs.

From Chemnitz to Dobein and Riesa, see p. 313; by Flibha to Annaberg, Reitsenham, and Komotau, see pp. 308, 303; to Adorf, see p. 312; by Niederviesa to Hainichen and Rossvein, see p. 304.

From Chemnitz to Luriello, 53 M., direct line in 2½-2½4 hrs.; fares 6 m. 70, 5 m., 3 m. 40 pf. (station, Pl. E. 6). From (6 M.) Wittgensdorf a branch-line diverges to Limbach. 14 M. Cossen lies in the valley of the Zwickawer Mulde, which is here crossed by the imposing Göhrener Railvay Fiaduct, 500 yds. long, 220 ft. high (excursion from Cossen down the Mulde Valley to Rochlitz, see p. 315). 19½ M. Narsdorf, the junction for Penig (p. 316). 22½ M. Geithain; 28½ M. Frohburg; 34 M. Borna. At (38 M.) Kiertisch the line unites with the Saxon and Bavarian line (p. 331).

511/2 M. St. Nicolai, a suburb of Chemnitz; 541/2 M. Siegmar; 561/2 M. Grüna; 58 M. Wüstenbrand, all of which are also stations on the line to Lugau, Höhlteich, and Stollberg. 61 M. Hohenstein-Ernstthal, two manufacturing places; about 11/2 M, from Hohenstein lie the chalybeate baths of that name. At (65 M.) St. Egidien a branch-line diverges to Lichtenstein, Calinberg, Oelsnitz, and Stollberg (see above). At Stollberg is the castle of Hoheneck, now a house of correction.

70 M. Glauchau (800 ft.; Deutsches Haus; Adler), a manufacturing town with 21,358 inhab., with two châteaux of the counts of Schönburg, lies on the Mulde, which the line now crosses. (From Glauchau to Narsdorf, Grossbothen, and Grimma, see p. 315.) — Beyond the Mulde a branch diverges to the N.W. to Gössnitz (p. 332), passing Meerane, a manufacturing town with 22,393 inhabitants.

80 M. Zwickau (930 ft.; Post; Grüne Tanne, R. & L. 2, A. 1/2 m.: Hôtel Wagner: Deutscher Kaiser), an old manufacturing town with 35,000 inhab., on the once important commercial route from the Danube to E. Franconia, lies in a pretty valley on the Mulde.

The late-Gothic *Marienkirche, begun in 1453, with choir of 1536, has been restored as a Protestant church.

Winged attarplace in carved wood, with paintings by Wohlgemuth, executed in 1479, representing Mary and the eight holy women. The Sacristy contains similar works, dating from 1507. In the Baptistery a small picture by Cranach, 'Suffer little children to come unto Me'. Handsome choir-stalls, Fine view from the tower (227 ft.). The sacristan lives on the N. side of the church.

The Catharinenkirche of the 14th and 15th cent., subsequently altered, also contains a picture by Cranach. Thomas Münzer, the fanatical leader of the Anabaptists (p. 371), was pastor here in 1520-22. Adjacent is the château of Osterstein, built in 1590, now a penitentiary. — In the market-place are the Rathhaus of 1581, the late-Gothic Kaufhaus (now a theatre) of 1522-24, and other fine old buildings; also the new Zwickau Bank and the house in which the composer Robert Schumann (1810-1856) was born (with a medallion). - In front of the Gymnasium is a War Monument. Opposite are the Law Courts, the Post Office, and the Realschule.

The environs are well-peopled. The 80 coal-mines of this district employ upwards of 8000 hands.

From Zwickou to Oelsnits, 38 M., railway in 2-3 hrs., via Lempenfeld, Auerbach, and Falkenstein (comp. p. 332); to Werdau, see p. 332; to Schwarzenberg, see p. 311.

At (88 M.) Neumark our train reaches the Leipsic and Reichenbach-Hof railway, see p. 332. •

52. The Erzgebirge.

The Erzgebirge, or Ore Mountains, a range between Saxony and Bohemia, 85 M. in length and about 25 M. wide, extends from the Saxon switzerland on the N.E. to the Bavarian Fichtelgebirge on the S.W. The ownternation on the N.E. to the bavarian rentelligionize on the S.W. The morthern slopes are richly wooded and of gentle incline, while the southern slopes descend steeply to the valley of the Eger. The watershed, with a mean elevation of 2480 ft., lies almost wholly in Bohemia, which also contains the highest summit, the Keitbery or Someonerivel (4078 ft.).— Geologically the range consists chiefly of granite and gneiss, with a few basaltic cones in the central portion. Its wealth of silver and other ores gave rise to its name, but the mining operations are now insignificant.—

The climate is on the whole severe. In the higher regions winter lasts for 7-8 months. In summer, the temperature is mild and the air cool and bracing, and several places, such as Erdmannsdorf, Wildenthal, and Em-siedel, have lately been frequented as summer-resorts.

A visit to the Erzgebirge is facilitated by numerous Railways. The Chemnitz-Annaberg-Komotau and the Chemnitz-Marienberg-Komotau railways intersect the district, and many short branch-lines diverge from the Saxon and Bohemian railways and penetrate more or less deeply into its recesses.

The Inns, especially in the higher districts, are still very rustic, and even in the most frequented resorts make no pretensions to luxury. The charges, however, are moderate.

GUIDES may generally be dispensed with, but are sometimes useful in the forests (half-day 2, whole day 4 m.).

CARRIAGES with one horse 8-12, with two horses 12-18 m. per day. Where there are no diligences, there is often a public conveyance of some kind between the different villages.

a. Eastern Part.

1. FROM DRESDEN TO TEPLITZ.

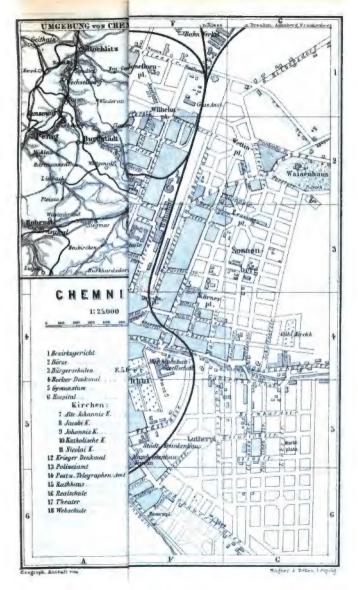

Railway to (20 M.) SCHMIEDEBERG in 21/4 hrs. (fares 2 m. 10, 1 m. 40 pf.). From Dresden to (7 M.) Hainsberg, see p. 302. Our line here turns to the S., crosses the Wilde Weisseritz and the Rothe Weisseritz, and follows the romantic valley of the latter, called the *Rabenauer Grund.

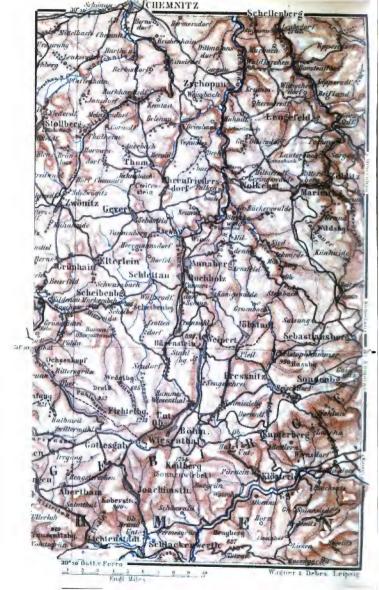

71/2 M. Cossmannsdorf; 91/2 M. Rabenau, at the mouth of the Oelsa-Bach; 101/2 M. Spechtritz; 12 M. Seifersdorf; 14 M. Malter.

151/2 M. Dippoldiswalde (1170 ft.: Stadt Dresden; Goldner Stern), a small town of 3321 inhab., with a handsome Rathhaus. The Friedhofkirche is a fine Romanesque edifice, and the Hauptkirche possesses an interesting doorway.

Pleasant walk through the Luckwitz-Thal to the Luchberg (1910 ft.), a basaltic hill, 5 M. to the S.E., commanding a fine view.

Beyond Dippoldiswalde the train crosses the Weisseritz six times. 17 M. Ulberndorf; 171/2 M. Obercarsdorf; 191/2 M. Naundorf.

20 M. Schmiedeberg (1410 ft.), at the mouth of the Pöbelbach. Pleasant walks may be taken hence to the (1 hr.) Tellkoppe (2470 ft.) and the (1½ hr.) Friedrichshöhe (2425 ft.).

FROM SCHMIEDEBERG TO TEPLITZ VIA NIKLASBERG, 7-8 hrs. — We follow the Altenberg road (see below), through the picturesque 'Lange Grund', as far as (4 M.) Kipsdorf, and then proceed vià Barenfels, Schellerhau, and the Pobelknochen (2760 ft.) to (2 hrs.) Rehefeld - Zaunhaus, with a shooting-box of the King of Saxony, close to the Austrian frontier. Thence in 11/4 hr. to the forester's house of Kalkofen and in 1/2 hr. more to the ancient little mining-town of Niklasberg (Rathhaus). In the neighburhood are the Stürmer Berg (2706 ft.) and the Wolfstein, two good points of view. From Niklasberg we walk in 1 hr. to Klostergrab (Rathhaus), another little mining-town, whence we may either go by railway to (3 M.) Ossegg (Kaiser von Oesterreich), with a Cistercian abbey and a ruined castle, and (7 M.) Teplitz, or follow the high-road direct to (5 M.) Teplitz. - A pleasanter route from Niklasberg to Teplitz leads viâ (31/2 M.) Richwald (*Curhaus), whence an omnibus plies in summer to (3 M.) Teplits (see Baedeker's Southern Germany).

FROM SCHMIEDBERG TO TEPLITZ VIA GRAUPEN, 6 hrs. A diligence runs twice daily in 2 hrs. from Schmiedeberg to Kipsdorf (see above) and Altenberg (2460 ft.; Stadt Teplits, R. & B. 13/4 m.), a small mining-town, with a monument commemorating the discovery of the tin mines in 1458. Good points of view in the vicinity are the Raupennest and the Kahle Berg (2955 ft.). - From Altenberg a path leads by Geising and Fürstenau to the (11/2 hr.) Mückenberg (see below). The road to Graupen (one-horse carr, 7 m.) passes (21/2 M.) Zinnwald (2460 ft.; Biliner Bierhalle, Hungarian wine 20 pf. per glass), situated exactly on the frontier, and $(4^{1}/2 \text{ M}.)$ the Mückenberg (2630 ft.; extensive view from the tower, 1/4 hr. to the E.), and then descends. 11/2 M. Graupen (Stadt Dresden), with coal-mines and the ruins of the Rosenburg. Fine view from the Wilhelmshöhe. From the station Rosenthal-Graupen, on the Bodenbach-Komotau railway, we go by train in 10 min. to (21/2 M.) Teplits-Waldthor (omn. to the town, 15 kr.). Teplitz, see Baedeker's Southern Germany.

2. From Freiberg to Komotau.

Railway to (16 M.) Bienenmühle in 11/4 hr. (2 m. 10, 1 m. 60, 1 m. 10 pt.). Freiberg, see p. 302. The train follows the valley of the Freiberger Mulde. 3 M. Berthelsdorf; 6 M. Lichtenberg; 9 M. Mulda; 14 M. Nassau.

16 M. Bienenmühle (Inn), the terminus of the railway, lies at the base of the Erzgebirge.

FROM BIENENMÖHLE TO FRAUENSTEIN, 6 M., diligence daily in 1½ hr.— Frauenstein (2170 ft.; Strauss; Stern) is a loftily-situated little town, rebuilt after a fire in 1869. Fine view from the tower of the ruined eastle— From Frauenstein a diligence plies twice daily to (10½ M.) Klingenberg (p. 302). Road to (14 M.) Niklasberg (p. 307).

FROM BIENENMÜHLE TO OBSEG, 4-5 hrs., a picturesque mountain-walk. The route leads by (2 hrs.) Metzdorf, (1 hr.) Languiess (whence the Wisselstein, 3100 ft., may be ascended in \(^1/2\) hr., with guide), and (\(^1/4\) hr.) the ruin of Riesenburg. It then descends by Riesenberg and through wood to (\(^1/4\) hr.) Ossegg (p. 307).

FROM BIRNENMUHLE a diligence runs twice daily in 11/2 hr. to (6 M.) Sayda (2220 ft.; Löwe, Stern, Ross), one of the oldest towns in Saxony (diligence to Olbernhau, see below). At Sayda we reach the old road to Brux, which we follow to (3 M.) the château of Purschenstein. Neuhausen (with a pretty Gothic church), and (3 M.) Bad Einsiedel (2465 ft.; Bath House), a summer-resort with a sulphurated chalybeate spring, charmingly situated among woods.

To the N. rises the Schwartenberg (2550 ft.), to the S. the Ahornberg (2730 ft.). — A pleasant walk may be taken to (3 M.) Seiffen, with manufactories of toys, whence a diligence plies to Obernhau (see below).

We next pass through (11/2 M.) Deutsch-Einsiedel and Böhmisch-Einsiedel, separated from each other by the frontier, ascend to (31/2 M.) Kreuzweg, on the crest of the hill (2625 ft.), and then descend to Hammergrund and (3 M.) ---

Oberleitensdorf (Drei Linden, Weisses Ross), a busy little toymaking town, with 3500 inhab., on the Bodenbach and Komotau railway. It contains a château of Count Waldstein and a chalvbeate spring.

FROM OBERLEITENSDORF TO KOMOTAU, 17 M., railway in 11/4 hr. (fares 1 fl. 10, 90, 55 kr.). Stations unimportant, Komotau, see Baedeker's Southern Germany.

b. Central Part.

1. From Chemnitz to Komotau by Reitzenhain.

66 M, RAILWAY in 51/4-6 hrs. (fares from Chemnitz to Reitzenhain 5 m. 60, 4 m. 20, 2 m. 80 pf.; from Reitzenhain to Komotau 1 fl. 47, 1 fl. 23, Chemnitz, see p. 304. Our line diverges from the Dresden railway at (8 M.) Flöha and ascends the valley of the Flöha, crossing the stream several times and passing beneath the Hetzdorf Viaduct (p. 304). 13 M. Hohenfichte, with large factories; 15 M. Leubsdorf (view of the Augustusburg, p. 309); 171/2 M. Grünhainichen; 201/2 M. Reifland; 21 M. Rauenstein, with a picturesque old castle.

24 M. Pockau, whence a diligence plies thrice daily to (2 M.) Lengefeld (Post; Erbgericht), a small town with 3526 inhab., on the slope of the Adlerstein.

FROM POCKAU TO OBERGEORGENTHAL. Railway (70 or 50 pf.) to (7 M.) Olbernhau (Gerichtsschänke), an industrial place with 4755 inhab., picturesquely situated on the Flöha. Pleasant walks to the (1½ M.) Bruchberg and to the (3 M.) Königstanne, a gigantic fir-tree. Diligences to Seifen and Sayda (see above). - The high-road to Obergeorgenthal follows the valley of the Flöha and crosses the Bohemian frontier at Grunthal, situated at the entrance to the picturesque valley of the Natschungbach, through which pedestrians may walk to Görkau. Beyond Grünthal the road leads to (41/2 M.) Katharinaberg (Kaiser von Oesterreich), a mining-town with 2500 inhab., (2 M.) Nickelsdorf (near the Bernstein, a good point of view), and 3 M.) Obergeorgenthal

The train now follows the valley of the Schwarze Pockau. To the right the ruin of Lauterstein. 281/9 M. Zöblitz, 1 M. from the small town of that name. Picturesque walk to the Katzenstein. The train then leaves the Pockau-Thal and reaches - 311/2 M. Marienberg (1995 ft.; Drei Schwäne), a regularly-built little town with 6162 inhab., chiefly engaged in lace-making. There are still a few relics of the old fortifications. - A diligence plies twice daily to Wolkenstein (see below); one-horse carr. to Olbernhau (p. 308) in $1^{3}/_{4}$ hr., 6 m.

37 M. Gelobiland. 43 M. Reitzenhain (2490 ft.), the frontierstation (luggage examined). Böhmisch-Reitzenhain, a little to the N.E., is a summer-resort.

The Bohemian railway crosses the Grenzbach by a lofty viaduct and reaches its culminating point (2720 ft.) near (48 M.) Sebastiansberg. At (52 M.) Krima-Neudorf our line unites with the Chemnitz-Annaberg railway (see below). The train then descends in numerous windings (gradient 1:50) to (58 M.) Doming-Schönlind, (64 M.) Techernowitz, and (66 M.) Komotau. Comp. Baedeker's Southern Germany.

2. From Chemnitz to Komotau by Annaberg.

82 M. Bailwar in 78/4 hrs. (fares to Weipert 4 m., 3 m.; from Weipert to Komotau 2 fl. 85, 2 fl. 14, 1 fl. 43 kr.).
From Chemnitz to (8 M.) Flöha, see p. 308. Our line then ascends the busy valley of the Zschopau. 101/2 M. Erdmannsdorf (960 ft.), a summer-resort.

Diligence five times daily to (2 M.) Schellenberg (1620 ft.; Hirsch), a little town commanded by the extensive Augustusburg, a château erected in 1568-72 (two pictures by Cranach in the chapel). The adjacent Kun-nerstein (1280 ft.) is a good point of view.

151/2 M. Waldkirchen.

18 M. Zschopau (Stadt Wien; Deutsches Haus), a small town of 7991 inhab., with cloth-factories. The château of Wildeck includes a round tower said to date from the time of Emp. Henry I. - Beyond Zschopau, on the left bank, the fir-trees are planted so as to form the initials H.C., in memory of Heinrich von Cotta (d. 1844), a noted Saxon writer on forestry.

26 M. Wolkenstein (1630 ft.; Sächsischer Hof), with an interesting church and a partly-ruined château. About 2 M. from the town are the warm springs (86°) of the same name, with a Curhaus.

Diligence to Marienberg, see above.

29 M. Wiesenbad is another little watering-place with a Curhaus and springs (82°). — The train soon after enters the valley of the Sehma.

35 M. Annaberg (1970 ft.; * Wilder Mann, D. 2 m.; *Museum; *Rail. Restaurant; Bahl's Restaurant, with garden and view), a town with 12,956 inhab, busily occupied in making lace and trimmings, which are largely exported to the United States. Annaberg was founded in 1496 and first attained importance through its mines, now of little value. Lace-making was introduced by Barbara Uttmann in 1561. — The Annenkirche, built in 1499-1525 and recently restored, contains some interesting works of art.

The sculptures on the Goldne Pforte's are particularly noteworthy. On the sides of the galleries are 100 painted reliefs, of 1522, representing Biblical, legendary, and humourous scenes. The high-altar, the work of A. Dowher of Augsburg, and the pulpit are adorned with reliefs of the same period. Several old German pictures also deserve notice: Death of the Virgin, by Grünewald, the Woman taken in adultery by Cranach the Younger, St. Catharine, also ascribed to Cranach. The smith's work on the sacristy door is admirably executed.

The grave of the Bergkirche, consecrated in 1517, contains the grave of Barbara Uttmann (d. 1575; see above). — The Pöhlberg, a basaltic hill 2 M. from Annaberg, is a fine point of view.

From Annaherg diligences ply daily to Jöhstadt, Burkhardtedorf (p. 312), Zwönitz (p. 311), Raschau, and Schwarzenberg (p. 311).

The train continues to follow the course of the Sehma, on the

36 M. Buchholz (1880 ft.; Deutsches Haus), a town of 6539 inhab., engaged in making trimmings and corks. The Gothic church of St. Catharine contains some paintings of Wohlgemuth's school.

38 M. Sehma. From (40 M.) Cranxahl a diligence runs twice daily to Oberwiesenthal (see below). 46 M. Bärenstein, at the foot of a basaltic hill of the same name (2920 ft.). The Austrian customhouse is at (461/2 M.) Weipert (2395 ft.).

The train ascends the course of the Pöhlbach. 53 M. Schmiedeberg (2790 ft.; Schneeberg), a little town with 3000 inhabitants.

FROM SCHMIEDEBERG TO CARLBEAD. A picturesque road leads from Schmiedeberg to (4½ M.) Oberwiesenthal (2990 ft.; Deutscher Kaiser) and (2½ M.) Gottesgab (3300 ft.; Grünes Haus), the most loftily-situated town in Austria, once the centre of a busy mining industry. The top of the Fichtelberg (3880 ft.), the highest mountain in Saxony, may be reached from Oberwiesenthal in ½ hr., and the *Keilberg or Sonneamérbel (4078 ft.), the highest summit of the Erzgebirge, may be ascended from Gottesgab in 1-1½ hr. (extensive view). — About 1½ M. beyond Gottesgab the road forks, one branch leading W. to (7 M.) Bäringen (p. 312) and the other to the S. to (2½ M.) Joachimsthal (2365 ft.; Staat Dresden), a town with 7000 inhab., picturesquely situated in the narrow valley of the Weseritzbach. The word 'thaler' is derived from the coins ('Joachimsthaler') struck here by Count Schlik in 1516, but the mining is now insignificant. — From Joachimsthal a diligence runs thrice daily to (5½ M.) Schlackenwerth (Benthaus; Adler), an old town with a château and park of the Grand Duke of Tuscany. Railway hence to (10 M.) Carlsbad, see Baedeker's Southern Germany.

At (58 M.) Kupferberg (Rathhaus) the railway reaches its culminating point (2830 ft.), whence it descends to (61½ M.) Pressnitz-Reischdorf, the station for (3 M.) Pressnitz (Herrenhaus), the home of numerous itinerant musicians.

65 M. Sonnenberg, a small town with a conspicuous church, 11/2 M. to the S.E. of the railway.

At (68 M.) Krima-Newdorf our line unites with that from Reitzenhain (see p. 309). — 82 M. Komotau, see Baedeker's Southern Germany.

c. West Part.

1. FROM ZWICKAU TO CARLSBAD VIÂ SOHWARERNBERG

58 M. RAILWAY to (37 M.) Johanngeorgenstadt in 3-4 hrs. (fares 4 m. 40, 3 m. 40, 2 m. 40 pf.), Diligence from Johanngeorgenstadt to (21 M.) Carlsbad in 5 hrs. (fare 3 m. 40 pf.).

Zwickau, see p. 305. The train ascends the valley of the Zwickauer Mulde, through a busy district rich in coal. 2 M. Schedewitz: 21/9 M. Cainsdorf. From (4 M.) Wilkau a branch-line diverges to Kirchberg and Saupersdorf. 7 M. Wiesenburg, with a ruined castle; 10 M. Fährbrücke. About 2 M. to the E. is the small town of Wildenfels, with the château of Count Solms-Wildenfels and a new church. 121/2 M. Stein, with a picturesque old castle; 1 M. to the N.E. is Hartenstein, the birthplace of the poet Paul Fleming (in 1609), with a château of Prince Schönburg-Hartenstein. A little farther on, on the left bank, is the Prinzenhöhle, a cave in which the young Prince Ernest of Saxony was kept prisoner for two days by the accomplices of Kunz von Kaufungen (comp. p. 331). - 16 M. Niederschlema (1090 ft.), with a large paper-mill.

Branch-line from Niederschlema (in 25 min.; 40, 30 pf.) to (3 M.) Schneebranch-line from Mederschiema (in 20 min.; 40, 50 pr.) to (5 m.) scannes-berg (1525 ft.; 35.64stches Haus; Flustenhaus), a mining and lace-making town with 7642 inhabitants. The late-Gothic church, erected in 1516-40, contains a large altarpiece, with wings, representing the °Crucifixion, a master-piece of Cranach the Elder, by whom it was painted with the aid of his pupils in 1639; the painting in the centre is the best. The tower (260 ft.) commands a fine view. The numerous mines in the vicinity, formerly rich in silver, now chiefly produce cobalt, bismuth, and nickel.

— Diligence from Schneeberg to Eibenstock (p. 312) daily in 2 hrs.

181/2 M. Aue (Erzgebirgischer Hof), a small town pleasantly situated in a hollow at the confluence of the Mulde and the Schwarzwasser, is the junction for Chemnitz and Adorf (p. 312). The station lies on the right bank of the Mulde, in the village of Zelle, which derives its name from the Cella Mariæ, an old Augustine convent. - The line then ascends the valley of the Schwarzwasser to -

25 M. Schwarzenberg (1400 ft.; Hôtel de Saxe; Rathskeller), a small town with an old Schloss, on an eminence skirted by the Schwarzwasser. Diligences ply hence to Annaberg (p. 309; carr. and pair 101/2 m.) and (4 M.) Grünhain (p. 312).

Near Schwarzenberg is the pleasant little watering-place of Ottenstein, with mineral springs. — Good points of view in the vicinity are the Tod-tenstein and the (1½ hr.) Spiegelwald (2385 ft.).

The next part of the railway, opened in 1883, ascends the valley of the Schwarzwasser, passing below the château of Schwarzenberg by a tunnel 320 ft. long. Unimportant stations.

37 M. Johanngeorgenstadt (2460 ft.; Hôtel de Saxe; Rathhaus), a small town on the left bank of the Schwarzwasser, rebuilt since a fire in 1869. In the market-place is a statue of Elector John George, who founded the town in 1654 as a refuge for Bohemian Protestant exiles. — Diligence twice daily to Eibenstock (see below) in 21/4 hrs.

FROM JOHANNGBORGENSTADT TO CARLSBAD. The diligence passes the frontier-villages of Wittigsthal and Breitenbach, and ascends through a pleasant valley to (4 M.) Platten (2910 ft.), a small town on the top of the ridge, with manufactories of mirrors and pewter spoons (half-a-million dozen annually). Passing (21/2 M.) Bäringen we then descend through the Wistritz-Thal to (6 M.) Lichtenstadt and (81/2 M.) Carlsbad (see Baedeker's Southern Germany). From Lichtenstadt we may ascend the (21/2 M.) Wölfling (view).

2. FROM CHRMNITZ TO ADORF.

72 M. RAILWAY in 5-51/2 hrs. (fares 9 m. 20, 6 m. 90, 4 m. 60 pf.).

Chemnitz, see p. 304. 2 M. Alt-Chemnitz. Beyond (4 M.) Erfenschlag the train follows the valley of the Zwönitz. 61/2 M. Einsiedel. a favourite summer-resort. About 1 M. to the E. is the Dittersdorfer Höhe (1715 ft.), a fine point of view. 8 M. Dittersdorf; 121/2 M. Burkhardtsdorf, 19 M. Dorf-Chemnitz (pleasant walk to the Greifenstein, 2380 ft.). — 17 M. Zwonitz (1800 ft.), 1/2 M. from the little town of that name (Viehweg).

About 4 M. to the S. of Zwönitz (diligence) lies Grünhain (Rathskeller), a small town amid wooded hills, with the remains of a Cistercian convent founded in 1236. Diligence to Schwarzenberg, see p. 311.

About 5 M. to the S.E. of Zwönitz (diligence twice daily) lies Elterlein (Sonne), a small town on the slope of the Schatzenstein (2506 ft.), surrounded by woods. Its mining was once important, but now produces nothing but a little ochre.

From Zwönitz to Annaberg, see p. 310. Diligence to Stollberg (p. 305) twice daily in 11/2 hr.

The train now crosses the ridge (1810 ft.) and descends (1:40) in numerous windings to the Lössnitz-Thal. 26 M. Lössnitz (1480 ft.). with 5805 inhabitants.

311/2 M. Aue, the junction of the Zwickau-Schwarzenberg line (p. 311). We next ascend the valley of the Mulde. On the left bank is an artificial channel for timber-rafts. Tunnel. 361/2 M. Bockau; 39 M. Blauenthal; 40¹/₂ M. Wolfsgrün.
43 M. Eibenstock (2100 ft.; Stadt Leipzig), a town of 6706 inhab., 11/2 M. to the E. of the station, the chief seat of the tambour embroidery. Romanesque church built in 1864-67. - Diligences to Johanngeorgenstadt (p. 311) and Schneeberg (p. 311).

FROM EIBENSTOCK TO CARLESAD. Diligence to Neudek, 17 M., in 41/z hrs. (fare 2 m. 20 pf.). Beyond (4 M.) Wildenthal and (2 M.) Oberweildenthal we cross the frontier, at a height of 3075 ft., and descend to (4 M.) Hirschenstand and (7 M.) Neudek (1310 ft.; Rathhaus), pleasantly situated on the Rohla, with a château. From Neudek a branch-railway runs to (9 M.) Chodau (fares 70, 42 kr.), on the Carlsbad and Eger line. Thence to Carlsbad (in 20 min.), see Baedeker's Southern Germany.

45 M. Schönheide (Bairischer Hof), whence the Kuhberg (2608 ft.)

may be ascended; 48 M. Wilzschhaus. 50 M. Rautenkrans.

From Rautenkranz walkers may make excursions to (51/2 M.) Carlsfeld, with an octagonal church; to Steindobra, at the foot of the Aschberg (3070 ft.), and (71/2 M.) Klingenthal (see below); and to (4 M.) Reiboldsgrün (p. 332).

From (51 M.) Jägersgrün a diligence plies twice daily, in 11/2 hr., to Auerbach (p. 332). About 21/2 M. to the S.E. of (541/2 M.) Hammerbrücke rises the Schneckenstein (2920 ft.), a hill of topaz-quartz (guide necessary).

The railway reaches its highest point (2530 ft.) at the sources of the Mulde, near (591/2 M.) Schöneck (Rathskeller). It then descends rapidly (1:40) to - 63 M. Zwota (2210 ft.), a long village in the Zwota-Thal.

FROM ZWOTA TO FALKENAU. Branch-railway in 35 min. (fares 60, 40, 30 pf.) to (6 M.) Klingenthal (1805 ft.; Brauner Hirsch), a village with 3386 inhab., engaged in making musical instruments. Thence by diligence through the valley of the Zwota to Graslitz (1640 ft.; Kaizer von Cesterreich), an industrial town with 8000 inhab., whence a branch-railway runs. (11/2 hr.; 82, 55 kr.) to Bicistadt, Hartenberg, and (14 M.) Falkenau, on the Carlsbad and Eger railway. See Baedeker's Southern Germany.

The railway continues to descend rapidly. 69 M. Markneukirchen (1540 ft.), 1 M. from the town, which is the centre of the Erzgebirge manufacture of musical instruments. Fine views from the Obere Berg and the Hohe Stein (2550 ft.).

72 M. Adorf (1100 ft.; Hôtel Ruderisch), a small town in the valley of the Weisse Elster, and the junction for the Leipzig and Eger railway (see p. 332).

53. From Dresden to Leipsic.

711/2 M. RAILWAY. Express in 21/4 hrs. (fares 11 m. 60, 8 m. 70, 5 m. 80 pf.; ordinary trains in 3-31/2 hrs. (9 m. 30, 7 m., 4 m. 70 pf.).

The train starts from the Neustadt, nearly 1 M. from the principal hotels in the Altstadt, and skirts the Lössnitz, a range of vine-clad hills with numerous villas. 4 M. Radebeul; 5 M. Weintraube, 1/2 M. from the station of which is the Paradies, a favourite resort of the Dresdeners; 6 M. Kötzschenbroda, near which is the restaurant of Friedensburg; 9 M. Coswig, the junction for Meissen and Döbeln (see p. 314).

12 M. Niederau. The scenery is now less attractive. From (19 M.) Priestewitz a branch-line diverges to Grossenhain (3 M.; p. 269). 27 M. Röderau is the junction of the Berlin line (p. 270); the village lies on the right bank of the Elbe. The train crosses the Elbe.

31 M. Riesa (Rail. Restaurant), the junction for the branch-lines to Chemnitz, Elsterwerda (p. 269), and Lommatzsch.

FROM BIESA TO CHEMINIZ, 41 M., by railway in 2½ hrs. (fares 5 m. 30, 4 m., 2 m. 70 pf.). 15½ M. Döbeln is the junction of the Leipsic, Meissen, and Dresden line (see next page). The train crosses the Freiberger Mulde here, and the Zschopau farther on, commanding several pleasing views of the valley of the latter. 22 M. Waldheim (Löwe), a small town with a large prison. 22 M. Erlau; 30 M. Mittseida (*Sächsischer Hof). On a lofty rock on the right bank of the Zechopau, 1 M. to the N. of Ober-lichtenau, is the château of Sachsenburg; 11/2 M. to the S. lies the extensive château of Lichtenwalde, with beautiful fountains. Chemnitz, see p. 304.

At the Hubertusburg, an old château 6 M. to the W. of (39 M.) Oschatz, a peace terminating the Seven Years' War was concluded by Austria. Prussia, and Saxony in 1763. 45 M. Dahlen. 55 M.

Wurzen (Goldener Adler), a manufacturing place of 7919 inhab., with an old cathedral and château (view from the tower). It is the junction of the Muldenthal Railway to Golzern, Grimma, Grossbothen, etc. (see p. 315). The Mulde is now crossed, 64 M. Borsdorf. 711/2 M. Leipsic, see p. 316.

b. By Döbeln.

79 M. RAILWAY in 4-41/2 hrs. (fares 9 m. 30, 7 m, 4 m. 70 pf.). This route is longer, but more attractive than the above.

As far as (9 M.) Coswig the route is the same as the preceding.

The train crosses the Elbe, and soon reaches -

Travellers coming from Leipsic to visit the porcelain factory should alight at Triebischthal (see below).

Meissen, one of the most ancient towns in Saxony, and the seat of the Margraves of that name down to 1090, is most picturesquely situated at the influx of the Triebisch and the Meisse into the Elbe, which is here crossed by two bridges. Pop. 14,166. Near the Mönchskirche is a fountain with a figure of Henry the Fowler by Henze, and the Kornmarkt is embellished with a war-monument.

On leaving the station we turn to the right and cross the old Elbe bridge to the (1/2 M.) Grosse Markt. We next follow the Burg-Strasse to the right, passing under the Schlossbrücke, then turn to the left, cross the bridge, and reach the Schlossberg, 160 ft. above the town, on which stand the cathedral and the Albrechtsburg. In front of the latter is a bronze Statue of Albert the Courageous.

The *CATHEDRAL was founded in the 13th, and completed in the two following centuries. The S.E. tower (254 ft.), with its elegant spire, dates from the 15th century. The portals and the interior are adorned with numerous interesting sculptures.

Interior (the sacristan lives at No. 10, to the right). Most of the ancestors of the royal family of Saxony of the 15th and 16th cent. repose here in the Fürstencapelle, and among them the princes Ernest (d. 1439) and Albert (d. 1500), the founders of the present reigning lines (see p. 331). The finest monument is that of Friedrich 'der Streitbare' (d. 1429), in bronze, in the W. portal (built in 1423-25), and the brass of the Duchess in Dronze, in the w. portal fount in 1420-20, and the brass of the Dudness Sidonia (d. 1510) is artistically valuable. — The church also contains some good old German pictures dating from the end of the 15th and beginning of the 16th cent., the best being Christ between Mary and St. John, by Luc. Granach the Edder, 1524. The choir contains four admirable painted statues of the 2nd half of the 13th century.

The *Albrechtsburg, erected in 1471-83 by the brothers and co-regents Ernest and Albert, from plans by Arnold of Westphalia, is one of the most extensive castles of that period, with remarkably fine vaulting. From 1710 to 1860 it was occupied by the royal porcelain factory. Since 1863 it has been thoroughly restored, and decorated with frescoes illustrative of its history by Dietrich, Ochme, Preller, and other modern German artists. The windows command a number of beautiful views. Visitors are conducted through the Schloss by the castellan from 9 a.m. to 5, 6, or 7 p.m. according to the season; fee for 1 pers. 1 m., a party 40 pf. each. The entrance is behind the statue of Duke Albert.

On the Afra-Berg, which is connected with the Schlossberg by the above-mentioned bridge of the 13th cent., is an old abbey converted into a school in 1543, where Gellert (1729-34) and Lessing (1741-46) received their early education. The Gothic Church of St. Afra was built in 1295-1329, and atterwards altered.

The celebrated Royal Porcelain Manufactory (650 workmen) is now established in the Triebischthal, 1½ M. from the Grosse Markt (p. 314). It is shown on week-days 7-12 (winter 8-12) and 1½-6 (Sat. 1½-4); fee 2 m. for 1 pers., or 1 m. for each member of a party. The manufactory was founded in 1710, shortly after Böttger (d. 1719) had discovered the art of making 'china'.

Among several beautiful points of view in the environs of Meissen be mentioned Schloss Scharfenberg; the rocky height of the Bossi, near Strnessits; and Schloss Siebensichen, all steamboat-stations between Dresden and Meissen (see p. 272).

18½ M. Triebischthal, near which is the Meissen porcelain-factory (see above). The line now traverses the Triebischthal. 19½ M. Miltitz-Roitzschen; 25 M. Deutschenbora. At (27½ M.) Nossen (branch-line to Freiberg, p. 302), with a Schloss, the pretty valley of the Mulde is entered. On a wooded hill to the left beyond it are the ruins of the monastery of Altenzella, with a burial-chapel of the counts of Meissen. From (33 M.) Rossuein, a branch-line diverges to Hainichen and Chemnitz (p. 304). 40 M. Döbeln (Sonne), a thriving little town with 11,800 inhab., the junction of the Riesa and Chemnitz line (p. 305). 45½ M. Klosterbuch, with a ruined abbey and beautiful walks. 48 M. Leisnig, an old manufacturing town with 7312 inhab., is commanded by Schloss Mildenstein. The little watering-place of Mildenstein, on the Mulde, is a favourite summer-resort. 52½ M. Tanndorf, to the right of which rises the beautifully-situated Schloss Kössern. 57 M. Grossbothen.

FROM GROSSBOTHEN TO GLAUCHAU, 35 M., by railway in 31/4 hrs. (fares 4 m. 60, 3 m. 50, 2 m. 30 pf.). The railway, coming from Wursen and Grimma, traverses the pretty Muldenthal, which offers many charms to the pedestrian. — 4 M. Colditz (Kreuz), a small town on the Zuickauer Mulde, commanded by an old castle, now a lunatic asylum. — 101/2 M. Rochlitz (Love: Skichsischer Hof), an ancient town of 5760 inhab., with an old electoral Château with two towers. Of its three churches the late-Gothic Kunigundenkirche is the most interesting. The Rochlitzer Bery (1115 ft. above the see, 630 ft. above the river), 2½ M. from the town, with a tower, commands a beautiful view. A branch-line diverges hence to Narsdorf and Penig (see below). — 151/2 M. Wechselburg (Süchsischer Hof), with a château of Count Schönburg-Vorderglauchau, the late-Gothic chapel of which, containing interesting late-Romanesque and Gothic sculptures, was formerly the church of the Augustine abbey of Zeichillen (founded 1174). — The train now passes under the imposing Göhrener Viaduct (p. 305), and reaches the prettily-situated little town of (18 M.) Lunzenau, and then (20 M.) Rochsburg, with another château and park of Count Schönburg. — 231/2 M. Penig (Staat Leipzig), a small town of 5800 inhab., with two châteaux, and pretty pleasure-grounds, where the above-mentioned line to Narsdorf and Rochlitz diverges. — 27 M. Welkenburg, with a château and park and a church of 1794. - 30 M. Waldenburg (Goldener Lowe), the residence of Prince Schönburg-Waldenburg. 35 M. Glauchau (p. 305).

62 M. Grimma (*Kronprinz; Löwe), picturesquely situated on the Mulde, with 8042 inhab.; also a station on the Muldenthal Railway (see above). The electoral Schloss is now occupied by public offices. The Fürsten-Schule was established in 1550. The convent of Nimbschen, where Catharine von Bora, the wife of Luther, was once a nun, is now a farm-house (restaurant).

The line traverses the valley of the Parthe. Stations Gross-Steinberg, Naunhof, and (73 M.) Borsdorf, where the Riesa line is reached.

54. Leipsic.

Leipsic, Ger. Leipzig (387 ft.), one of the most important commercial towns in Germany, with 149,081 inhab. (in 1880), and the centre of the German book-trade, is the seat of the supreme law-courts of the German Empire, and of one of the most ancient and important universities in Europe. The city lies in an extensive plain, near the confluence of the Elster, the Pleisse, and the Parthe. The interior of the city consists of lofty and closely-built houses, dating chiefly from the 17th and 18th cent., and is surrounded by five handsome suburbs, beyond which are a series of villages almost adjacent to the town.

Leipsic is said to have been originally a Slavonic settlement, called Lipsk, or 'the town of the lime-trees'. It is mentioned in history for the of the time at the beginning of the 11th cent., and was soon afterwards for-tifled. About the year 1170 it was endowed with extensive privileges by Otho the Rich, Margrave of Meissen, and thenceforward increased ra-pidly. As early as 1180 markets were held here biennially at 'Jubilate' and Michaelmas, and in the 15th cent. attained to great importance. In 1458 a New Year's Fair was added to the number, and in 1497 and 1507 the Emp. Maximilian confirmed the privileges of the town by prohibiting markets to be held at any town within a wide circle around, and by guaranteeing a safe-conduct to all the frequenters of the Leipsic fairs. The trade of Leipsic was somewhat depressed by the various wars of the 17th and 18th cent., but after 1833, when Saxony joined the 'Zollverein' or German customs-union, it assumed most important dimensions. The Jubilate and Michaelmas Fairs are still attended by a vast concourse of merchants, but the New Year's Fair has considerably fallen off. On these occasions the town is thronged by from 30,000 to 40,000 traders from all parts of Europe, especially from the E., and by Jews, Greeks, Bulgarians, Armenians, and Turks. The most important of the staple commodities at the fairs are furs, of which nearly one million pounds' worth change hands annually; next in value are leather, cloth, woollen wares, glass, and linen. The total value of the sales averages 10,000,000. per annum. Leipse is still more important as the centre of the Book Trade of Germany, a position which it has occupied since the end of the 18th century.

Germany, a position which it has occupied since the end of the 18th century. There are about 300 booksellers shops and 80 printing-offices in the town, and publishers in other parts of Germany almost invariably have depôts of their books at Leipsic, whence they are sent to all parts of Europe and more distant countries. Many hundred booksellers congregate here at the post-office, and several private houses.

Jubilate, and transact business at their own Börse, or Exchange.

Pleasant Promenades on the site of the old fortifications separate the inner town from the suburbs. On the S. side they are interrupted by the spacious AUGUSTUS-PLATZ (Pl. E, 4), which is enclosed by the new theatre, the museum, the Augusteum, the

The *New Theatre (Pl. 44; E, 3), a handsome edifice in the Renaissance style, designed by C. F. Langhans of Berlin, was completed in 1867. The principal façade is adorned with a Corinthian portico, the tympanum of which contains an allegorical group by Prof. Hagen; the Apollo, with Clio and Calliope, forming the 'acroterion', are by the same sculptor; the groups in the tympana of the wings are by Lürssen, Wittich, and Schiele. The back of the building, with its semicircular projecting terrace, is turned towards the most attractive part of the promenades, and adjoins the Schwanenteich, a miniature lake, where on Sundays and holidays a fountain rises to a height of 66 ft., producing a very picturesque effect. The interior is also worthy of a visit (open daily, 2-4 p.m.; 50 pf.).

The chief attraction of the *Museum (Pl. 31; E, 4), a building opposite the theatre, designed by Prof. L. Lange of Munich, and built in 1858, is its collection of modern pictures. This gallery was instituted in 1837 by the Leipsic Kunstverein, and since then has been considerably increased by purchase, and by the presentation of the Schletter Collection, which consists chiefly of French pictures. Among the older masters represented are Burgkmair, Cranach, Dürer, Schäufelein, Botticelli, Reni, Ribera, Vasari, Murillo, Brueghel, Rembrandt, Teniers, and Wouverman. Among the modern works are some fine landscapes by Calame; Napoleon at Fontainebleau by Delaroche; the designs for Preller's frescoes at Weimar; and specimens of Achenbach, Defregger, Knaus, Lessing, Overbeck, Richter, Rottmann, Schwind, and other German artists. The museum also contains an extensive collection of engravings and drawings. of the sculpture are plaster-casts, but there are good original works by Thorvaldson, Hähnel, Schilling, Kopf, and Hildebrand. - The museum is at present being extensively altered and enlarged, and is temporarily closed to the public.

The Augusteum (Pl. 2; D, 4), on the W. side of the Augustus-Platz, erected in 1836 from designs by Schinkel, is the seat of the University, founded in 1408, and now attended by 3200 students, and contains several of its collections and most of the lecture-rooms. (Medical faculty, see p. 321). The library numbers 350,000 vols. and 4000 MSS. The Aula contains a monument to students who fell in the war of 1870-71, a number of busts and statues by Knaur and Rietschel, and twelve *Reliefs by the latter, illustrative of the development of civilisation (placed too high). The adjacent Paulinerkirche (Pl. 26), restored in 1544, contains in the choir a monument by Rietschel to the Margrave Dietzmann of Meissen, who was assassinated in St. Thomas's in 1307.

To the S.W. of the Museum, near the Bürgerschule, rises a Statue of Thacr (Pl. 19; D, 4), the agriculturist (d. 1828), by Rietschel.

The busy GRIMMA'SCHE STRASSE (Pl. D, 3), which contains several handsome old houses, particularly No. 15, the Fürstenhaus completed about 1575, leads from the Augustus-Platz towards the W. to the MARKY-PLATZ (Pl. D, 3), situated nearly in the centre of the city, and bounded on three sides by lofty and antiquated houses, some of them in the Renaissance style, while the fourth side is occupied by the Rathhaus (Pl. 38), of 1556. At the back of the Rathhaus is the small Naschmarkt, with the Exchange, a building of 1683. Opposite its S. end is Auerbach's Keller (p. 316).

To the N.W. runs the Hain-Strasse, at No. 31 in which Schiller resided in 1785 and 1789, leading to the Brühl, a great resort of the Jewish frequenters of the fairs, where the offices of many wholesale dealers in furs and other wares are situated. In 1813 Richard Wagner, the composer, was born at No. 88 in this street (inscription). The E. end of the Brühl debouches on the pleasure-grounds behind the New Theatre (p. 318). The building to the right, at the corner of the Brühl and the Goethe-Str., is temporarily occupied by the Supreme Courts of the German Empire.

The Churches of Leipsic present few attractions. The Nicolai-kirche (Pl. 25; D, 3) of 1525 contains some of the cannon-balls of 1813 built into the walls by the windows, and a stone pulpit, from which Luther is said once to have preached, in a vaulted receptacle by the S. entrance. In the Ritter-Strasse, opposite, is the Booksellers' Exchange (comp. p. 318). — The Church of St. Thomas (Pl. 29; C, 4), with its lofty and conspicuous roof, was consecrated in 1496. Concerts of sacred music, at which Bach's compositions are chiefly performed, are often given here in winter ('Motette', see p. 317). Bach was organist at the adjacent Thomas-Schule from 1723 down to his death in 1750. On the S. side of the church is a bronze Statue of Leibnitz (1646-1716), a native of Leipzig, by Hähnel, unveiled on Oct. 25th, 1883. - The Roman Catholic Church (Pl. 23: C. 4) and the Sunagogue (Pl. 42) are modern. — The new Lutherkirche, near the Johanna Park (Pl. B, 5), was founded in 1883, on the 400th anniversary of the Reformer's birth.

An inscription in the court of the house 'Zur grossen Feuerkugel', Universitäts-Str. 4, at the back of the university, indicates the room which Goethe is said to have occupied when a student here in 1767-68. - The Gewandhaus, or old Drapers' Hall, Universitäts-Str. 9, contains the Municipal Library (open Mon., Wed., Sat. 3-5, in winter 2-4), consisting of 100,000 vols. and 1500 MSS.; the concert-room (p. 317) is on the second floor. The Conservatorium of Music, in the same building, is one of the most famous in Europe, and was attended in 1883 by about 450 pupils. - The Art - Industrial Museum, Thomaskirchhof 20, near the Thomaskirche, is rapidly growing in importance (open. on Sun. 10.30-1, Mon., Wed., & Frid. 11-1).

The S.W. corner of the inner town is occupied by the Pleissenburg (Pl. C, D, 4, 5), formerly the citadel, now containing barracks and public-offices, and dating chiefly from the 16th century. - At the N.W. angle of the town stands the Old Theatre (Pl. 45; C, 2), near which is a monument (Pl. 12) to Hahnemann (d. 1843), the father of homeopathy.

A small monument at the end of the Ranstädter Steinweg (Pl. B, C, 2) commemorates the premature blowing up of the bridge by the French on 19th Oct., 1813, which proved so fatal to their rear-guard. The spot where Prince Pontatowsky was drowned in the Elster on that occasion is indicated by an inscription on the house Lessing-Str. 10, but the ground has been entirely altered since then.

On the promenade, opposite the Dresden station, is a marble bust of G. Harkort (d. 1865; Pl. 13), the chief promoter of the Leipsic and Dresden Railway, which was the first of any importance in Germany (opened in 1837). The construction of the railway is also commemorated by an Obelisk (Pl. 8).

In front of the Church of St. John (Pl. 22; F. 4) is the handsome *Reformation Monument, erected in Nov., 1883, with bronze statues of Luther and Melanchthon by Schilling. To the E. of the choir is the tomb of Gellert (d. 1769), the poet, who was a professor at the university of Leipsic. The old Cemetery of St. John has been partly laid out as pleasure-grounds. - A monument at the corner of the Salomons-Str. and Dresdener-Str. (Pl. 10; F. 4) marks the spot where Major Friccius stormed the Grimma'sche Thor on 19th Oct. 1813, after the battle of Leipsic. Near the 'Milchinsel' (Pl. F, 3), the first position within the town gained by the Allies on that day, is the Kugel-Denkmal (Pl. 14), or 'Ball Monument', with projectiles found in the city and environs.

On the first floor of Grimma'scher Steinweg 46, obliquely opposite to the Friccius monument, is the collection of a society for investigating the history of Leipsic (Sun. 10.30 to 12.30), containing a few reminiscences of the great battle. On the second floor is the *Ethnographical Museum (Pl. 32; Sun., Mon., Thurs. 11-1, 50 pf.: at other times 1 m.; closed in winter), one of the best collections of the kind in Germany.

The house No. 20 Königs-Strasse (Pl. E, 4), indicated by a memorial tablet, was occupied by Mendelssohn in 1835-41 and 1846-47. Since 1867 a range of new buildings for the medical faculty of the University has been erected in the S.E. suburb, including the Anatomie (Pl. 1), the Eye Dispensary (Pl. E, 6), the Physiological Institute (Pl. 34), the Chemical Laboratory (Pl. 5), the Deaf and Dumb Asylum (Pl. E, 5, 6; with a monument of its founder, Samuel Heinicke, d. 1790, Pl. 18), the Zoological and Agricultural Institutes (P1. 49), the Physical Laboratory, the Mineralogical Institute (Pl. 35), the extensive Municipal Hospital, the Pathological Institute (Pl. 33), the Veterinary Hospital (Pl. 48), and the Hospital for Mental Diseases. Near the last are the Botanical Garden (Pl. F, 6) and the extensive New Cemetery (Pl. G, 6, 7).

At Nos. 9, 10 Peters-Steinweg (Pl. 39; D, 5) is the so-called RÖMISCHE HAUS, built from designs by Hermann in 1833, and containing some good frescoes. In the staircase, Brutus condemning his sons, and Cornelia praising her sons the Gracchi, by Wislicenus; on the ground-floor *Landscapes illustrative of the Odyssey, by Preller, executed here for the first time (comp. p. 342); in the central saloon, Cupids on the ceiling by Genelli. Opposite are the District Courts (Pl. C, 5), a large and imposing building, extending westwards to the Harkort-Str. Farther to the W., on the other side of the Pleisse, is the new Concerthaus (Pl. C, 6), designed by Gropius & Schmieden. The space opposite is reserved for the new building of the Supreme Courts (comp. p. 319). — To the S.E., in the Schletter-Platz, is the new Peterskirche (Pl. 27; D, 6).

Adjoining the city on the N.W. is the *Resenthal (Pl. A. B. 1). with its pleasant meadows and fine woods. It is embellished with a marble statue of Gellert (Pl. 11) and a bust of the composer Zöllner (Pl. 20). Concerts are frequently given here at Bonorand's Garden-Café (see p. 317). Near the café is the Zoological Garden, with a skating-rink. - To the N. of the Rosenthal is the village of Gohlis, where an inscription on one of the houses records that Schiller there composed his 'Ode to Joy'. Farther distant is Eutritzsch, where 'Gose', a favourite kind of beer, may still be tasted at the Gosenschenke.

The *Collection of Baron Speck at Lützschena (one hour's drive to the N.W.; reached by the Halle railway in 20 min., p. 328) comprises several good works by old masters of the Dutch, German, and Italian schools (visitors apply to the custodian; closed on Sundays).

The Battle of Leipsic, which lasted four days, 16th-19th Oct., 1813, is the most prolonged and sanguinary on record. It was conducted on both sides by some of the greatest generals of modern times. Napoleon's forces numbered 140-150,000 men, of whom 90,000 survivors only began the retreat to the Rhine on 19th Oct.; the allied troops were 300,000 strong. The Russians lost 21,000 men, the Austrians 14,000, the Prussians 16,000. The entire number of cannon brought into the field is estimated at 2000. On 19th Oct. at 11 a. m. a Prussian 'Landwehr' battalion stormed the 2000. On 19th Oct. at 11 a. m. a Prassian 'Landwehr' battalion stormed the Grimma Gate (p. 320) and forced an entrance into the town. At 12 Napoleon quitted the town. The French retreated towards Lützen by the bridge over the Elster near the Ranstädt Gate. The bridge, the only mode of crossing the river, was prematurely blown up, in consequence of which thousands of the French perished by drowning, and among them the Polish general Poniatowsky (p. 320); 25,000 who had not yet crossed the bridge were taken prisoners. At 1 o'clock the Allies entered Leipsic. A bird's eye view of the battle-field (see Plan) is best obtained from the tower of the Pleissenburg (p. 320). The scene of the engagement of the design 18th Oct. is prehave better viewed from the Newsleanstrick the tower of the Pleissenburg (p. 320). The scene of the engagement of the decisive 18th Oct. is perhaps better viewed from the Napoleonstein, situated on a height planted with trees near the Thomberg estate, 2 M. S.E. of Leipsic, whence the progress of the battle was watched by Napoleon. The village of Probitheyda, 3/4 M. farther, was the centre of the French position. On a hill by the road-side, 1/2 M. S.E. of Probstheyda, rises an iron Obelisk on the spot, where, according to an erroneous tradition, the three monarchs (Russia, Austria, Prussia) received the tidings of the victory on the evening of 18th October. On the right of the road, a little nearer Leipsic, near the farm of Meusdorf, stands a simple block of granite with an inscription to the memory of Prince Schwarzenberg, the general of the allied forces (d. 1820). The only building on which bullet-marks are still visible is the château at Dölüz, 2 M. to the W. of the obelisk, where a detachment of Austrians was stationed. All the above points may be visited by flacre in about 3 hrs.

55. From Berlin to Leipsic.

101 M. RAILWAY in 3-51/2 hrs. (express fares 15 m. 40, 11 m. 80, 8 m. 80 pf.; ordinary 13 m. 20, 9 m. 90, 7 m. 20 pf.).

From Berlin to Jüterbog, see R. 47. — 521/2 M. Zahna.

591/2 M. Wittenberg (Goldene Weintraube, R. & A. 21/4 m. Adler, both in the market; Schwarzer Bar, Schloss-Str.; Kaiserhof, R., L., & A. 2 m.; Rail. Restaurant; Sichler's Garten, outside the Neue Thor, a favourite resort), on the Elbe, with 13,600 inhab., a fortress down to 1875, and one of the cradles of the Reformation. was a residence of the Electors of Saxony down to 1542. In 1760 it was bombarded by the Austrians, in 1813 occupied by the French. and in 1814 taken from them by storm by the Prussians under Tanenzien.

Near the station, outside the Elsterthor, we observe on the right an oak surrounded by a small garden, which is said to mark the spot where Luther publicly burned the papal bull on 10th Dec., 1520.

Passing through the Elsterthor, we enter the Kollegien-Strasse, on the left side of which rises the Augusteum, erected in 1564-83, and lately restored; it is now a seminary for clergymen. The court contains Luther's House, being part of the old Augustinian monastery, where 'Brother Augustine' took up his residence in March. 1508, when summoned from Erfurt to occupy the chair of philosophy at the university of Wittenberg. At a later period also the house was occupied by the great Reformer, and it was afterwards presented to him by the Elector.

LOTHER'S ROOM, containing a stove of coloured tiles, a table, and a diriking goblet once used by him, is nearly in its original contion.—
In 1883, on the 400th anniversary of his birth, a LUTHER MUSEUM was formed here, which includes a portrait of Luther, portraits of the Reformers and Saxon Electors, and various objects which belonged to the great leader of the Reformation.

In the same street, a little farther on, is Melanchthon's House, indicated by an inscription, the property of the clergymen's seminary; in the garden is a stone table with an inscription of 1551.

— The nearly adjacent Infantry Barrack was once occupied by the famous University founded by Elector Frederick the Wise in 1502, where Luther became a teacher of the Holy Scriptures in 1512. In 1817 the university was incorporated with that of Halle.

In the neighbouring Market-Place, under a Gothic canopy, rises a large *Statue of Luther, designed by Schadow, and erected in 1821, bearing the inscription, 'Ist's Gottes Werk, so wird's bestehn; ist's Menschen Werk, wird's untergehn' (if it be God's work it will endure, if man's it will perish). Farther to the W. is a Statue of Melanchthon, by Drake, erected in 1866.

The old Rathhaus, situated at the back of Luther's Monument, dating from the 16th cent., and restored in 1768, contains a few unimportant pictures of the school of Cranach.—In the S.W. corner of the market-place is the dwelling-house of Lucas Cranach the Elder (1472-1533), the painter, who was once burgomaster of Wittenberg; it has been frequently restored.—The Schloss-Strasse leads to the old Electoral Palace, with its two round roofless towers. It has been burned down several times, and part of it is now used as an Arsenal.

Farther on is the *Schlosskirche, erected in 1439-99, seriously injured by the bombardment of 1760, and again in 1813-14, and restored in 1814-17.

The wooden doors to which Luther affixed his famous 35 Theses were burned in 1760, and were replaced in 1858 by Metal Doors, 10 ft. in height, presented by Frederick William IV., and bearing the original Latin text of the theses. Above, on a golden ground, is the Crucified, with Luther and Melanchthon at his feet, by Prof. v. Klöber. On the right and left, above the doors, are statues of the Electors Frederick the Wise and John the Constant, who are interred in the church, by Drake.

In the INTERIOR of the church are brazen slabs with Latia inscriptions which mark the graves of Luther (d. at Eisleben, 1546) and Melanchikon (d. at Wittenberg, 1560). — Among ether interesting monuments the choir contains that of Elector Frederick the Wise (d. 1525), by Peter Vischer, cast at Nuremberg in 1527, and that of John the Constant (d. 1532), by Hans Vischer, a son of Peter. The epitaph of Henning Goden, behind the altawith a coronation of the Virgin, is also by Peter Vischer (comp. p. 345). The portraits of the Reformers are by Lucas Cranach the Founger, 1534.

In the Stadtkirche, dating from the 14th cent., but afterwards much altered, Luther frequently preached; and here in 1522 the Holy Communion was for the first time administered in both kinds.

The INTERIOR is embellished with an altarpiece by Lucas Cranach the Elder representing the Holy Eucharist, with Baptism and Confession at the sides, and portraits of the Reformers Melanchthon and Bugenhagen; on the platform is Luther preaching. Among other pictures are a Christ on the Cross and an Adoration of the Shepherds by Cranach the Younger, and a Presentation in the Temple. — The Font was cast by Hermann Vischer of Nuremberg in 1457. Among the tombstones are those of Matthias von Schulenburg (1571), the younger Cranach (d. 1586), and Bugenhagen (d. 1558).

The Chapel zum heiligen Leichnam, of the 14th cent., is adorned with a picture of the Lord's Vineyard by Cranach the Younger. 1569, containing portraits of the Reformers and various allusions.

1009, containing portraits of the Ketormers and various allusions.

Wittenberg is the junction for the Falkenberg-Rosslau-Cöthen Line (68 M.), which is traversed by express trains from Breslau to Magdeburg and Hanover. — Falkenberg, see p. 270; 5 M. Fermerswalde; 14 M. Annaburg; 19 M. Jessen; 25½ M. Edser; 33½ M. Wittenberg, see above; 36 M. Klein-Wittenberg. 42 M. Coswig, with a château of the Duke of Anhalt, on the Elbe, ½ M. below which is a ferry, whence Wörlitz is reached in ¾ hr. (see p. 330). 48 M. Kliecken. — 53 M. Rosslau, the junction of the Magdeburg-Zerbst-Leipsic line (R. 66b). The train then crosses the Elbe and Mulde, and reaches (56 M.) Dessau (comp. p. 328). 60 M. Mosigkau (p. 330); 65 M. Elsnigk. 68 M. Cöthen, see p. 325.

Beyond Wittenberg the Leipsic train crosses the Elbe. 64½ M.

Bergwitz: 72 M. Gräfenhainichen, the birthplace of Paul Gerhardt (d. 1676), the hymn-writer. 75 M. Burgkemnitz, with a handsome château. To the left flows the Mulde. 82 M. Bitterfeld (Pring von Preussen), with manufactories of earthenware piping, the junction for Halle (181/2 M.; p. 325) and Dessau (p. 328). Near (89 M.) Delitzsch (p. 327), to the right, rises the Landsberg, with its chapel. 92 M. Zschortau; 95 M. Rackwitz.

pel. 32 M. Zschottau; 30 M. nuckwuz.

The line passes near Breitenfeld, where Gustavus Adolphus defeated Tilly and Pappenheim in 1631. The highest point of the battle-field is indicated by a stone surrounded by eight pines.

101 M. Leipsic, see p. 316. The station is fully 1 M. from the town; a cab should therefore be at once secured. Omnibus to the town 50 pf. Passengers for Bavaria are conveyed to the Bavarian station by a loop-line.

56. From Hamburg to Leipsic via Magdeburg.

There are two lines of railway from Hamburg to Magdeburg. and also two from Magdeburg to Leipsic, so that this journey may be accomplished in four different ways. The most direct route, on which through-carriages are always provided, is by Stendal, Magdeburg, and Halle (see R. 56a).

a. By Magdeburg, Cöthen, and Halle.

223 M. Railway in 8-11 hrs. (express fares 34 m. 70, 25 m. 80, 19 m. 10 pf.; ordinary 30 m. 90, 23 m. 10, 15 m. 50 pf.).

From Hamburg to (46 M.) Uelzen, see R. 18. The line to Stendal and Magdeburg here diverges from that to Hanover. The country traversed is flat and uninteresting. 77 M. Salzwedel, see p. 81.

Stations Pretzier, Kallehne, Brunau-Packebusch, Messdorf, Bismarck, Kläden. 113 M. Stendal (junction for Berlin, see p. 80). The train now passes stations Demker, Tangerhütte (with extensive ironworks), Mahlwinkel, Rogatz, Wolmirstedt, and then runs along the bank of the Elbe to (149 M.) Magdeburg (p. 87).

Another route from Hamburg to Magdeburg is by the line to the N. Another route from Hamburg to Magdeburg is by the line to the Rio fthe Elibe vià Wittenberge, which is 17 M. longer (to Leipsic 240 M., in 91/2-11 hrs.; fares 30 m. 90, 23 m. 10, 15 m. 50 pf.; express 32 m. 10, 23 m. 90, 16 m. 30 pf.). Luggage is examined at the custom-house before starting. From Hamburg to (90 M.) Wittenberge, see B. 28. — The Elbe is then crossed, and a flat district traversed. Stations Sechausen, Osterburg. At (130 M.) Stendal the line unites with that above described.

158 M. Schönebeck, a manufacturing place of some importance, connected with the neighbouring towns of Gross-Salze and Frohse by 'Colonisten-Strassen', constructed in 1772; near Gross-Salze are the salt-baths of Elmen.

Branch-line hence via Förderstedt to (14 M.) Stassfurt (Hôtel Steinkopf, well spoken of), with very extensive salt-mines, and Gusten, a station on the Cöthen and Halberstadt Bailway (see below). Stassfurt is also connected by railway with Blumenberg on the Magdeburg and Oschers-leben line (p. 875).

161 M. Gnadau is a Moravian settlement. The train now crosses the Saale by a bridge 1/4 M. in length. 165 M. Calbe an der Saale:

the town is 2 M. to the W.

180 M. Cothen (*Prinz von Preussen; Grosser Gasthof; Weintraube), with 16,155 inhab., is the junction for Dessau and Berlin (p. 328), and for Aschersleben (see below). Naumann's Ornithological Collection in the Schloss (a building of 1550) deserves mention. The principal church contains old stained glass and a font by Thorvaldsen. Sugar is largely manufactured here from beet-root, of which vast fields are seen in the environs.

FROM CÖTHEN TO ASCHERSLEBEN, 271/2 M., in 11/4 hr. (fares 3 m. 60, 2 m. 70, 1 m. 70 pf.). 6 M. Biendorf; 121/2 M. Bernburg (Kaiserhof; Gold. Kugel), a pleasant town with 16,900 inhab., a late-Gothic church, and a fine old Schloss (14-18th cent.). 20 M. Güsten, whence a branch-line runs to Stassfurt (see above); 22½ M. Giersleben; 21½ M. Aschersleben (p. 374).

Near (190 M.) Stumsdorf, to the right, rises the Petersberg (657 ft. above the Saale), 6 M. from Halle, commanding a fine view. The old abbey-church here, erected in the 12th cent., and restored in 1857, contains tombs of Wettin (Saxon) princes.

202 M. Halle. — Hotels. *STADT HAMBURG (Pl. a; D, 5), R., L., & A. 3, D. 2½ m., B. 80 pf.; *Kronfrine (Pl. b; B, 5), near the market; *Goldner Ring (Pl. c; C, 5), Stadt Zörick (Pl. d; B, C, 5), in the market; *Goldene Kugel (Pl. e; F, 7), near the station; Eheinischer Hof, Leipziger-Str.; Preussischer Hof (Pl. g; D, 4), Stein-Str.; Goldene Lówe, Stadt Berlin, PREUSSISCHER HOF (F. 18, 19, 19), Delin-Str.; Universal Lowe, State Learning, Leipziger-Str.; Goldene Rose, Bannische-Str.

Restaurants. The three first-named hotels; *Goldschmidt, Stein-Str.; Bieler & Skieme, Leipziger-Str. 2; Struve, Kleine Klaus-Str. 15 (wine-rooms); *Meissner, Grosse Ulrich-Str.; Börse, in the market; Tulpe, David, both adjoining the University (Pl. C, 4); *Moabiter Bierniederlage, corner of the Promenade and Grosse Ulrich-Str. — Wiener Café, Post-Str.; Café Peter, Grosse Ulrich-Str.; Café Barbarossa, on the Saale, with garden. - 'Hallorenkuchen', a favourite kind of cake, may be bought at Lauffer's, Leipziger-Str. 101.

Baths. Roker's, with swimming-bath, at the Gimmritzer Schleuse; Weineck's, in the Klausthor suburb; Parkbad, Dorotheen-Str. 15; Dr. Francke's, Fürstenthal

Cabs. Per drive for 1 pers. 50 pf., 2 pers. 70, 8 pers. 90 pf., 4 pers.
1 m. 10 pf.; to or from the station, within the town, 40, 60, 80 pf., 1 m.
Tramways. From the railway-station to the Round Tower (Pl. D, 6), and thence by the Promenade to Giebichstein. Another line leads from the Round Tower through the Leipziger-Str. and the Markt, joining the other at the end of the Ulrich-Str. Fare 10-20 pf.

Halle, an old town on the Scale, with 71,484 inhab., was an important place at a very early period in consequence of its saltworks, which now yield 11,000 tons of salt annually. In the 13th and 14th cent. it waged protracted feuds with the archbishops of Magdeburg; after the Peace of Westphalia it was annexed to Brandenburg. Halle possesses a university of great repute, founded in 1694, with which that of Wittenberg was united in 1817. The 'Pictistic' views for which the university was noted during the last century are no longer in vogue, and the town has become a commercial place of considerable importance.

In the picturesqe MARKET PLACE (Pl. C, 5), in the centre of the old town, rises the Rothe Thurm, a clock-tower 276 ft. in height, and near it a stone statue of Roland (see p. 134). Between this and the mediæval Rathhaus (Pl. 17) is a bronze Statue of Händel (d. 1759; Pl. 5), who was born here in 1685, erected by subscriptions from Germany and England. The great composer is represented in the English court-dress; at the back of the music-desk is St. Cecilia (a portrait of Jenny Lind). Opposite is a Gothic Fountain, with a figure by Schaper, erected in 1878 to the memory of natives of Halle who fell in 1870-71.

The *Marktkirche, or Church of Our Lady (Pl. 7; C, B, 5), erected in 1530-54, with four towers that belong to an earlier structure, two of them connected by a bridge, bounds the market on the W. side. (Sacristan, Markt 13.)

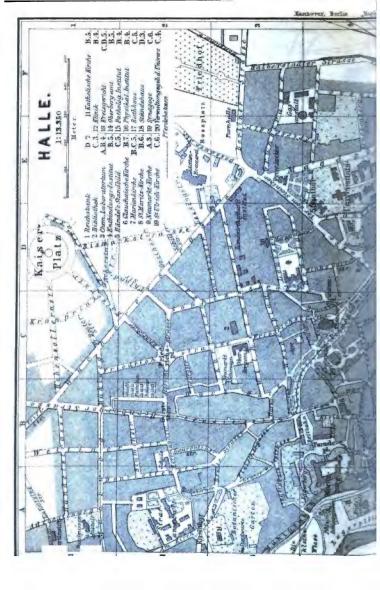

Interior. "Altarpiece, a scene from the Sermon on the Mount, by Hübner of Dresden. To the right by the altar a small picture by Cranach, the Fourteen Helpers in need. The chief treasure of the church is a double winged "Picture, painted by Cranach in 1529 for Card. Albrecht of Brandenburg, the builder of the church, representing SS. Magdalene, Ursula, Erasmus, and Catharine, the Virgin with the cardinal at her feet, at the sides St. Maurice and St. Alexander, the latter placing his foot upon the Roman Emp. Maximin; on the outside the Annunciation, St. John, and St. Augustine.

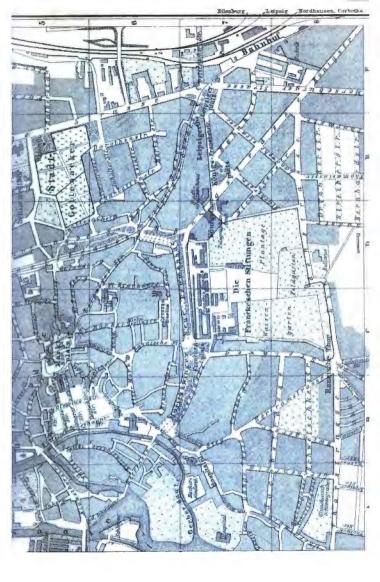

The finest church is that of *St. Maurice (Pl. 8; sacristan, No. 6 on the E. side) in the lower part of the town, near the 'Halle' (salt-works), said to date from the 12th cent.; elegant choir finished in 1511; tower begun in 1493; fine carved *Wood-work over the altar, representing Christ and Mary with saints, of 1488; near it, ancient winged pictures; pulpit, with reliefs of 1588, resting on a pillar representing Sin, Death, and Satan. This church is frequented by the workmen employed in the manufacture of the salt, called 'Halloren', a distinct race, who until recently preserved many of their ancient peculiarities, and are probably descended from the Wends who once inhabited this district.

The University Buildings (Pl. C, 4) were erected in 1834; of the 1400 students, a large proportion study agriculture. The lions in front of the university originally adorned the market-place.

Francke's Institutions (Pl. C, D, 7) on the S. side of the town, near the railway-station, comprising a Protestant orphan-asylum, school, laboratory, printing-office, etc., were begun in 1698 by the founder, whose sole means then consisted of a strong and simple faith, unsided by capital. The court of the asylum is adorned with a bronze Statue of Francke (d. 1727) by Rauch.

The Cathedral (Pl. A, B, 4, 5) contains a good altarpiece, representing Duke Augustus of Saxony and his family. Adjacent is the old Residence (Pl. 4; B. 5) of the archbishops of Magdeburg. which now belongs to the university, and contains the valuable collections of the Thuringian-Saxon Antiquarian Society.

Near the cathedral are the ruins of the Moritaburg, built in 1484. and the Jägerberg (Pl. A, 4), which affords a view of the town.

Several buildings connected with the university have been recently erected in parts of the town, such as the Anatomical Institute and Museum and the Physiological Institute in the Grosse Stein-Str. (Pl. D, E, 4), the Surgical Dispensary in the Magdeburger-Str. (Pl. E, 4), and the Library in the Friedrich-Str. (Pl. C, 3). Near the last, in the Wucherer-Str., is the Agricultural Institute (Pl. D, E, 3). The Archaeological Museum, Parade-Platz (Pl. B. 4) is open on Wed. and Sat. from 11 to 12, and the Botanical Garden (Pl. A, 3) is open daily, except Sun., 6-12 and 2-6.

Orbitaire (Fig. A. 5) is open daily, except Sun., 0-12 and 2-0.
Orbitaire ("Bergschenke), 1½ M. to the N. of Halle, is a favourite resort (pretty walk to it along the Saale). Opposite is the Giebichenstein, a ruined castle with pleasure-grounds. Lewis 'the Springer', Landgrave of Thuringia, was imprisoned here in 102, and, according to tradition, escaped by a daring leap into the river. Duke Ernest II. of Swabia, immortalised by Uhland, was also a prisoner here for a considerable time. "Witchind (Curhaus, D. 1½ m.), a watering-place near the Giebichenstein, is much frequented in surmers." is much frequented in summer.

48 M. Torgau (*Gold. Anker, in the market), a fortified town on the Elbe, which is crossed here by a handsome stone bridge and by that of the railway, with 11,091 inhab., is frequently mentioned in the history of the Reformation. In 1760 Frederick the Great defeated the Austrians here, and in 1813-14 the town was besieged by Tauenzien. Schloss Hartenfels, one of the largest Renaissance buildings in Germany (1481-1544) formerly a residence of the electors of Saxony, is now a barrack. The half-Gothic palace-chapel was consecrated by Luther; the staircase and the Gothic palace-chapel was consecrated by Luther; the starcase and the bay window in the court-yard, as well as the other in the N. wing of the palace, and the plastic decorations are all worth noticing. The late-Gothic Marienkirche contains the tomb of Catharine von Bora (d. 1552) Luther's wife, and several pictures of Cranach's school. The Rathhaus, with three high gables, dates from about 1560. — Gradite, a royal studfarm 2M. from Torgau, has acquired some renown for its breed of horses.

b. By Magdeburg, Zerbst, and Bitterfeld.

Distance and fares the same as in Route a, the line from Magdeburg to Leipsic via Zerbst being about the same length as that via Halle.

From Hamburg to (149 M.) Magdeburg, see above. Beyond (1511/2 M.) Neustadt-Magdeburg (p. 89) the train crosses the Elbe. and reaches (154 M.) Biederitz (p. 89). 1561/2 M. Königsborn; 162 M. Gommern; 166 M. Prödel; 170 M. Güterglück, where the line intersects the Berlin and Metz railway (R. 68).

175 M. Zerbst (Gold. Löwe; Hôtel d'Anhalt), an old town with 14,200 inhab., once the seat of the Princes of Anhalt-Zerbst, who became extinct in 1797, possesses a large Schloss. The marketplace, with its handsome gabled houses, is adorned with a Roland Column of 1445 (provided with a Gothic canopy in 1849) and a female figure on a slender column, called the Butterjungfer. the significance of which is doubtful. The Rathhaus, with two handsome gables of 1479-81 but disfigured by additions in 1610, contains a Bible printed on parchment, with wood-cuts coloured by Lucas Cranach. The handsome Nicolaikirche of the 15th cent. has been judiciously restored. The Gymnasium is established in an old Franciscan monastery on the ramparts, founded in 1250, and possessing fine cloisters.

Oab with one horse, for one person, per drive 50 pf.; with two horses 1 m.; for each additional person 20 or 40 pf.; each trunk 40 pf.

Dessau (118 ft.), the capital of the Duchy of Anhalt and the residence of the Duke, with 23,266 inhab., lies on the left bank of the Mulde in a grassy and partly-wooded district. The town has recently been considerably extended in the vicinity of the railwaystation. It contains broad streets and well-built houses, and boasts of a number of villas, gardens, and fountains. The DESSAU ART-COLLECTIONS are of considerable value and deserve to be better known: but they are unfortunately distributed among several different places, in or near Dessau. The nucleus of the collections was inherited by the Dukes of Dessau in 1675 from Princess Amalia of Nassau Orange, wife of the stadtholder Frederick Henry; and numerous additions were made in the 18th century.

The Ducal Palace and the Grosse Markt, adjoining the Schloss-

Platz, on the N.W., with the Schlosskirche, form the centre of the town

The Ducal Palace, consisting of a central edifice, with two wings, is situated on the bank of the Mulde. The main building, enlarged in 1872-74, and the E. wing were erected by Knobelsdorf of Berlin in 1748-51, but the W. wing is of earlier date. A suite of rooms on the ground-floor is fitted up in the taste of the 16th century.

The INTERIOR contains several hundred pictures. Those on the first floor, by Flippine Lippi, Borgognone, Santa Croce, Perugine, Garofalo, and other Italian masters, are of no great importance. A number of the Netherlandish pictures, however, on the second floor, are excellent (Asselyn, Jan Steen, Wynomts, Netseker, Adr. van de Veide, and Lairesse). On the third floor are several good modern works by Lessing, Triebel, Irmer, etc., and a few pieces of sculpture. — The so-called GIPSKAMMER on the groundfloor contains a number of precious objects, antiquities, coins, and relics, including the sword and stick of Prince Leopold, the 'Old Dessauer' (1676-1747), a famous Prussian general of the 18th cent., and Napoleon's silver goblet and his plates captured at Waterloo. (Fee 2 m.)

A military band plays on Sun., Tues., and Frid. in the Schloss-Platz in front of the guard-house, at 12 o'clock, invariably performing the Dessau March ('Ça donc, ça donc'), the favourite air of Prince Leopold. A statue to the prince, by Kiss, was erected in the Grosse Markt in 1860, on the model of that by Schadow in the Wilhelms-Platz at Berlin (p. 48).

The Sohlosskieche, erected at the beginning of the 16th cent., contains an Entombment and a Resurrection by Franz Schubert, a Dessau artist, and also some good pictures by Cranach, the finest of which is the Last Supper, with portraits of some of the chief promoters of the Reformation. Luther frequently preached in this church.

Proceeding northwards from the Grosse Markt, we next reach the Kleine Markt, with the Rathhaus and a marble monument by H. Schubert, erected in 1867 to commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of the accession of Duke Leopold Frederick (d. 1871).

No. 12 in the Zerbster-Strasse, a broad adjacent street, is the Amalien-Stiftung, for the reception of poor old women, founded by the daughter (d. 1793) of Prince Leopold. Adm. daily on application.

The PICTURE GALLERY on the upper floor, numbering about 700 works of no great merit, affords the visitor an excellent opportunity of becoming acquainted with the German painters of the 16th cent. (Pene, Listensky, Schuls, Seekats, etc.). Among the really valuable works are: Van Dyck, Portrait of Maurice of Orange; Honthorst, Portrait of Princess Amalia of Nassau-Orange; D. Mytens, Portrait group, 1666; Steensyk, Architectural pictures; J. Fyt, Dead poultry, Adr. van Ostade, Peasant at a window; Frans and Dirck Hals, Roisterers and 'rommelpot' players; Pieter Potter, Rejection of Hagar; Apercamp, Village-feast; Lingelbach, Harbour-scene; Mierevelt, Portrait of a lady; Van Goyen, Landscape; C. Netscher, Exhibition of jewels; Momper, Italian landscape.

This building was formerly the seat of the Philanthropin, a famous school, conducted for twenty years by Basedow (1774-93), where Campe, Salzmann, and other distinguished Germans were educated.

A little to the N. is the new Roman Catholic Church, by Statz.

— In the grounds to the right of the railway-station rises a monument to the Anhalters who fell in 1870-71. The Friedrich-Str. leads hence to the Cavalier-Str., passing on the left the Neumarkt, which contains the Lutheran Church of St. John and is embellished with a statue of Duke Leopold Frederick Francis (1758-1817). In the Cavalier-Str. are the palaces of the Princess Louise and the Erbpring, and also the Theatre (performances four times a week in winter). Behind the theatre is the Ducal Library, with 40,000 vols. (Tues. and Frid., 12-3). Farther on in the Cavalier-Str. are the Old and the New Gymnasium, and the Leopoldsstift, an almshouse for old men. In the Ascanische-Str. is the house in which Moses Mendelssohn (1729-1786) was born, indicated by a tablet.

About 1/2 M. to the N. of the station lies the Georgengarten (restaurant). The château contains upwards of a hundred pictures, chiefly copies, and a few sculptures. (Cab with one horse there and back 11/2 m.) A pleasant walk may be taken hence to the (11/2 M.) * Wallwitzberg, near Wallwitzhafen (p. 328), returning to (2 M.) Dessau by the Gänsewall, a shady avenue. — The ducal château of Kühnau, situated on a small lake in a fine park, 2 M. to the W. of the Georgengarten, contains an extensive collection of objects illustrative of the natural and political history of Anhalt. Cab with one horse there and back 4 m.

On the right bank of the Mulde lies the Thiergarten, whence a road leads to Jonits and (21/2 M.) the park and château of Luisium. Beautiful walks in the neighbouring woods.

About 41/2 M. to the W. of Dessau, on the Cöthen railway (p. 324), lies the village of Mosigkau, with a CHATEAU erected in 1752 and now occupied by an Adlig-Fräulein-Stift (institution for ladies of the German occupied by an Ading-Francein-chit (institution for lattles of the German noblesse). This building contains a valuable picture-gallery: Rubens, Zephyr and Flora; Snyders, Boar-hunt; Van Dyck, Life-size portrait of Prince William II. of Orange at the age of two years; Th. Rombouts, Musical party; K. Dujardin, Herd of cattle; S. Koninck, Philosopher. There are also works by Seghers, De Heem, Hondecoster, G. Honthorst, C. Netscher, Lairesse, etc. (Cab with one horse there and back 41/2 m.)

Diligence daily from Dessau eastwards to (8 M.) Oranienbaum (Goldnes Horn), the château of which contains a collection of all kinds of rococo ornaments and other valuables, and (11 M.) Wörlitz. Walkers may go to Wörlitz by Luisium, the Sieglitzer Berg, and Vockerode; nearly the whole way is shaded by trees. A shorter route for driving (8 M.) is by Jonitz. Naundorf, and Vockerode (one-horse carr. 8 m., two-horse 11 m., there and back). From the Coswig railway-station Wörlitz is 2 M. distant (see p. 324).

Wörlits (Bichenkranz, at the entrance to the park), a town with 2100 inhab., is famous for its beautiful park.

The extensive and well-kept ducal "GARDENS and PARK were laid out at the end of last century by Duke Leopold Frederick Francis of Dessau. They are embellished with many foreign trees, chiefly from N. America, and with several sheets of water, and afford beautiful walks. The traveller who desires to explore them (3-4 hrs.) had better take a guide (from the Eichenkranz, i m.) to pilot him through their intricacies and across the various lakes. The park is adorned in the style of last century, but also contains some good works of art. - The PALACE contains portraits of Countess Solms and the Prince of Orange by Van Dyck, and others, and landscapes by Hackert. — The Goranc House (fee 1-3 m.) contains weapons, goblets, and a large collection of pictures, some of which are very valuable. Among the works of the early-Flemish School an admirable Madonna by Memling is noteworthy. The early German School is well represented, the Cranach's, in particular, being much better than the works usually coupled with the name. Among the best works by Netherlanders are portraits by Fr. Pourbus the Younger, J. Ravesteyn, Verspronck, Micrevell, Bol, and Netscher, and landscapes by Vinctboons and Artois. The works of Abraham Snaphan (1641-91), a good master of the 17th cent., who lived and died at Dessau, are to be met with here alone: Portrait-group of five daughters of Princess H. Catharine of Dessau, are Destablished to March 1861-1861. Dessau; Portrait of the 'Heautiful Gabrielle', chiefly interesting from a historical point of view. — The Pantheon, containing several antiquities (Apollo with the Muses, etc.), and the Flora may also be visited.

5 M. Gaschwitz, the junction for Zwenkau and Meuselwitz (see below); 13 M. Kieritzsch, the junction for Chemnitz (p. 304).

24 M. Altenburg. - Hotels. *Hôtel DE SAXE; *Hôtel DE RUSSIE; THURINGER HOP, BAIRISCHER HOP, near the station.

Restaurants: Wermann, Naumann (wine-rooms); Jungmann, Stadt Gotha, with gardens; Rathskeller.

Confectioner and Café: Böttger, by the theatre.

Altenburg (360 ft.), the residence of the Duke of Saxe-Altenburg, with 26,241 inhab., is overlooked by the Schloss which rises picturesquely above the town upon a lofty porphyry rock. The older parts of the castle date from the 14th cent., the remainder from the 17th-19th. From this castle, in 1455, the knight Kunz von Kauffungen carried off the young princes Ernest and Albert, founders of the present royal and ducal families of Saxony. In the interior, which has been handsomely restored of late, the throneroom and armoury are worthy of notice (adm. on application). The late-Gothic Schlosskirche, enlarged in 1413, contains a handsome choir. Pleasant public walks in the Schlossgarten, on the E. side of the Schlossberg. The Theatre, the Bartholomäikirche (restored in 1880), the Landesbank (with the ducal library), the Gymnasium, and a number of handsome dwelling-houses may also be noticed. The Rathhaus in the market, built in 1562, in a good German Renaissance style, has some richly-decorated rooms.

The Museum, near the station, contains the collections of natural history, antiquities, and art bequeathed to his country by the late minister B. v. Lindenau (d. 1853; open. on Wed. 2-4 and Sat. & Sun. 11-1, free; on other days 11-1, 50 pf.).

Of special importance are the 166 Italian pictures of the 14th and 15th cent., amongst which may be mentioned: five paintings on wood by Luca Signorelli representing scenes from the Passion; No. 60. a Madonna of the school of Botticelli; 73. and 90. Madonna with Angels, and Madonna Enthroned, by Giovanni di Paolo of Siena; 118. and 119. 8t. Helena, and 8t. Anthony, winged pictures by Perugino; 8 tablets with allegorical figures, of the School of Pinturicchio; 96. Madonna in a landscape, remains of a mural decoration, by Gentile Bellini. Also 76 copies from Raphael, Titian, etc., more than 300 Greek, Roman, and Etruscan vases, and a considerable collection of casts from the antique.

The well-to-do peasantry of the neighbourhood, who are of Wendish origin, wear a curious costume. The card-game of 'Skat'. now universal in Germany, originated among these peasants.

FROM ALTENBURG TO ZEITZ (p. 334), 16 M., branch-line in 1 hr. viå

34 M. Gössnitz (junction for Chemnitz, p. 304, and Gera, p. 334), Crimmitzschau, (46 M.) Werdau, all manufacturing towns.

From Werdau branch-lines diverge to Zwickau and Schwarzenberg on the E. (pp. 304, 311), and to Wünschendorf and Weida on the W. (see p. 334). To the left, on a wooded height, rises the castle of Schönfels. 51 M. Neumark is another manufacturing place, whence a branchline diverges to Zwickau.

From Neumark by a branch-line in 1/2 hr. (fares 1 m., 80, 50 pf.) to Greiz (*Henning; Löwe), the capital of the small principality of Beuss-Greiz, charmingly situated in the valley of the Weisse Eister, and commanded by an old castle. In the town are a modern palace and Bathhaus. The royal park fills the whole bed of the valley, and in order to avoid injuring it a tunnel for the Gera railway was driven through the Schlossberg.

Greiz is also a station on the GERA AND WEISCHLITZ RAILWAY (34 M.), which traverses the romantic "Elsterthal, passing numerous bridges and tunnels. — From Greiz to Gera, 16 M., in 11/2 hr., vik Nessmithle, Berga, Wünschendorf, and Wolfsgefärth (p. 334). — The portion of the line between Greiz and Weischlitz, 18 M., is still more picturesque, passing the chateau of Döhlau, the ruins of Elsterberg and Liebau, the Steinigt ravine, etc. The last two stations are (14 M.) Plauen (see below) and Kurbitz. 18 M. Weischlitz, see below.

561/2 M. Reichenbach (Lamm; Deutscher Kaiser; Blauer Engel; *Rail. Restaur.) is a manufacturing place with 16,509 inhabitants. The train crosses the profound Göltzschthal by an imposing viaduct, 706 yds, in length, and at one point 285 ft. in height. Far below, to the left, is the small town of Mylau. Stations Netzschkau, with an old castle, and Herlasgrün.

From Herlasgrün a branch-line diverges to Oelmitz, viå Treuen, Lengenfeld, Auerbach, and Falkenstein, where it rejoins the main line. Near Auerbach (carr. in 11/4 hr.) lies Reiboldsgrün (2250 ft.), a mineral spring in the midst of the forest, visited for its salubrious air.

The train now crosses the Elsterthal by another handsome viaduct. 72 M. Plauen (1340 ft.; *Deil's Hotel; Engel), a loftily-situated manufacturing town on the Weisse Elster, with 35,078 inhab., the capital of the Voigtland. The old castle of Hradschin was anciently the seat of the Voigt (advocatus regni); its name proves the existence of a Wendish settlement here.

At Plauen the lines to Hof and Eger divide. - To EGRR, 118 M. - Stations Weischlitz, Oelsnitz (see above), Adorf (p. 313), Elster (Hôtel de Saxe; *Wettiner Hof, R. 2-4 m., D. 21/2 m.), a frequented watering-place, Brambach, Voitersreuth, Franzensbad, and Eger (see Baedeker's S. Germany and Austria).

To Hor. Next stations Mehltheuer, Schönberg.

From Schönberg a diligence runs twice daily to (91/2 M.) Schleiz (Sonne; Brbprins), formerly the capital of the principality of Reuss-Schleiz, which now united to Greiz, a small town (4879 inhab.), pleasantly situated, and commanded by the palace of the prince. The late-Gothic Bergkirche is worthy of notice. About 1 M. to the S. is the Heinrichsruhe, a château of the prince. To the W., 41/2 M., is *Schloss Burgk, a château of the prince and seat of the administration, situated on a wooded rock, high above the Saale. — About 71/2 M. to the S.W. of Schleiz, halfway to Lobenstein, is Baalburg (Weisses Ross), a small town on a hill with towers and ramparts. Pedestrians will find a walk through the valley of the Saale to Schloss Burgk, 13/4 hr., attractive.

Lobenstein (1400 ft.; Curhaus; Volkmar; Reussischer Hof), a small town (pop. 2865) beautifully situated on the Lemnits, and commanded by a ruined castle on the hill above it, was the residence of the princes of Reuss-Lobenstein down to 1824, and has been rebuilt since a fire in 1863. The chalybeate springs and hydropathic establishment are much frequented. Diligences to (16 M.) Schleiz, (18 M.) Eichicht (p. 335), (181/2 M.) Eeuth, (21 M.) Hof, and (24 M.) Kronach. Carriage to Eichicht 16 m., Hof 18 m., Kronach 18 m.

blue outlines of the Fichtelgebirge.

102 M. Hof (Hirsch; Lamm; Goldener Löwe; Railway Restaurant) is a Bavarian town on the Saale, with 21,000 inhabitants. Gothic Rathhaus of 1563.

From Hof to Franzensbad, see Baedeker's S. Germany and Austria.

FROM HOF TO LOBENSTEIN, 21 M., diligence once daily via Hirschberg (Goldene Hirsch), on the Saale. From this point the following walk is (Goldene Hirsch), on the Saale. From this point the following walk is recommended: down the valley of the river to Sparraberg (1 hr.), a small town on the left bank, with a ruin; 1½ hr. Biankensters, on the right bank, with an old château; ½ hr. Biankensters, picturesquely situated on the left bank; 40 min. Harra; 20 min. Lemnithammer; ¼ hr. Golttlebethal, on the high-road from Hirschberg to Lobenstein; thence vià Waidmannsruh, a small shooting-lodge, to (2½ hrs.) Saalburg (see above).

Diligence from Hof once or twice daily to (14 M.) Steben, with chalybeate springs, visited by 500-600 patients yearly (chiefly ladies).

Stations Oberkotzau, Schwarzenbach, Markt-Schorgast. Cuttings, embankments, and dark ravines follow each other in rapid succession. To the left in the distance is the monastery of Himmelkron, the church of which is pointed out by tradition as the burial-place of the Countess of Orlamunde (the 'White Lady', d. about 1300), from whom a branch of the Brandenburg family is descended.

Stations Neuenmarkt (junction for Bairouth), Unter-Steinach, and (146 M.) Culmbach (*Hirsch; *Rail. Restaurant), a town celebrated for its beer, formerly the residence of the Margraves of Brandenburg-Culmbach, situated on the Weisse Main, and commanded by the Plassenburg, which is now used as a prison. The Petersberg, with a belvedere, lies 4 M, to the N.W.

Near (149 M.) Mainleus, at the foot of Schloss Steinhausen, the Weisse and Rothe Main unite to form the Main, the broad valley of which is now traversed. Beyond stat, Burgkunstadt the Main is crossed. Near stat. Hockstadt the Rodach falls into the Main.

165 M. Lichtenfels (Anker; Krone) is the junction of the Werra line (to Coburg and Eisenach, see R. 64). On a hill to the right are the extensive buildings of the celebrated old Benedictine abbey of Banz. On the hill opposite Banz, rises the richly-decorated abbeychurch of Vierzehnheiligen, the most frequented pilgrimage-shrine in Franconia, with frescoes by A. Palme. To the S., farther on, rise the precipitous limestone rocks of the Staffelberg, beyond which, on the opposite side, is the Veitsberg, with a chapel and ruined castle commanding a beautiful view.

184 M. Bamberg, and thence to Nuremberg, see Baedeker's

S. Germany.

58. From Leipsic to Bebra (Frankfort on the Main) and Cassel. Thuringian Railway.

172 M. RAILWAY. Express in 6 hrs. (fares 25 m. 10, 18 m. 90, 13 m 10 pf.). Dinner-cars (D. 21/2 m.) accompany the trains on this line. — By Halle and Nordhausen, see R. 68.

This line traverses one of the most picturesque districts in Central Germany. 4 M. Barneck, the junction for Zeitz, Gera, Saalfeld. and Eichicht.

FROM LEIPSIC TO EICHICHT, 93 M., by railway in 51/2-61/2 hrs: (fares 12 m. 90, 9 m. 70, 6 m. 60 pf.). The train follows the direction of the Elster. The first important place is — 271/2 M. Zeitz (Lôwe; Kronprins; Herold), an old town with cloth and other manufactories, situated on an eminence on the Weisse Elster, and an episcopal see from 968 to 1029. Pop. 18,265. The Moritsburg, erected in 1854 by the Dukes of Sachsen-Zeitz on the site of the old episcopal palace, is now a reformatory and poor-house. Gothic Abbey Church of the 15th cent. with Romanesque crypt of the 12th century. The Shiftschule (Gymcent. With monknesque crypt of the 12st century. The Salestante (Gymnasium) has a library with a number of MSS. dating from the time of the Reformation. In the market-place is a Monument commemorating the war of 1870-71. The cemetery contains a monument erected by Fred. William IV. to his teacher Delbrück (d. 1880). About 1½ M. to the S. of Zeits lies Poso, formerly a Benedictine abbey, with ruins of the church, which was built in 1168. Zeitz is the junction of a line to Weissenfels (p. 335; 20 M., in 52 min.), traversing a district rich in brown coal.

Then through the Elsterthal to Weiterzeube, Crossen (branch-line to with warm sand and salt-baths), and —

45 M. Gera (Victoria; Frommater; Stadt Dresden), the capital of the principality of Reuss-jungerer-Linie, a busy manufacturing town with 27,118 in-hab., on the Weisse Elster. The Johannis-Platz is adorned with a modern statue of Count Heinrich Posthumus (d. 1635). On the Hainberg, opposite the town, rises the château of Osterstein, the residence of the prince, Railway to Gössnitz (p. 332) in ³/₄ hr.; to Weimar (p. 341) in ²/₂ hrs.
Beyond (49 M.) Wolfsgefarth, junction for the line to Greix and Planen (p. 332), the Eister is quitted. 53 M. Weida (Ring), in the duchy of Weimar, is 1/2 M. from the railway; the Osterburg is an old Schloss to the N.W. of the town (branch-line to Werdau, p. 332, in 11/2 hr.). Stations

Niederpöllnitz, Triptis.

67 M. Neustadt on the Orla (Gold. Löwe), a manufacturing town in the duchy of Weimar, with a handsome late-Gothic Rathhaus. About 41/2 M. distant is the Fröhliche Wiederkunft, a shooting-lodge of the Duke of Altenburg; and 6 M. from Neustadt is Hummelshain, also with a ducal château and deer-park. Diligence thrice daily from Neustadt to (121/2 M.) Schleiz (p. 332).

72 M. Oppurg, with a château of Prince Hohenlohe. 76 M. Posneck (Ritter; Hirsch), a town in the duchy of Meiningen, with porcelain, fiannel, and other manufactories; diligence once daily to Ziegenrück (Preuss. Hof), 11 M., and thence to Lobenstein (p. 383). To the left rises the picturand the loss are pictured as the last rises are pictured as th esquely situated on the Saals, possessing sewing-machine and other manufactories. Rathhaus in the market-place in the latest Gothic style, 1533-37. Gothic Johannistrice of the 14th cent. with good stained glass of 1514 in the choir. In the suburb is the Schloss of the extinct dukes of Saalfeld, exceted in 1679. In the S.E. part of the town are the Kitzerstein, a château of the 16th cent, and the ruins of the Sorbenburg, which is said to have been erected by Charlemagne for protection against the pagan Slavs. The termination of many of the names of places on the right bank of the Saale in its indicate their Slavonic origin. — Bailway from Saalfeld to Rudolstadt and Jena, see E. 59. Diligence from Saalfeld to Blankenburg (p. 357) and to Sonneberg (p. 354) daily.

38 M. Bichicht, a small village prettily situated at the confluence of the Loquits and Saale, is a great depôt of the slate-quarries in the neighbour-

88 M. Richicht, a small village prettily situated at the confluence of the Loquits and Saale, is a great depôt of the slate-quarries in the neighbourhood, and is at present the terminus of the railway. It is connected by an iron bridge with Caulsdorf, on the other bank of the Saale. — Diligence twice daily to (4 M.) Leutenberg, and once daily thence to (14 M.) Lobenstein (p. 333). Diligence from Leutenberg to (9 M.) Lehesten (Gold.

Panzer), the centre of an important slate-quarrying district.

9 M. Markranstedt; 14 M. Kötschau. The salt-works of (16 M.) Dürrenberg are passed, and the Saale crossed. 19 M. Corbetha is the junction for Halle (see below).

BATTLE FIRLDS. Three celebrated battles have been fought near Corbetha. At Rossbach, 5 M. to the W., Frederick the Great with 22,000 Prussians signally defeated 60,000 French and their German allies under Soubise, on 5th Nov., 1757. — Near Latzen, 5 M. to the E., two battles were fought. In the first of these, on 6th Nov., 1632, Gustavus Adolphus, King of Sweden, was mortally wounded, after having defeated the Imperial troops. A block of granite with a Gothic roof marks the spot. At Gross-Görschen, a little to the S. of Lützen, a fierce but undecisive engagement was fought on 2nd May, 1818, by the allied Russians and Prussians against the French, in which the Prussian Gen. Scharnhorst was mortally wounded. On the previous day the French Marshal Bessières had been killed in a skirmish near Lützen.

Merseburg (Sonne: Halber Mond), 6 M. from Corbetha, on the line towards talle, an ancient town on the Saale, with 15,205 inhab., mentioned in history as early as the 9th cent., was a favourite residence of the emperors Henry I. and Otho I., and frequently the scene of imperial diets. It was an episcopal diocese from 968 to 1543. The *Cathedral, founded in the 10th cent., now consists of a choir of the 18th and late-Gothic nave of the 15th century. The choir contains the brazen monument of Rudolph of Swabia, who fell in 1080 in a battle with his rival Henry IV., a Crucifixion and Entombment by L. Cranach (with a portrait of Luther among the soldiers), and a Marriage of St. Catharine in Albert Dürer's style. The pulpit and screen are carved in the late-Gothic style. Fine organ. The Schloss of the 15th cent., partly restored in the 17th, once a residence of the Saxon princes, presents an imposing appearance with its numerous towers. The Keuschberg, near Merseburg, is generally but incorrectly regarded as the scene of the great victory gained by Emp. Henry I. over the Hungarians in 933; the real battle-field must have been more to the W., perhaps at Rossbach (see below). — A diligence runs once daily to the sulphur-baths of (7 M.) Lauchstädt.

25 M. Weissenfels (Schütze; Goldner Hirsch), on the Saale, which is crossed by a handsome bridge, a town with 19,654 inhab., possesses an old Schloss of the extinct Dukes of Weissenfels-Querfurt. The body of Gustavus Adolphus was embalmed after the battle of Lützen in a room at the Amtshaus. The Klemmberg, which rises above the Schloss, is a good point of view. — From Weissenfels to Zeitz (Gera, Altenburg), see p. 334.

On the slope to the right rises the château of Gosek, and to the left the lofty tower of the ruin Schönburg. The country becomes more hilly, and the vine is cultivated here with tolerable success.

33 M. Naumburg (*Sächs. Hof; *Schwarzes Ross), an ancient town, mentioned as early as the 10th cent., with 17,868 inhab., at some distance from the station, is an important-looking and pleasantly-situated place. The *Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul (sacristan, Obere Linden-Str. 20), dating from the 13th cent., and probably consecrated in 1242, with pointed arches and vaulting, but round-arched windows, is built in the so-called Romanesque transition style. The two choirs are Gothic, that at the W. end dating from 1245-72, and the other, to the E., from the end of the 14th cent.; each is separated from the nave by a tasteful screen. Below the E. choir is a spacious crypt with pillars and capitals of most varied form. The N.W. tower is in the late-Gothic style. with curious projections and details. The whole was restored in 1878. The Stadtkirche, in the market, contains a small picture by Cranach the Elder, 'Suffer little children to come unto Me'. Naumburg is the seat of the District Court of the Prussian province of Saxony. In the Court of Assises (Schwurgerichts-Gebäude) is a fresco of the murder of Abel, by Bendemann. The tasteful little Theatre, in the Reichskrone Inn. was presented to the town by the Countess Hoffmansegg. Fine views are obtained, from the Bürgergarten on the Galgenberg, the Spechsart, a hill to the N.W., and the Georgenberg.

Diligence daily from Naumburg to Freiburg on the Unstrut (Goldner Ring; Jahn's Haus, restaurant), Alp M. to the N.W., which possesses a fine church, half Gothic and half Romanesque, dating from the 13th and 15th cent., with two towers connected by a kind of bridge. The ancient Nouesburg on the hill, with its Romanesque double chapel, was one of the chief seats of the landgraves of Thuringis. The tower, 160 ft. high, commands an extensive view. In the interior is shown a chair in which Queen Louise of Prussia is said to rested on her flight after the battle of Auerstadt (see below). The tower is visible from the railway near Naumburg. Ludwig Jahn, the 'father of gymnastics' (p. 52), lived and died (1852) at Freiburg, where a monument was erected to him in 1859. Near the town is the so-called Edelacter, or nobles' acre, where Landgrave Lewis II. is said to have compelled his rebellious nobles to draw his plough.

Beyond Naumburg, to the left of the line, is the celebrated school of Schulpforte, established in 1543 in an old Cistercian monastery, where Klopstock, Fichte, and other celebrated men received the first rudiments of their education. The fine early-Gothic church was completed in 1268. The valley of the Saale from Naumburg to Sulza is very picturesque.

371/2 M. Kösen. - Hotels. *Zum Muthigen Ritter; *Kurzhals; PREUSSISCHER HOF: TANNE.

Restaurants. Railway Restaurant; Waldhausen; Curgarten, with picturesque view.

Bath Establishments, Wilhelmsbad; Dr. Wahn; Villa Zehl, by the evaporating works; Dr. Rosenberger.

Kösen is a pleasant little watering-place with salt-baths on the Saale, which is here crossed by an old bridge with pointed arches and the railway-bridge. On the left bank lie the station, the Cursaal, and the Curgarten, on the right the Evaporating Works. The Knabenberg, Göttersitz, and Himmelreich are among the prettiest points in the environs. A fine view is enjoyed from the conspicuous Wilhelmsburg Restaurant with the Fähnchen tower (20 min.).

To the left on the hill, 2 M. from Kösen, rises the *Rudels-burg (Restaurant), where a monument has been erected to students who fell in 1870-71 (footpath from Kösen viä the Katze, a restaurant on the right bank, where there is a ferry; to the castle $^{3}/_{4}$ hr.). Farther on are the two lofty round towers of Saaleck, whence the pedestrian may descend to Gross-Heringen.

41 M. Gross-Heringen (Zur Saalbahn), at the influx of the Ilm into the Saale, is the junction for Jena (see R. 59).

FROM GROSS-HERINGEN TO STRAUSSFURT, 33 M., a branch-line, passing near Averstädt (see below). Straussfurt, see p. 373.

The train quits the Saale and approaches the Ilm. — 43 M. Sulza (Grossherzog von Sachsen), another small place with salt-baths.

In a side-valley to the right lies Averstadt. On the hill, about 3 M. from the station lies Hassenhousen, near which the battle of Jena, or Averstädt, which proved so fatal to the Prussians, was fought on 14th Oct. 1806. A monument marks the spot where the Duke of Brunswick was wounded.

49 M. Apolda (Post; Weintraube) is a busy place with stocking and other manufactories and bell-foundries (15,630 inhab.). The train now crosses the Ilm.

59 M. Weimar, see p. 341.

FROM WEIMAR TO GERA, 42 M., by railway in 2½ hrs. (fares 8 m. 30, 4 m. 50, 3 m. 20 pf.). Stations Mellingen, 14 M. Jens (p. 338), Göschwitz (junction for Saalfeld and Gross-Heringen, p. 341); then Roda, Hermsdorf, Kraftsdorf, and (42 M.) Gera (p. 334).

Beyond Weimar the country is hilly. 67 M. Vieselbach.

72 M. Erfurt, see p. 344.

Branch-line from Erfurt to Nordhausen, see R. 69.

The train now approaches the N. slopes of the Thuringian Forest. 79 M. Dietendorf (*Rail. Restaurant, D. 1½ m.) is a well-built Moravian colony. — Railway to Arnstadt and Ilmenau. see p. 359.

To the left, farther on, rise three picturesque castles situated on three isolated hills, called the Drei Gleichen; viz. the Wachsenburg (1415 ft.), the property of the Duke of Coburg-Gotha, still preserved (Restaurant), the Mühlberg, and the Gleichen, both in ruins. The train skirts the Seeberg (p. 348).

89 M. Gotha, see R. 62.

Branch-lines to Leinefelde (p. 370) and Ohrdruf (p. 366).

Beyond Gotha a fine view is obtained of the wooded mountains of Thuringia, among which the Inselsberg is most conspicuous. In the foreground stands the château of Tenneberg (p. 365).

96 M. Fröttstedt; branch-line to Waltershausen, see p. 365.

The railway now follows the course of the Hörsel. On the right, extending nearly as far as Eisenach, rises the long, deeply-furrowed ridge of the Hörselberg (1575 ft.). Here according to popular tradition is situated the Cave of Venus, into which she entited the knight Tannhäuser. The ascent is best accomplished from Wutha by Schönau and the Zapfengrund; fine view from the top. From (104 M.) Wutha (Bamberger Hof) a branch-railway diverges to Ruhla (p. 362).

107 M. Eisenach, see R. 63. From Eisenach to Coburg, see R. 64. The train follows the course of the Hörsel (view of the Wartburg on the left) to its union with the Werra. 115 M. Herleshausen. In the distance, on the left bank, are visible the ruins of the Brandenburg, once the seat of the counts of that name. 1221/2 M. Gerstungen; 1271/2 M. Hönebach. The train now passes through a long tunnel, beyond which it quits the valley of the Werra, and enters that of the Fulda.

135 M. Bebra (Rail. Restaurant, D. 11/2 m.; Hôtel Schlüter, near the station), is the junction of the railway from Göttingen to Frankfort viå Fulda (R. 73).

139 M. Rotenburg, once the residence of the landgraves of Hessen-Rotenburg; 144 M. Heinebach; 146½ M. Alt-Morschen; 140½ M. Beiseförth; 151 M. Malsfeld, the junction for Niederhone and Treysa (p. 396); 155 M. Melsungen, an old town on the left bank of the Fulda. At (160½ M.) Guckshagen, near Melsungen, a beautiful view of the picturesque town, situated on both banks of the Fulda, and the extensive Benedictine abbey of Breitenau (founded in 1120, now suppressed) is disclosed.

162 M. Guntershausen (p. 392) is the junction for Giessen and Frankfort. 169 M. Wilhelmshöhe.

172 M. Cassel, see p. 95.

59. From Gross-Heringen to Jena and Saalfeld.

RAILWAY to (16 M.) Jena in 1 hr. (fares 2 m. 10, 1 m. 60, 1 m. 10 pf.); to (47 M.) Saalfeld in 23/4-3 hrs. (fares 6 m. 10, 4 m. 70, 3 m. 20 pf.).

Gross-Heringen, see p. 337. The line ascends the pretty valley of the Saale to (5 M.) Camburg (*Erbprinz).

10 M. Dornburg, situated on a lofty rock, possesses three Castles. The oldest was an imperial residence as early as the time of Otho I.; that in the centre was built by Duke Ernest Augustus, and the third was occupied by Goethe for several months in 1828. Fine views from the garden-terraces. Key kept by the gardener at the S. castle (restaurant). Adjacent is the Schiesshaus, with a better restaurant. At the foot of the rocks lies Dorndorf (Zum blauen Schild), whence a pretty walk may be taken to the 'Hohe Leeden', on the Saale, opposite Dornburg, affording a good view of the castles, especially in the morning, and to (3 M.) Tautenburg, picturesquely situated on a hill in the middle of a wooded dale. — 12 M. Porstendorf; 14 M. Zwätzen. To the right is a school of agriculture. Opposite, on a steep hill on the right bank of the Saale, rises the ruined Kunitsburg (*View).

16 M. Jena (*Bär, R. & A. 2 m.; *Deutsches Haus; Sonne; Adler, all unpretending; rooms at the Weimar Station; Restaurants *Burgkeller, Rose, Fürstenkeller, etc.; the station of the Saale railway is 1 M. from that of the Weimar line), a town of Weimar with 10,337 inhab., celebrated for its university (500 stud.), which was founded in 1548 and attained a high repute about the end of the 18th and the beginning of the 19th century, is very pleasantly situated at the confluence of the Saale and Leutra.

Many of the streets contain memorial tablets to illustrious men who were once teachers or students at the university; thus to Arndt, Fichte, and Schiller in the Leutragasse; to the last also in the Schlossgasse and the Jenergasse. Goethe's lodgings in the Schlossgasse and in the Botanical Garden are also pointed out.

The Market Place is embellished with a *Statue of John Frederick the Generous (d. 1557), the founder of the university. The choir of the Stadtkirche (15th cent.) contains a figure of Luther in relief, originally destined for his tomb at Wittenberg, but placed here in 1572. Goethe frequently resided at the Schloss, where he composed his 'Hermann and Dorothea'. This building, which was formerly the residence of the Dukes of Saxe-Jena, now contains most of the university collections, amongst which that of coins is the most valuable. — In the Eichplatz is the Burschenschaftsdenkmal, or Students' Monument, erected in 1883 in commemoration of the efforts made by German students in the cause of national liberty after the downfall of Napoleon.

In the pleasant promenades surrounding the town is a monument to Schulze (d. 1860), an eminent political economist and agriculturist. In the vicinity is the University Library, containing 180,000 volumes. Farther on in the Fürstengraben are the monument of the naturalist Oken (d. 1851), by Drake, a bust of the philosopher Fries (d. 1843), and others. The Botanical Garden is open daily.

The garden of the Observatory on the S. side of the town contains a bust of Schiller by Dannecker, on the spot where the poet wrote his 'Wallenstein' in 1798. The house through which the garden is entered bears a memorial tablet.

On the Weimar road rises the Thuringian District Court, built in 1879. The large Lunatic Asylum, conspicuously situated on a hill above the town, was erected in the same year.

The 'Tanne Inn' at Camsdorf, on the opposite bank of the Saale, bears an inscription to the effect that Goethe once resided there; a path by the Saale is said to be the spot where he composed the Erlkönig'. — A little farther down the river is the village of Wenigenjena, in the little church of which Schiller was married in 1790.

The Environs of Jena (see Map, p. 356), where the peculiar stratification of the rock is an object of interest (layers of various kinds of shell-lime-stone with beds of greyish marl, overlying at places gypsum or red sand-stone and clay), afford a number of pleasant excursions. On the left bank of the Saale a double avenue of trees, the 'Paradies', leading from the river to the station, affords a pleasant view. On the Hausberg to the Exises the Fuchsthurm, a remnant of the castle of Kirchberg, generally open in summer (10 pf.), reached from the village of Ziegenhain (where the key is kept), or from Camsdorf in 3/4 hr. From Ziegenhain a pleasant path leads along the Kernberge to Wölknitz, on the Saale, 2 M. above Jena, at the foot of the Sophienhöhe, a fine point of view; opposite to it lies Lichtenhatn, which, like Ziegenhain and Wöllnitz, is a favourite resort of the students. — The Forsthaus (Restaurant), 2 M. to the W., is another picturesque spot; the tower at the top was built in memory of the Jena students who fell in 1870-71.

The Battle of Jena was fought on 14th Oct. 1806, a little to the N. of the town, where Napoleon, with his superior generalship, and an army of 130,000 men, of whom about 80,000 were actually brought into the field, signally defeated 48,000 Prussians under Prince Hohenlohe. The battle raged most flercely at Vierzehnheitigen, 5 M. from Jena, on the way to Apolda, about 1/2 M. to the right of the road. At the same time the rest of the Prussian army was engaged at the battle of Auerstatt (comp. p. 337). The small town of Bargel, 9 M. to the N.E. of Jena, contains the interesting remains of a Romanesque church of 1133-42.

From Jena to Weimar and Gera, see p. 337; station, see p. 339.

Weimar and Gera, p. 337; 22 M. Rothenstein.

26 M. Kahla (Goldener Löwe), a small town in the duchy of Altenburg. Opposite to it rises the old fortress of *Leuchtenburg, a good point of view, originally erected, like all the other castles on the Saale, for protection against the Slavs (now a hotel and pension). - 30 M. Orlamunde, at the confluence of the Saale and the Orla, once the seat of the powerful counts of that name. The well-known spectre of the White Lady, which is said to appear at the palace of Berlin as the harbinger of the death of the king, is supposed to have been a Countess of Orlamunde (comp. p. 26). 35 M. Uhlstädt.

40 M. Rudolstadt (*Ritter, R., L., & A. 21/2 m.; *Löwe; *Deutscher Kaiser, unpretending; Adler; Radtke, 1/4 M. from the town, with a garden and baths), the capital of the principality of Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt, is charmingly situated on the Saale. Pop. 8747. On a height (200 ft.) rises the castle of Heidecksburg, the residence of the prince, containing a handsome rococo hall and several pictures. Pretty views from the W. portal and the garden. The Ludwigsburg in the town contains a cabinet of natural history, including a valuable collection of shells. Schiller's visit to Rudolstadt in 1788 is commemorated by tablets in the Schlossweg and the Neue Strasse. The Anger, near the station, is a favourite resort on fine summer-evenings (band 2-3 times weekly).

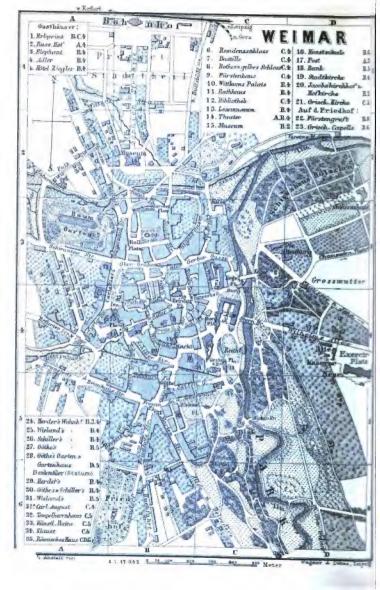

About 41/2 M. to the W. of Rudolstadt is the famous school of Keil-About 4.2 M. to the w. of Eudolstat is the lamous school of Acti-hou, founded by Fröbel in 1817. The Baropthum, 1 M. to the W., built in 1878, commands an admirable view (key kept at Keilhau). On the high-road, 1/2 M. above Eudolstadt, lies Volkstedt, in one of the first houses of which Schiller sesided in 1788 (with a tablet; visitors admitted to a room with Schiller's writing table and chair). The Schillerhade on the opposite bank of the Saale, adorned with a copy of his bust by Dannecker, commands a fine view; still finer from the "Justinshohe, between Rudolstadt and Volkstedt.

(6 M.) Blankenburg (p. 357).

43 M. Schwarza, the station for visitors to the Schwarzathal (p. 357; omnibus to Blankenburg or the Chrysopras 70 pf.; two-horse carr. to Schwarzburg 10 m. and fee). The Schwedenschanze, near the station, is a fine point of view (*Inn).

Beyond Schwarza the train crosses the Saale. To the left is the battle-field of 10th Oct. 1806, where Lannes and Augereau with 30,000 men defeated 11,000 Prussians and Saxons under Prince Lewis Ferdinand of Prussia. Between Saalfeld and Schwarza, a monument has been erected to the prince on the spot where he fell.

47 M. Saalfeld. where the line joins the Leipsic and Eichicht railway, see p. 334.

Weimar (670 ft.), the capital of the grand-duchy of Saxe-Weimar, with 19,944 inhab., an irregularly-built old town with modern suburbs, pleasantly situated on the Ilm, derives its principal interest from the literary associations connected with it. By the invitation of Duke Charles Augustus (d. 1828), a liberal patron of literature, Goethe resided here in an official capacity (latterly as minister) during 56 years till his death in 1832. His contemporaries . Herder and Wieland also held appointments here under the Duke. during whose reign Weimar was visited by many other celebrated men of letters. In 1789 Schiller, at Goethe's request, was appointed a professor at the neighbouring university of Jena, but he resigned in 1801 and retired to Weimar, where he died in 1805. — Weimar is now the seat of a school of art, founded in 1860, of which the most prominent members have been Genelli (d. 1868). Preller (d. 1877), Pauwels, Verlat, and Kalkreuth.

The wide Sophien-Strasse leads from the station into the town, a few hundred yards distant. On the right, about halfway, stand a War Monument, by Härtel.

The *Museum (Pl. 15; B, 2), a conspicuous red and yellow sandstone edifice in the Renaissance style, at the beginning of the town, is adorned with fourteen figures on the chief facade, emblematical of the different branches of ancient and modern art (open from May to Sept. daily, except Mon., 10-4; on Sun. and holidays 11-4; from Oct. to April on Sun., Wed., and Thurs. 11-3; on Sun. and Wed, free, at other times 50 pf.).

GROUND FLOOR. Sculptures, chiefly casts from antique and Renaissance works. Frieze in relief in three sections by Härtel of Dresden, representing the Education of the youth of Germany, the Battle of Arminius, and the Walhalla. Smaller objects of art, carvings in ivory, glass vessels, Japanese lacquer-work. A niche in the staircase contains SteinAduser's co-lossal group of Goethe and Psyche in marble.

FIRST FLOOR. The W. saloon, lighted from above, and the three smaller rooms adjoining it contain oil-paintings of no great value, with the exception of Nos. 62-67. by Lucas Cranach, a portrait by Vas der Helst, and a landscape by Ruysdael. — The N. (or Preller) Gallery contains a cycle of "Mural Paintings from the Odyssey by Preller (d. 1877), representing the fortunes of Odysseus from his departure from Troy till his return to Ithaca. The large landscape-paintings depict the most important events in his wanderings and return; the pictures on the base (red figures on a black ground, like those on Greek vases) represent scenes at Ithaca before and after his return. They are painted in wax-colours. and rank among the best modern works of art, while their arrangement is very skilfully adapted to the architectural construction of the room. —
The E. saloon, lighted from above, with the rooms adjoining it, contains celebrated modern drawings by Carstens, Cornelius, Genetic, Schwind, and others. The cycle of water-colour drawings, illustrating the 'Fable of the Seven Bavens', painted in 1857, is also by Schwind. — The S. gallery contains engravings, etchings, wood-cuts, models, and a small library; the walls are hung with cartoons by Neher, Carracci, and Guido Reni.

In the centre of the town, in an open square called the Herder-PLATZ, rises the Stadt-Kirche, built in 1440 (Pl. 19; B, 4).

It possesses one of Cranach's largest and finest pictures, a *Crucifixion. containing portraits of Luther and Melanchthon, and the artist and his family. Herder (d. 1803) reposes in the nave of this church, beneath a simple slab, bearing his motto 'Licht, Liebe, Leben'. The life-size stone figure of L. Cranach (d. 1558), 'pictoris celeberrimi', has been brought here from the churchyard of St. Jacob and recently restored. The brass which marks the grave of Duks Bernard (see below) is the most interesting of the numerous monuments to princes of Weimar interred here.

In front of the church, to the S., stands a Bronze Statue of Herder (Pl. 29) designed by Schaller, erected in 1850 by 'Germans from all countries'; the inscription, 'Licht, Liebe, Leben', was the poet's favourite motto. Behind the church is the Parsonage (Pl. 24), occupied by Herder from 1776 till his death.

To the E. of the Stadtkirche rises the grand-ducal *Palace (Pl. 6), erected on the foundation of an older edifice in 1790-1803, partly under Goethe's superintendence.

The INTERIOR (the intendant lives in the court-yard, in the corner to the right; fee 11/2 m.) is decorated with Frescoes: in the 'HERDER-ZIMMER' symbolical figures of that scholar's various spheres of activity, by Jäger; in the SCHILLERZIMMER scenes from Fiesco, Don Carlos, Wallenstein, Mary Stuart, etc., by Neher; in the Gorthezimmer scenes from Egmont, Faust, Hermann and Dorothea, etc., by Neher; in the *Wieland-SIMMER Oberon, etc., by Preller. The APARTMENT OF THE GRAND-DUCHESS (accessible in her absence only) contains the original *Cartoons (apostles) of Leonardo da Vinci's Last Supper; the Grand-Dure's Room is adorned with modern pictures by Ary Scheffer, Wislicenus, etc.; in the Drawingtons are landscapes by Prelier; the Brenhard's-Zimmer contains the armour of Dure Bernhard (d. 1639), the hero of the Thirty Years' War.

An equestrian statue of Charles Augustus, designed by Donndorf of Weimar, was unveiled in the neighbouring FURSTEN-PLATZ (Pl. C, 4), in 1875; it represents the Grand Duke in the general's uniform of his time, crowned with a wreath of laurels,

The grand-ducal *Library (Pl. 12), in the 'Grüne Schloss' adjacent to the Fürstenhaus (Pl. 9), is open daily 9-12 and 2-4, except in June, and the Christmas and Easter vacations (fee 1 m.).

It contains 170,000 vols. and 8000 maps, amongst which are two of the most celebrated old maps of the 18th cent., drawn on a large scale upon parchment, and 4-500 old genealogical works. — The principal room is decorated with a number of interesting busts and portraits of celebrated men and women, most of whom have resided at Weimar, including portraits of members of the grand-ducal family, such as the Duchess Anna Amalia (d. 1807), portrait and bust of her son Charles Augustus, and several of Goeths; marble bust of Goethe over life-size by David d'Angers (1831), another marble Bust by Trippel of 1788, representing his Apollolike head; bust of Schiller by Dannecker, that of Herder by Trippel, also those of Tieck, Wieland, Winckelmann, Gluck, etc. — Luther's monastic gown, the belt of Gustavus Adolphus, Goethe's court-uniform and dressing-gown, and other historical and literary curiosities are also shown. The Cabinet of Coins and Medals is a valuable collection. — The spiral staircase of 64 steps in the tower was constructed by a prisoner in 1671 out of the stem of a gigantic oak.

In the market-place is the handsome modern Gothic Bathhaus (Pl. 11; B, 4), which contains busts of Schiller, Goethe, Wieland, and Herder, and a statue of Goethe by Hütter. The opposite house, now a bookseller's shop, was once occupied by the painter Lucas Cranach, as his device (winged serpent with crown) still indicates.

Schiller's House (Pl. 26; B, 4) in the Schiller-Strasse, which has been purchased by the town, contains a few reminiscences of the poet (shown daily, 8-12 and 2-6; fee).

In front of the Theatre (Pl. B, 4) rises the *Goethe-Schiller Monument (Pl. 30), erected in 1857, in bronze, designed by Rietschel. The illustrious pair are united in a happily-conceived group.

— To the N.W., in the same Platz, is Wieland's House (Pl. 25).

Goethe's House (Pl. 27; B, 5) in the Goethe-Platz, in the S. quarter of the town, opposite the fountain, is not accessible. His collections are shown on Fridays in summer, 9-12 o'clock.

Farther on, near the former Frauenthor, is Wieland's Monument

(Pl. 31; B, 5), by Gasser, erected in 1857.

The new *Cometery (Pl. B, 6), on the S. side of the town, contains the Grand Ducal Vault (Pl. 22; open in summer daily 11-12 and 2-5; the custodian lives at Mostgasse 7; fee 1 m.), in which Schiller (d. 1805) and Goethe (d. 1832) are interred in coffins of oak covered with laurel wreaths, beside the ancestors of the reigning Duke, beginning with Duke William (d. 1662). Dukes Charles Augustus (d. 1828) and Charles Frederick (d. 1853) and their consorts also repose here. By the W. wall, near the ducal vault, are memorial-stones to the eminent composer Hummel (d. 1837) and the philanthropist and sattrist Johannes Falk (d. 1826). Adjoining the ducal vault is the small, but richly-decorated Russian-Greek Chapel (Pl. 23), beneath which the grand-duchess Maria Paulowna (d. 1859) is interred.

To the left of the cemetery is the Grand-Ducal School of Art (Kunstschule, Pl. 16; p. 341), with a permanent exhibition (11-2).

Dr. Schools, Wilhelms-Alice B 120, possesses a collection of Early German and Mediæval Antiquities, ethnographical curiosities, etc., to which visitors are kindly admitted.

The *Park (Pl. C, D, 5, 6) lies to the S. E., on the charming banks of the Ilm, where Goethe once occupied a modest summerabode, called the Römische Haus (Pl. 35). On the way to it we pass a pavilion called the Tempelherrenhaus (Pl. 32). At the extremity of the park is the village of Ober-Weimar. On an eminence beyond rises the Belvedere château (Pl. B. C. 6), built in 1724-32, with hothouses and pleasure-grounds, connected with Weimar by a fine old avenue (Restaurant and pretty view).

The château and park of Tiefurt, on the Ilm, 2 M. E. of Weimar, are also pleasantly situated. At the village of Ossmannstedt on the Ilm, farther distant in the same direction, Wieland (d. 1833) is interred in the garden of his former estate, by the side of his wife (d. 1801) and his friend Sophia Brentano (d. 1800).

*Ettersburg, 41/2 M. to the N. of Weimar, the grand-ducal summer residence, also abounds in reminiscences of the golden era of Weimar. An amateur company, including members of the ducal family, frequently performed here in the open air, the trees, meadows, and fountains constituting the scenery and decorations. Plays of Goethe were often thus acted.

Another point of interest in the vicinity is the Herdersruhe, at the foot of the Ettersberg, a favourite resort of Herder.

Borks (Curhaus; Deutscher Kaiser; Tanse), a small town and watering-place on the lim, 71/2 M. to the S. of Weimar, with pine-cone, sand, and cold water baths, and charming walks in the environs, communicates with Weimar by diligence three times daily. Pleasant walk along the lim by Hetschburg to Buchfahrt, where the 'Grafenschloss' is situated. The 'Schloss' consists of chambers excavated in the face of perpendicular rocks, of unknown origin, and accessible by ladders only.

At Berka the road divides into two arms, both, however, leading to Rudolstadt (p. 340; diligence once daily by each route). About 31/2 M. to the E. lies Blankenhain (1820 ft.; Bar; Mohr; Lindenhaus), a favourite summer-retreat and small watering-place. The old Schloss Gleichen is now a hospital and lunatic asylum.

Erfurt (657 ft.), a very ancient town on the Gera, with 53,254 inhab. and a garrison of 3500 soldiers, was a fortress down to 1873, but the works are now being removed. The town existed in the form of a fortified agricultural settlement as early as the time of St. Boniface, the English apostle of this district. At a later date the town became part of the Electorate of Mayence: in 1802 it was annexed to Prussia, from 1806 to 1815 it was under the French supremacy, and was afterwards finally restored to Prussia. The quaint old town possesses several handsome Gothic churches, and private dwelling-houses of the 16th and 17th centuries. The university, founded in 1392 and suppressed in 1816, was one of the chief seats of the Humanists at the time of the Reformation.

The principal square is the FRIEDRICH-WILHRLMS-PLATZ (Pl. B. 3), in the centre of which rises an Obelisk in memory of an Elector of Mayence. On the N. side of the square is the handsome Court House, and on the W. the old 'Lilie' Inn, where Luther, Maurice of Saxony, and Gustavus Adolphus are all said to have put up. To the N.W. is an eminence, on the top of which the Cathedral and the Severikirche form a picturesque group, approached by a broad flight of steps (sacristan in the corner-house, at the top).

The *Cathedral (Pl. 11; B, 4; Rom. Cath.) was begun after the middle of the 13th cent., in the transition-style, on the site of an older structure (1153); the choir, built in 1349-72 in the pure Gothic style, is erected on a massive substructure (the 'Cavaten'): nave and aisles date from 1455-65. The portals are worthy of inspection. The church was seriously damaged by fires and sieges at various periods, but has been recently restored. The W. façade, which is also approached by a flight of steps, has been adorned with a large figure of the Virgin in mosaic on a golden ground.

INTERIOR. By the first pillar on the N. side a Bronze relief, Coronation of the Virgin, by P. Vischer, being a monument 'Henningo Goden jurisc.' (d. 1522; replica at Wittenberg, see p. 323). Near it, on the opposite pillar, a curious painting of 1534, representing the Transubstantiation; on the S. wall a figure of St. Christopher, in oil, occupying almost the entire surface; below it the tombstone of a Count von Gleichen and his two surface; below it the tombstone of a Count von Gleichen and his two glass. The "Relief in wood of the Resurrection, above an altar to the right of the entrance, is perhaps by Adam Kraft. The choir contains finely carved stalls of the 15th cent., and a curious bronze candelabrum of the 11th (?), representing a Penitent. Fine stained glass of the 14th century.

Beautiful Cloisters on the S. side, partly Romaneeque and partly Goric. The Towers, dating from the beginning of the 15th cent., but never finished, contain ten bells, the largest of which ('Maria Gloriosa') weighs upwards of 15 tons. Fine view from the top (260 steps).

The church of St. Severus (Pl. 15; B, 3; also Rom. Cath.), dating from the 14th cent., with its three spires, adjacent to the cathedral, contains a late-Gothic font and an interesting reliquary.

The Predigerkirche (Pl. 13; C, 4), erected in 1228, contains a carved altar, with paintings probably by Wohlgemuth. The Barfüsserkirche (Pl. 10; C, 4), a simple but tasteful Gothic structure of 1285-1316, judiciously restored in 1840-50, also contains a carved altar (14th cent.).

The Augustinian Monastery (Pl. 9; C, 2), now an orphan-asylum (Martinsstift), contains the cell of Luther, who became a monk here in 1505, but all reminiscences of the illustrious Reformer were destroyed by a fire in March, 1872.

The Rathhaus (Pl. 23; C, 3), in the Fischmarkt, was erected in 1869-75 on the site of an earlier building: the reception-room is adorned with *Frescoes from the history of Erfurt, executed by Janssen of Düsseldorf. Two of the private houses in the Fischmarkt are handsome Renaissance edifices of the 16th cent., and there is another of equal interest in the Johannis-Str. The adjacent *Krāmer-Brücke is flanked with houses on each side.

The Government Buildings (Pl. 24; C, 4), formerly the palace of the governors appointed by the Electors of Mayence, were occupied by Napoleon in 1808, who convened a congress of reigning princes here. In the square in front of them, called the 'Hirschgarten', a monument has been erected in memory of 1870-71.

The Steiger, the path to which passes extensive and well-kept kitchen-gardens, is the favourite promenade at Erfurt (comp. Pl. B, C, 6). The horticulture of the environs enjoys a high reputation. The nurseries of Haage & Schmidt, Benary, Heinemann, and Piatz, contain a great variety of plants. A rich display of flowers may also be seen in summer and autumn beyond the Brühler-Thor, to the right.

The salt-mine of Hversgehoven, 3 M. to the N. of Erfurt, with a shaft 1900 ft. deep may be visited by resymission of the overseen (1.11).

1300 ft. deep, may be visited by permission of the overseer $(1-1^{1}/2 \text{ m.})$.

Theatre. Performances during the first four months of the year only. Gotha (961 ft.), the second residence of the Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, with 26,525 inhab., is a pleasant place with attractive environs. It is one of the busiest mercantile places in Thuringia, containing several banks and the well-known geographical institution of Justus Perthes, founded in 1786.

On the way from the station into the town we pass several handsome new buildings: on the right a bank, and on the left a fire-insurance office; on the left the Life Insurance Office (Pl. 14) and the Ducal Stables (Pl. 15); on the right the Ducal Palace (Pl. 29), containing several good modern pictures (fee 11/2 m.). Farther on is the Palais Friedrichsthal (Pl. 5) on the right, and opposite to it the Orangen-Garten with its extensive hot-houses; then (r.) the new Masonic Lodge and the Post Office, formerly a fireinsurance office (Pl. 4), and (l.) the Privatbank and the Theatre (Pl. 27), all built by Eberhard.

Opposite the theatre, to the right, rises a sandstone obelisk to the memory of natives of the duchy who fell in 1870-71. Adjoining the theatre is a monument (Pl. 1; C, 3) to Arnoldi (d. 1841), the founder of the large insurance-offices of Gotha.

The Abbey Church (Pl. 9; B, 4) contains a large Crucifixion by Jacobs, a native of Gotha (1802-66), to whom a monument has been erected in the Berg-Allee.

The Töchterschule (Pl. 28), or girls' school, at the corner of the market-place, was once the property of the painter Lucas Cranach.

and still bears his device, a winged serpent with a crown.

On a slight eminence rises the extensive Friedenstein Palace (Pl. 22; B, C, 4), with the ducal Library and Cabinet of Coins.

The Library, open daily 11-1, contains 200,000 vols., numerous Incunabula, MSS., miniatures, and autographs (letter of Henry VIII. of England against Luther). — The Cabinet of Coins, 75,000 in number, is well provided with Greek specimens.

On the terrace to the S. rises the new *Museum (Pl. C. 5). built in 1879 by Neumann of Vienna, which contains the collections formerly in the Friedenstein Palace. Open from 1st April to 31st Oct. on Mon., Tues., Frid., and Sat. 10-1, 50 pf.; Sun., first floor, 8-10, and second floor, 10-1, gratis; Wed., 9-1, first floor, free, and second floor, 1 m.; on week-days, 2-6, 1-4 pers., 5 m.; in winter, Wed. and Sat. 10-1, 50 pf.

Jacobs.— V. Bijoux of all kinds, including a costly breviary and a necklace of the 16th cent.; filigree work; miniatures of Spinoza, Raphael Mengs, Marie Antoinette, and others. By the window is a rich collection of antique and modern gems, the finest of which are an oriental garnet with a portrait of the Sassanide emperor Shapoor I., and an antique onyx-cameo with Jupiter and Ceres. Landscapes by Hackert. The cases in the loggia contain the ducal silver plate.— R. VI. Böttger's porcelain (see p. 315), Italian majolica, German earthenware, Meissen and Sèvres china, German and Venetia, glass; in the middle, Limoges and other enamel; the Wild Huntsman, after Spangenberg.—B. VII. Medieval carvings in ivory (hunting-horn and casket of the 14th cent.), wood (Adam and Eve, by Dürer; draught-board of Charles V.), and metal; Gospels of the 10th cent. with portraits of Otho II. and Empress Theophano; garments of 13th and 15th centuries; reminiscences of Napoleon, Marie Antoinette, etc.

On the E. and S. sides are WEAPONS and CLOTHING OF ASIATIC AND POLY-NESIAN NATIONS, and a rich collection of Chinese and Japanese Articles.

On the W., S., and E. sides of the palace are extensive Promenades. In a grove on the E. side is the Thee-Schlösschen, resembling a chapel, and beyond the ducal stables is a statue of Blumenbach the naturalist, a native of Gotha (1752-1840). To the S. of the palace, beyond the terrace of the Museum, is the *Park, with a pond, on an island in which is an old ducal burial-place. The Leina Canal, which intersects the park and supplies the town with water from the Thuringian Forest, was constructed in the 15th cent. by the Landgrave Balthasar. In the vicinity is the Observatory (Pl. 24).

The New Cemetery, 1 M. to the N. of the town, contains a cremationhall with a 'Columbarium' (admission on application to the keeper).

A good panoramic view may be obtained from the Seeberg, 1½ M. distant from the town (Restaurant). - The *Arnoldithurm in the Berggarten (Restaurant), another point of view to the N. W. (11/2 M.), affords an excellent survey of the whole range of the Thuringian Mts., and of the town. The tower contains relics of Arnoldi and his family (p. 346).

Eisenach, a pleasant town with 18,624 inhab., once the residence of the dukes of Saxe-Eisenach, who became extinct in 1741, now belongs to Weimar. The tower of St. Nicholas, at the entrance to the town from the station, is a fine Romanesque structure in good preservation. The Palace in the market-place was erected by Duke Ernest Augustus of Weimar in 1742: in front of it rises a large fountain, with a gilt statue of St. George. Good classical music is performed in the opposite Marktkirche on Sundays. At the back of the church is a monument in memory of 1870-71. Further on. in the Lutherplatz, is the Lutherhaus, where Luther is said to have lived with Frau Ursula Cotta when attending school here in 1498. A memorial tablet in the Frauenplan marks the house in which Joh. Seb. Bach, the great composer, was born in 1685. Friedrich Preller, the painter (b. 1804; see p. 342), was born in a house at the corner of the Carl-Str. and the market, denoted by a memorial tablet. - Beyond the station, to the N. of the town, lies the New Cemeters, containing the grave of Fritz Reuter, the Low-German poet, who died in 1874 (a bust, by Afinger, in the corner to the right); fine view.

The situation and environs of Eisenach, the finest point in the Thuringian Forest, are very picturesque. The *Garden and Park of Herr v. Eichel (entrance near the Nicolaithor, not far from the station) are well laid out and command charming views (open on Thursdays only, after 1 p.m.). Outside the Frauenthor and to the left of the Coburg road, leading past Marienburg, lies the grandducal *Karthausgarten, commanding a pleasing view of the Wartburg, and always open to the public. — The Marienthal is studded with pretty villas and gardens on each side of the road. At the entrance, to the right, is a country-house once occupied by Fritz Reuter; further on are the beer-gardens and lodging-houses mentioned above. A pleasant walk skirts the Prinzenteich, 1/3 M. from the gate. To the Annathal, 11/2 M., see p. 351.

FROM EISENACH TO THE WARTBURG there are several routes (guide unnecessary). The shortest way (35-40 min.) is a footpath, the first part of which is somewhat steep, ascending by the donkeystand to the W. of the 'Half Moon', and past the burial-ground; it then traverses wood, passing a small white house, and leads round the Mādelstein, affording a charming view. A more picturesque footpath and the carriage-road diverge to the right from the Coburg road beyond the Frauenthor, opposite the entrance to the Karthausgarten, pass the villa which formerly belonged to Fritz Reuter (see above), and ascend past the villa Hainstein. Farther on, the path crosses the road twice.

The *Wartburg (1290 ft. above the sea-level, 565 ft. above Eisenach), founded by Lewis the Springer in 1070, was occupied by the Landgraves of Thuringia down to the extinction of the family in 1247, and is now the occasional residence of the Grand-Duke of Weimar. It is one of the finest existing secular buildings in the Romanesque style, and since 1847 has been restored in its original shape and appropriately decorated by the architect Hr. v. Ritgen.— At the entrance is an Inn (R., L., & A. 2½, B. ¾ m.), built in the mediæval style, where tickets of admission to the castle are obtained (50 pf.).

The castle consists of the Vorburg, with the Gateway, the Ritterhaus, and some stables, and the HOPBURG, with the so-called Dirnitz (fitted up for a winter residence), the Kemenate (apartments of the Landgravines), the Bergfried (oldest tower of defence, lately rebuilt), the Landgravineshaus or Palace, the Marstall or stables, and the S. Tower of Defence. The object of the restoration has been to present to us 'a faithful picture of the condition of the castle in the 12th cent., its most glorious era, when it was occupied by the art-loving Landgraves and was the scene of the contests of the greatest mediæval German poets; where, too, Martin Luther, at the beginning of the 16th cent., found an asylum, and where the mighty struggle for religious liberty took its rise'.

Interesting reminiscences of the Reformer, who was intercepted on his return from Worms and conducted hither by his friend the Elector Frederick the Wise, are still preserved in the RITTERHAUS in the Vorburg. A room, which has undergone little alteration, is shown here, containing Luther's table, drinking-vessel, armour as 'Junker Georg', book-case, letters, portrait, and other memorials, where the great Reformer zealously worked at his translation of the Bible from 4th May, 1521, to 6th March, 1522.

the Bible from 4th May, 1521, to 6th March, 1522. The greatest splendour of the castle as it existed in the 12th cent. is exhibited in the Hofburg. In the LANDGRAFENHAUS here we first visit the Landgrafensimmer, embellished with seven "Frescoes by Moritz v. Schwind (1856), representing scenes from the history of the first Landgraves. The Sängersaal, in which the traditional 'Sängerkrieg', or contest between the great rival minstrels of Germany, is said to have taken place, contains a mural painting by Schwind representing that event, while the raised platform is adorned with arabesques and figures of the minstrels, with quotations from their ballads, by Ritgen and Hofmans of Darmstadt. It is an undoubted historical fact that Walther von der Vogelweide, Wolfram von Eschenbach, and other famous minstrels visited the court of Landgrave Hermann I. (1190-1217), but the other contents of the 'Kriec von Wartburg' (contest at the Wartburg), a poem dating from about 1300, are mere fable. - The Elizabeth Gallery, adorned with frescoes by Schwind from the life of St. Elizabeth, daughter of Anwith freezoes by Schwing from the INE of St. Elizabeth, assigner of Andreas II. of Hungary, and wife of the Landgrave Louis the Clement of Thuringia, and with the Seven Works of Mercy, next leads us to the Chapel, with ancient mural paintings and stained glass.— On the third floor is the spacious Fest- und Wafensaal, rising to the height of the roof, with rich symbolical ornamentation, and painted by Welter of Cologne. The Kemenatz, fitted up for the use of the grand-ducal family, is seldom shown to visitors. The Reformation Rooms contain 18 pictures of scenes from Luther's life, by Pausels, Thumann, Linnig, and Struys.

The Diverse contains a large Rightmann or a property with weapons and armour of the 12-17th cent., the 16th being admirably represented. The Bergfried is rarely shown, but the South Tower commands a beautiful "Virw of the dark, forest-clad mountains of Thuringia and the charming valley of Eisenach.

The Direct contains a large Rüstkammer or armoury, with weapons and armour of the 12-17th cent., the 16th being admirably represented.

The Wartburg is also locally famous as the scene of the 'Burschenfest' of 18th Oct., 18t7, an enthusiastic festival celebrated by students from every part of Germany.

A visit to the Annathal may conveniently be combined with the excursion to the Wartburg. Path easily found, but guide not unacceptable. It descends under the castle-bridge; after 4 min., to the right round the rocks; 8 min., to the left through an opening in the rock; 3 min., straight on, not to the left; 5 min., the Waidmannsruh, a resting-place; 8 min., a stone seat, where the wood is quitted; 3 min., the Sangerbank, on a projecting rock; then descend by steps round the rock; 5 min., the high-road (Eisenach to Coburg); follow this road and (3 min.) enter the valley by the path passing the pond on the right.

The *Annathal, near the Coburg road, 2 M, to the S, of Eisenach, is a very picturesque wooded ravine. The narrowest part, 8 min. from the entrance, is called the Drachenschlucht (150 yds. long. 3 ft. wide), the precipitous sides of which are luxuriantly clothed with moss and ferns, and moistened with trickling water.

We may now either return from this point, or proceed through the valley to the (1 M.) Hohe Sonne (1400 ft.), the highest point on the road, whence a picturesque glimpse of the Wartburg is obtained. The forester's house is also an inn.

At the S. base of the Hohe Sonne, 11/2 M. from this point, and about 6 M. to the S. of Eisenach, is situated the château of Wilhelmsthal (Auerhahn, R. & A. 21/2 m.), with a delightful park, laid out at the end of the 17th cent. and enlarged by the Grand-Duke Charles Augustus. Way back by a footpath through beech-wood by the Hirschstein (see p. 352).

From Wilhelmsthal to Ruhla (p. 362), 5 M.: we follow the road for 1/2 M., enter the wood to the left by a pond, and pursue a straight direction.

A path to the left near the entrance to the Annathal leads into the *Landgrafenschlucht, a picturesque ravine considerably wider than the Annathal, follows its course as far as a tree with a bench. A little farther on, where four paths meet, we select the most trodden one. which leads to the right to the *Drachenstein, where a view is enjoyed. On the road to the right, 3/4 M. farther, is the Hohe Sonne forester's house above mentioned. To the Hirschstein, Wachstein, and thence to Ruhla, an attractive walk of 31/2 hrs. (see p. 362).

64. From Eisenach to Coburg and Lichtenfels.

95 M. RAILWAY in 4 hrs. (fares 13 m. 80, 9 m. 20, 7 m. 70 pf.); to Coburg

31/2 hrs. (fares 11 m. 80, 7 m. 90, 6 m. 60 pf.).

Soon after quitting the station the train penetrates the N.W. slopes of the Thüringer Wald by a tunnel 1/3 M. in length. Fine retrospect of the Wartburg. Beyond (9 M.) Marksuhl it enters the valley of the Werra; 5 M. to the S.W. lies the small watering-place of Frauensee, on the bank of a lake.

171/2 M. Salzungen (Curhaus; Sächs. Hof; Krone) possesses saltsprings, baths, and establishments for the inhalation of the vapour: near it is a small lake with a château at the S. end and a park at the other

Branch-railway from Salzungen to Dorndorf, Stadtlengsfeld, Dermback, and Katten-Nordheim, 241/2 M.; tickets from the conductor.

The village of Möhra, 41/2 M. to the N., was the home of the parents of Luther, to whom a monument, by Müller, was erected here in 1861.

20 M. Immelborn is the station for the baths of Liebenstein (p. 363), 41/2 M. to the E. (diligence and omnibus to meet each train, 70 pf.). On the way lies Barchfeld, with a château of the Landgrave of Hessen-Philippsthal-Barchfeld.

26 M. Wernshausen is the junction of a branch-line to (41/2 M.) Schmalkalden (Deutscher Kaiser), an old town (6452 inhab.) with walls and mosts, and late-Gothic houses with lofty gables adorned with carving. In the market-place are a late-Gothic church and a monument to Karl Wilhelm, the composer of the 'Wacht am Rhein', who was a native of the place. In the 'Krone' the Protestant League of Schmalkalden, so important to the cause of the Reformation, was concluded in 1531. The articles were drawn up by Luther, Melanchthon, and other reformers in a house on the Schlossberg near the market, indicated by a golden swan and inscription. The old Wilhelmsburg rises above the town. Valuable iron-mines in the vicinity. Near the station are the Salt Baths, with two thermal springs of 66° Fahr.

Steinbach-Hallenberg (Zur Hallenburg), a small town with iron manufactories (nut-crackers, smoothing-irons, etc.), lies 71/2 M. to the E. of Schmalkalden (diligence once a day). Pleasant walk thence to Oberhof (p. 366) or Friedrichroda.

31 M. Wasungen, an industrial town on the Werra, with an old château. 35 M. Walldorf.

As Meiningen is approached, the ducal château of Landsberg looks down from an eminence on the right; it contains some good modern of the Thuringer Wald and the Rhöngebirge. Visitors admitted to the rooms not occupied by the ducal family. The château may also be visited from Meiningen, either by the direct route (3 M.), or by the 'Marienweg', which leads through pleasant wood, passing the ruins of Habichtsbury and several good points of view.

39 M. Meiningen (857 ft.; *Sächs. Hof; Hirsch; *Railway Restaurant), a well-built town with 11,227 inhab., on the Werra, surrounded by wooded heights, is the capital of the duchy of Saxe-Meiningen. One third of the town was destroyed by a fire in 1874, and has been rebuilt in a better style.

The greatest ornament of the town is the *English Garden, or park, opposite the station, containing the ducal mortuary chapel, a monument in memory of the war of 1870-71, and a bust of Jean Paul Richter, who resided at Meiningen from 1801 to 1803. To the right, beyond the pond, is the Ducal Theatre, famed for its admirable performances of classical pieces. To the left is the Herzogliche Palais. Farther on is—to the S. of Meiningen, in 1782-83.

The Herzogliche Schloss, or Ducal Palace, of which the left wing, recently restored, dates from the 16th cent., while the rest was almost entirely completed in 1682.

The INTERIOR contains the grand-ducal picture gallery (about 200 works) and an extensive collection of engravings. The private apartments of the duke are adorned with a number of choice paintings, including: A. Müller, Apotheosis of the Princess Charlotte. The principal old paintings are: Fra Bartolommes, The Trinity; S. Botticelli, The Virgin and Child and St. John the Baptist; "Fiesole, Mary and Joseph worshipping the Infant; "Melozzo da Forli, Portrait of a man; Filippino Lippi, Adoration of the Infant; Pamerzano, Holy Family; "Perupino, St. John and St. Lucia; Taddeo Gaddi, Christ and Mary with six saints; Garofalo, Virgin; Van Dyck, Portrait. Also many Dutch pictures of the 17th cent., and a copy of Raphael's Madonna di Loreto.

The Grosse Dolmar (2405 ft.), to which a road leads from Meiningen by Helba and Kühndorf in 2% hrs., commands a beautiful view of the Thuringian Forest.— Schiller resided at the village of Bauerbach, 6 M.

FROM MEIMINGEN TO KISSINGEN (461/2 M.) AND SCHWEINFURT (501/2 M.), by railway in 21/2-23/4 hrs. — The line skirts the Rhôngebirge to the E.—16 M. Melli-chatadt, a Bavrian district-town on the Streu, in the valley of which the train descends. —25 M. Neustadt (*Goldener Mann), on the Scale, an industrial town, prettily situated at the foot of the ruins of the Scaleburg, which dates from the time of Charlemagne; fine view. Pleasant walk down the valley of the Scale to Kissingen (3 hrs.). — Stat. Münnerstadt, Ebenhausen; thence to Kissingen and Schweinfurt, see Bacdeter's S. Germany.

From (43 M.) Grimmenthal a branch-line diverges to Rohr, Dietzhausen, and (12½ M.) Suhl (p. 367). From (51 M.) Themar a diligence runs daily to Schleusingen (7 M.; p. 367) and Ilmenau (p. 360; 20 M. farther). To the W. rise the Gleichberge (2224 and 2100 ft.), two basaltic hills with curious rock-formations.

59 M. Hildburghausen (1175 ft.; *Englischer Hof; Rauten-krans), a pleasant town on the right bank of the Werra, the residence of the dukes of Saxe-Hildburghausen down to 1826, now belongs to Meiningen. Pop. 5453. The Schloss, now a barrack, was erected in 1685-95. The Schlossgarten, adjoining it on the S., contains a monument to Queen Louise of Prussia. The mediæval Rathhaus with its two towers was begun in 1395. The large Lunatic Asylum is common to the Thuringian principalities.

At the base of the Kleine Gleichen, 10 M. to the N.W. of Hildburghausen, lies Bömhild, formerly the capital of the county of Henneberg. The late-Gothic church contains the monuments of several Counts of Henneberg, including two by Peter Vischer of Nuremberg: Count Otto IV. (d. 1502) and *Count Hermann VIII. (d. 1531) and his wife (cast of the latter in South Kensington Museum).

68 M. Eisfeld (*Deutsches Haus); diligence daily to Schwarzburg (26 M.; p. 358) and Saalfeld (39 M.; p. 334), also viâ Neuhaus to Saalfeld (31 M.). - The train now quits the Werra.

82 M. Coburg, see below.

Branch-line from Coburg (12½ M., in 50 min.) to Sonneberg (*Krug's Hotel, R. & A. 2½ m., B. 85 pf.; Löwe; Electric and Hydropathic Establishment of Dr. Richter), with 8660 inhab., a busy place where toys are extensively manufactured. The town (1320 ft. above the sea-level) is surrounded by woods and hills, and has become of late years a favourite summer-resort. The chief ornament of the place is the handsome Gothic church, with its wooden vaulting and stained glass, erected in 1845.

Modern château on a hill above the town. From Sonneberg to Saalfeld, mouern ensues on a min above the town. From sonneperg to Saatyeta, 331/2 M., diligence twice daily; to Schwarzburg, see p. 359.

About 6 M. to the N. of Sonneberg, and 9 M. to the W. of Eisfeld (see above), is Meschenbach (Inn), near which is the Zinzethöhle, a cavern recently made accessible to visitors. Pleasant excursion by Forschengereuth, Mengerspereuth, and Rebendusing to Meschenbach, and thence by Limbach (Inn) to Eisfeld, about 15 M. in all.

The Werra Railway now traverses the Itzgrund, passes stations Niederfüllbach and Ebersdorf, and reaches - 95 M. Lichtenfels, a station on the Bavarian N. Railway (p. 333).

65. Coburg.

Hotels. *Hôtel Leuthäuser, R. 2-3 m.; *Grüner Baum; *Goldene Traube, near the station, with restaurant and garden; Victoria. Restaurants. *Herold, Theaterplatz; Schaffner; *Kaufmann, Steinweg; Zollhof, in the Rathhaus. Beer (generally good): Sturm; Vereinsbrauerei; Zur Capelle (fine view from the Platte, near the last).

Post and Telegraph Office, in the Allee, a Gothic edifice by Martinet.

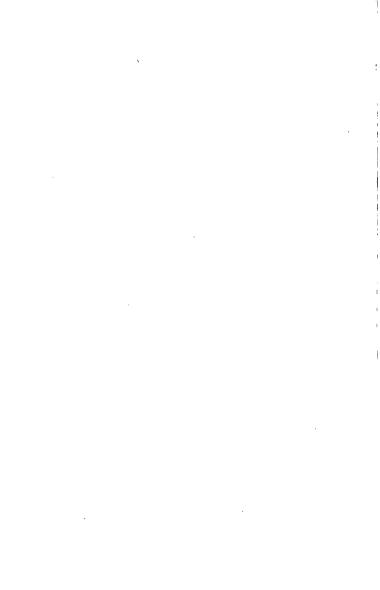

Theatre. Performances on Sun., Tues., and Frid., from Easter to Whitsunday, and from Sept. to December.

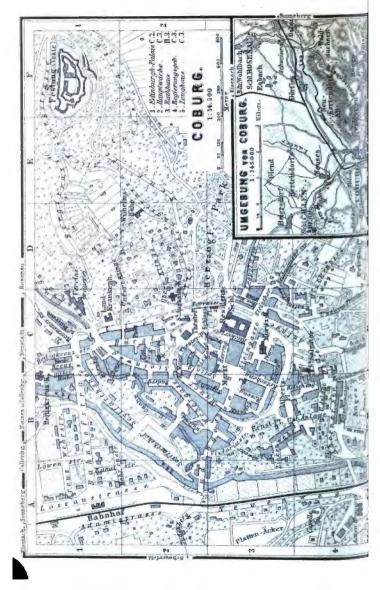

Coburg (990 ft.), one of the residences of the Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, the most important town in the Franconian portion of the Saxon duchies, with 15,791 inhab., is prettily situated in the valley of the Itz, a tributary of the Main, and boasts of a number of handsome buildings, especially in the neighbourhood of the market and Schloss-Platz. Around the town a girdle of villas with gardens has gradually sprung up on the site of the old fortifications.

The MARKET-PLACE (Pl. B, C, 3) in the centre of the town is embellished with a Statue of Prince Albert (d. 1861) by Theed, inaugurated in the presence of Queen Victoria on 26th Aug., 1865. The Rathhaus (Pl. 3) and Government Buildings (Pl. 4) in this Platz, as well as the neighbouring Arsenal (Pl. 5) which contains the library, were erected by Duke John Casimir (d. 1633).

The spacious Moritzkirche (Pl. C, 3) of the 15th cent., built in the late-Gothic style, with Renaissance additions, and a lofty tower (334 ft.), contains a monument of Duke John Frederick II., erected in 1598 on the site of the high-altar. Near it the finelyexecuted brasses of John Casimir (d. 1633), John Ernest (d. 1521), John Frederick V. (d. 1595), and his wife Elizabeth (d. 1594) are built into the wall. Opposite the church is the Gymnasium, founded in 1604 by John Casimir, whose statue is seen at the corner.

In the SCHLOSS-PLATZ (Pl. C, 2, 3), which is partly enclosed by colonnades, are situated the Ducal Palace, with its stables and riding-school, the Theatre (Pl. C, 2), the Guard House (Pl. 2), the Palace of the Duke of Edinburgh (Pl. 1), heir-presumptive to Duke Ernest II., and other handsome buildings. In front of the palace rises a bronze Statue of Duke Ernest I. (d. 1844), by Schwanthaler. On a height behind the Duke of Edinburgh's palace stands the new Roman Catholic Church, a Gothic edifice with stained-glass windows.

The Palace (Pl. C, 3), or Ehrenburg, a handsome winged edifice in the English-Gothic style, was converted from a monastery of the Recollects into a ducal residence in 1549, and was altered and extended by Ernest I. (visitors apply to the castellan).

Interior (bell in the second court; fee). Family portraits of Duke Ernest I., Queen Victoria, Prince Albert, King Leopold and his queen, etc.; and several other modern and ancient pictures, one of them by Van Dyck; handsome apartment with Gobelins tapestry and stucco mouldings; grand hall with caryatides as light-bearers.

A house in the Rückert-Strasse, with a medallion-portrait, was occupied by the poet of that name in 1820.

A flight of steps on one side of the palace (by the guard-house, in the arcades) and a steep footpath on the other ascend to the beautiful Hofgarten (Pl. D, E, 2, 3), extending for $^{3}/_{4}$ M. along the steep slope of the hill, which is crowned by the castle. The road passing the Roman Catholic Church also ascends, more gradually, to the garden. The garden contains the Kleine Palais, built in 1868 in the English Gothic style; the Mausoleum of Duke Francis (d. 1806), and Duchess Augusta Caroline (d. 1831), and a pavilion with a cast of the Prometheus group by Müller (p. 43).

The ancient *Gastle of Coburg (1520 ft.), 530 ft. above the town, to which a path ascends from the palace in ½ hr., commands the entire district. It was the residence of the Counts of Henneberg and the Saxon dukes, until John Ernest transferred his seat to the Ehrenburg (see above) in 1549. About the time of the Diet of Augsburg (1530) Luther resided here for three months, translated the prophets and psalms, and wrote numerous letters. In 1632 the fortress was occupied by the Swedes and besieged in vain by Wallenstein. It is a late-Gothic structure of the close of the 15th century. The S.W. wing with its projecting corner-turrets was formerly the Arsenal; and the large building on the N. side is called the Fürstenbau. The castle has recently been restored and tastefully fitted up as a *Museum, under the able superintendence of Hr. Rothbart.

The castle is entered on the S. side. The entrance to the collections is under the open wooden staircase in the Gothic style in the first court; visitors ring at a door to the left (adm. 50 pf.).

Restaurant in the Schlosshof.

The wall of the staircase is adorned with *Frescoes by Schneider and Rollbort (1838-55), representing the nuptials of Duke John Casimir with the Princess Anna of Saxony (1885). We next enter the Carrage-Room, containing curious old state-coaches, sledges, saddles, etc.—The Vestible of the armoury contains a freeco by Schneider (1841), representing two bears breaking into the ducal dining-hall. Luthers's Room remains unchanged, and contains relies of the period of his residence here and a collection of his writings. The spacious Armoury contains a large iron stove, cast in 1430, adorned with coats-of-arms and figures of saints; also armour, shields, helmets, coats-of-mail, etc.—The collections of Firearms (norms on the staircase and on the upper floor) comprise a number of valuable specimens of the earliest descriptions (nacient breech-loader). Most of the portraits here are modern. The Rosette Room, the ceiling of which is adorned with 365 rosettes of different forms, with portraits of the Landgraves of Thuringts, contains a number of goblets, among them one presented by Gustavus Adolphus. The Betsaal contains sculptures in wood from the life of the Virgin, from designs by Martin Schön, a Bible by Hans Luft, printed in 1550 and furnished with coloured wood-cuts by Burgkmair, another printed at Frankfort in 1572, a parchment MS. of the 11th cent., with finely-carved vivory binding. The Reformation Room contains a copy of an old picture in the Moritzkirche, representing the Diet of Augsburg; portraits of Luther, his wife, Melanchthon, Bugenhagen, and other eminent reformers. On a column are the arms of the sixteen German towns that first embraced the reformed faith. The Horn Room, a master-piece of the Renaissance during the reign of John Casimir, executed about the year 1600.

The S.W. wing contains the apartments of the architect Herr Rothbert, opposite to which, on the other side of the court, is the valuable *NATURAL HISTORY CABINET, founded by Prince Albert and the reigning Duke of Coburg (adm. 2-4, free).

The N. wing contains a collection of Engravings and Drawings, including fine early-German specimens; also Coins and Autographs.

*Views. The adjoining N.E. Hohe Bastei commands one of the most extensive and picturesque views in Germany. The N.W. Bürenbastei commands the finest view to the W., over the town itself (seldom open to visitors).

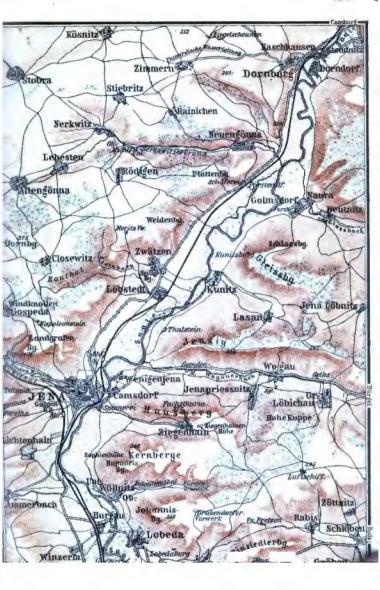

The Schlosshor-Halle contains the figure-head of a Danish man-of-war, captured in 1849, and other trophies.

The Eckartsberg, a hill to the S. of the castle, and of about the same height, is orowned by a lofty tower built by the duke, commanding a beautiful panorama. A pleasant path leads hence vià Löbleinstein to the castle in $^{3}/_{4}$ hr. — The Hohe Fichte, near Ahorn, $2^{1}/_{4}$ M. from Coburg, is another good point of view.

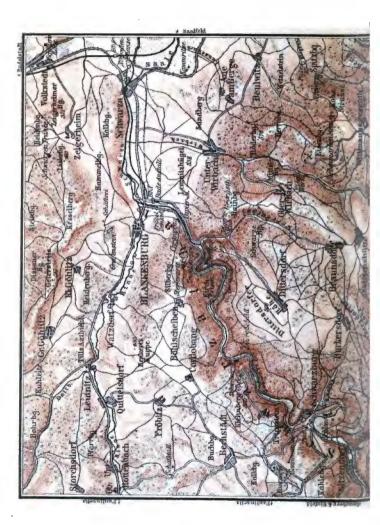

Rosenau (Restaurant), the birthplace (26th Aug., 1819) of Prince Albert (of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha; d. 14th Dec., 1861), brother of the present Duke Ernest II., where Queen Victoria spent eleven days in 1845, 4½ M. to the N.E. of Coburg (Station Oeslau), and Callenberg, 3½ M. to the N.W., are country-seats of the duke, tastefully fitted up and picturesquely situated. Below the latter are a model farm and a good restaurant; in the wood, farther down, the Fasanerie. Near Eichhof, 2½ M. to the W. of Coburg, is the Ernstfarm, another model farm.

Not far from the latter, on the road, 1½M. to the N. of Coburg, is the village of Neuses, with the house of the poet Rückert (d. 1866) adjoining the church. The garden contains a colossal bust in marble to his memory. On a wooded slope on the opposite bank of the Sulz rises an obelisk over the tomb of the poet Thümmel (d. 1817). Above stands the château of Falkeneck.

The handsome Schloss on the right bank of the Itz, opposite Coburg, was erected by Duke Ernest of Wurtemberg in 1838.

The Cometery on the E. side of the town contains the modern Mausoleum of the ducal family, and the burial-vault of Baron Stockmar (d. 1863), embellished at the expense of the English and Belgian reigning families in honour of their old counsellor. — On the way to the cemetery we pass the new Ernest Albert Seminary and the Ernestinum (a school), both on the Glockenberg.

66. The Thuringian Forest.

The *Forest of Thuringia, or Thuringer Wald, a mountainous district 95 M. in length and 8-22 in breadth, bounded on the W. by the Werra and on the N.E. by Franconia, is replete with interest for the pedestrian. The tour may conveniently be divided into two parts, the Eastern, beginning at Schwarza, and the Western, beginning at Eisenach (comp. p. 361). This is also a geological division, clay-slate occurring towards the S.E., as far as the Erzgebirge, and porphyry to the N.W. as far as Eisenach. The boundary between these formations is near Ilmenau.

The watering-places on the N. slope, such as Blankenburg, Ilmenau, Friedrichroda, Ruhka, etc., are the most frequented and most expensive. Pleasant though more modest quarters for a prolonged stay may also be obtained at Schmalkalden, Schleusingen, and other places to the S.

Inns fair, but on the whole inferior to those in the Harz (p. 376), especially in sleeping-accommodation. Those at the most frequented places are often crowded in summer, and then very expensive.

Guides are only occasionally necessary. They all have tariffs which they are bound to show. The average charge is 2 m. for half-a-day, 4 m. for a whole day.

Carriages with one horse 10-15 m., with two horses 15-20 m. per day.

a. Eastern Part.

Plan. 1st DAY. By train to Schwarza (R. 59); by omnibus to Blankenburg or the Chrysopras (or on foot from Rudolstadt viâ Zeigerheim and the Greifenstein); walk in 2-2½ hrs. to Schwarzburg.—2nd Day. On foot by the Trippstein to Paulinzelle and Ilmenau. (This excursion may be added to the first day by driving from Schwarzburg.) — 3rd Dat. Kickelhahn, Manebach, Schmücke, Schneekopf, Oberhof. — 4th Dax. From Oberhof through the Schmalwassergrund to Tambach. — 5th Dax. To Friedrichroda and Reinhardsbrunn by railway (p. 365), — or from Reinhardsbrunn through the Lauchagrund and the Thorstein to the top of the Inselsberg, and thence through the Trusenthal to Liebenstein and Eisenach (comp. R. 66 b).

Schwarza leads to -

3 M. Blankenburg (Schellhorn's Hotel, 'pension' from 25 m. per week; Löwe; Ross; diligence to Schwarzburg, Königsee, and Ilmenau), with several pretty country-houses, lies at the entrance to the narrower part of the Schwarzathal. Above the town (20 min.) rise the ruins of Greifenstein (poor restaurant), the ancient castle of the German Emp. Günther of Schwarzburg. A good point of view near Blankenburg is the Georgethurm, reached in 11/4 hr. -In the Schwarzathal, 1/2 M. above Blankenburg, are the Gasthof zum Chrysopras and the restaurant Lösche's Hall (with rooms to let). The Waidmann's Heil, another inn, is 1/2 M. farther on.

The *Schwarzathal, especially between Blankenburg and Schwarzburg ($6^{1/2}$ M.), is one of the most picturesque and beautifully-wooded valleys in Thuringia. At the beginning of the valley, on the Griesbach-Felsen, is the inscription: 'Salus intrantibus'.

The top of the Griesbach Felsen, reached from Blankenburg or the Chrysopras Inn in 1/2 hr., commands a fine and very characteristic view of the Thuringian Forest. On the one side we see the rounded and dark wooded summits and narrow valleys of the slate formation, and on the other the light-coloured limestone peaks with wide, flat valleys between them. — From the Griesbach Felsen we may go on to the (1/4 hr.) Teufelstreppe, another point of view, and thence via Bohischeiben to (11/2 hr.) the

A little farther on, to the left, is the Eberstein, a shooting-lodge of the prince. Wild boars are often visible in the park. A pleasant walk may be taken to the Eberstein, by crossing the bridge to the right bank of the Schwarza (opposite the Waidmann's Heil), whence a path through the woods leads to the top. At the third bend of the road the Kirchfelsen, so called from its supposed resemblance to a church, rises on the right. From the (4½ M.) chalet of Oppelei (Refreshments) a direct path may be taken to the Trippstein (see below), with the aid of a guide. High above the road, on the opposite side of the valley, is the Dürre Schild pavilion. About 1½ M. farther, ½ M. from the village of Schwarzburg, is a memorial tablet on the right side of the road, whence a zigzag path ascends in ½ hr. to the Trippstein (see below), and where a view of the Schwarzburg is obtained.

*Schloss Schwarzburg, 61/2 M. from Blankenburg, the ancestral castle of the counts and princes of Rudolstadt since the 12th cent., charmingly situated on an eminence (256 ft.), dates in its present form from 1726, when the older building was burned down. It contains an interesting armoury and some fine antlers. The Kaisersaal, which escaped the fire, has recently been adorned with frescoes by R. Oppenheim, and contains some fine majolica. At the foot of the castle-hill lies the village of Thal-Schwarzburg.

Hotels. Weisser Hirsch, with veranda and fine view towards the Thiergarten, R. from 2 m., D. 21/s m., 'pens.' from 41/s m.; the Trippstrum Hotel and Macheleidt's Logirhaus are 'dépendances' of the Hirsch; Thürnnerr Hor, well spoken of, 'pens.' from 41/2 m.; Schwarzsbreger Hor, in the village, well spoken of, R. & L. 11/2 m. Lodgings also obtainable. Dilicence to Blankenburg, Schwarzs, and Rudolstadt, twice daily. Onnibus to Königsee and Ilmenau from 1st June to 15th Sept. — Carriage with two horses to Rudolstadt 12-14 m., to Ilmenau by Paulinzelle 20 m., exclusive of tolls and gratuities. A previous bargain should be made in each case.

FROM SCHWARZBURG TO SONNEBERG, 30 M., diligence daily in 7 hours. The road quits the Schwarzathal at the foundry, and leads through the finely-wooded Lichtegrund to Unterweissbach and Oberweissbach (Koch's Inn); the 'herb-sellers' ('Balsammänner') of this neighbourhood drive a brisk trade in their home-made drugs and decoctions. The road then passes the Cursdorfer Kuppe (see below; ascended from Oberweissbach in '4/4 hr.) and reaches Neuhaus (2864 ft.; Grüner Baum), a village famed for its glass and painted china. The contiguous Igelshieb (2742 ft.) is the highest village in Thuringia. The road then descends through pleasant wooded valleys to Lauscha (glass-works), Sieinach, and Sonneberg (p. 354). — An interesting circuit may be made by returning from Neuhaus viâ Wallendorf and the Lichtegrund to Unterweissbach (3½ hrs.).

FROM SCHWARZBURG TO EISPELD, 28 M., diligence daily in 6 hours. The road follows the valley of the Schwarza, and leads via Sitzendorf (Inn) and Blumenau (Zeidler's Inn) to (121/2 M.) Katzhütte (Wurzelberg), a village with iron-works. The conspicuous Cursdorfer Kuppe (2500 ft.) may be ascended in 1½ hr. from Mellenbach, a village on the road before Katzhütte is reached, and the descent may be made by Meuselbach to Katzhütte in 2½ hours. On the road, 5 M. to the E. of the latter, is the Wurzelberg, with a shooting-lodge, near which is a plantation of magnificent pines, 300 years old. Eisfeld (rail. station), see p. 354. — The upper part of the Schwarza-Thal, though less known, is scarcely inferior to the lower. Sitzendorf and Blumenau are pleasant spots for a prolonged stay.

An easier route than the above-mentioned footpath is the carriage-road that ascends from the toll and post-house through the woods to the (3/4 hr.) *Trippstein (1530 ft.), a beautiful open space with a summer-house (open to the public), commanding a striking view of the Schwarzburg (best by evening-light). The view from the Kienbergshäuschen, 20 min. farther to the N., has been impaired by the growth of the trees.

On the carriage-road, 1 M. to the W. of the Trippstein, lies the Fasanerie, a shooting-lodge containing furniture made of antlers and surrounded by a park. — The footpath from Schwarzburg to Königsee (see below) passes this lodge, while that to Paulinzelle crosses the road between the Trippstein and the Fasanerie.

From the Kienberg we may now (guide 1 m. 20 pf.) retrace our steps for 5 min., descend by the first well-defined cart-road to the right to (11/2 M.) Bechstädt, and proceed by a road to the right across an uninteresting tract to (21/4 M.) Ober - Rottenbach, from which a good carriage-road to the left leads to (33/4 M.) Paulinzelle. Another route is from Schwarzburg to Allendorf and (6 M.) Unter-Köditz, above which a good footpath towards the N. W. leads in 1 hr. to *Paulinzelle (Menger's Inn), a ruined abbey with the beautiful remains of a Romanesque church, erected in 1114 by Pauline, daughter of the knight Moricho. The abbey was suppressed in 1534 in consequence of the Reformation. — The *Singerberg, near the village of Singen, 11/2 hr. to the N.W. of Paulinzelle, commands a beautiful panorama.

FROM PAULINZELLE TO ILMENAU. The high-road (121/2 M.) leads by Gösselborn, at the foot of the Singerberg (see above; ascent 1/2 hr.), Griesheim, and Bücheloh. — The direct footpath leads through pine-wood via Angstedt (Wilder Mann) and Wümbach (about 101/2 M.).

Another footpath leads from Paulinzelle to the S., through the wood and across the Galgenberg, in 1 hr. to the old town of Königsee (Löwe), whence a diligence plies twice daily to (5 M.) Gehren. From Gehren to Ilmenau, see p. 360.

FROM DIETENDORF TO ILMENAU, 23 M., railway in 2 hrs. (3 m. 50, 2 m. 60, 1 m. 80 pf.). — Dietendorf, see p. 337. 4 M. Haarhausen; on a hill, 21/4 M. to the right, rises the Wachsenburg.

⁶ M. Arnstadt (*Goldene Henne; Sonne, unpretending), a prettily-situated town in the principality of Schwarzburg-Sondershausen, with an ancient Rathhaus and Schloss. Pop. 10,516. The *Liebfrauenkirche of the 12th and 13th cent. contains some fine sculptures and tombstones, among which is a monument of Count Günther of Schwarzburg and his wife, 1368. Arnstadt possesses a strong salt-spring, which attracts about 400 visitors annually. -7 M. Längwitzer, a suburb of Arnstadt.

The railway then traverses the Plane'scher Grund, or valley of the Gera. 11 M. Plaue, with the fine ruins of the Ehrenburg. From the Reinsberg, 21/2 M. to the E. of Plaue, one of the finest panoramic views in Thuringia may be obtained. (Branch-line in progress from Plaue to Gräfenroda, Zella, and Suhl, p. 367.) Beyond Plaue the train crosses the valley of the Gera by a lofty viaduct.

181/2 M. Elgersburg (Curhaus, 'pension' 223/4 m. per week, R. 3/4-41/9 m, per day; Hirsch; visitors' tax 6-10 m.), a village belonging to Gotha, with a hydropathic establishment and a porcelain manufactory. On a lofty porphyry rock above the village rises an old ducal castle, now private property. Several mines in the environs. A pleasant walk may be taken to the (1/4 hr.) Goethefelsen in the valley of the Körnbach.

23 M. Ilmenau. — Hotels. *Löwe, R. 2, D. 2 m., B. 75 pf. (in room No. 1 Goethe spent his last birthday, 28th Aug. 1831); "Tanne, well-situated, with a garden; Curhaus, the chief resort of visitors; Schwan; Sonne; Adler; Deutscher Kaiser, at the station. — At Newlaus (see below): GRUNER BAUM, with restaurant and baths. - Lodgings 3-12 m. per week. - Dittmar, confectioner.

Visitors' Tax: 8-12 m. Diligence daily to (181/2 M.) Suhl (p. 367) via Schmiedefeld, and to (201/2 M.) Schleusingen (p. 367).

Ilmenau (1565 ft.) is a small town with 4593 inhab, in the duchy of Weimar, on the Ilm, and possesses manganese and other mines. River-baths and a fine view at Neuhaus, 3/4 M. to the E. - The hydropathic establishments of Dr. Hassenstein and Dr. Korb are much frequented. Pretty walk through the wood to the Wenzelsberg, and to the Schwalbenstein, farther on.

FROM ILMENAU TO GEHREN, 5 M., railway in 1/2 hr. (fares 90, 60 pf.). The train descends the valley of the Ilm to (11/4 M.) Grenzhammer and (21/2 M.) Langewiesen, then quits the stream and turns to the S.E. 5 M. Gehren (Hirsch), and a little farther on Bahnhof Gehren. — From Gehren to Königsee and Paulinselle, see p. 359.

To the Kickelhahn and Schmücke, a walk of 41/2 hours. We cross the bridge and ascend about $2^{1}/_{2}$ M. on the old Schleusingen road, and then diverge by a road to the right, leading in a few minutes to the *Jägerhaus (Refreshments). The forester keeps the key of the tower, where he is generally to be found in fine weather, provided with a good telescope. The path from the Jägerhaus to the (20 min.) summit traverses the wood, and leads past the grandducal shooting-lodge of Gabelbach (2536 ft.) to a clearing in the wood, whence a path to the right ascends in a curve to the summit of the *Kickelhahn (2828 ft.; 1243 ft. above Ilmenau), one of the highest points in the Thuringian Forest, surmounted by a tower which commands a very extensive prospect.

About 200 paces to the N.W. formerly stood a small wooden Shooting Box, where Goethe frequently spent the night, and on the wall of which he wrote his exquisite lines 'Ueber allen Gipfeln ist Ruh', on 7th Sept. 1783. It was burned down in 1870, and was replaced by a similar hut in 1874.

We descend hence to the right to the (½ hr.) Hermannstein, a moss-clad, basaltic rock; and after 25 min. more, to the left to Cammerberg (*Inn and baths) and Manebach (1650 ft.; Inn) in the Manebacher Grund, two villages separated by the Ilm, equally distant (3 M.) from Ilmenau and Elgersburg, and frequently visited by the summer-residents at these baths.

A rough cart-track ascends from Manebach, generally through wood, to the (1 hr.) carriage-road leading from Elgersburg and Ilmenau to the Schmücke, which we follow to the left. Or we may prefer the winding and picturesque road on the left bank of the Ilm, which joins the just-mentioned road farther on. By each route we take 2 hrs. to reach the Schmücke (2992 ft.), originally a farmhouse, and now a much-frequented inn (unpretending), prettily situated amidst woods and meadows. It stands near the union of the roads to Ilmenau, Suhl, and Oberhof. The *Adlerberg, 2½ hrs. to the S., is an excellent point of view. About ½ M. from the Schmücke, on the road to Oberhof, stands a finger-post, indicating the path to the right to the (20 min.)—

*Schneekopf (3210 ft.), the tower on which (50 pf.) commands a magnificent survey of the plains of Thuringia, as far as the Brocken and Kyffhäuser, S. the Franconian and Rhön Mts., the Gleichberge near Römhild, etc. (The summit may also be reached by a path ascending directly from the inn.) We now return by the same path to the road, which leads towards the N. round the Beerberg (3240 ft.). Several fine views are obtained of the Schneekopf and the ravines on its W. side, beyond which lie the Thuringian plains.

About 1/2 M. beyond the finger-post indicating the way to the Schnee-kopf we may leave the new road and follow the old, which passes Plankner's Aussicht, where a fine view of Suhl is obtained, and rejoins the high-road after 1 M.

The road to Oberhof, 6 M. from the Schmücke, now gradually descends towards the N. From Oberhof (2610 ft.; p. 366), the Coburg and Gotha road descends in numerous windings, through magnificent pine-forest, to (9 M.) Obrdruf (rail.-station, see p. 366).

Pedestrians may proceed from Oberhof to the N.W. to the (7M.) Falkenstein, and in the same direction through the pretty Schmalvassergrund to Dietharz (Gasthaus zum Felsenthal) and (4½ M.) Tambach (Falkenstein). From Dietharz the walk may be continued to the N. to (3 M.) Georgenthal (p. 366). Or from Tambach straight over the hills towards the N.W. by Finsterbergen (with guide) to Friedrichroda and Reinhardsbrunn (2½ hrs.; pp. 365, 366).

b. Western Part.

Plan. 1st DAY: Eisenach, Wartburg, Annathal, Hohe Sonne, back by the Landgrafenschluch and the Marienthal (see R. 63). — 2nd DAY: To Ruhla via Hohe Sonne and Wachstein; thence to Altenstein via the Gerberstein and Lutherbuche. - 3rd DAY: From Altensiein to the Inselsburg, via Liebenstein. — 4th Dax: From the Inselsberg by Reinhardshrumn to Friedrichroda (railway-station). Comp. the remarks at p. 357.

From Eisenach to the Hohe Sonne, see p. 351. Thence to Ruhla the route cannot be mistaken, as finger-posts are attached to the trees at frequent intervals.

By the Hohe Sonne the Rennsteig (p. 367) intersects the Coburg road. To the right near the point of intersection a path leads from the Rennsteig into the wood to the (10 min.) *Hirschstein (1510 ft.), an open space with a solitary oak and a bench, commanding a fine view.

Returning thence, and following the Rennsteig towards the S. for 3/4 hr., we reach a finger-post called the Todte Mann, where the notices attached to the trees should be observed. The route turns to the left at this point, and a little farther, by a hand on a tree, ascends again to the left, through wood the whole way, leading in 1/4 hr. to the *Wachstein (1905 ft.), a group of rocks rendered accessible by steps and paths, and commanding a magnificent and extensive view. To the N. rise the Harz Mts.

From the Wachstein we retrace our steps for a few yards, and then follow the road, which a finger-post on a tree indicates as that to the tower. We soon reach a spot in the wood whence a road to the right descends by the Bermer and Bellevue to Ruhla, while that in a straight direction passes a stump serving as a directionpost and a bench, and ascends to the (20 min.) summit of the Ringberg, where the wooden Karl-Alexander-Thurm affords a picturesque view of Ruhla and the Thuringian Forest. We return hence to the above-mentioned cross-roads and descend by the enclosure to the left and past a bench, in the direction above indicated. After 1/4 hr. the grassy dale is quitted, and the wood on the S. slope entered to the right; after 10 min. we follow the path to the right at the same level for 1/4 hr. more, and then descend to the *Bellevue Inn (unpretending) on the W. slope, about 100 ft. above Ruhla, a spot much frequented in summer.

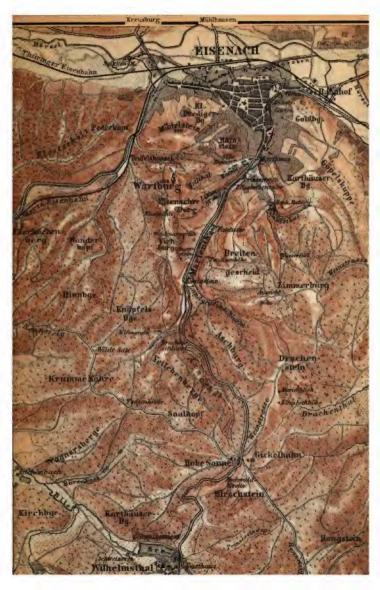

FROM WUTHA (p. 338) TO RUHLA, 5 M., railway in 1/2 hr. (fares 90 or 60 pf.) - The train ascends the valley of the Erbstrom.

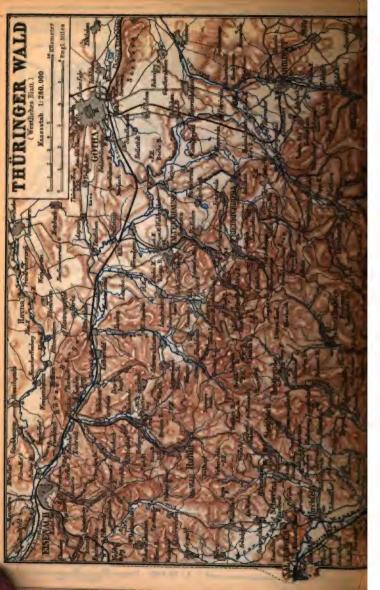

11/4 M. Farnroda.

3 M. Thal (Tannhäuser; Scharfenburg), picturesquely situated at the foot of the ruin-crowned Scharffenberg (view). Lodgings may be procured at the Luisenbad, Rasenmühle, etc. Pleasant walks to the Königshäuschen and to the *Meisenstein (1775 ft.), a porphyry rock 2 M. to the E., rising 213 ft. above the valley, and commanding an admirable panorama.

5 M. Ruhla. - Hotels. CURHAUS, with reading-room; BELLEYUE, see above; ENGELMANN, with garden; KÖLLNER'S HÖTEL GARNI; TRAUBE; SCHWAN, SÄCHSISCHER HOF; ROSE; all good, and situated near each other. — Mineral, pine-cone, and other baths at the Badehaus.

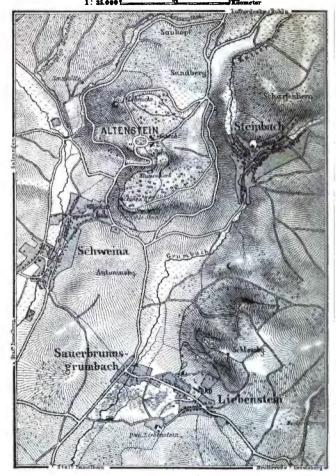

Ruhla, locally known as 'Die Ruhl', a favourite summer-resort, extends to a length of upwards of 2 M. in the valley of the Erb-strom, a brook which divides the town into two parts, of which the E. belongs to Gotha, the W. to Weimar. The chief occupation of the inhabitants (4534) is the manufacture of tobacco-pipes of all kinds, to the value of 300,000t. annually. In the Sarkophag-Platz a monument has been erected to the poet Storch (1803-1881), a native of Ruhla. The village-feast on 2nd August presents a curious scene.

FROM RUHLA TO THE INSELSBERG. Carriages generally make a long circuit by Winterstein and Kabarz. The attractive route for pedestrians occupies 3½ hours. Leave Ruhla by the Rittergasse at the upper (S.) end, and after a few minutes turn to the right and cross the Erbstrom; after 20 min. cross the brook again and regain the high-road in 3½ hr.; cross the latter and proceed in a straight direction to the (40 min.) Drei-Herrenstein; or follow the high-road to the right for about 400 paces and enter the wood to the left by a path leading in 20 min. to the Gerberstein (2307 ft.), a steep hill covered with large blocks of granite; thence back towards the E., along the top of the hill in 12 min. to a grassy clearing, and then to the right in 20 min. to the above-mentioned Drei-Herrenstein (2434 ft.). Of the four paths diverging here, the Rennsteig, that most to the left, is to be selected, and the boundary-stones along the top of the hill followed to the (1½ hr.) summit of the Inselsberg (p. 364).

FROM RUHLA TO ALTENSTEIN $(4^{1}/_{2} M.)$, a good road, through wood. After about $2^{1}/_{4} M.$ a road diverges to the right, to Winterstein (p. 366); following this for a few minutes, we reach a broad path leading to the right across a clearing to the Gerberstein (fine panorama from the rocks). From the clearing a rough path leads to the Luther Monument, erected in 1857, on the spot where Luther's Beech, destroyed by lightning in 1841, formerly stood, and where the Reformer on his return from Worms was subjected to a pretended arrest by his friend the Elector of Saxony (p. 350). The monument is about $^{1}/_{2} M$. from the Altenstein road, with which it is connected directly by a broad carriage-road.

*Schloss Altenstein, a summer residence of the Duke of Saxe-Meiningen, standing on a rocky height on the S.W. slope of the Thuringian Forest, is itself uninteresting, but the park and grounds extending along the precipitous limestone rocks afford beautiful walks. Inn in the court-yard of the château.

FROM ALTENSTEIN TO LIEBENSTEIN (2 M.) a good road. For footpaths, see the Map. At Glücksbrunn (Inn, 'Wangemannsburg'), half-way, is the Altensteiner Höhle, a limestone cavern 160 yds. in length, easily accessible, with a subterranean lake. Illumination in summer, generally on Sundays 11-12 (adm. 1½ m., children 75 pf.; at other times 75 pf.).

Liebenstein. *Bellevue, well fitted up, D. 2½2 m.; *Curhaus, with hydropathic and whey-cure establishment, R. 1½-3 m.; *Müller's Hotel, similar charges; Hötel Aschermann; Kirchner's Hotel, Trink-Allee; Löwe, in the lower part of the village. Dr. Martiny's Hydropathic Establishment. — Private apartments, 9-75 m. per week, are easily obtained.

Visitors' Tax, after the first week, 10-20 m.

Carriages, according to tariff.

Theatre, during the season. — Music 7-9 a. m. and 4-6 p. m, Liebenstein, a village in the duchy of Meiningen, 12 M. to the

S. of Eisenach, and $4^{1}/_{2}$ M. to the E. of stat. Immelborn (where a diligence meets each train, p. 352), is a beautifully-situated and favourite watering-place, possessing chalybeate and other springs.

On the slope at the back of the Curhaus is the Italian Garden, tastefully laid out. Adjoining it stands the simple villa of the Duke of Meiningen. The Erdfall near the Curhaus is a kind of open grotto, fringed with wood. Paths lead hence to the Helle Blick and the Bernhards-Platz, and the new Promenadenweg leads to the Werner's Platz, all fine points of view.

The path to the (20-25 min.) extensive ruins of the *Burg Stein ascends in zigzags to the left past the grotto and the Italian Garden. The castle was restored in 1534, but it was deserted at the close of the 17th cent., and has since fallen to decay. The *View embraces the entire chain of the Rhöngebirge and the W. spurs of the Thuringian Forest from the Dolmar to the Ochsenkopf; then the broad valley of the Werra with its numerous villages, from Gumpelstadt towards the N. as far as Breitungen to the S.

On the outskirts of the wood near the ruin is a monument to the Duchess Ida of Saxe-Weimar. In the wood, 1/4 hr. to the N.E., is a small open space enclosed by rocks on three sides, called the Feisentheater.

From Liebenstein to the Inselsberg there are several different routes. The shortest (guide required, 21/2 m.) leads through the Thüringer Thal to the Rennsteig (p. 367), traversing the forest. The route via the Hohe Klinge, an admirable point of view, 3 M. to the E. of Liebenstein, also requires a guide. A more varied and interesting route is to the S.E. by the high-road to (41/2 M.) Herges, then to the N. through the *Trusenthal (to which a direct footpath also leads), a picturesque, rocky ravine, with an artificial waterfall (Inn), to (1 hr.) the large village of Brotterode (Inselsberger Hof: interesting excursion hence to the Memmelstein, 1 hr. to the S.), at the foot of the Inselsberg. Carriages follow the highroad till they reach a road diverging to the left and leading to the top of the Inselberg. Walkers ascend by the broad steps to the left a few paces beyond the inn (beyond the point where the road to Klein-Schmalkalden and Friedrichroda diverges to the right) to the church and past the E. side of the churchyard-wall, where the middle of the three paths is to be selected. After 10 min. we ascend the stony path to the right; 5 min., at a large bush, the path again divides; we follow that to the left, which crosses the meadow towards the wood and ascends gradually. Several sign-boards on the trees, marked 'Nach dem Gasthaus', are passed on the way.

The *Grosse Inselsberg (3000 ft.; two *Inns), the summit of which consists of granite, commands an extensive panorama, especially towards the N., resembling the view from the Schneekopf (p. 361), but unfortunately too often obscured by clouds and fog.

FROM THE INSELSBERG TO EISENACH, 5 hrs. — We follow the Rennsteig, a very ancient boundary road leading from the Werra to the Saale over the Thuringian Mts. (p. 367), for 11/4 hr.; then turn to the N. to (4/4 hr.)

Ruhla, and proceed thence by the Wachstein and the Hohe Sonne to Eisenach (R. 63) in 3 hours. The Annathal forms a beautiful termination to the walk.

FROM THE INSELSBERG TO REINHARDSBRUNN AND FRIEDRICH-BODA (3 hrs., in the reverse direction 31/2 hrs.) there are several different routes. The carriage-road by the Jagdsberg and the Heubergshaus (2250 ft.), a favourite restaurant, 3 M. to the S.W. of Friedrichroda, cannot be missed. The following route, however, is more interesting for the pedestrian: Just below the inn on the Gotha side of the frontier take the shady footpath diverging to the left from the high-road, then cross the road and proceed in the same direction (finger-posts) to the Wilde Graben; descend along the steep side of the Graben, and cross it at the bench; then across a meadow, commanding a pleasant retrospect of the Inselsberg, to the (1 hr.) Thorstein, affording a view of a deep, fir-clad valley. On the opposite rock is a wooden figure, called the 'Hölzerne Mann'. (A beautiful forest-path leads hence through the Felsenthal and the Lauchagrund to Tabarz and Reinhardsbrunn.) We next ascend to the (1/2 hr.) Aschenbergstein, which affords a picturesque survey, through the Felsenthal, of the dark valleys and of the plain to the N. In 25 min. more we reach the top of the "Uebelberg (2332 ft.). View similar to that from the Inselsberg, with a more picturesque foreground. The path then leads through the Ungeheure Grund and past the Marienglashöhle (p. 366) to the (1 hr.) station of Friedrichrods.

From Fröttstedt to Friedrichroda, $5^{1}/2$ M., railway in 1/2 hr. (fares 1 m. 50, 1 m., 60 pf.). - Fröttstedt, see p. 337. 4 M. Waltershausen (Bahnhofs-Hôtel; Hirsch, unpretending), a small manufacturing town. - The château of Tenneberg, 1 M. from the station, now occupied by public offices, commands a beautiful view. — To the right is Schnepfenthal, where there is an excellent school founded by Salzmann in 1784. The château of Reinhardsbrunn then becomes visible among the trees.

51/2 M. Friedrichroda. — Arrival. The station is 1/2 M. from the town.

on the way to Reinhardsbrunn. Cabs await the arrival of the trains. Hotels. *Waldhaus, R. 11/22 m. per day, 9-27 m. per week, B. 75 pf., D. 19/4, pension 41/2-5 m. per day, with baths; *Schauskburg, *Wadener, R. & A. 21/4 m.; *Herzog Ernst; *Berliner Hop, *pens. '5 m.; *Bellevoe; *HERBST; LANGE; DANIEL'S HÔTEL GARNI; STERN; POTSCH, 'pens.' 4 m. -Lodgings in the town 10-18, on the hills 15-36 m. per week.

Rostaurants. Curhaus; Rathskeller.

Baths. Bester's; Schreiber's, with all kinds of baths.

Visitors' Tax, 2-4 m. per month.

Diligence to Schmalkalden (p. 352), 13 M., once daily. — Omnibus to the Inselsberg viå Tabarz (11/2 m.) daily in summer.

Friedrichroda (1320-1430 ft. above the sea), a small town with 3147 inhab., pleasantly situated among meadows and pineclad hills, is a favourite summer-retreat. In the pretty promenades is a monument to Friedrich Perthes (d. 1843; see p. 346). The environs afford many pleasant excursions.

About 3/4 M. to the N. of the town (1/4 M. from the station, to the right) is the ducal château of Reinhardsbrunn, formerly a Benedictine monastery, and converted in 1827-35 into a château in a highly-ornate mixed style of architecture (circular and pointed). The extensive W. façade is entirely modern. The charming park is open to the public in the absence of the Duke.

About $^{3}/_{4}$ \hat{M} . to the W., on the way to the Ungeheure Grund, is the cottage at the entrance to the Marienglashöhle, a large double grotto; the walls of the inner chamber are covered with crystals, which produce a dazzling effect when illuminated with Bengal fire (fee 50 pf.).

"Walk of 4-5 hrs.: from Friedrichroda by the 'Burgweg' to the Tanzbuche (2520 ft.) and the ducal hunting-lodge of Idgersruh; then through the Felsenthal to the Thorstein (p. 360, and back by Tabars and Reinhardsbrunn. Or by the Gottlob, the 'Spiessberg (tavern), commanding a fine view, the Tanzbuche, and through the Ungeheure Grund, or over the Abisberg (view similar to that from the Uebelberg), to Reinhardsbrunn.

About 3 M. to the N.W. of Friedrichroda, and as far from Waltershausen (p. 365), lie Gross-Tabarz, Klein-Tabarz, and Kabarz, also frequented in summer. The 'Tabarzer Schiesshaus' and 'Tabarzer Jagdhaus' are sometimes visited from Friedrichroda. — About 3 M. to the W. of Kabarz lies Winterstein (Adler; Hirsch), whence a visit may be paid to the picturesque *Sernbachthal. From Winterstein to the Inselsberg 1½ hr. Road to Altenstein, see p. 363.

67. From Gotha through the Thuringian Forest to Hildburghausen.

48 M. Railway to (11 M.) Ohrdruf in 38 min. (fares 1 m. 20, 90 pf.); diligence thence once daily in 83/4 hrs. to (37 M.) Hildburghausen. (Railway by Eisenach and Meiningen, see p. 337 and R. 64; express in 41/4 hrs.)

Gotha, see p. 346. — 4 M. Emleben.

8 M. Georgenthal (Zur Aue, near the station; Schlenk's Inn, Schützenhof Restaurant, with view, both in the village, ⁸/₄ M. from the station) has lately become a favourite watering-place (baths). It possesses the ruins of a Benedictine abbey, destroyed in 1525. About 1½ M. to the N.W. lies Altenberga, where a monument on a height to the left, nicknamed the 'Candelabrum', indicates the spot on which St. Boniface first preached Christianity to the Thuringians in 724.

11 M. Ohrdruf (*Deutscher Kaiser; *Anker; *Weises Ross) is a small agricultural town, with 6022 inhabitants. Numerous pleasant walks in the vicinity. — The road gradually ascends the wooded mountains of Thuringia and traverses a beautiful wooded valley with varying views. At the entrance to the Ohrathal is the deserted iron-foundry of Luisenthal (fitted up for summer-visitors). The villages of Stutzhaus and Schwarzvald are next passed. A little beyond the latter opens the Stutzhäuser Grund on the right; 1½ M. farther the Triefstein is passed, and the ducal shooting-lodge soon becomes visible at the head of the valley.

201/2 M. Oberhof (*Zur Domäne; Thüringer Hof) is a poor village inhabited by wood-cutters, with a ducal shooting-lodge. Oats thrive here in warm seasons only, and potatoes grow but scantily. Fine view from the *Luisenlust (2590 ft.), at the foot of the Schlossbergkopf, 5 min. to the N.

Schlossbergkopf, 5 min. to the N.

A beautiful walk may be taken from Oberhof to the 'Ausgebrannte Stein', % hr. towards the E. — A longer walk, but quite repaying the fatigue, is through the Kanslergrund, by Ober- and Unter-Schönau to Steinbach-Hallenberg (p. 352), about 3 hrs. to the W. of Oberhof (the way back somewhat longer, as it ascends). The formation and the outlines of the peaks to the S. of the valley (Gebrannter Stein, Ruppberg, Gr. Hermannsberg) are most striking, their unique character recurring nowhere else in the Thuringian Forest. — A pleasant way of returning from Oberhof to Ohrdruf is by the carriage-road vià Linne's Ruhe, a fine point of view, and Friedrichsungang, a distance of about 10 M., nearly all through wood.

The road soon prosses the Rennatein or Rennates a very socient

The road soon crosses the Rennsteig, or Rennweg, a very ancient frontier road leading from the Werra to the Saale across the Thuringian Mts., and separating Thuringia from Franconia. Adjacent, at the highest point of the road, is an obelisk commemorating its construction. The road then descends by Zella (*Stadt Gotha) to - 30 M. Suhl (*Deutsches Haus; Krone), the largest town (9937 inhab.) in the Prussian part of the County of Henneberg, which has been famous for several centuries for its manufacture of firearms. The town lies picturesquely in the valley of the Lauter at the base of the Domberg, and is shaded by the precipitous porphyry cliff of the Ottilienstein which commands a fine view (Café on the top). At the foot of the Domberg is a mineral spring, used both for drinking and bathing. - Railway from Suhl to Grimmenthal, see p. 353; to Plaue (for Arnstadt), see p. 360.

391/2 M. Schleusingen (Grüner Baum) was once the residence of the Counts of Henneberg, who became extinct in 1583, and whose ancestral seat was the ancient Bertholdsburg. A chapel by the church contains monuments of the counts, fine knightly figures of the 15th and 16th cent., one of which is pierced with a bullet in memory of a count who fell at the storming of Tiraschka in Piedmont in 1587. The golden hen on the fountain in the market-place belonged to the armorial bearings of the counts. The Schloss is occupied by the district-authorities. Monuments for 1866 and 1870-71. Pine-cone baths have been in use here since 1852 for rheumatism and paralysis. - Diligence from Schleusingen twice daily to (20 M.) Ilmenau (p. 360) and (7 M.) Themar (p. 353).

48 M. Hildburghausen, see p. 353.

68. From Berlin or Halle to Cassel (and Metz) via Nordhausen.

From Berlin to Cassel, 230 M.; express (Silesian Station) in 75/4 hrs. (fares 33 m. 70, 25 m. 10, 17 m. 60 pf.); ordinary trains (Potsdam Station) in 91/2 hrs. (fares 29 m. 40, 22 m. 10, 14 m. 70 pf.)

From Halle to Cassel, 135 M., railway in 41/x61/x hrs. (express-farcs 19 m. 80, 14 m. 70, 10 m. 30 pf.; ordinary 17 m. 50, 13 m. 10, 8 m. 80 pf.).

Berlin, see p. 1. The express-trains use the rails of the 'Stadt-bahn' (p. 1), while the ordinary trains start from the Potsdam station and pass (5½ M.) Lichterfelde, Zehlendorf, and (10 M.) Schlachtensee. The two lines unite at Dreilinden or Wannsee (comp. p. 67), 15 M. from the Silesian station.

18¹/₂ M. Drewitz; 25 M. Michendorf; 30 M. Beelitz; 39 M. Brück. — 47 M. Belzig, an ancient town with the old electoral château of Eisenhardt. At Hagelberg, near Belzig, General von Hirschfeld defeated the French general Girard in 1813. — 55 M. Wiesenburg; 64¹/₂ M. Nedlitz; 70 M. Lindau.

751/2 M. Güterglück, the junction for the Zerbst and Magdeburg line (R.56 b).

The train now crosses the Elbe. 81 M. Barby. — 88 M. Calbe (Sonne), a town on the Scale, with 8521 inhabitants. On the right bank is the old Premonstratensian abbey of Gottesguaden. The station of the Magdeburg and Leipsic railway (p. 325) lies 13/4 M. to the E. — 92 M. Neu-Gattersleben.

98 M. Güsten, the junction of the Cöthen-Aschersleben railway

(p. 325) and of a branch-line to Magdeburg (27 M.; p. 87).

108 M. Sandersleben (Rathskeller; Railway Restaurant), on the right bank of the Wipper, where the Halle and Aschersleben line diverges (R. 70). — 112 M. Hettstädt, with copper-foundries.

118 M. Mansfeld (Goldener Löwe), the capital of the old county of the same name, with 2110 inhab., chiefly employed in the copper-slate quarries of the vicinity. Luther's father was at one time a miner at Mansfeld, whither he removed from Eisleben in 1484. The house he occupied (with 'J.L., 1530' above the door) and the school his son attended are still extant. The castle of the Counts of Mansfeld, one of the oldest families in Germany, which became extinct in the 17th cent., stood upon a height above the town, but was destroyed in the Thirty Years' War. Part of it, including the church, was rebuilt in 1859-60. — 124 M. Riestädt.

Halle, see p. 325. The train crosses the Saale. 11 M. Teut-schenthal; 17 M. Oberröblingen, on the S. bank of the larger of the two salt Mansfeld Lakes.

24 M. Risleben (Goldnes Schiff; Gold. Löwe; Ring), a town with 18,187 inhab., was the birthplace of Luther. The house in which he was born (1483), near the post-office, now a school for poor children, contains various reminiscences of the great Reformer, of whom there is a relief above the door. A bronze Statue of Luther, by Siemering, was unveiled in 1883, on the 400th anniversary of his birth. The Andreaskirche contains the pulpit from which he preached, busts of Luther and Melanchthon, and some interesting monuments of Counts of Mansfeld. Opposite the church is the house in which Luther died, marked by a tablet. The church of St. Peter and St. Paul contains the font in which Luther was baptised, a fragment of his cloak, and his leathern skull-cap. Extensive copper and silver mines in the neighbourhood.

Martin Luther, born at Eisleben in 1483, became an Augustinian monk in 1506, and professor of philosophy at Wittenberg in 1508. In 1510 he visited Rome on business connected with his order, and in 1512 became a doctor of theology. In 1517 he strenuously opposed the sale of indulgences by the Dominican Tetzel, in condemnation of which he affixed his famous 95 Theses to the church-door at Wittenberg. His antagonism to the see of Rome now steadily increased, and in 1520 he was formally excommunicated by the pope. Luther in his turn solemnly renounced all connection with Rome, and publicly burned the bull of excommunicated his doctrines, but was nevertheless declared an outlaw. On his return he was surprised and ostensibly taken prisoner in the Forest of Thuringia, by order of his friend the Elector of Saxony, and carried to the Wartburg, where he passed ten months disguised as ayoung nobleman, and was known as 'Junker Georg'. During this period he worked assiduously at his translation of the Bible, of which, on his release, the New Testament first appeared in 1522 (the entire translation not till 1534). He then returned to Wittenberg, where he as firmly checked the intemperate zeal of the Puritanical image-breakers, as he had opposed Roman Catholic abuses. In 1525 he married Katharina von Bora, who had previously been a nun and escaped from her convent. After a life of unremitting labour as a reformer, divine, translator of the Bible, and even as a poet and musician, he died at Eisleben, 18th Feb. 1546. Luther is justly regarded by the Germans not only as the illustrious founder of their religious liberty, but as the talented linguist and grammarian who developed and first established the use of pure modern German.

We now pass through a tunnel. 33 M. Riestädt, see p. 368. 36½ M. Sangerhausen (Rail. Restaurant, D. 1½ m.; Hôtel Denkewitz), a town with 9136 inhab., mentioned as early as 933. The Utrichskirche is said to have been erected by Lewis 'the Springer' in 1079, in performance of a vow made by him at the Giebichenstein (p. 327). The Jacobskirche contains a fine carved altar.

FROM SANGERHAUSEN TO ERFURT, 43 M., railway in 18/4 hr. (fares 5 m. 60, 4 m. 20, 2 m. 80 pf.). The train crosses the Helm near (3 M.) Oberroblingen and the Unstrut near (9 M.) Artern. 16 M. Heldrungen, with an ancient Schloss surrounded by walls and moats, in which Thomas Münzer, the Anabaptist, was once imprisoned. — 28 M. Sömmerda, the junction of the Gross-Heringen and Straussfurt line (p. 337). 43 M. Erfurt, see p. 344.

41 M. Wallhausen. The line now enters the fertile Goldene Aue, watered by the Helme, and extending to Nordhausen.

47 M. Rossia (Deutscher Kaiser), with a château of Count Stol-berg and a modern Gothic church.

To the S. of Rossla rises the wooded Kyffhäuser (1895 ft.). The route to it leads by Sitendari, beyond which the road from Tillida to Kelbra (see below) is crossed. The last part of the ascent is by a footpath. The ruined castle, which was once occupied by the Hohenstaufen, consists of the Oberburg, with its tower 80 ft. in height, and the Unterburg with the chappel. According to an ancient tradition, the Emp. Frederick Barbarossa slumbers in the bowels of the earth beneath the castle, ready to burst forth as soon as Germany regains her former glory. Inn at the top.

To the N.W. of the Kyffhäuser lies the ruin of Rathenburg (1635 ft.).

To the N.W. of the Kyffhauser lies the ruin of *Rathenburg (1053 ft.). The route to it is by a broad forest-path from the Kyffhauser to the (40 min.) Frankenhausen and Kelbra road; then by the latter to (8 min.) a finger-post on the right, whence a good footpath leads to the castle in 1 hr. (A shorter footpath leads from the point where the carriages stop, \(^{1}_4\) M. from the Kyffhäuser, along the side of the hill to the top in 30-40 min.) Good view from the top (\(^{9}\)In). — At the N.W. base of the Rothenburg lies the small town of (\(^{1}_2\) hr.) Kelbra (\(^{8}\)Sonse), with numerous breweries. Rossla is \(^{2}_4\)/ M. distant by the road. — The castles are most conveniently visited in the reverse direction, either on foot or by carriage. In this case we descend from the Kyffhäuser through beautiful woods in \(^{1}_2\) hr. to — visited in the reverse direction, either on foot or by carriage. In this case we descend from the Kyffhäuser through beautiful woods in 1½ hr. to—Frankenhausen (*Mohr; *Thüringer Hof), a small town with salt-baths and salt-works, yielding 1500 tons annually, from which Sondershausen is 12 M. distant (p. 373; diligence daily). On the road to the latter, near the (3 M.) village of Rottleben, is situated the *Falkenhöhle, sometimes called the Barbarossa or Kyffhäuser Cavern, 330 yds. in length, with subterranean lakes (adm. 50 pf.). Bengal lights may be purchased of the apothecary in the market-place at Frankenstein. The direct route from the Kyffhäuser to the cavern (2 hrs.) diverges to the right from the road, by Prince Schwarzburg's shooting-lodge of Rathsfeld, about halfway between Kelbra and Frankenhausen.

[FROM FRANKENHAUSEN TO FREIBURG ON THE UNSTRUT, a pleasant excursion for 3 days. — 1st Day (afternoon). From Frankenhausen to Oldisburg ('Inn), at the foot of the Sachsenburg and on the Unstrut. — 2nd Day. From Oldisburg to the ruins of the "Sachsenburg (view), and thence to (11/2 hr.) Heldrungen (p. 369) and through wood to the Schmücke, the convent of Donndorf, and (21/2 hrs.) Rossieben ('Inn), a large village in one of the pleasantest parts of the Goldene Aue. The old conventual school here, with 125 pupils, was founded in 1554. — 3rd Day. By the Wendelstein (view) to (11/4 hr.) Memleben, with the partly-restored ruins of a handsome late-Romanesque Benedictine abbey, said to have been founded at the beginning of the 10th cent. by the Empress Matildas, the crypt, with its fine columns, is well-preserved. Then by the Orlas and Alterroda to (2 hrs.) Burgscheidungen, with a roccoo château, and through the vincyards to Laucha and (2 hrs.) Freiburg (p. 336). Active walkers may take the route from Memleben to Burgscheidungen (31/2 hrs.) viā Nebra ("Anker), the "Vitzenburg, Reinadorf" (old. church and convent), and Karsdorf.]

60 M. Nordhausen (*Röm, Kaiser; *Berliner Hof; *Prinz Carl; *Erbprinz; Schiff; Wieg, Isermann, at the station; Restaurants Riemann and Sittig), with 26,198 inhab., situated on the Zorge. on the fertile S. slopes of the Harz Mts. (R. 71), possessing extensive distilleries, cloth-mills, and chicory and chemical manufactories, was frequently the scene of councils and assemblies of princes in the middle ages. The Cathedral is a fine late-Gothic edifice, with carved choir-stalls and a Romanesque crypt. The Church of St. Blasius contains two pictures by Cranach, an Ecce Homo, and the Raising of Lazarus, with Luther and Melanchthon among the mourners. Near the Rathhaus rises a Roland's Column (p. 134). The Museum of Antiquities is open on Thurs., 2-4. The old fortifications have been converted into promenades. Pleasant walk through the Gehege, with its numerous popular restaurants, to the Wilhelmshöhe, with a cafe and view of the Harz. - Route to the Harz Mts., see p. 383; to Erfurt, see R. 70.

65 M. Wolkramshausen; 71 M. Bleicherode; 77 M. Sollstedt;

821/2 M. Gernrode. — 86 M. Leinefelde.

FROM LEHEFELDE TO GOTHA, 42 M., branch-railway in 21/4-21/2 hrs. (5 m. 50, 4 m. 10, 2 m. 80 pt.). Stations Dingeistedt, Dachrieden, and (17 M.) Mühlhausen (Weisser Schwan: König v. Preussen), an ancient town with 28,478 inhab., on the Unstrut. The Gothic Marienkirche, with double asies, and the old stained glass in the church of St. Blasius deserve mention. Pleasant walks to the Popperoder Quelle and the (3 M.) Weisse Haus. The seditious fanatic Thomas Münzer, leader of the Wiedertäufer, or German Anabaptists, was defeated and captured in the vicinity, and executed at Mühlhausen, the principal scene of his enormities. — Next station (23½ M.) Langensalza (Mohr), a busy town of 10,538 inhab. with cloth and other factories. The sulphur-baths of that name are prettily situated on the Unstrut, 1/2 M. dissaiphur-baths of that mane are prefitly situated on the Onstrut, 72 m. unstant. The engagement between the Prussians and the Hanoverians in June, 1866, which terminated in the capitulation of the latter, took place near Merzieben, a village to the N.E. of the town. — 42 M. Gotha, see p. 346. From Leinepelde to Niederschoe (p. 396), 30 M., railway in 1½ hr. Stations Dingelstedt, Källstedt, Geismar, Schwebda, Eschwege (p. 396).

The broad Leinethal is now descended. 96 M. Heiligenstadt (*Preussischer Hof; Eichsfelder Hof), the capital of the former principality of Eichsfeld, on the Leine, with three Gothic churches of the 13th and 14th centuries. Pop. 5411.

1051/2 M. Eichenberg, junction for Göttingen and Bebra (p. 396). Our line descends the Werrathal. - 109 M. Witsenhausen, with vineyards, on the left bank. (Thence by Hundelshausen and Trubenhausen to the Meisner, p. 396, in 3 hrs., most of the way by the highroad.) - 115 M. Hedemunden. The train crosses the river twice.

120 M. Münden, see p. 105. — 135 M. Cassel, see p. 95.

69. From Brunswick to Nordhausen and Erfurt by Börssum (Harzburg, Goslar).

133 M. RAILWAY. To Nordhausen in 42/4 hrs. (fares 11 m. 30, 8 m., 5 m. 10 pf.); thence to Erfurt in 21/2 hrs. (fares 6 m. 60, 4 m. 90, 3 m. 30 pf.). — From Brunswick to Harzburg, 28 M., in 11/2 hr. (fares 3 m. 60, 2 m. 70, 1 m. 80 pf.); to Goslar, 31 M., in 12/4 hr. (4 m. 10, 3 m. 10, 2 m. 10 pf.).

71/2 M. Wolfenbüttel (Kronprinz; Deutscher Kaiser), an old town with 12.131 inhab.. is famous for its library (300,000 vols. and 8000 MSS.), of which Lessing was librarian from 1770 till his death in 1781. Luther's Bible, with annotations in his own handwriting, his drinking-glass, inkstand, portrait by Cranach, etc., are shown here. On the staircase stands a monument to Lessing by Döll. placed here in 1796. The small house adjoining the library is the official residence of the librarian, and was occupied by Lessing. A new library is being built behind the old one. The ducal Château, the Barracks, and the Marienkirche (17th cent.) are among the most conspicuous buildings.

Branch-line from Wolfenbüttel to Schöppenstedt, Jernheim (p. 87), and Oschersleben (p. 375).

Our line crosses the Oker and ascends to Hedwigsburg and (15 M.) Börssum, the junction of the Brunswick-Harzburg and Magdeburg-Soest lines (R. 4), situated at the confluence of the Ilse and Oker.

The HARZBURG LINE follows the course of the Oker, towards the S. Stat. Schladen. At Vienenburg, where it is joined by the Halberstadt line (R. 70), it divides into three branches, one leading to Harsburg (p. 387), another to Goslar (p. 884), and the third to Seesen (see below) and Clausthal (p. 391).

From Börssum to Seesen (*Kronprinz: Wilhelmsbad), 40 M. from Brunswick, see p. 86. The Nordhausen line turns to the S. and skirts the S.W. slopes of the Harz district, where a number of picturesque spots have recently come into favour (comp. Map. p. 374). 48 M. Gittelde.

DILIGENCE four times daily from Gittelde to the small town of (5 M.) Grund (Zum Rathhaus; *Schützenhaus; private apartments), prettily situated and visited for its baths. - On the Iberg is a stalactite cave (key kept by the burgomaster).

52 M. Osterode (Englischer Hof; Spengemann) on the Sose, a town of 6087 inhab., with many picturesque old houses. Fine old Rathhaus. Several monuments in the Marktkirche. Extensive whitelead factory. On the high-road, to the right, about halfway between Osterode and Herzberg, is the Jettenhöhle, a stalactite cavern. Diligence from Osterode to (9 M.) Clausthal (p. 391) daily.

60 M. Hernberg (* Weisses Ross; *Peimann's Hotel), on the Sieber, the junction of the line to Northeim (p. 106), was the residence of the Dukes of Brunswick-Celle down to 1634. Pop. 3486. The old Schloss was founded in 1024.

From Herzberg through the *Steberthal to Andreasberg, see p. 392. -

Branch-line to Northeim, p. 108.

64 M. Scharzfeld is the station for (4 M.; post-omnibus) Lauterberg (*Deutscher Kaiser; Curhaus; Krone; Rathskeller), a small town in the valley of the Oder, with pleasant, wooded environs and a water-cure establishment, and adapted for a prolonged stay.

From Scharzfeld station we may walk to Lauterberg by the (1/2 M.)

Hôtel sum Scharzfels, where we cross the bridge to the right, and ascend the left bank of the Oder, passing the furniture-factory of Oderfeld. We then reach the Philosophengang, a shady walk which leads past the Königshille, an iron-foundry (articles for sale), to Lauterberg.

To the left of the high-road between Scharzfeld and Lauterberg rises the beautifully-situated ruin of Scharzfels, with the Frauenstein. In the beech-wood near it (20 min.) is the Einhornhöhle, or Schiller's Cavers, where the name of the poet, written by himself, is still pointed out. It contains abundant fossil remains of antediluvian animals. The Steinkirche, another grotto, 1/2 M. farther to the W. (difficult to find without a guide), is connected by tradition with St. Boniface, and served as a church for the inhabitants of Scharzfeld down to the middle of last century. - The Hausberg commands an extensive prospect. The view is still finer from the considerably higher *Kummel (easily ascended from Lauterberg in 1 hr.), embracing Lauterberg, the Oderthal, the valleys of the Lutter, and the plain towards the S. berg, the Oderthal, the valleys of the Lutter, and the plain towards the S.—Another excursion from Lauterberg is through the Gerads Lutterthal and the Bärenthal (somewhat steep), or by the new road to Sieber (p. 382) as far as the top of the pass, and thence to the left in 15-20 min. to the summit of the (S-3)/2 hrs.) Grosse Knotlen, commanding another fine view, particularly towards the Brocken.— Excursion by the Scholmpraben to the Königstein and Jagdkopf, and back, 5-6 hrs.— Through the Wissebecker Thal, with the picturesque Wissebecker Teich (Inn, 'pension' 3-5 m.), to the (2 hrs.) 'Bavenakopf (2087 ft.; 'Inn at the top), recently adorned with pleasure-grounds. The ascent is easier from Tettenborn or from Welbarnick vic Scholm (see below) Walkenried via Sachsa (see below).

66 M. Osterhagen. 69 M. Tettenborn, the station for Sachsa (Schützenhaus; Rathskeller). To the right of the railway rises the Römerstein, a group of dolomite rocks resembling a ruined castle. 72 M. Walkenried (Gold, Löwe; Rail, Restaurant), a village with the imposing ruins of a Cistercian abbey of that name, a church of the 13th and 14th cent., and fine early-Gothic cloisters of the same period.

The following is a pleasant walk from Walkenried: follow the high-road to (6 M.) Wieda (Engel; Bonnkessel); then strike to the N.W. across a brook into the forest (finger-post) and ascend the (1 hr.) *Stöberhai (*Inn at the top), the tower on which commands a more extensive view than the Bayenskopf. Thence to the Jagdkopf in 15 min., and through a forest-glade to the Bayenskopf, keeping by the stones marking the frontier between Prussia and Brunswick. Lastly descend through the Wiesenbecker Thal to Lauterberg (p. 372).

The train now passes through a tunnel and reaches (75 M.) Ellrich (*Schwarzer Adler; Schützenhaus; König von Preussen), a small town prettily situated on the Zorge, whence a diligence runs once daily through the Harz Mts. to Wernigerode and Halberstadt, and once daily to Braunlage and Harzburg. Pleasant environs.

Picturesque walk hence by the Burgsberg and the forest of Himmelreich (near which is a fine cavern, discovered in 1868) to (1 hr.) Walken-ried (see above). Another to the E., by the villages of Werna and Appenrode, to Ilfeld (21/4 hrs.; see p. 384).

80 M. Niedersachswerfen (Deutscher Kaiser), the station for Ilfeld (see p. 384). To the right rises the precipitous Kohnstein.

85 M. Nordhausen (p. 370), the junction of this line with the Halle and Cassel railway (R. 68). Carriages are changed here.

Beyond (90 M.) Wolkramshausen the Erfurt line crosses the Wipper. 92 M. Klein-Furra.

97 M. Sondershausen (*Deutsches Haus; *Tanne; Hôtel Mönch), the capital of the principality of Schwarzburg-Sondershausen, charmingly situated in the Wipperthal. Pop. 6110. The Schloss contains a few antiquities, among which is the 'Püsterich', formerly thought to be an idol, 2 ft. in height. The concerts given by the prince's orchestra enjoy a wide reputation. Fine view from the Göldener and from the Possen, the highest point of the Hainleite, 1 hr. to the S. Diligence daily to $(12^{1/2}M.)$ Frankenhausen in $2^{1/2}hrs.$, see p. 370.

101 M. Hohenebra; 114 M. Greussen, with a sugar-refinery; 117 M. Straussfurt (branch-line to Gross-Heringen, see p. 337);

121 M. Gebesee-Ringleben: 124 M. Walschleben.

132 M. Erfurt, N. Station; 133 M. Thuringian Station (p. 344).

70. From Leipsic to Aschersleben and Vienenburg

(Harzburg, Goslar).

99 M. Magdeburg-Halberstadt Railway in 4-51/2 hrs. (fares 12 m. 70, o m. Maddebugg-Halberstadt Kallway in 4-51/2 hrs. (fares 12 m. 70, 9 m. 60, 6 m. 40 pf.). This line is the direct route from Leipsic to Hanover, and passes the N. and E. side of the Harz district (Ballenstedt, Thale, Wernigerode, Harzburg, Goslar, Clausthal).

From Leipsic to (21 M.) Halle, see R. 56 a. — 25 M. Trotha, on the Saale; 30 M. Wallwitz; 34 M. Nauendorf; 40 M. Cönnern. Then across the Saale to (49 M.) Sandersleben, on the Wipper, where our line crosses that from Berlin to Cassel (R. 68).

56 M. Aschersleben (Gold, Löwe; Deutsches Haus), an ancient town with 19,500 inhab., the seat of the princes of the Ascanian line, who became extinct in 1345, is the junction of the line to Bernburg and Cöthen (p. 325).

61 M. Frose, with a fine Romanesque church, probably of the 12th cent., is the junction for (5 M.) Ermsleben and (9 M.) Ballenstedt (p. 378).

The main line passes stations Nachterstedt, Gatersleben, and (72 M.) Wegeleben, where the line to (10 M.) Thale diverges. Stations on the latter Ditfurth, Quedlinburg (p. 378), Neinstedt (Landhaus; Posthorn), and Thale (see p. 380).

The next station on the main line (comp. Map) is ---

Halberstadt, an old town with 31,260 inhab., on the Holzemme, boasting of a considerable trade and important manufactories. The episcopal see, founded as early as the 9th cent., was suppressed at the Peace of Westphalia. The Wood-architecture of the 15th and 16th cent., with its projecting upper stories and rich plastic ornamentation, is still admirably preserved here. The chief of these buildings are in the Market (Pl. C, 3), which is divided by the Rathhaus into the (E.) Fischmarkt and the (W.) Holzmarkt. The Gothic Rathhaus dates from the close of the 14th cent., but was restored in the 16-17th, when it received some Renaissance additions. The Roland (p. 134) here dates from 1433. The old Episcopal Palace opposite, erected in 1596, is now the custom-house (Pl. C. 3.4). The late-Gothic Rathskeller in the Holzmarkt, built in 1461, is the finest wood-structure in the town. In the Fischmarkt are Tetzet's · House of 1529 and the Schubbof, a rich Renaissance building of 1579.

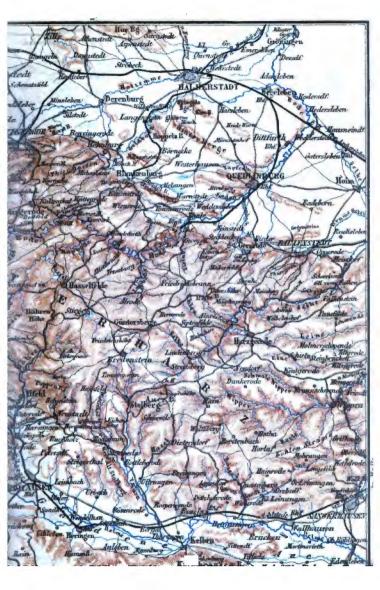

The *Cathedral (St. Stephen's; Pl. C, 3), the most important edifice at Halberstadt, having been destroyed by fire in 1179, was re-erected very slowly during the following centuries. The tower and the facade, still retaining traces of Romanesque articulation and enrichment, are the most ancient part of the edifice. The W. part of the nave was erected in 1252-76, and the E. parts, the transept, and the choir date from the 14th century. The church was consecrated in 1491. The gradual development of the Gothic style is distinctly traceable in the flying buttresses. The church was restored in 1850.

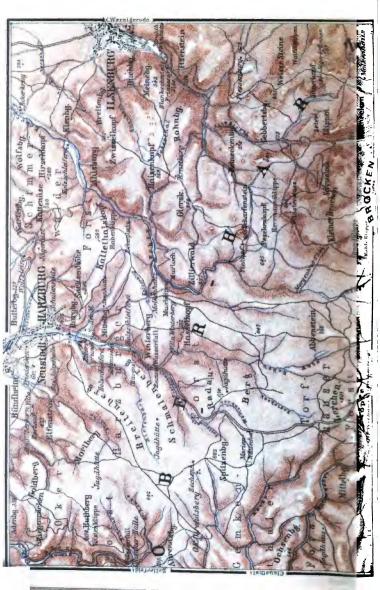

INTERIOR. Bich late-Gothic Screen separating the nave from the choir above it, the Crucified with Mary and John, a Wood-sculpture of the 13th cent.; at the altar an Alabaster-sculpture of the same subject, of about 1500 Then a Crucifixion by Joh. Raphon of Elmbeck, of 1500, as an altarpiece several other pictures, rich sacerdotal robes, and various antiquities.

The extensive Domplatz, planted with trees, is bounded on the W. side by the late-Romanesque Liebfrauenkirche (Pl. B. 3), erected in 1005-1284, and recently restored. A number of figures in relief date from the period of the foundation, and one of the chapels contains a mural painting of the 15th century.

Gleim's collection of portraits of his friends is now preserved in 'Gleim's Stiftungshaus' (Pl. C, 3), Domplatz 31.

On 29th July, 1809, Halberstadt was the scene of a flerce struggle between the Duke of Brunswick with his black dragoons and a Westphalian regiment in the French service, which terminated in the defeat of the latter and their expulsion from the town. Commemorative tablets have been placed in the Kühlinger-Str. and at the Katzenplan.

The Butterberg, 3/4 M. to the N.E., commands a fine view of the town and the Harz Mts. The Spiegelschen Berge, 11/2 M. to the S., the Glüserne Mönch, 2 M. farther, and the Hoppelsberg are also good points of view. The Klus or 'Halberstadt Switzerland', to the S.E. of the Spiegelschen Berge, has some fine pine-woods and picturesque sandstone rocks. Still farther to the S. are the Thekenberge.

FROM HALBERSTADT TO MAGDEBURG, 361/2 M., railway in 11/4-2 hrs. (4 m. 70, 3 m. 60, 2 m. 40 pf.). — 13 M. Oschersleden, a small town on the Bode (p. 371); 231/2 M. Blumenberg (p. 325). 361/2 M. Magdeburg, see p. 87.

Branch-line To Blankenburg (p. 382), 12 M., in 1 hr. (fares 1 m. 60, 1 m. 20, 80 pf.). Stations Spiegelsberge, Langenstein (branch to Derenburg), and (9 M.) Börnecke.

Beyond Halberstadt the train commands views of the slopes of the Harz to the left. From (91 M.) Heudeber-Dannstedt a branchline leads in 25 min, to Wernigerode (p. 389). 96 M. Wasserleben.

99 M. Vienenburg, the junction of lines to Börssum and Hanover (see p. 371), to Ringelheim, Hildesheim, and Brunswick (see p. 86), and to several places in the Harz (see below).

1. To Oker (p. 386) and (8 M.) Goslar (p. 384) in 11/2 hr.

2. To (5 M.) Harzburg (p. 387) in 20 minutes.

3. To (27 M.) Clausthal (p. 391) in 21/2 hrs. At (8 M.) Grauhof the Clausthal line and a branch-line to Goslar (11 M.) diverge from the main-line to Ringelheim and Hildesheim (p. 86). At (12 M.) Langelsheim another branch to Goslar and one to Seesen (p. 372) diverge from the line to Clausthal. The train now ascends the valley of the Innerste to (181/2 M.) Lautenthal, (23 M.) Wildemann (a summer-resort; Hôtel zum Rathhaus; *Bade-Restauration), and (26 M.) Silberhütte, with silver smelting-works. 27 M. Clausthal, see p. 391, 71. The Harz Mountains.

Plan. About ten or twelve days are required to explore the finest Plan. About ten or twelve days are required to explore the linest scenery of the Harz, which is now rendered accessible by a network of railways in every direction. The usual starting-points are Thale, Quedlinburg, Ballenstedt, Blankenburg, Wernigerode, Goslar, or Harzburg on the N., and Nordhausen, Ellirich, Herzberg, or Osterode on the S. side. The following plan, which embraces the most interesting points, may easily be extended or abridged at pleasure, and may be begun or terminated at almost any one of these railway-stations. Ist Day. Ballenstedt, Selkethal, Alexisbad; 2nd. Gernrode, Suderode, Hexentanzplatz; 3rd. Weisser

Hirsch, Treseburg, Bodethal, Bosstrappe; 4th. Blankenburg, Rübeland, Wernigerode; 5th. Steinerne Benne, Brocken; 6th. Ilsethal, Ilsenburg, Burgberg near Harzburg; 7th. Environs of Harzburg, Okerthal, Goslar.— The finest points in the Ober-Harz and S. Harz, may next be visited as follows: 8th Day. Diligence to Clausthal, walk to Andreasberg; 9th. Lauterberg, Ravenskopf, Walkenried, Ellrich; 10th. Ilfeld, Neustadt unter'm Hohnstein, Eichenforst, Stolberg; 11th. By diligence towards the S. to Kelbra (Kyffhäuser, see p. 869).

Carriages. Two-horse about 18 m. per day; tolls extra; fee 2-3 m. per day. One-horse 10-12 m. In many places there is a tariff fixed by the authorities, but in every case a bargain should be made beforehand.

Guides, unnecessary except on the less-frequented routes, 3 m., or without food 4 m. per day, and 75 pf. per Germ. M. (about 15 pf. per Engl. M.)

Inns tolerable, but charges have risen very considerably of late: R. 2-3 m., A. 50 pf., B. 1 m., D. 2-3 m., wine 11/4-11/2 m. per 1/2 bottle. The inferior and less-frequented inns are cheaper.

The Hars, the most northern mountain chain in Germany, 56 M. in length, and 18 M. in width, is an entirely-isolated range, rising abruptly from the plain on every side, especially towards the N.W. and N.E. It is divided into the Oberhars, Unterharz, and Vorharz. The first of these embraces the W. region, with the towns of Lautenthal, Clausthal, and Andreasberg. The N.W. and S.W. slopes, with Goslar, Seesen, and Herz-berg, are called the Vorharz, while the district to the E. of Wernigerode and Ellrich belong to the Unterharz. The Brocken is situated on the boundary between the Ober- and Unter-Harz. The Oberharz is furrowed by numerous dark, wooded ravines. The Unterharz affords a greater variety of picturesque scenery. The principal rock-formation is granite. overlying which are the more recent grauwacke and clay-slate.

The climate of the Harz resembles that of Central Norway. The mean annual temperature is 41° Fahr. The climate of the plateau of the Oberharz is apt to be somewhat inclement, even in summer. In the places along the N. base of the mountains the summer heat is pleasantly tempered by the N.W. wind from the Baltic Sea; and the S. Harz also enjoys an agreeable climate.

I. The Eastern Harz Mts.

a. Quedlinburg.

RAILWAY from Halle (Leipsic, Berlin) viâ Wegeleben to Thale, see R. 70. — Diligence from Quedlinburg to Ballenstedt (8 M.) two or three times daily; to Gernrode (5 M.), Alexisbad, Stolberg, and Nordhausen, once daily (railway in progress). - Post-Omnibus to Suderode, 6 M., several times daily (25 pf.).

Quedlinburg (463 ft. above the sea-level; *Zum Büren, in the Markt-Platz: *Kronprinz: Goldner Ring; Lamm, well spoken of), an old agricultural town with 18,437 inhab., recently increased by the foundation of the suburb of Suderstadt, lies on the Bode, 3 M. to the N.W. of the Harz Mts. It was founded by Henry the Fowler in 929. and became a favourite residence of the German emperors of the Saxon line. Down to 1477 it was a fortified Hanseatic town, after which it was under the protection of the Electors of Brandenburg. It is still an important-looking place with walls, towers, and moats. and is commanded on the W. by the old Schloss and the abbey-church

The Rathhaus in the market, in front of which rises a stone figure of Roland (p. 134), is a late-Gothic structure, with alterations of the 18th century.

The Interior contains an interesting collection of utensils in flint and bronze, weapons, instruments of torture, parchment records (e. g. fragments of the 'Itala', the first Latin translation of the Bible, of the 5th cent., and imperial charters of 1038 and 1134), seals, portraits, etc., and a kind of wooden cage in which the townspeople incarcerated Count Albert of Regenstein during 20 months (1336-38) for having infringed their municipal privileges.

The church of St. Aegidius contains some good old oil-paintings. The modern Gymnasium, or grammar-school, possesses a valuable library of 8000 vols. Following the street in the corner of the market-place, obliquely opposite the Bär Hotel and the Rathaus, and afterwards turning to the left, we cross the Finkenheerd, a small Platz where Henry the Fowler is said to have received the deputation announcing his election to the imperial dignity, and reach the Schloss-Platz, near the Schlossberg. The house in which Klopstock was born (in 1724), in this Platz, has a jutting story supported by two wooden columns. To the right is the dwelling of the sacristan of the Schlosskirche, to whom application may now be made.

The Schloss, situated on a lofty sandstone rock, was once the seat of the abbesses of the secular and independent convent of Quedlinburg, which was founded by Otho the Great in 937 and afterwards attained to great prosperity, but declined in importance after it embraced the Reformation in 1539, and was at length suppressed in 1803. Countess Aurora of Königsmark, the mistress of Augustus the Strong of Saxony, and mother of Marshal Saxe, was abbess of Quedlinburg in 1704-18, and on her death in 1728 was interred in the abbey-church. Adjacent to the Schloss is the —

*Abbey Church, or Schlosskirche, an edifice of great importance in the history of art. The body of the church was erected in 1021, the choir was altered in the 14th cent., and the whole restored in 1862.

The Caypr, which was the original church, founded in the 10th cent., is built over an ancient mortuary chapel containing the tombs of Henry I. (d. 936), his wife Matilda, and his grand-daughter Matilda, the first abbess. The treasury contains objects of artistic and historical value, chiefly of the 10th cent., such as reliquaries, books of the Gospels, an episcopal crozier, the beard-comb of Henry I. and one of the 'water-pots of Cana'.

Fine view of the town and environs from the terrace, which is shown by the castellan.

Opposite the Schlossberg rises the Münzenberg, with the ruins of the convent of St. Mary. — The Brühl, a pleasant park to the S.W. of the town, not far from the Schlossberg, contains monuments to Klopstock and the geographer Ritter (born here in 1779). — At a neighbouring farm is the crypt of the ancient monastery of Wipertus, which perhaps originally belonged to the palace of Henry I., and is the most ancient relic of Christian architecture in Saxony.

Quedlinburg is noted for its nurseries and cloth-factories.

b. Selkethal. Mägdesprung. Alexisbad. Victorshöhe. Gernrode. Suderode. Lauenburg.

Two Days. 1st. From Ballenstedt to the Falken Inn 1½ hr., visit to the Falkenstein 1½, to the Selkemühle 2½, Mägdesprung 1½, Alexisbad 1 hr.—2nd. To the Victorshöhe 1½, Gernrode 1½, Suderode ¼, Lauenburg 1, Neinstedt ½, Thale or Hexentanzplatz 1-1½ hr.

Ballenstedt (689 ft. above the sea-level; *Grosser Gasthof, at the entrance to the Schlossgarten; *Stadt Bernburg, in the Allee; Weisser Schwan, Germania, Deutsches Haus in the town), the terminus of the railway in this direction (p. 374), a prettily-situated town with 4764 inhab., was formerly the residence of the Duke of Anhalt-Bernburg. A long avenue leads to the Schloss (generally closed) on a hill. Beautiful Schlosspark, with fine views of the mountains: also a deer-park containing stags and wild boars. On the N. side are the Gegensteine, a fragment of the 'Devil's Wall'.

A finger-post at the S, end of the town indicates the route to the right to the Selkemühle (see below), and that to the left to Opperode and Meisdorf. The latter is the high-road to the Selkethal, but pedestrians follow it as far only as (1/4 M.) the first road diverging to the right, on which, a little way farther, is a direction-post on the left indicating the way to the (1/2 hr.) forester's house of Kohlenschacht (Inn). The same road next leads through the wood to the (1/2 hr.) inn *Zum Falken (706 ft.) in the Selkethal, at the foot of the Falkenstein.

A good road ascends the picturesque *Selkethal to the (5 M.) Selkemühle, or Leimufermühle (*Zur Burg Anhalt, unpretending), where it unites with the above-mentioned direct road from Ballenstedt. On the hill, 1/2 hr. to the S., are the scanty ruins of the Burg Anhalt. The road next leads to $(4^{1}/2 \text{ M.})$ Mägdesprung; but a slight digression to the *Meiseberg, with a forester's house (restaurant) and fine view, 1/2 hr. from the Selkemühle, is recommended; thence to Mägdesprung 11/4 hr.

The foundries of Mägdesprung (968 ft.; *Inn, R. & A. 2 m.) are picturesquely placed at the junction of the Selkethal road with that from Ballenstedt to Stolberg. An obelisk on an eminence is to the memory of a Prince of Anhalt who founded the iron-works. Tasteful articles in cast iron may be purchased at the foundries. The place owes its name ('the maiden's leap') to the tradition that a giantess once sprang across the valley here, leaving her footprints, the Mägdetrappe, on the height behind the inn. An iron cross in the vicinity is to the memory of Duke Alexius (d. 1834). - Gernrode (see below) is 41/2 M. distant.

About 2 M. farther up the attractive Selkethal lies the chalybeate Alexisbad (1034 ft.; Hôtel Alexisbad & Goldene Rose; Hôtel-Pens. zur Klostermühle, R. 11/2-2 m., D. 11/2 m., 'pension' 4-6 m.; lodgings 6-60 m. per week), surrounded with pleasure-grounds.

The direct road from Alexisbad to (12 M.) Stolberg (p. 384) is by Strassberg and the Josephshöhe (p. 384). The high-road leads by Harzgerode (Stadt Bernburg), a small town with an old Schloss, on the hill, 2 M. to the E. of Alexisbad. (The diligence may be taken as far as the turnpike at the Auerberg, and then the Josephshöhe crossed on foot.)

The path to the Victorshöhe quits the road to the left, a few min. below the baths, and leads through wood to the $(1^1/4 \text{ hr.})$ Güntersberge and Gernrode road, which we follow for 1/4 M. towards the right, and then quit by a path leading to the left to the (1/4 hr.) *Victorshöhe (1952 ft.), the summit of the Ramberg, near which are several huge blocks of granite called the Teufelsmühle. (Inn at the forester's house.) Extensive prospect from the wooden tower, more picturesque than from the Brocken.

A stone post by the Teufelsmühle indicates the descent to the right to Friedrichsbrunnen, Alexisbad, Tanzplatz, Treseburg, and Thale; to the left to the Sternhaus, Mägdesprung, and Gernrode. The latter leads in 5 min. to the above-mentioned road from Güntersberge, which leads past the Stubenberg (see below) to (41/2 M.) Gernrode.

Gernrode (729 ft.; *Inn on the Stubenbery, see below; Deutsches Haus and Deutscher Kaiser in the town; private apartments easily procurable), a town with 2444 inhab., charmingly situated on the slope of the Stubenberg, 4½ M. from Quedlinburg, and 3¾ M. from Ballenstedt, attracts numerous visitors in summer. The Romanesque *Abbey Church of the 10th cent., with its two round W. towers, recently restored, is a picturesque feature in the landscape. The tomb of the founder St. Gero, Margrave of Lusatia, was restored in 1519. Romanesque cloisters on the S. side of the church partly preserved.

The *Stubenberg, or Stufenberg (922 ft.; Inn at the top), which rises above the town and may be ascended in 1/4 hr., affords one of the most picturesque views on this side of the Harz Mts.

A few hundred yards to the W. of Gernrode lies -

Suderode (493 ft.; Heene's Curhaus, at the end of the village next to Gernrode; *Michaelis; *Mohr; *Goldene Weintraube, unpretending; Omnibus to Quedlinburg, see p. 376), formerly an insignificant village, which has recently become a favourite watering-place on account of its salt-springs and its sheltered situation, and extends with its villas (in most of which apartments are let) and gardens for upwards of a mile along the wooded slope of the hill. Pretty walks to the Preussen-Platz, the Salsteine, the Beringer Quelle, and the Tempel at the W. end of the village.

Several routes lead hence to Stecklenberg and the Lauenburg. Pedestrians may ascend the pretty forest-path by the Hôtel Michaelis, which leads viâ the Neue Schenke, a forester's house, direct to the Lauenburg in 1 hr., or they may take that which passes the Schulzenamt at Suderode, skirts the wood to the left (view of Quedlinburg to the right), crosses the Quedlinburg road after 10 min., and then re-enters the wood. At the entrance to the village of (1/2 hr.) Stecklenberg (Palm's Inn), a stone post indicates the ascent to the left, passing the Stecklenburg, to the (25 min.) *Lauenburg (1149 ft.), a ruined castle with a tower commanding a fine view (*Inn, R. 11/2 m.). A good road to the N. leads from Stecklenberg to (11/2 M.) Neinstedt (p. 374), the nearest railway-station. — To Thate (see below), 31/2 M.; several finger-posts. The route by the Georgabone (p. 382) to the Hexentanzplats (p. 382) is picturesque.

c. Bodethal. Rosstrappe. Hexentanaplatz. Treseburg.

One Day. From Thale in the Bodethal ascend to the Teufelsbrücke, 1/2 hr.; ascend the Rosstrappe, 20 min.; inn, 10 min.; by the Herzogshöhe and Wilhelmsblick to Treseburg 13/4 hr.; by the Weisse Hirsch to the Hexentanzplatz 21/2 hrs.; back to the station 3/4 hr. — Or from the station to the Tansplatz 11/4 hr., Weisse Hirsch and Treseburg 13/4 hr. (Wilhelmsblick and back 3/4-1 hr.), through the Bodethal to the Jungfernbrücke 2 hrs.; then retrace steps for a few min. and ascend the Rossirappe, 1/2 hr.; to the station 40 minutes. — Guide unnecessary, but desirable from Treseburg to the Weisse Hirsch and Tanzplatz (1-11/2 m.). — Comp. the marginal map on the Map at p. 874.

The rocky *Valley of the Bode, the finest point in the Harz Mts... presents a strikingly wild and picturesque scene, to which if possible more than a single day should be devoted.

At the entrance to the valley lies Bahnhof Thale (633 ft.), near which a number of modern villas have sprung up. To the right rise the precipitous rocks of the Rosstrappe (p. 381); to the left is the Hexentanzplatz (p. 382).

Hotels. "ZERIPFUND, a large house opposite the station; "WALDKATER, pleasantly situated in the Bodethal, 1/2 M. from the station; "Hubertus-Bad, a salt-bath with pension, on an island in the Bode, 1/4 M. from the station, 'pension' 4-5 m. a day for a long stay; Zuz Blechhütter, at the N. end of the Blechhütte; Forsthaus; Zur Königsruhe, 1/2 M. above the Waldkater; the last three unpretending. — Inns on the Rosstrappe and Hexentansplatz, see pp. 381, 382.

Bestaurants at the hotels; at the Actionbranersi, 1/4 M. from the station (wood been). Register Restaurants tion (good beer); Railway Restaurant.

Baths below the Blechhütte.

From Thale to Treseburg through the Bodethal. paces to the right of the station at Thale lies the Blechhütte, a foundry on the right bank of the Bode. The road to the left leads past the Actienbrauerei to the (3/4 M.) Waldkater Inn (696 ft.; which may also be reached by a pleasant path from the Hubertusbad on the left bank). A very steep and fatiguing path with steps ascends hence to the Hexentanzplatz (p. 382). We follow the road through the picturesque Bodethal to the (1/2 M.) Jungfernbrücke, whence a steep and stony path ascends to the left, via the Hirschgrund and the Lavières-Höhe to the (3/4 hr.) Hexentanzplatz. On the left bank is the prettily-situated inn Zur Königsruhe, beyond which the road is carried round the foot of the cliffs by two wooden galleries. Beyond the second is the Schurre, a steep stony slope over which a zigzag path ascends to the (1/2 hr.) Rosstrappe with its inn. A few paces farther on in the valley is the Teufelsbrücke at the entrance to the *Bodekessel, a wild basin of granite rocks through which the stream is precipitated. The road then leads through beautiful woods to - Treschurg (916 ft.; *Weisser Hirsch, Wilhelmsblick, belonging to the same owner, R. 2 m., A. 50 pf.; Deutsches Haus; Haberland, well spoken of), a village 71/2 M. from Thale, beautifully situated at the confluence of the Bode and the Lupbode, on a rocky eminence on which the castle of that name formerly stood. A road between the inns leads to the (11/9 M.) Wilhelmsblick (view of the Bodethal), and through a short tunnel to the high-road which leads to the N. to Blankenburg, and to the E. to the Rosstrappe. - An eminence opposite Treseburg, called the *Weisse Hirsch, commands a charming view of the village and environs. A steep footpath to it ascends to the left, a short way beyond the bridge; a longer route through the Tiefenbachthal quits the road farther on (comp.

A pretty footpath ascends the Bodethal from Treseburg to (21/4 M.) Altenbrack (* Weisses Ross, unpretending), a mining-village with a small sulphureous spring.

Todienrode (refreshments) to (1 hr.) Wienrode.

FROM TRESEBURG TO HASSELFELDE, 71/2 M. The footpath turns to the right immediately beyond the bridge over the Bode, passes (5 min.) a deer-fence, and leads through beautiful beech-woods. In about 1 hr. we reach a stone finger-post, indicating the way to Stiege on the left and Hassel-felde (König von Schweden) on the right. From Hasselfelde through the pleasant Bährenthal to Ilfeld (p. 384), a walk of 12 M.

FROM THALE TO THE ROSSTRAPPE. The above route from Thale to the Rosstrappe by the Bodethal and the Schurre may be taken, or the direct path (1hr.) may be preferred. In the latter case we pass between the buildings of the Blechhütte (p. 380) to the bridge across the Bode, beyond which we turn to the right, and then, near a second bridge (5 min.), ascend by a somewhat steep path to the (1/2 hr.) Gasthaus zur Rosstrappe, near which is the Bülowshöhe.

The *Rosstrappe (1317 ft.), 10 min. from the inn, is a granite rock projecting like a bastion into the valley of the Bode, and rising precipitously to a height of 650 ft. above the stream. It commands an imposing view of the wild Bodethal and the distant plain as far as Quedlinburg. The name ('horse's hoof-print') is derived from an impression in the rock resembling a gigantic hoof, left there by the horse of a princess, who, when pursued by a giant, is said to have leaped across the valley at this point. The men or boys here awaken the echoes of the Bodethal by pistol-shots and the blasts of a trumpet (25 pf.). To the right is the Schurre (p. 380).

Proceeding to the N.E. of the Bosstrappe Inn, we may descend in 1/4 hr. to the high-road from Thale, which leads by the Herzogshöhe (view) and the Wilhelmsblick (see above) to (b M.) Treseburg (see above).

FROM THALE TO THE HEXENTANZPLATZ (1 hr.). We cross the Bodethal road near the brewery (p. 380) and follow a path skirting the wood, and leading in a few minutes to the small bridge over the Steinback. The path ascending in windings to the Hexentanz-platz diverges to the right before the bridge is reached. The carriage-road diverges at the top of the hill from the high-road ascending the Steinbackthal to Friedrichsbrunn.

The *Hexentansplats (1526 ft.; Hotel) is a rocky plateau opposite the Rosstrappe, and 210 ft. higher, commanding a similar, and perhaps still more striking view. To the left in the distance rises the Brocken. In the vicinity are several other fine points of view.

FROM THE HEXANTANZILATE TO TRESERURE by the Weisse Hirsch. We follow the path along the slope to the right, pass through a gate, and turning to the right reach the (10 min.) Laviereshôhe, a point of view opposite the Schurre (p. 380). We then turn slightly to the left, and reach the high-road leading to Treeeburg. The latter soon passes (% hr. from the Tanzplatz) a monument to the forester Pfeil, a recumbent stag surrounded by six fine beeches. About % M. farther on, the road bends to the left and a forest-path leads to the right. In the middle is the path to the (5 min.) Weisse Hirsch (p. 381), whence we reach Treseburg in 10 minutes. From Thale To Suderdone (p. 379) and Gerradone (p. 379), 6 m., a pleasant road, passing (4 m.) Stecklenberg, etc. (comp. p. 379). — The circuit by the Georgiahohe, 1 hr. from Thale, and thence to (1½ hr.) Stecklenberg is recommended (guide desirable, 1-1½ m.). At the junction of the road from the station with that from the village of Thale a direction-post indicates the forest-path to the "Georgiahohe, the tower on which

FROM THALE TO SUDERODE (p. 379) AND GERNRODE (p. 379), 6 M., a pleasant road, passing (4 M.) Stecklenberg, etc. (comp. p. 379). — The circuit by the Georgshôhe, 1 hr. from Thale, and thence to (1½ hr.) Stecklenberg is recommended (guide desirable, 1-1½ m.). At the junction of the road from the station with that from the village of Thale a direction-post indicates the forest-path to the "Georgabôhe, the tower on which commands a beautiful survey of the plain. A footpath descends hence through the wood into the valley. After 20 min. we reach a carriage-road, we then pass (½ M.) a cross-way with a finger-post near a plaster-mill, and reach Stecklenberg ½ M. farther on. — From the Hexentanzplatz to the Georgshôhe 1 hr.: follow the road descending from the inn to the S.K. to the high-road, cross the latter, and ascend a road to the left.

d. Blankenburg. Rübeland. Elbingerode.

Blankenburg, Regenstein, and the Ziegenkopf 4-5 hrs., thence to Bübeland 13/4 hr., Baumannshöhle 11/2 hr.; from Rübeland to Elbingerode 1 hr. (From Elbingerode to the Brocken 8 hrs., see p. 390.) — The part of the route between Blankenburg and Elend (p. 383) is not sufficiently attractive to repay the pedestrian.

Blankenburg (749 ft.; *Weisser Adler, R. 2 m.; *Krone; Gebirgs-Hôtel; Engel; Deutsches Haus; Forsthaus, unpretending; Inn on the Ziegenkopf, see below), a town with 5117 inhab., a favourite summer-resort, and connected with Halberstadt by a branch-railway (p. 375), is picturesquely situated on the slope of the hills and commanded by the lofty ducal Schloss. The approach to the latter passes the handsome old Rathhaus, into which five balls are built to commemorate the bombardment by Wallenstein during the Thirty Years' War. The Schloss (1097 ft.), which is occupied by the duke in the shooting-season, contains reminiscences of the empress Maria Theresa, who spent her early childhood here, pictures, and various other objects of interest (castellan 1 m.; admission to the deer-park 50 pf.). On the Schnappelnberg stands a monument to those who fell in 1870-71.

To the N. of Blankenburg (*/4 hr.) rises the *Regenstein, or Reinstein, a precipitous sandstone cliff, 240 ft. above the plain, on the E. side of which a castle was erected by Emp. Henry the Fowler in 919, and afterwards considerably strengthened. In the Thirty Years' War it was captured by Wallenstein, and in 1670 was taken possession of by the Elector of Brandenburg as a forfeited fief of Halberstadt. The works were dismantled by Frederick the Great. Little of it now remains except the vaults and embrasures hewn in the rocks. Entrance by a rock-hewn gateway on and embrasives newn in the rocks. Entrance by a rock-newn gateway on the E. side. Admirable view, especially towards Blankenburg (tavern at the top). — If time permit, the traveller may return by (1/2 hr.) Heimburg (Deutsches Haus), a village with a castle (view), and the monastery of Michaelstein (Zur Waldmühle), 2 M. to the N. of Blankenburg. — The Heidelberg, or Teufelsmauer (p. 381), is 11/2 M. to the S. of Blankenburg. FROM BLANKENBURG TO THE ROSSTRAPPE. The road to Tressburg is followed as far as (2 M.) Wienrode, a little beyond which an enclosure is crossed; at a finger-post the wood is entered to the left, and in 11/4 hr. the Rosstrappe (p. 381) is reached.

FROM BLANKENBURG TO RUBBLAND, 6 M. The road should be followed for about a mile, and then quitted by a path to the right leading to the (10 min.) *Ziegenkopf (1408 ft.; Inn), an eminence commanding an admirable view of Blankenburg, the Regenstein, the rocky pinnacles of the Teufelsmauer, and the extensive plain. The road then ascends to (2 M.) the village of Hüttenrode (1598 ft.: Tanne), turns to the right, and gradually descends. At the (11/2 M.) Marmormühle it reaches the picturesque wooded and rocky valley of the Bode, which it ascends to (11/2 M.) — Rübeland (1290 ft.; Goldner Löwe; Grüne Tanne), a Brunswick village with foundries, lying in the valley of the Bode. On the left bank of the stream, 150 ft. above it, is the Baumannshöhle (ascent near the two inns), a stalactite cavern which has been known for centuries. Opposite to it, on the right bank, is the smaller Bielshöhle, where the stalactites are finer. A visit to one of these occupies an hour (1-2 pers. 21/2 m., 3 pers. 23/4 m., each additional person 40 pf. more, Bengal lights included). A third cavern, the Sechserlinghöhle, was discovered a few years ago. On a precipitous rock opposite the Tanne Inn rises the ruin of Birkenfeld.

At Rübeland the road quits the valley of the Bode and ascends a mill-valley with curious rock-formations to (21/2 M.) Elbingerode (1536 ft.; *Blauer Engel; Goldner Adler), an important iron-mining town with 2228 inhabitants. Modern Gothic church. Most travellers begin the ascent of the Brocken either here or at Elend (Deutsche Eiche), 6 M. farther (diligence).

From Elbingerode to Wernigerode (p. 889), 61/2 M., a diligence also runs. Pedestrians should walk over the Buchenberg (p. 390), by a path to the left, diverging 1/2 M. from Elbingerode.

e. Ilfeld. Neustadt unter'm Hohnstein. Stolberg. Josephshöhe.

From Nieder-Sachswerfen to Ilfeld 8 M., Neustadt 81/2 M., by Eichenforst to Stolberg 1/2 hr., by the Josephshöhe to Alexisbad 4 hrs.

From Nordhausen (p. 370) to Stolberg 13 M. (diligence twice daily). The high-road, which at first affords fine views of the Harz on the right and the Goldene Aue and the Kyffhäuser on the left, unites near Rottleberode with that from Rossla (p. 369), and then ascends the picturesque Tyrathal towards the N.

Pedestrians should proceed from station Nieder-Sachswerfen (p. 373) to (3 M.) Hfeld (837 ft.; Goldne Krone), a village at the entrance to the romantic Behrethal (*Zur Tanne). The Præmonstratensian abbey founded here by Count Hohnstein in 1196 was converted in 1544 into a school which still enjoys a high repute. A road to the W. leads hence by Osterode to (3½ M.) the village of Neustadt unter'm Hohnstein (860 ft.; Bathskeller; Schmidt's Hotel; Amtsschenke), overshadowed by the ruins of the castle of Hohnstein (2040 ft.), the seat of the counts of that name, who became extinct in 1693. A hydropathic establishment was opened here in 1870. A footpath leads hence (guide necessary) by the lofty ruin of Ebersburg (restaurant) to the (3½ hrs.) Eichenforst shooting-lodge (view; refreshments) and (1 hr.)—

Stolberg (945 ft.; *Freitag's Hotel; *Eberhardt, unpretending), a place with many antiquated houses, charmingly situated in the valley of the Tyrabach, and frequently visited as summer-quarters, especially since the opening of the chalybeate baths in 1870. On an eminence rises the Château of Count Stolberg, the proprietor of the district, with a valuable library and armoury, surrounded with pleasure-grounds. Pleasing view from the Thiergarten.

FROM STOLBERG TO HARZORBODE AND ALEXISBAD, 131/2 M., diligence daily. Pedestrians should quit the road, 2 M. from Stolberg, by a path leading to the right to the (1/2 hr.) summit of the Auerberg, called the *Josephshöhe (1976 ft.; Inn), the wooden tower on which (100 ft. in height) commands a fine panorama. Thence by Strassberg and the Victor-Friedrichs-Silberhütte, and down the Selkethal to (3 hrs.) Alexisbad (p. 378).

Goslar (844 ft.), an ancient town with 10,791 inhab., lies on the Gose, on the N. side of the Harz, at the foot of the metalliferous Rammelsberg (p. 386). The numerous towers, the partly-preserved ramparts, and the quaint old houses with wood-carving impart an air of importance to the place.

Goslar was founded at the beginning of the 10th cent. and soon acquired importance in consequence of the discovery of valuable silver-mines in the vicinity (p. 386). It became a favourite residence of the Saxon and Salic emperors, one of whose most extensive palaces was situated here. The attachment of the citizens to Henry IV., who was born at Goslar in 1050, involved the town in the misfortunes of that monarch. In 1188 the diet was held at Goslar under Frederick Barbarossa at which Henry the Lion was condemned to three years' exile. In 1204 the town, which adhered steadfastly to the Hohenstaufen, was taken and destroyed by Otho IV., the rival of Philip. After a slow recovery from this disaster, it became a member of the Hanseatic League, and prospered about the year 1500. In 1802 it lost its independence for the first time and was annexed to Prussia. From 1816 to 1866 it belonged to Hanover.

Near the station, to the left, is the handsome Romanesque church of the monastery of Neuwerk, of the close of the 12th cent.; interesting choir; picture of the 13th cent, in the apse. Opposite to it rises the Paulsthurm, a remnant of the old fortifications. The street between these leads to the antiquated *Market, with the Rathhaus and Kaiserworth, and adorned with a large fountain-basin in metal, said to date from the 12th century.

The Rathhaus, a simple Gothic edifice of the 15th cent., with an arcade beneath (entrance by the steps, round the corner to the left; visitors ring in the passage), contains a hall adorned about the year 1500 with *Paintings by Wohlgemuth. Interesting old books of the Gospels, charters, instruments of torture, and other curiosities are also shown. A small chapel adjacent contains a richly-decorated tankard of 1407, a Gothic goblet of 1519, and other articles in silver. Near the staircase is the 'Beisskatze', a kind of cage in which shrews used to be incarcerated.

The Kaiserworth, formerly a guild-house, now an inn, with an arcade below, dates from 1494, and is adorned with statues of eight German emperors. Passing between the Rathhaus and the Kaiserworth, we reach the Marktkirche, a late-Romanesque church, with Gothic choir and aisle subsequently added. The library of the church contains MSS, of Luther and others. The Brustluch, opposite the W. portal of the church, a curious old house of the 16th cent.. restored in 1870, is adorned with satirical wood-carvings.

From the Marktkirche a street leads to the left (S.) to a large open space where some venerable ruins still bear testimony to the ancient grandeur of Goslar.

The so-called *Domcapelle was once the vestibule of the N. portal of a celebrated cathedral of St. Simon and St. Jude, which was founded by Henry III. in 1039, and taken down in 1820.

Over the PORTAL are figures of Emp. Conrad II., his wife Gisela, and SS. Matthew, Simeon, and Jude. The richly-sculptured column by the portal, executed, according to the inscription, by Hartmann, is worthy of particular notice. The Gorgon's head on the capital is a reminiscence of the ancient use of such heads to ward off evil influences.

In the Interior are several interesting relics of the decorations of the In the INTERIOR are several interesting relics of the decorations of the ancient cathedral, sculptures, tombstones, including that of the Empress Gisela, and various curiosities, among which may be mentioned the 'Krodo Altar', an oblong box made of plates of brass, borne by four stooping figures, and containing numerous round apertures. It was formerly supposed to be an altar of the idol Krodo, but was probably a reliquary, adorned with precious stones. The chapel is open the whole day in summer. Fee for 1-2 pers. 50, 3-4 pers. 75, 5-6 pers. 1 m.

On an eminence to the right rises the *KAISERPFALZ, the oldest secular edifice in Germany, founded by Henry II. and extended by Henry III. (1039-56). It consists of the Saalbau and the chapel of St. Ulrich, connected by a wing. The upper floor of the Saalbau is occupied by the spacious imperial hall $(5\hat{6})$ yds. long, 17 yds. wide, 35 ft. high), which looks towards the Platz, with seven massive round-arched windows, and is approached by a broad flight of steps. The Chapel of St. Ulrich, a double chapel in the form of a Greek cross. dating from the close of the 11th cent., was destined for the domestic worship of the imperial court. The palace was burned down in 1289 and afterwards rebuilt, but disfigured by alterations and additions. The exterior was judiciously restored in 1879. and the interior is now undergoing the same process. - Proceeding hence to the right through the Klusthor, and skirting the railing, we reach the (1/2 M.) Felsenkeller, where Goslar 'Gose'. a peculiar kind of beer, may be tried.

Near the end of the Breiten-Strasse, on the right, is *Herr Fenkner's Museum of antiquities and pictures, to which strangers are admitted. The street is terminated by the Breitenthor, an old fortified gate. Hence we follow the ramparts towards the W. to the Zwinger, a round tower, now containing a tavern, and commanding a fine survey of the town.

The Farbensumpfe, ponds fed by streams from the Rammelsberg, yield the ochre dye of this neighbourhood. A grotto and chapel hewn in the the ochre dye of this neighbourhood. A grotto and chapel newn in the Kim, an isolated sandstone rock in the vicinity, are said to have been founded by Agnes (d. 1077), wife of Emp. Henry III.

The Rammelsberg (2040 ft. above the sea-level), which rises above the town on the S., has for eight centuries yielded gold (5-6 lbs. per annum only), silver (25 cwt. per annum), copper, lead, zinc, sulphur, vitriol, and alum, a variety of minerals seldom found within such narrow limits. and aum, a variety of minerals seatom round within such marrow limits. The mountain is honey-combed with shafts and galleries in every direction, but the output of the mines is much less considerable than formerly. The mines, which may be explored even by ladies, are shown daily except Sundays. The whole expedition takes 2½-3 hrs.

On the road to Harzburg, 3 M. to the W. of Goslar, lies the village and railway-station of Oker (679 ft.; Lüer's Inn), which possesses important foundries, belonging half to Brunswick and half to Prussia. It lies at the entrance to the wild *Okerthal, the road ascending which affords picturesque views of the precipitous cliffs. The road crosses the Oker by the (6 M.) Romkerbrücke (*Hôtel Romkerhalle, R. from $1^{1}/2$, 'pension' from $4^{1}/2$ m.; omnibus from Oker), where there is an artificial waterfall. A pleasant path leads hence vià Kästenklippe and Elfenstein (p. 381) to (71/2 M.) Harzburg. The high-road goes on to (6 M.) Clausthal (p. 391). A finger-post to the left, 1 M. from the inn, indicates the route across a bridge to the (3/4 hr.) Ahrendsberger Klippen (p. 388). Beyond Ober-Schulenberg, about 3 M. from Romkerhalle, a forest-path, shorter than the road, diverges on the left to Clausthal.

Harzburg, or Newstadt-Harzburg (771 ft.), the terminus of the railway (p. 371) in this direction, at the entrance to the Radauthal, consists of the villages of Neustadt, Bundheim, and Schlewecke, connected by numerous villas and gardens, and is a favourite summerresort, with pleasant promenades which extend far into the Radauthal and up the adjoining heights. Pop. 4620.

The finest point in the environs is the *Burgberg (1556 ft.; Hotel, see above), crowned with the scanty ruins of the Harzburg, a castle of Emp. Henry IV., which commands an admirable prospect. The 'Canossa Monument', erected in 1877, consisting of a granite obelisk with a bronze medallion of Prince Bismarck by Engelhard, refers to the humiliation of Emp. Henry IV. before Pope Gregory VI. at Canossa in 1077, and to the words used by the German Chancellor in the Reichstag in 1872 ('we won't go to Canossa!').

At the foot of the hill is the new Curhaus (see above). A bridge crosses to the pleasant Eichen (oaks) promenades, which contain a café and shopkeepers' stalls (music frequently in the afternoon).

The road leads thence to the (11/2 M.) Radaufall (*Restaurant), a fine artificial cascade, whence we may return by a path to the right a little below the fall, crossing the Schmalenberg (views from the Bärenstein and Wilhelmsblick). Beautiful walks on the W. side of the valley (with finger-posts): past the Hôtel Ludwigslust to the (1/2 hr.) FROM HARZBURG TO ILSENBURG by the Rabenklippen, 3-31/2 hrs., guide desirable. A few minutes before the top of the Burgberg is reached, at a stone finger-post, the broad 'Kaiserweg' diverges from the road to the E. (The name is derived from a tradition that Emp. Henry IV. fled in this direction when his castle was captured by the Saxons.) This road leads to the (10 min.) Säperstelle, a spot with a bench, where direction-posts indicate the way to the left to the Sachsenberg (see above), to the right to the Molkenhaus and the Brocken, and in a straight direction to the Kattenäte and the (4/4 hr.) Rabenklippen (the path to the latter, marked KR, turning to the right towards the end), where a fine "View of the Eckerthal and the Brocken is enjoyed (restaurant). We then return to the point where the path turned to the right, and descend by a zigzag path towards the N.E. to the (20 min.) Eckerthal, from which a road leads to (11/2 M.) Eckerkrug (Restaurant). Thence by a forest-path to the right (S.E.) to (11/2 M.) Hendburg.

*Deutscher Hof; Stadt Stolberg) is a busy village of 3034 inhab, at the mouth of the Ilsethal, with Iron Works of Count Stolberg-Wernigerode, where artistic and other objects in cast iron are manufactured. It is commanded by the handsome Romanesque Schloss of the count, on an eminence to the S.E. originally founded in 398 as a Benedictine abbey.

The *Ilsethal, one of the finest valleys in the Harz, presents a succession of remarkably picturesque rock and forest scenes, enlivened by a series of miniature cascades, and rendered still more interesting by the numerous romantic legends attaching to it. The valley is traversed by a carriage-road, and also by a footpath (see below). The former leads to the (11/2 M.) foot of the *Reenstein, a precipitous buttress of granite, rising to a height of 500 ft. above the valley. From the Prinzess Ilse tavern at the foot several paths lead to the (1/2 hr.) summit, where an iron cross has been erected to some of the fallen warriors of 1813-15 (fine view). The best survey of the Ilsenstein itself is obtained from the benches, a few hundred paces above the tavern. The road, which continues to accompany the stream and its pretty * Waterfalls for upwards of 3 M., is recommended to the lover of the picturesque, even if the ascent of the Brocken (p. 390) is not contemplated. — A footpath direct from Ilsenburg to (3/4 hr.) the top of the Ilsenstein diverges from the road to the left, a few paces beyond the village, and crosses a bridge.

In descending from the Ilsenstein a footpath to the right, marked P and Pl. and also a road diverging to the left from the road in the Ilsethal lead to the (3 /4 hr.) Plessenburg, a forester's house and a favourite point for picnics. Boad hence, marked St. R., to the (11 /2 M.) Wernigerode road, which ascends to the right to (11 /2 M.) the Steinerne Renne. — Another road from the Plessenburg to Wernigerode leads by Altenrace (see below).

Pop. 8274. The *Rathhaus, of the 14th cent., recently altered, and many of the houses are picturesque old Gothic structures. Near the back of the Rathhaus is a house with an inscription referring to Goethe's visit to the Harz in 1777. The Gumnasium is a modern Gothic structure. The town possesses two monuments commemorating the wars of 1866 and 1870-71. The *Thiergarten or park, the Lindenberg (see above), to the S. of the town, the Armenleuteberg. the Harburg (Restaur.), and the Scharfenstein afford beautiful walks.

The most attractive excursion from Wernigerode is to the Steinerne Renne. The road ascends the valley of the Holzemme, by Friedrichsthal, to (3 M. from the station) Hasserode (Hôtel Hohnstein, R. 2 m.; Zur Steinernen Renne; omn., see above), a village much visited as a summer-resort. At the entrance to the village a finger-post indicates the road to the left to Schierke. Hohnstein, and Hohne, and to the right to the Steinerne Renne. Pedestrians may quit the road a little farther on by a path to the left, past the inn Zur Steinernen Renne. The road now ascends the beautiful, pineclad valley of the Holzemme, or *Steinerne Renne, which gradually becomes more imposing, especially when the brook is high. At the farthest bridge, $4^{1}/_{2}$ M. from Hasserode, there is a small inn. A little beyond it a broad path to the left leads to Hohne (see below). and one to the right to the Plessenburg in 1 hr. (see above). From the inn to the Brocken, see below.

From the Steinerne Renne Inn we may, with a guide, ascend the (3/4 hr.) Hohenstein (view), and return by the road through the Dumkuhlenthal to Wernigerode; or we may proceed via the forester's house of Hohne to the Schierke road or the path through the Jacobebruch to the Brocken. An ascent of the Hohneklippen (2977 ft.; p. 390) may be combined with the lat-

h. The Brocken.

The Routes to the top of the Brocken are all indicated by white capital letters painted on the trees and rocks.

ASCENT OF THE BROCKEN FROM HARZEURG (p. 387), 31/44 hrs. — To the Mollenhaus (1 hr.), see p. 388. Ascend thence by the straight path towards the 8.; then descend, past the Muxhippe, a projecting rock (on the left) commanding a good view of the Brocken and the Eckerthal, to the (25 min.) Dreiherrnbrücke across the Ecker; then follow the stream to the finger-post indicating the way to the (3/4 hr.) Scharfensteiner Molkenhaus, beyond which the path skirts the Pesekenkopf; 35 min., the road is crossed, the Pflasterstoss and Kleine Brockenklippen rocks are passed, and the Brockenhaus (see below) soon reached.

FROM LEENBURG (p. 383), 31/2-4 hrs., by the carriage-road, more picturesque than from Harzburg. To the Hsenstein 2 M., see p. 388. At a finger-post, 3 M. farther, the route to the Brocken diverges to the right; after 3/4 hr. another post indicates two paths to the Brocken. That to the left leads through wood to an open space where charcoal-burners pursue their avocations (boy to show the way 30-50 pf.). Then ascend to the right, skirting the brook for 20 min., and again enter the wood; 3/4 hr., union of the Harzburg and Ilsenburg paths; 12 min., Brockenhaus.

FROM WERNIGERODE (p. 389), through the Steinerne Renne, 41/2-5 hrs. (carriage-road via the Plessenburg). — To the highest bridge in the valley (carriage-road via the Flessenburg). — To the nignest bridge in the valley (see above), 2½ hrs.; thence ascend by the new road, which passes above this bridge, for ½ hr., and turn to the right in ½ hr. more. Then (guide desirable; one of the charcoal-burners will point out the way in case of doubt) ascend to the ½ hr.) top of the Renneckenberg (view); 10 min., the Brocken road is reached, and the summit is attained in 1 hr. more.

FROM ELBINGERODE (p. 383), 31/2-4 hrs. — A little way from the village the footpath enters the wood to the right and at (11/2 hr.) Schierke reaches the road described below.

FROM ELEND (p. 383), 21/2-3 hrs. — The road diverges to the right from the high-road at a turnpike and leads to (1½ M.) Schierte (1850 ft.; Inn), a scattered village, the highest among the Harz Mts. The road crosses the bridge and ascends to the left. The neighbouring rocks derive various whimsical names from their grotesque forms. To the right, above, are the Holnekippen; to the left, looking back, we see the Schaarcher on the opposite Bahrenberg. Occasional short-cuts are indicated by finger-posts. An iron finger-post (8 M.) is reached at the union of this road with that from Hsenburg. To the top 3 M. more, but the last bend of the road may be cut off by a footpath.

FROM ANDREASBERG to the Brocken, 5 hrs., see p. 392.

The Brocken, or Blocksberg, the Mons Bructerus of the Romans. 3417 ft. above the sea-level, forming together with its neighbours the Brockengebirge, the nucleus of the Harz, rises to a considerable height above the lofty plateau of the latter, and is the highest mountain in Central Germany. Vegetation becomes very scanty near the summit, and no trees grow within 100 ft. of it. Inn at the top (R. from $1^{1}/_{2}$ m., A. 50-75 pf., B. 75 pf., table d'hôte 2 m.).

The Tower commands an extensive *View in clear weather, the towers of Magdeburg, Leipsic, Erfurt, Gotha, Cassel, Hanover, and Brunswick being visible, but an unclouded horizon is rare. The traveller should attain the summit before sunset, in order to have two opportunities of obtaining a view. Although the Brocken attracts numerous visitors, it is by no means one of the finest points of the Harz Mts.: these are rather to be sought for on the E. and S. slopes.

Several grotesque blocks of granite to the S. of the tower have received the names of Devil's Pulpit, Witches' Altar, etc. Tradition points out this spot as the meeting-place of the witches on St. Walpurgis' Night, the eve of May-day. Goethe's use of this tradition in 'Faust' is well known.

The Brocken Spectre, an optical phenomenon rarely witnessed, has doubtless contributed to confirm the superstitions attaching to the mountain. When the summit is unclouded, and the sun is on one side, and mists rise on the other, the shadows of the mountain and the objects on it are cast in gigantic proportions on the wall of fog, increasing or diminishing according to circumstances.

Clausthal (1840 ft.; *Goldene Krone, R. 2 m.; Deutscher Kaiser; Rathhaus; Stadt London), the most important place in the Oberharz, and the seat of the mining authorities, with Zellerfeld (*Deutsches Haus), which is separated from it by the Zellbach, forms a single town with 13,400 inhab., chiefly miners. Country bleak and sterile. Most of the houses are of wood. The Bergschule, in the market, contains a collection of models and minerals.

contains a collection of models and minerals.

Mines. The Caroline and Dorothea mines, 11/2 M. from Clausthal, are less easy of access than those of the Rammelsberg. Permission from the superintendent necessary. The Georg-Withelm mine is 2135 ft. in depth. The mines around Clausthal are drained by means of the Georgstollen, a channel 6 M. long, terminating near Grund (p. 372).

Alternau (*Rammelsberg, 'pension' 33/4 m.; Schützenhaus; Rathhaus), 51/2 M. N.E. of Clausthal, on the road to Oker (p. 386), is a favourite summerresidence. By the footpath it is somewhat nearer. Diligence from Alternau to (121/2 M.) Oker daily.

TO OSTRODE, a railway-station, 83/4 M. from Clausthal, a diligence runs twice daily, passing several picturesque points, e. g. the inn at the foot of the (1/4 M.) Helligenstock. The old road, which is shorter and more interesting for pedestrians, diverges a little beyond the Ziegethültt (*Inn), and passes through the village of (4/2 M.) Lerbach (Bückert's Inn, 'pension' 4 m.; Schützenhaus), a favourite summer-resort. Osterode, see p. 372.

FROM CLAUSTHAL TO ANDREASBERG, 13 M. The road crosses the bleak lofty plateau of the Oberharz. The (3 M.) Sperberhaier Damm supplies the mines of Clausthal with water. At the (7 M.) Sonneberger Wegehaus the road turns to the S., while that in a straight direction leads to Braunlage (see below). Pedestrians may here quit the diligence and follow the latter road to the Oderteich, an artificial reservoir, whence a *Footpath leads to Andreasberg in 11/2 hr., skirting a conduit called the Rehberger Graben. Fine view to the left of the rocky bed of the Oder, to the right of the precipitous Rehberger Klippen. The *Inn at the Rehberger Grubenhaus. $1^{1/2}$ M. from Andreasberg, is a good point for a prolonged stay.

Andreasberg (1825 ft.; Rathskeller; Von Busch; Schützenhaus), a small town situated in a lofty and bleak region, has recently come into favour as a summer-residence on account of its bracing mountain air, Pop. 3262. It possesses important mines. The Samson silver-mine, the deepest in the Harz Mts. (2871 ft.), is easy of access. Specimens of the minerals of the Harz may be purchased at the Neufanger Zechenhaus. — Diligence by Braunlage to (181/2 M.) Elbingerode (p. 383) daily. - To stat. Scharzfeld-Lauterberg (p. 372), 8 M., diligence twice daily (railway in progress).

TO HERZEREG (p. 872), 9 M., from Andressberg, a pleasant road leads by ($\frac{1}{2}$ M) Sieber (Inn) and through the pretty Sieberthal.

To the Brocken. The road from Andressberg leads by Braunlage, To THE BROOKEN. The road from Andreasberg leads by Braunlage, Elend, and Schierte (p. 390); the footpath, more attractive, by the Repberger Graben to the (2 hrs.) Oderteich (see above), and then by Oderbrück (*Forester's Inn) to the (3 hrs.) top (path marked by blocks of granite).

72. From Cassel to Frankfort on the Main.

124 M. Railway. Express in 31/2-4 hrs. (fares 18 m., 13 m. 90 pf.); ordinary trains in 51/2-6 hrs. (fares 16 m., 12 m., 8 m.). — Express from Berlin to Frankfort in 11½ hrs. (fares 48 m. 70, 38 m. 20 pf.; comp. RR. 4, 7). Cassel, see p. 95. At (21/2 M.) Withelmshöhe the line crosses the avenue (p. 104). 81/2 M. Guntershausen (Bellevue) is the junction of the Eisenach line (R. 58). The train now skirts the Fulda and then the Edder. Near (17 M.) Gensungen the abrupt Heiligenberg rises to the left, and the lofty tower of the Felsberg (1375 ft.) to the right; farther on, at the confluence of the Schwalm and the Edder, stands the Altenburg. To the right in the background is the ruin of Gudensberg.

22 M. Wabern, with a château and a beetroot-sugar manufactory, is the station for Wildungen.

Diligence and omnibus twice daily from Wabern to Wildungen, 13 M. to the W. The road ascends the valley of the Edder, leading first to (5 M.) Fritzlar, an old town with 3021 inhab., prettily situated on the left bank of the stream, surrounded by medteval watch-towers, and containing several interesting buildings. The "Cathedral, which once belonged to the Benedictine abbey founded by St. Boniface, to whom the town owes its origin, was erected about the year 1200 on the site of an earlier church. It is a Romanesque edifice, with a crypt and two Gothic aisles added on the S. side in the 14th century. The S. tower fell in 1869. The monuments, choir-stalls, etc., of the 14th cent. and the handsome Gothic cloisters are worthy of inspection. The treasury contains six valuable ecclesiastical vessels.— The "Church of the Minorites (now Prot.) dates from the 14th centur.— At Getmar, situated above Fritzlar, about Diligence and omnibus twice daily from Wabern to Wildungen, 13 M. dates from the 14th century. - At Geismar, situated above Fritzlar, about 1/2 M. to the N.W., St. Boniface is said to have felled the sacred oak dedicated to the god Thor in 732.

dedicated to the god Thor in 152.

The road follows the right bank of the Edder, crosses the frontier of the principality of Waldeck beyond Ungedanken, and reaches—Wildungen (*Badelogirhaus and *Buropdischer Hof, R. 10-40 m. per week, D. 2/4 m.; *Göcke, by the Curhaus, R. 9-30 m. per week; Past, R. 6-15 m.; Zimmermann, R. 9-15 m.; also numerous private hotels and lodging-houses; Visitors' Tax 10 m., 2 pers. 15 m., each addit. pers. 5 m.) or Nieder-Wildungen, as it is sometimes called to distinguish it from All-Wildungen, situated to the N., about 160 ft. higher, with the Schloss Fried-richtisis, commanding a survey of the pretix worlded evisions. richstein, commanding a survey of the pretty, wooded environs. The Gothic Stadtkirche at Nieder-Wildungen contains the marble monument of Count Josias of Waldeck (died in Candia, 1669), a formidable antagonist of the Turks, and a good winged altarpiece painted by Conrad von Soest in 1402. — The mineral Springs, which contain iron and nitrogen, and are beneficial in cases of bowel-complaints, diseases of the bladder, etc., lie a little to the S.W. (2000 patients annually; 450,000 bottles exported). The most important is the Georg-Victor-Quelle, on the road to Hundsdorf, 1/2 M. distant, where there are pleasure-grounds, hotels, and villas (see above). The Curhaus, also on the Hundsdorf road, contains a restaurant and reading-room. Dr. Roerig's Brunnen, at the N.E. end of the town, below Schloss Friedrichstein, is another favourite spring. Pleasant walks to the Katzenstein and back in $4 hr.; to the Zickzackberg and the Herrietien's Ruh' above it, $4 hr.; ascent of the Homberg and back, 2 hrs. — A road diverging to the left from the high-road as we quit the town leads to the (1½ M.) Helenen-Quelle, the second in importance of the springs (Café). Pleasant walk thence to the Thalbrumen and the Stahlbrumen, from which we may return to the town by the high-road (2 hrs.), passing the Georg-Victor-Quelle. — About 7½ M. to the N. of Wildungen is situated the old château of Waldeck (Restaurant), which commands an admirable view of the Edder. The Auenberg (1970 ft.), 5 M. to the S., is also a fine point of view.

27 M. Borken; 30 M. Zimmersrode; 38 M. Treysa, the junction for the line to Niederhone (p. 396); 44 M. Neustadt, with old towers and a tasteful Gothic chapel. On a wooded hill to the left of (55 M.) Kirchhain lies the old town of Amöneburg, the venerable church of which was founded by St. Boniface. The train crosses the Lahn. From (6½ M.) Cölbe a branch-line diverges to (16 M.) Biedenkopf and (221/2 M.) Laasphe, with the château of Wittgenstein.

64¹/₂ M. Marburg (Ritter; *Hôtel Pfeiffer; Hessischer Hof; Rail. Restaurant), a small town with 11,225 inhab., on the Lahn, is charmingly situated in a semicircle round the precipitous Schlossberg. The University, now attended by 850 students, was the first founded (by Philip the Generous, in 1527) without papal privileges.

The chief boast of Marburg is the *Church of St. ELIZABETH, erected in 1235-83 in the finest German early-Gothic style, and restored in 1860, affording in its pure simplicity and noble proportions an admirable example of the impressiveness of this style. W. towers 310 ft. high. (Sacristan opposite the church; ring; 50 pf.).

Soon after the death of St. Elisabeth (p. 351; d. in 1231, in her 24th year), the church was erected over her tomb, which attracted multitudes of pilgrims from every part of Europe. The Emp. Frederick II., one of these devotees, caused a crown of gold to be placed on the head of the saint, whose remains were deposited in a richly-decorated silver gilt sarcophagus. The Landgrave Philip (founder of the university), in order to put an end to the pilgrimages, caused the bones to be removed and interred in an unknown spot in the church. The sarcophagus is still preserved in the sacristy near the high-altar. In 1810 the French carried it off to Cassel and despoiled it of its jewels, but it was restored to Marburg in 1814. The mortuary chapel is adorned with a carved representation of the Coronation of the Virgin, and winged pictures by Dürer (?); in the interior the Nativity and Death of Mary; ancient carving and pictures at the four side-altars. Numerous monuments of Hessian princes and knights of the Teutonic Order dating from the 13th-15th centuries (amongst others the tombstone of Landgrave Conrad von Thüringen, d. 1243) are preserved in the S. transept.

The Lutheran Church, on a terrace commanding a fine view, a finely-proportioned structure of the 15th cent., contains several large monuments of Landgraves and other princes.

The town boasts of a number of interesting old buildings in the Steinweg (Café Quentin, with a Renaissance portal), in the Wettergasse, in the market-place, in which is situated the Rathhaus (1512), in the Ritter-Str. (Zum Hirsch, a timber building of 1576), and in several others. - The Post Office, University, Observatory, Anatomic. and other academical institutions, chiefly in the Gothic style. are the principal modern buildings.

The extensive and well preserved Schloss (876 ft.), to which a steep road ascends from the church of St. Elizabeth in 20 min. was a residence of the princes of Hessen in the 15th and 16th centuries, and afterwards a state-prison. It is now judiciously restored, and contains the valuable Hessian archives (formerly in Cassel). and those of Fulda and Hanau. The fine Gothic chapel and the Rittersaal are worthy of inspection. In this château the famous disputation between Luther, Zwingli, Melanchthon, and other reformers took place in 1529. They met, on the invitation of Philip the Generous, with a view to adjust their differences regarding the Eucharist, but the attempt proved abortive owing to Luther's tenacious adherence to the precise words, 'Hoc est corpus meum', which he wrote in large letters on the table. Beautiful views from the Schloss. and in descending to the town by the other side (1/2 hr.).

ENVIRONS. Good paths, provided with finger-posts, lead to a number of other beautiful points of view. The Spiegetslust (1200 ft.), a height above the station, is ascended in 40 min.; morning-lights most favourable. above the station, is ascended in 40 min.; morning-lights most favourable. From the Elisabethbrunnen near the village of Schröck, 4 M. distant, another good view, towards Schöneburg, may be obtained; the building covering the spring was built in the Renaissance style in 1598. On the left bank of the Lahn are the (1 hr.) Lichte Küppel (1203 ft.) and the Frauenberg (1240 ft.) with a ruined castle. — On the right bank, above the church of St. Elizabeth, rises the oak-clad Kirchspitze (1050 ft.), from which forest-paths lead to the quarries of Wehrda.

From Marburg a diligence runs daily via Munchhausen to Frankenberg (221/2 M. to the N.W.). The Marienkirche here dates from 1300; on the S.E. side is the beautiful Gothic "Liebfrauen-Capelle (1386).

The line follows the fertile valley of the Lahn till Giessen is reached. On a wooded hill to the left is the château of Friedelhausen. On an eminence beyond (74 M.) Fronhausen, to the left. rise the ruins of Stauffenberg (a fine point of view, 11/4 M. from Lollar). 78 M. Lollar, whence a line diverges to (11 M.) Wetzlar. Beyond Lollar the castle of Gleiberg (Inn) is seen to the right; still farther distant, Fetzberg. Beyond Giessen, 2 M. to the S.E. of the town, rises Schloss Schiffenberg, the property of the grand-duke of Hessen, once a lodge of the Teutonic Order (extensive view).

83 M. Giessen (Rail. Restaurant, D. 2 m.; *Kuhne, near the station; *Einhorn; Rappe; Prins Carl; beer and fine view at the Felsenkeller), on the Lahn, a town chiefly of modern origin, with 16,855 inhab., is the seat of a university, founded in 1607 (450

FROM GIESSEN TO FULDA, 66 M., in 31/2 hrs. (fares 8 m. 60, 6 m. 45, 4 m. 80 pf.), a route of no great interest. 37 M. Alsfeld (Krone), the principal place on this line, and the oldest town in Oberhessen, possesses two fine

Gothic churches and several interesting late-Gothic and Renaissance edifices of the 15-16th cent., most of which are in the market-place. - 54 M.

nces of the 19-16th cent., most of which are in the market-place. — 12 m. Saltzschlief is a watering-place with mineral-springs. Fulda, see p. 387.

From Giessen to Gelnhausen, 44 M., railway in 2½-3½, hrs. (fares 5 m. 60, 4 m. 20, 2 m. 80 pt.). The most important station is Nidds, near which is the small bath of Salthausen. Gelnhausen, see p. 398.

From Giessen to Coblenz, railway in 3½, hrs., see Bacedeer's Rhine.

89 M. Langgons. About 3 M. to the left of (94 M.) Butzbach, a small town in the fertile Wetterau, rise the extensive ruins of the castle of Münzenberg, destroyed in the Thirty Years' War. The higher (154 ft.) of the two towers commands a fine view.

100 M. Wauheim. - Hotels. *Bellevue; *Cursaal; Hôtel de l'Eu-ROPE: MADLER: DEUTSCHER HOF: GOLDENER ENGEL. - Private Apartments at the Villa Wagner, Villa Langidorf, etc. — It is advisable not to arrive late in the evening, as the hotels are often full during the season.

Restaurants. Neuer Cursaal; Henkel; Reinhardt.

Visitors' Tax for stay of more than five days, 12 m., 2 pers. 18 m.; each additional member of a family, 3 m.

Cabs. One-horse per drive, 1-2 pers. 60 pf., 8-4 pers. 80 pf.; two-horse, 80 pf. or 1 m.; per hour 2 m. 60, 3 m. 40, 3 m. 40 pf., 5 m.

Nauheim, a town with 2517 inhab., in a healthy situation on the N.E. slopes of the Taunus Mts., possesses warm saline springs, impregnated with carbonic acid gas, which attract upwards of 5000 patients annually. Extensive evaporating houses and salt-pans. The water of the Friedrich-Wilhelms-Sprudel (95° Fahr.), the Grosse Sprudel (90°) and the Kleine Sprudel (84°) are used for the various baths, which are admirably fitted up. The Friedrich-Wilhelms-Sprudel throws up a milky jet of saline water about 50 ft. in height. The springs used for drinking are the Curbrunnen, the Carlsquelle (resembling the Rakoczy of Kissingen), and the Ludwigsquelle (alkaline water). Adjoining the Trinkhalle are several greenhouses connected with the pleasure-grounds. At the foot of the Johannisberg, about 1/2 M. from the station, is the handsome Conversationshaus, with elegant rooms and a fine terrace overlooking the extensive grounds.

The Teichhaus, at the upper end of the park, is much visited. The Johannisberg, a wooded height, 20 min. to the W. of the Cursaal, commands a fine view (two-horse carr., 1-2 pers. 2 m. 80, 3-4 pers. 3 m. 40 pf.). Excursions may also be made to the Stadiuald, Hof Hasselheck, Schloss Ziegenberg (1½ hr.; one-horse carr. 7 m. or 8 m. 90, two-horse 11 or 12 m.), the ruin of Münzenberg, etc. Walk to Friedberg (see below), 40 min.

The train skirts the Gradirhäuser (evaporating sheds), and crosses a lofty viaduct to - 103 M. Friedberg (*Hôtel Trapp; Restaurant Felsenkeller, with view), a Hessian district-town with 4825 inhab., once a free Imperial city, and still retaining traces of its former importance. The Protestant Liebfrauenkirche, a Gothic edifice, was built in 1290-1350; the towers date from the 15th cent.; the interior contains a screen, tabernacle, and tombstones of the 14th and 15th cent., and also Gothic stained glass. The so-called Römerbad or Judenbad, in the Judengasse, existed in the 14th century. On the N. side rises a fine, well-preserved watch-tower, 165 ft. high, near which is the beautiful Palace Garden. The old Castle is now a seminary. - About 11/2 M, to the N.E. of Friedberg is Schwalheim, the mineral water of which is largely exported. - Railway to Hanau, see p. 399.

As the train approaches Frankfort, the Taunus Mts. are seen on the right. — 118 M. Bonames, the station for the baths of Homburg. 124 M. Frankfort, see Baedeker's Rhine.

73. From Göttingen to Bebra and Frankfort on the Main.

152 M. EXPERSS in 51/2 hrs. (fares 21 m. 20, 15 m. 70, 11 m. 10 pf.).

— Express from Berlin to Frankfort, 339 M., in 12 hrs. (fares 49 m. 10, 36 m. 90, 28 m. 40); from Leipsic to Frankfort, 237 M., in 9 hrs. (fares 4 m. 50, 25 m. 70 pf., 18 m.).

Göttingen, see p. 105. — The train ascends the wide Leinethal to (51/9 M.) Obernjesa and (8 M.) Friedland. 12 M. Eichenberg is the junction of the Nordhausen and Cassel line (p. 371); at the village, to the W. of the station, is an intermittent spring called the 'Karlsquelle'. A picturesque walk may be taken hence to (1 hr.) the ruins of *Hanstein (Restaurant; *View) and (1/2 hr.) the Teufelskanzel; Allendorf (see below) may be reached in 11/4 hr. more.

The château of Arnstein is seen on the right. The train passes through two tunnels and reaches the valley of the Werra; to the right, on the other side of the river, rises the castle of Ludwigstein, on the left the Hanstein just mentioned. The river is now crossed. 21 M. Allendorf; the station lies on the left bank, at Sooden, a village with salt-works and salt-baths. The Klausberg is a fine point of view. - 251/9 M. Albungen (Heiligenstein); the castle of (1 M.) Fürstenstein, beyond the Werra, commands a charming view.

The *Meisner (2464 ft.), a hill well-known in German traditionary lore, may be ascended from Albungen in 2 hours. The route leads through the romantic Höllenthal, passing the ruin of Bilstein and the villages of Abterode and Vockerode, to the coal-mine of Schwalbenthal. The Kathe and the Lusthäuschen are admirable points of view; in a rocky labyrinth be-the Lusthäuschen are admirable points of view; in a rocky labyrinth below the latter lie the Altarstein, a pagan altar, and the Frau-Hollen-Teich. A visit may also be paid to the Kitzkammer, with its imposing basaltic formations, and to the interesting mountain-railway for coal-traffic at Brans-rode (2½ M. long). Descent to Niederhone.

The train again crosses the Werra. 28½ M. Niederhone.

From Niederhone to Leinefelder, see p. 371. The first station is (2 M.) Bachwage (Hotel Koch), an industrious town with 9000 inhab., on the Werra, said to have been founded by Charlemagne, and mentioned in documents of the 10th century. It afterwards belonged to the Landgraves of Thuringia. The château, built in 1880 and restored in 1681, is occupied by the authorities of the district. The 'Schwarze Thurm' is the sole relie of a Cyrica monastary, established before 1088. The Karkbische sole relic of a Cyriac monastery, established before 1088. The Karlebirche. near the handsome Realschule, commands a fine view of the valley. The grounds on the Leichtberg also afford several beautiful prospects. - Charming excursions may be taken to the Höhenholz, the Hörnekuppe, the Grei-feastein, and the Hülfendery (resort of pilgrims).

Diligence from Eschwege twice daily to (7 M.) Wanfried. About 2 M. farther on is Treffurt, with the ruins of Normannstein, near which the *Heldrastein, commanding a magnificent view, towers to a height of 1080 ft. above the valley of the Werra. - From Treffurt to Eisenach

(P. 360), 10 m.

From Miedrehone to Treysa, 50 M., railway in 2½-3³/4 hrs. 8 M.

Waldkoppel, whence a branch diverges to Wilhelmshöhe and Cassel (31 M.).

— 19 M. Spangenberg, at the base of a hill crowned by an old castle of the same name. Late-Gothic church. — 25½ M. Maisfeld (p. 338). 37 M.

Homberg, overlooked by a ruined castle. 48 M. Ziegenhain, once a strong fortress, frequently besieged, but rased in the time of Napoleon I. — 50 M. Treysa, see p. 393.

The train now quits the Werra. 31 M. Reichensachsen, 21/2 M. to the E. of which rises the Blaue Kuppe, a volcanic cone of peculiar formation. 33 M. Hoheneiche. About 21/2 M. to the S.E. are the ruins of Boyneburg, the chapel of which was endowed by Frederick Barbarossa in 1188; the present ruins date from the 14th century. - The train now ascends the valley of the Sonter. 37 M. Sontra: 42 M. Cornberg.

50 M. Bebra (p. 338), the junction for the Berlin, Halle, and Leipsic, and the Cassel lines.

The Frankfort line ascends the valley of the Fulda to (611/9 M.)Hersfeld (Stern; Deutsches Haus), a thriving town with 7065 inhab.. situated at the point where the valleys of the Haun and the Geis branch off from the Fuldathal. The Benedictine abbey of Hersfeld, founded in 769, was formerly of great importance; the secular buildings are now a gymnasium. The *Abbey Church, built in the 11th and 12th cent. and destroyed by the French in 1761, is still imposing in its ruins. The Stadtkirche dates from the 15th century. The old Eichhof, 21/2 M. farther up the Fuldathal, contains a room once occupied by Luther. The Wippershainer Höhe and the Frauenberg, the latter crowned with a ruined church, are two good points of view.

The train now ascends the valley of the Haun. To the left rise the hills of the Rhön. 66 M. Neukirchen, at the foot of the basaltic Stoppelberg, which commands an admirable view and bears the ruined castle of Hauneck.

72 M. Burghaun; 741/2 M. Hünfeld.

85 M. Fulda (*Kurfürst, R. & B. 21/2 m.; *Wolff, *Rupperti, both at the station; Darmstädter Hof; Halber Mond), an ancient town on the Fulda, with 11,500 inhab., situated in a pleasant, undulating district, derives its origin from a once celebrated abbey founded by St. Boniface in 744, but now contains little to interest the traveller. Its numerous towers and public buildings still testify to its ancient dignity as the residence of a prelate of princely rank.

The Cathedral, with a dome 108 ft. in height, was erected in the 18th cent. in imitation of St. Peter's at Rome.

On a pillar by the E. entrance there is a very ancient figure of Charlemagne, dating from a much earlier structure, of which the only rem-nant is the now restored crypt, or Chapel of St. Boniface, beneath the choir. Here, beneath the altar, repose the remains of St. Boniface (Winfried), a zealous English promulgator of Christianity, who was slain by the heathen Frisians near Dockum in Westfriesland in 754.

The small Church of St. Michael, adjoining the cathedral, was consecrated in 822, to which period belong the crypt and the octagon above it. The Romanesque nave and the rest of the edifice date from the end of the 11th century. The church was judiciously restored in 1854.

The late-Gothic Nonnenkirche, built in the 17th cent., was restored in 1876. In the Friedrichsmarkt are the Pfarkirche (a Jesuit building of 1785, with a tower of the 15th cent.), the Rathhaus, the Post Office, and an old Fountain.

In front of the Schloss is a Statue of St. Boniface, in bronze. Near the Paulusthor is the small Town Park, with the War Monument. Opposite rises the handsome Normal Seminary.

Fine views of the town and environs are obtained from the Frauenberg, immediately beyond the Paulusthor, and long the residence of the scholar Hrabanus Maurus (d. 856), and from the Petersberg, 1½ M. distant.

Gerafeld, 10½ M. to the E. of Fulda (diligence once daily), with a château and beautiful park belonging to Count Frobberg, is the best starting-point for excursions in the Ehöngsbirge. The most attractive are to Mitseburg, where a delightful view may be obtained, and to the Teufelstein and Stemucand, both remarkable for their peculiar rock-formation.

Branch Line from Fulda to Giessen (p. 394).

93 M. Neuhof, with handsome government-buildings; 96 M. Flieden. — 102 M. Elm.

From Elm to Gemünden, see Baedeker's S. Germany.

The train descends to the valley of the Kinsig. 1071/2 M. Schlüchtern; then (111 M.) Steinau, a small town with several mediæval buildings and a Schloss of the 16th century. On the right, farther on, rises the well-preserved ruin of Stolzenburg, situated on a wooded height above the small town of Soden, 11/2 M. to the N. of (115 M.) Salmünster (Post). 120 M. Wächtersbach.

126 M. Gelnhausen (Hessischer Hof), once a town of the empire, with 3744 inhab., situated on a red soil, which contrasts picturesquely with the green vineyards. On an island in the Kinzig, in the lower part of the town, near the entrance from the station, are the ruins of an Imperial Palace erected about the year 1144 by Frederick I., parts of which are still in tolerable preservation. The head of Frederick I. and the lion of the Hohenstaufen family, sculptured in stone, are still recognisable. The chapel and imperial hall are interesting. The arches of the windows rest on clustered columns with beautiful capitals. The Emp. Frederick Barbarossa held a great assembly here in 1180 to pronounce the imperial ban against Duke Henry the Lion.

The handsome and richly-decorated *Pfarrkirche, erected in the transition-style in 1230-60, was admirably restored in 1876-79. It contains an interesting early-Gothic screen, late-Gothic choirstalls, stained-glass windows of the 13th cent, and handsome modern pulpit, organ-loft, and stained glass.

From Gelnhausen to Giessen, see p. 395.

Beyond Gelnhausen the country is flat. 128 M. Meerholz, with a château of Count Isenburg-Meerholz; 133 M. Langenselbold, with a handsome Schloss. The line next intersects the Lamboiwald, where on 30th and 31st Oct., 1813, Napoleon with 80,000 men on his retreat from Leipsic defeated 40,000 Bavarians, Russians, and Austrians under Wrede, who had endeavoured to intercept the fugitives. Gross-Steinkeim is visible on the opposite bank of the Main.

140 M. Hanau (Carlsberg; Riese; Adler), a pleasant town with 23,000 inhab., near the confluence of the Kinzig and Main, lies in the most fertile district of the Wetterau. The more modern part of the town was founded in 1597 by Protestant exiles from the Netherlands to whom an asylum at Frankfort was denied. Their handicrafts, the manufacture of silk and woollen goods, and of gold and silver wares, still flourish here. Hanau was the birthplace of the celebrated philologists Jacob (d. 1863) and Wilhelm (d. 1859) Grimm; the house is indicated by an inscription. On the Main, near the town, is situated the place of Philippsruhe, with extensive orangeries, the property of the Landgrave of Hessen, erected at the beginning of last century.

The branch-line from Hanau to (20 M.) Friedberg (p. 395) is intended to relieve the Frankfort line of some of its goods-traffic.

The train crosses the Main. 141 M. Klein-Steinheim; 145 M. Mühlheim, from which Rumpenheim, a village with a château of the Landgrave Frederick of Hessen-Cassel, is visible to the right.

147 M. Offenbach (Stadt Cassel), 28,449 inhab., a pleasant and busy town with a handsome château of Count Isenburg built in 1572, owes its prosperity to French refugees who settled here at the den of the 17th and beginning of the 18th century. (See Baceleker's Southern Germany.)

At (150 M.) Sachsenhausen the train again crosses the Main, and soon enters the W. station at - 152 M. Frankfort (see Baedeker's Rhine).

List of the Principal Streets, Public Buildings, etc., in the Plan of Berlin.

The large Plan of Berlin, on the scale of 1:14,000, is divided into three sections, of which the uppermost is coloured brown, the central red, and the lowest gray. In the accompanying index the letters b, r, g refer to these sections, while the capital letters and numbers indicate the square of the section in which the place in question is to be found. Thus the Alexander-Platz will be found in the red section, column M, first square from the top.

The squares will also be useful for calculating distances, each side of a square being exactly half a kilometre or about $^3/_{10}$ of a mile, while the diagonals if drawn would be 760 yds.

The letters immediately following the names of the streets refer to the Postal Districts (O, central; W, West; O, Ost, East, etc.).
